The Fellowship Of The Burning Heart

By REV. ALFRED BRIGHT, B.A., B.D.,
Minister of Riverdale Presbyterian Church, Toronto, Ontario.

"And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the Scriptures?"—Luke 24:32.

AMONG the "appearances" of our Lord after His Resurrection is the one here described by Saint Luke to the two disciples on the way to Emmaus. The account of this appearance constitutes one of the most exquisite of the Gospel stories, a story which is an inexhaustible source of instruction and delight. Two of our Lord's disciples were walking into the country and were much disturbed by the death of Jesus and the strange rumours reaching them this day about His Resurrection. A Stranger passing them overheard their loud and heated discussion and offered to relieve their perplexed minds. When these two disciples reached their homes, they invited this unknown Stranger to accept their simple hospitality. As they gathered together to take their frugal, evening meal, the Stranger broke the bread and blessed it as only one Man they knew had ever done, and it flashed upon them Who He was. When they knew Him they knew many things; why their hearts had burned, why the walk and the talk together had been so delightful, and the story told them was true—their Christ was alive!

After His departure from their home, they looked into each other's faces and said, "Did not our hearts burn within us while He talked with us by the way and opened to us the Scriptures?" These men came to recognize the presence of Jesus with them by the burning heart. Can we think this Sabbath morning of any more fitting, any more ideal, description of public or private worship than "The Fellowship of the Burning Heart?"

To whom is this Fellowship of the Burning Heart?

I. This Fellowship of the Burning Heart is to Humble People.

This fellowship of the burning heart was given to humble and insignificant persons. These two men were not Apostles. They were not distinguished leaders in the early Church. We have never even heard of them before this event and no distinguished service to our knowledge is placed to their credit in the stirring days of the early Church. These men were such humble persons that some thirty years later when Luke is describing the event in his Gospel he is not even able to recall the names of these two men.

Humble men and women come out of obscurity into the light of the presence of Jesus and by that light are promptly immortalized. When an unknown woman gave Him a drink from the well, He gave her to drink of the Living Water and a revelation of His deity. The Twelve Apostles would have remained forever unknown to us except for Jesus. Pilate has a place in history only because he sent Jesus to His death. Simon of Cyrene has a name and did a deed, which are forever unforgettable, because he met Jesus at a city gate. One might have expected the news of the Saviour's birth to have been first proclaimed to some group of holy men, or to some world leader, but our Lord's regard for the lowly and the humble in heart and life is seen in that the announcement came to shepherds, the representatives of the world's toilers.

Jesus is now risen, and He is unchanged, for He reveals Himself to these two obscure and humble men on a country road. When Phillips Brooks was made a bishop he with characteristic humility, was overwhelmed with a sense of his responsibility and spent many anxious hours in prayer. When he ventured forth he went to friend whose judgment he highly respected and said, "If you ever think that this position is making any difference in me; if ever you see any sign of pride; I want you to tell me at once." The truest blessedness is possible only to those who are of a lowly and humble heart. "For thus saith the High and Holy One that inhabiteth Eternity, Whose name is Holy: I dwell in the high and holy place; with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones."

2. The Fellowship of the Burning Heart is to those Conscious of Their Need of Christ.

Jesus came to these men at a time when they were keenly conscious of a loss. They could think of nothing nor speak of anything but the things concerning Jesus of Nazareth. The sorrow of these men was the collapse of a great hope and the failure of an ideal. These men were puzzled and confused by the Cross and its accessories. The Greek in this narrative implies they were talking loudly and, like Orientals in a demonstrative way, practically flinging their words at each other. They never knew how much Jesus meant to them until they thought He had gone out of their lives. When their hearts burned because of their conscious need of Him, Jesus came to them.

Heaven belongs to those who feel their utter need and who seek in Christ the sufficiency they do not find in themselves. Faber has a hymn in which he speaks of the "blessedness of longing," which is a sense of need, a consciousness of want and shortcoming and that is the condition of success in any calling of life. The only man who will make a scholar is the man who is conscious of his own ignorance. Sir Isaac Newton was a truly great scholar, but not in his own estimation, for he declared he had only gathered a few pebbles on the shore of the infinite ocean of truth. Whereas the man who is satisfied with his attainments of knowledge is doomed to lifelong ignorance. The burning heart of need always commands the presence of the Lord.

Somewhere Hosea likens God to the dew. The dew comes when it is most needed. In some parts of Egypt the rain is rarely known to fall and there it is the dew comes in its most beneficent quantity and refreshes the earth. In times of drought in our own neighbourhood, we have noted the vegetation wet with dew in early morning hours. God is like the dew coming to us when we are haunted by the sense of failure, when the sky is darkened by the death of a loved one, when there is a sense of loss and ache and loneliness. Jesus has said God knows before we ask Him if the things that we really need and if we open our hearts to Him, He will fill them with true riches.

3. This Fellowship of the Burning Heart is to Those who are Concerned about the Death of Jesus.

Jesus showed these two men the supreme necessity of His death. These men in common with the Twelve Disciples never really thought Jesus was going to die as He did. "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things that so He might enter into glory," was one of the statements of Jesus to these two men. They expected Jesus to reign, they looked for Jesus to wear a crown, and never dreamed He would die the death of a common criminal. When they saw Jesus on the Cross, they thought God's plan had been baffled. It seemed a miscarriage of justice, a mistake in heaven, a false move on the part of Jesus had taken place. There was a man in the novel "If Winter Comes," a Mr. Fargus, who whenever he lost a game of chess, would work back through the game and say, "There, that is where I made the false move. The whole pattern of the game would have been changed but for that." Jesus showed these men His death was not a false move, no calamity, no tragic blunder was made in Heaven, God's plans had not gone astray. What took place on the Cross was planned away back in the Councils of Eternity. Life loses all calmness and sanity unless we trust our faith is God's predestination of our lives.

The hearts of these two disciples began to burn when they saw this meaning of the death of Jesus. Possibly there is no time in our Church life, when Jesus seems so near to us, when our hearts so burn with love for Him, as on our Communion Sabbath, when we try to commemorate the death of Jesus and enter into its meaning for us. We may never know the deepest meaning of that wonderful death. The important thing is not some theory about the Cross but that we accept its saving benefit, feel it, and find in the blood of Christ peace and fuller fellowship with God. "He loved me, and gave Himself for me." Our hearts burn when we think of that love for us on the Cross, and we have no words in our vocabulary to describe its excellency, we must put down our pen and drink in its speechless wonder. More solemn than the day of one's birth, or the day of marriage, or the day of death, is the day when we come to know God spoke His best and greatest word of love to us on the Cross.

These two travellers discovered there was one mark which Jesus carried with Him from the days before the Cross into His Resurrection life. He carried the "nail prints." He took with Him into Heaven the marks of His dying love for us. The marks of the Cross were the marks by which His disciples recognized Him after His Resurrection. After David Livingstone's body was buried in Westminster Abbey among Britain's historic dead, rumours were abroad that possibly the British Government had been deceived in that the body was not that of Livingstone. The rumours were so clamant that the British authorities gave orders to have the body exhumed. On examination the false joint in Livingstone's arm, where the lion had crunched the shoulder blade, established his identity beyond dispute. So Jesus, without the marks of the Cross, is not the real Jesus.

4. This Fellowship of the Burning Heart is to those who Love the Scriptures.

These two travellers were perplexed by the events of Good Friday and the rumours of our Lord's Resurrection, and our Saviour led them to look at these events in the light of the Word of God. "Beginning at Moses and the prophets He expounded unto them the things concerning Himself." Had these two disciples been neglecting their Bibles? Possibly they knew their Old Testament better than any one in this congregation this morning. Have we not at some time read a passage of Scripture in the quietness of our bedroom and the inner meaning of this Scripture became the illuminated thing for us and gave us a truer vision of our duty? As we continued to brood over it our hearts burned within us and we saw in that familiar passage what we had never seen before. In that hour, the Bible became a living Book to us and Jesus was at our side. A sure sign that Jesus walks with us is when we love to read of Him in the Gospels. That moment we enter the Fellowship of the Burning Heart.

Sometime ago a friend of mine discovered a dilapidated Bible in the attic of his home. As he fingered its pages and noted many verses underlined with black and red ink, a deep blush of shame came into his face. He recognized this Bible as the one which he read in his boyhood days when Jesus first became real to him. He now questioned if he had the same zest and relish for this Book, and if the keen edge of his affection for it had not been dulled and frayed through absorption in other interests.

5. The Fellowship of the Burning Heart is to those who Find Jesus in the Commonplace Incidents of Life.

"And He revealed Himself in the breaking of the bread." The identity of Jesus became known to these two travellers in the breaking of bread. They discovered Jesus in that common act. We are not to imagine, as some commentators have done, that this discovery was made at a Sacrament service. The meal was a simple, frugal one in a peasant home at the close of a quiet Sabbath Day. We wonder how Jesus became disclosed to these two tired travellers. Possibly, when Jesus asked a blessing upon the food some familiar accent or word from His lips reminded them of earlier days; or when Jesus sat as a guest at the table there was a quiet air of divine majesty about His person; better still, when Jesus lifted up His hands in prayer and blessing upon the food, the nail prints in His hands revealed His identity.

Mark in relating this incident in his Gospel states Jesus came to these two men "in another form." And is not this another way of saying that if we have the right kind of eyes we shall see the halo, the sacred nimbus, the divine significance, resting on all the humdrum experiences of life? In Greek mythology, we read of an old man of the sea called Proteus. The belief was that Proteus was endowed with the gift of prophecy and could give the information desired on some future event. Proteus had the power of appearing to men under various disguises, sometimes as a horse or a bird or a serpent. The person seeking the desired information had to recognize Proteus in any one of these various shapes or forms or he would go away unenlightened. This is only a fable. Yet this Greek story carries the suggestion of what actually occurs in our relationship with Jesus. Jesus is no longer here in visible form. He does, however, come to men in the incidents of every day.

Jesus may come to us in a great joy as on some day of graduation from College or when a child is born into the home, He may come in some great decision, some crushing sorrow, some helpful friendship, a thoughtful book, or an inspirational address. There is a reason why Jesus comes to men "in another form" of His redeeming and uplifting power. The reason is in our own varying temperaments. Twelve photographers, each with the same kind of a camera, stand at the same place and in turn photograph identically the same scene. The result will be twelve pictures with unvarying sameness, because the process was so mechanical, and there was no opportunity for the play of individuality. Then let twelve artists supplied with paints and canvas visit the same place and at the same time sketch the same vista of landscape, and you will be rewarded with twelve entirely different pictures. Here personality and varying temperaments had the opportunity of self expression. That is why men can never exhaust Christ and men see Him so differently.

The tragedy of all tragedies is to fail to recognize Christ when He comes to us in the experiences of life. In whatever way He comes to us, give Him a royal greeting. Let Him be our loved Guest, the Lord of our life. Then, shall we, along with the two travellers, enter into the Fellowship of the Burning Heart.

STORIES FOR LITTLE PEOPLE

SAUL, or THE DISOBEDIENT DEED
(By M. B.)
1 Sam. xv. 1-12.

I have told you how God made Saul the king of Israel. Saul sat upon a throne, and wore a crown, and went to battle in a chariot. He was a brave man, and could fight well against wicked soldiers who tried to hurt the Israelites.

Samuel used often to come and see him, and advise him to serve God. Samuel wished Saul to be good—and he often prayed for him.

At last God chose to see whether Saul would do all he desired him to do. You remember how God once tried Abraham; and how Abraham did what God desired him, because he loved God.

What was it that Saul was to do?

There were some wicked people who lived near the land of Canaan called the Am-al-ek-ites. God was very angry with them, and He chose that they should all be killed.

One day Samuel came to Saul and said to him, 'God desires you to do and fight against the Amalekites and kill them all—men, women, and children, and oxen, and sheep, and camels, and asses.'

Saul got a great army of Israelites, and went to the Amalekites and he conquered them. Then Saul desired his soldiers to kill them with their swords as God had told him. But thought he should like to take the king of the Amalekites back to Canaan with him, so he would not let him be killed. I think Saul liked to bring the king home with him, because he thought it was a grand and fine thing to have a king shut up near him in Canaan. Neither did Saul kill the fat and strong oxen and sheep; he only killed those that were thin and weak. Saul wished to be rich, and to have a great number of cattle.

Did Saul obey God? No; Saul did not love God; so Saul did not wish to obey him.

My dear children, if you love God you will like to obey him.

That night God spoke to Samuel and told him that he was very angry with Saul.

Samuel was grieved to hear this, and he prayed to God the rest of the night.

The Cross Of Christ

"(By Robert C. Chapman.)"

The cross of Christ is the life of all true communion with God, and those who draw nearest to God best know the mystery of that Cross.

If the sufferings of Christ, who humbled Himself and became obedient unto death—the death of the Cross, be much in my heart, I shall see my worst enemy to be pride, especially pride of wisdom, and the pride of righteousness. I shall charge my soul, as did the king of Syria his captains: "Fight neither with small nor great, save only with the king of Israel." In my soul's warfare let pride be subdued, and every other sin is held in chains.

It is the secret of the prevention and cure of all evil to begin, and go through, each day, with the Cross of Christ. (John vi. 56).

The precepts of Scripture are given to guide the life of a Christian, and their claims are all founded on the Cross of Christ.

In the Cross of Christ is life, in the way of His precepts, liberty. Let us take up every cross that lies in our way—cut off the right hand and pluck out the right eye, the blessing must come down.

By the Cross of Christ the world is crucified to us, and we are crucified to the world, whilst we, through the Spirit, are mortifying the deeds of the body, we are gaining by all our losses, and have good success even by that which the flesh accounts bitter disappointments.

There is virtue in the name of Christ to make this vale of tears a fruitful, pleasant place.

He who most walks in fellowship with God has the deepest and truest apprehension of Christ. Such a one will love to consider how He who was in the form of God, emptied Himself of His state of pure equality with God, how the Word made flesh, at every step of His humiliation, above all on the cross, made manifest His glory. Of all the works of God, redemption is the greatest. It is only in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ that the perfections of God are fully manifested, and of that Cross we can have no true understanding, save by the Holy Scriptures and by the Holy Spirit of God.

When the Son of God had taken on Him the form of a servant, He could say, "My Father is greater than I," but His obedience showed Him to be equal with God; obedience unto the death of the Cross was such as only the Son of God could be called unto, and only He could render.

From the sixth to the ninth hour there was darkness over the land; darkness at noon-day. In the proper natural course of love of God the Father towards His son, the Father's countenance must have been ever lifted up on the Lord Jesus; but Christ was the Surety of the better covenant and God must deal as a sin-revenging judge with His own Son on the cross as our surety and sin-bearer: "Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." The land is a type of Christ; and while from the sixth to the ninth hour, the course of the old creation was suffering in regard to the land, strange and awful interruption, even thick darkness at noon, thereby was shown forth the greatest work, the greatest event of the new creation; God was not sparing His own Son, but delivering Him up for us all; Christ who knew no sin made sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him; Christ made a curse for us, to redeem us from the curse of the law. The mind of the Lord Jesus was at every moment one with the mind of God the Father; but the Lord's obedience grew with growing trial, and according to demand upon Him; it was on the Cross that He obeyed to the uttermost; on the Cross He made manifest to the full His oneness of mind with the Father. Now He dieth no more; as having once been crucified, and as having glorified the Father on the earth, He dwells for ever in the bosom of the Father, in the light of His countenance. By faith we dwell with Christ the Lord, and learn a little of His Cross; at the resurrection we shall learn indeed; yet evermore by learning—and evermore by praising the Lamb that was slain. Be it then ever present with us in our sojourn here, that Christ, through the eternal Spirit, offered Himself without spot to God. So shall our hearts be full of the song, "Holy, holy, holy, is the Jehovah of hosts!" (Isaiah vi, 3.)

There is no testimony to God's hatred of sin like the Cross of Christ. There are testimonies thereto above, around, and beneath us; but in the cross, and that only, we see to the full God's hatred of sin.

Christ descended lower and lower, even to the depths of the Cross; but in God's sight it was a perpetual ascent to the throne of glory.

If with godly sorrow we would grieve for sin, we must regard it in fellowship with Christ in the light of the Cross.

The law of nature, the law of Moses, and a corrupted gospel, are so many refuges of lies which men flee to for salvation, instead of coming to the Cross of Christ.

The Cross of Christ is the meeting-place for God and the sinner. It is the meeting-place of God with His people. It is also the meeting-place of saints with one another; it is only as Jesus crucified dwells in the midst of them that they can meet each other to profit.

Mercy to Christ, my Surety, would have been death eternal to me.

In the Cross of Christ the holiness of God is perfectly revealed; such is His holiness that the heavens are not clean in His sight.

The Scriptures show us that it is by the Cross of Christ God hears with the ungodly. The justice of God is so magnified by that Cross, that it can delight in long-suffering towards the unregenerate; one great end of this long-suffering is the calling out of the church.

All the trials and all the sufferings of all creatures—were they heaped together—must not be compared with Christ's sufferings on the cross.

As the sin-revenging God of holiness and justice, God forsook Christ on the Cross; but He was indefinitely well-pleased with Christ and His death of atonement. God accepted the work of His beloved Son, and in token of that acceptance, raised Him from the dead.

A PRAYER

Prayers of the Seven

PRAYER No. 1.

O Blessed Jesus, Who didst excuse and forgive those who nailed Thee to the cross; Grant that we may follow Thy holy example in bearing all injuries and unkindnesses, and may learn to love and bless our persecutors, to excuse those who ignorantly wrong us, and to pray for all who despitefully use us; that so learning the lessons of Thy Passion, we may be made partakers of the glory of Thy resurrection, Who livest with the Father and the Holy Ghost, God for ever and ever. Amen.

ADJUSTMENT

Nature is not more natural to my body than God is to my soul. Every animal and plant has its own Environment. And the further one inquires into the relations of the one to the other, the more one sees the marvellous intricacy and beauty of the adjustments. These wonderful adaptations of each organism to its surroundings—of the fish to the water, of the eagle to the air, of the insect to the forest-bed—and of each part of every organism—the fish's swim-bladder, the eagle's eye, the insect's breathing tubes—which the old argument from design brought home to us with such enthusiasm, inspire us still with a sense of the boundless resources and skill of Nature in perfecting her arrangements for each single life. Down to the last detail the world is made for what is in it; and by whatever process things are as they are, all organisms find in surrounding Nature the able complement of themselves. Man, too, finds in his Environment provision for all capacities, scope for the exercise of every faculty, room for the indulgence of each appetite, a just supply for every want. So the spiritual man at the apex of the pyramid of life finds in the vaster range of his Environment a provision as much higher, it is true, as he is higher, but as delicately adjusted to his varying needs. And all this is supplied to him just as the lower organisms are ministered to by the lower environment, in the same simple ways, in the same constant sequence, as appropriately and as lavishly.

Saturday Sermonette

Mark xi., 17: "My house shall be called of all nations a House of Prayer."

When to the House of the Lord thou comest to kneel and pray,
Leave thou behind thee the things of the world-worn day.
Take with thee penitence deep for the sins of thy daily life,
Selfishness, greed, uncleanness, or bitter-tongued envy and strife.
Not p'raps to outward seeming are they thy faults or thy part,
But He Who watches in secret can searchingly read the heart.
Take with thee love and meekness; the meekness that says "O Lord
"Give unto me of Thy Spirit, according unto Thy Word
"That promises those who ask Thee."
And then in silence wait,
For God will speak in the silence; will open the golden gate
Of the beautiful Temple He loveth, that thou mayst enter in,
And pray with an understanding that is pure and freed from sin.

Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, and I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week. I give tithes

But thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of me, O Israel. STORIES FOR LITTLE PEOPLE

SAUL, OR THE PUNISHMENT.
(By M. B.)
1 Samuel xv., 12 to end.

The next morning Samuel went to look for Saul, for God had told him many things that he must say to him.

Saul did not know that Samuel knew of his wickedness; so he tried to make Samuel think that he had done all that God had told him.

When Saul saw Samuel, he pretended to be glad to see him, and said, "I have done the commandment of the Lord." Then Samuel said, "What then is this bleating of sheep and lowing of oxen that I hear?"

Now Saul saw that Samuel knew what he had done. He saw it would be of no use to say that he had not saved the sheep and oxen, so he began to make excuses for himself.

Saul said, "It was the people who would not kill the fat sheep and oxen."

Was it the people who had saved the sheep and oxen? Had not Saul saved them too? and why did Saul let the people do wickedly? Was he not the king? Should he not have made them to do what was right?

Would God like those sheep and oxen to be offered in sacrifice to him? No; God would rather that Saul should obey him than that he should offer sacrifices.

Then Samuel told Saul that God was very angry with him, and did not mean to let him be king much longer.

Saul was very much frightened when he heard that God would punish him, and he said to Samuel, "Do stay and pray to God with me." But Saul was not really sorry; he was only afraid of being punished. Samuel knew that he was not sorry for having offended God, Who had been so good to him, so Samuel would not stay with Saul. Then Saul took hold of Samuel's cloak, to hinder him from going away, and he tore the cloak.

Samuel stopped and said to Saul, "God has torn the land of Canaan from you, and He has given it to a man that is better than you are. God has done it already, and He will not change His mind."

Saul begged Samuel very much to stay with him, and to pray to God with him, that the people might not know that God was angry with him. You see that Saul cared more about what people thought of him than about God being pleased with him.

At last Samuel said that he would worship God with him.

Then Samuel desired to see the king of the Amalekites, whom Saul had saved alive.

This king was a very wicked, cruel man, and God chose that he should be killed. He had hoped that, as Saul had not killed him, he should not die, but Samuel took a sword and killed him.

Then Samuel left Saul, and he never came to see him any more; but he still was very sorry to think that he was so wicked.

I hope, my dear children, that when you offend God you will feel sorry. If you love God, you will not like to grieve Him. Saul did not love God; he only cared about being punished.

Do you know whom God intended to be king instead of Saul? I will soon tell you his name. He will be a better man than Saul.

Why was it so wicked of Saul not to kill the king of the Amalekites, and the fat cattle? Because God had told him to kill them. We ought to do what God tells us to do. Has he told you to kill wicked people? No; but he had told you to pray to him, and to be kind, and to speak truth, and first of all, to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ.

"Oh turn once more, and pray with me,
King Saul exclaimed most earnestly,
Oh why does he this sorrow show?
Why fear to see the prophet go?
Alas! he has such evil done,
That God will chase him from his throne;
Nor will the Lord in mercy spare,
Nor listen to the prophet's prayer.
Saul does not of his sin repent,
But merely dreads the punishment;
And could he still retain his throne, throne,
He would not heed God's holy frown."

Child.

Lord, am I grieved whene'er I've sinned
Against a God so good and kind?
Do I feel thus? Then by this sign
I know that I'm a child of thine.

And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living. And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want. And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country, and he sent him into his fields to feed swine. And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat; and no man gave unto him. And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger! I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy son; make me as one of thy hired servants. And he arose and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him. And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son. But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe and put it on him, and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet; and bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat and be merry, for this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost and is found. And they began to be merry. Luke xv., 13-24.

And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life. Jno. v., 40.

And when he was in affliction, he besought the Lord his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, and prayed unto him; and he was entreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh knew that the Lord he was God. 2 Chron. xxxiii., 12, 13.

SECKATARY HAWKINS.

A feature started in The Examiner a few weeks ago has already made its mark, the Seckatary Hawkins Club. Every day brings in its quota of applications for membership, its gust of letters from young readers and its entries in the competitions.

The Examiner believes in this club for several reasons. Its motto, "Fair and Square," is calculated to inculcate a good spirit in the boys and girls who promise to observe it. Its colors, blue and white, represent truth and purity. Its competitions will give the young people practice in writing. Its correspondence column will bring them together in a community spirit. The announcement of their birthdays will enable them to observe little social niceities.

We believe there is real worth as well as interest and amusement in the Seckatary Hawkins Club. The stories that appear weekly in The Examiner, and those printed in the splendid books given as prizes, are clean tales of adventure.

It is a club we would have been proud to join when we were young. And we hope that parents will recognize the benefits their children will receive, and encourage them to join.

EDUCATION FOR HARVESTERS.

In the annual excursions of harvesters to the wheat fields of the West thousands of young Eastern Canadians glean a broader knowledge of their country than most of them might otherwise acquire.

They learn prairie distances by actual travel, and some of the problems of the Western farmers must be unfolded in the course of the season's work. They touch the mind of the West, and if they are observant and intelligent they should have a new and fairly exact fund of information regarding agricultural and social conditions.

Special railway rates to other parts of the country might develop similarly benefitial communication and contacts. Why shouldn't the railways run two or three-day trips into New Ontario as far as Cochrane or Kapuskasing? Most of us read of Timmins, Kirkland Lake and Haileybury, and may desire to see them, but we never make the start we often contemplate.

The more we travel about in our own Province and country the better citizens we should be. Possibly most of us are more likely to trip off to Atlantic City than into New Ontario. People are like that. But the only special rates that are offered by the railways are to the boardwalk resort. Possibly an occasional reduced fare to Cochrane might stimulate traffic from the south.

CHIEF NEWHALL'S HONORS.

Chief Newhall's election to the first vice-presidency of the Canadian Chief Constables' Association is a distinction that pleases his friends in Peterborough. They have not forgotten the days when he was veritably a chief constable, and so conspicuously successful was his public service that the citizens, whom he served in the police ranks for quite a number of years, accredited him in their estimation as one of the ablest detectives in this country.

Such a performance of duty is so quickly lost sight of, crowded into the wings on the stage of life by new actors and new climaxes! But the police annals of this district contain nothing like the sustained accomplishments of the erstwhile police constable and detective who now directs Peterborough's police force. Anybody can be a chief constable. Police commissions are hiring them every day, and dismissing them, too; but it is vastly different to be a chief constable, to be "primus inter pares," to be first among those whom a uniform or other circumstances seem to rate as equals.

It is a felicitous formality to congratulate Chief Newhall upon the preferment accorded him in Toronto, but in all sincerity we would like to tell him that his glories lie behind him. We have attended too many conventions of all kinds to be impressed by any of them, or by their offices. It no doubt is a satisfaction to himself to receive the confidence of the members of his association, but it will create only a mild interest in this city as compared with the thrills he gave the public with some of his exploits as a detective.

COSGRAVE WOULD RESIGN.

Imagine a Government seeking retirement but unable to find successors! Ordinarily, an administration regards itself as worthy of eternal confidence and capable of eternal integrity and efficiency.

But President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State is ready and willing to vacate the Cabinet benches. He wishes to transfer the responsibility of guiding the country to the radicals who represent a divided and unorganized opposition. Here in Ontario we have seen radicals suddenly silenced by political success and its consequent obligations. The Labor party in Ontario in 1919, the Socialists in Germany, the Labor party in Britain have all demonstrated the same fact, that when thrust into office they suddenly become as cautious and conservative as the old parties they formerly denounced. That was one reason why President Cosgrave cordially welcomed the De Valera Republicans, who in the first four years of the Free State's experiment refused to take their seats in the Dail. The next step in the education Mr. Cosgrave would provide for them is to unload the responsibility of government upon them. It would subdue their shrill demands and introduce them to the realities of political experience.

Mr. Cosgrave said recently: "When one party remains in office for five years it brings upon itself heaps of exaggerated and inflated criticism. What I would like to see before long is the present Government stepping down and the other fellow taking the reins."

William T. Cosgrave has given the Irish Free State a resolute, wise and patient government, gaining time while the country recovered from years of turbulence and unrest, while at the same time the people became accustomed to the duties and rights of their new status, and to the parliamentary institutions which they were suddenly called upon to establish and maintain.

History may yet acclaim William T. Cosgrave as one of the outstanding statesmen of the period of post-war rehabilitation.

CANADA'S MUNICIPAL YEAR BOOK.

The publishers have just sent a copy of the Canadian Municipal Directory for the current year, and on reviewing it find it of the greatest value as a work of reference.

The contents of the book have been standardized throughout and the alphabetical arrangement makes the information contained therein easily accessible. In the introduction, the point is made that there are 4,300 self-governing communities in Canada with 50,000 officials engaged in conducting the affairs of these many cities, towns and villages. It comes as a surprise that there are so many individual urban and rural communities and there is undoubtedly great credit due to the editor, Mr. H. Wisely Bragg, for the excellent manner in which this vast amount of material has been collected together, and so carefully classified.

The contents of the book are so arranged as to give municipal men the most comparative information and cannot fail to be of the greatest possible assistance to elected and appointed officials, enabling them to compare our community with others of a similar size and population. It is further a book of considerable importance in every municipal office, for no other work of this kind is published in the Dominion, and no man interested in municipal progress can afford to be without it.

The book is divided into three chapters, the first being an alphabetical directory by Provinces, of municipal men from coast to coast, the larger places having a full municipal personnel included, and the rural communities, the chief officials.

Part two deals with particulars of a reference and comparative nature, and provides the best and most complete information on the financial standing of communities, and also gives tabulated information on the very important question of waterworks. There are also a number of leading articles that supply a fund of useful knowledge on several different subjects, all applicable to municipal endeavour.

The third part of the book is devoted to a buyer's guide, for the use of municipal officials, and everything that they have occasion to require is listed together with the names of the manufacturers and dealers. In connection with this last part of the work, there is also a free buyer's service, which will prove of considerable assistance to municipal men.

It is interesting to note that this Municipal Year Book is to be followed up by the publication, in about four months' time, of a new work, entitled "Municipal Who's Who in Canada," which will be an interesting biographical book of reference, profusely illustrated, and constantly made use of in every busy newspaper office.

In the capable hands of this well-known publishing firm, and edited by Mr. H. Wisely Bragg, familiar to all municipal men for twenty years, it will indeed fill a long-felt need.

A LONGER AND BETTER LIFE.

Science has done much for humanity, but perhaps its most important work has been in lengthening human life. It has made life more worth living and has given the average person a longer time in which to enjoy it. To what better uses could scientific knowledge be applied?

In 1855, a child born into this world could expect to live forty years. To-day the child has a life expectancy of fifty-five years. In the short period since 1901 the average life span has increased eight years.

The expectancy of life in less than a century has increased sixteen years in England, eleven years in France, seventeen years in Denmark, eighteen years in Germany, fifteen years in Sweden, nineteen years in Holland. That of civilized man is much longer than that of the savage. The occidental lives longer than the oriental.

Civilized man is learning not only how to live longer, but how to live better. Indeed, he lives longer because he lives better. Science has not only conquered many diseases, but solved many problems of hygiene. Modern man eats better food, wears more healthful clothing, orders his habits better than did his forefathers.

More of the world's work is being done to-day by men and women past life's half-way mark, and the world is the beneficiary. The average man is living long enough to give the world the advantage of his ripe experience and to share the joys of seeing his children grow to adulthood and his grandchildren go through childhood.—Oshawa Times.

HOLIDAY READING.

Advice as to what to read in the holidays may fail to persuade because of diversity of taste. Mr. E. A. Osborne, in the London Morning Post, makes an ingenious effort to solve the problem. What the reader needs, he says, is a change.

"If you wish for an intellectual tonic, the equivalent for the mind of a change of air for the body, choose a book or books which are quite outside your customary range of reading. If you like solid, serious stuff—the cold roast beef of literature, so to speak—procure a supply of the light kickshaws which are purveyed by the modern novelist whose sole aim is to amuse or amaze you.

"If you are a constant consumer of the canned fiction of to-day, why not make the acquaintance of some of the Old Masters?"

The cleavage between the older writers and the moderns is not quite the same as that between the serious and the frivolous. Pepys' Diary is frivolous enough, and even the Spectator does not penetrate as deeply into the problems of life as some writers of our own day. To a good many people serious reading, whether old or new, would be a change. Their time is spent in strenuous business, interspersed with equally strenuous amusement, leaving little opportunity for serious reflection on the problems of life, on the public affairs of their own country, the relations between nation and nation, the achievement of international peace and industrial peace, the attempts to fashion a philosophy of life corresponding with the changes produced by scientific invention. The ideas suggested may sound too formidable for holidays. But reflection may bring about refreshment rather than fatigue.—London Advertiser.

GOD'S MINUTE.

God be merciful unto us, and bless us; and cause His face to shine upon us; That Thy way may known upon earth, Thy saving health among all nations. Let the people praise Thee, O God; let all the people praise Thee. O let the nations be glad and sing for joy; for Thou shalt judge the people righteously and govern the nations upon earth. —Psalm 67: 1-4.

Our God and Father, we render Thee our thanks and praise for all the good of this day. New were Thy mercies in the morning, and sweet is Thy love in the evening hour. We bless Thee that Thou hast given us this day our daily bread; that Thou hast not forgotten us even in those self-centred moments when we forgot Thee.

And now we pray Thee to watch over and preserve us, body and soul, during the hours of the day and night. May our rest and sleep be sweet to us. May we be brought to this new day refreshed and encouraged for all its duties and privileges, its sorrows and joys.

When we come at last to life's evening hour, and the night of death begins to fall about us, may we by faith look beyond its darkness to the breaking of the eternal day. We ask all in the name and through the merits of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen.

A Thought

A MASTERPIECE.

Nothing is sadder and more discouraging than a masterpiece, because nothing shows better man's powerlessness to take cognizance of his greates and his dignity. And if no voice warns us that the most beautiful things are nothing, in comparison with what we are, nothing will diminish us more.

Voice of the People

ABOUT BASEBALLS.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—Dishonesty when young generally ends in one going behind the bars when older. Many young boys in town are acting very dishonestly. Now I am writing in regards of the habit of taking home baseballs out of the river or outside the fence of the ball park, which if any boy is known to do and is caught is running a chance of visiting the police station. All balls that go over the fence or into the river are the property of the ball teams that are participating in the game on the field and they hire boys to look after them. Because a ball is hit over the fence or into the river boys are not allowed to get it and run home or hide it until the players are gone and then take it home; no that is stealing property. When a man and his family go out for a day's outing one cannot go and steal his goods. When boys are allowed to go home with a baseball and parents don't make them return it they are as much at fault as the boy, for any father or mother who will see their boy with two or three new baseballs must know that he did not buy them. The idea some boys have is steal ball, take it home and sell it to some other club, which is very wrong. So now I hope that in future to avoid seeing any boys being encouraged to be dishonest, that parents will educate their children to be upright and return what they know does not belong to them.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space,

Yours truly,
Caretaker of J. S. Park.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, August 25. — Although less than 3000 head of cattle were received for sale at the Union stock yards this week prices made no response to lighter supply except for bologna bulls, which recovered the loss of three weeks ago of 75c a cwt. Really choice butchers, light or heavy, were a light run, and only one load of steers averaging 1250 lbs. each, sold at $12 a cwt. Another load of heavies not too breedy, sold at $11.50 a cwt. Small lots of the best heavyweights went from $11 to $11.50 a cwt. Baby beeves were easily sold, the choice bringing $13.50 to $14 a cwt.

Packers are understood to have received a fair supply of butchers cattle from the west and this made them somewhat independent of this market. Fair average quality handyweight butchers were only taken from $9.50 to $10.50 a cwt, and some common killers were bought as low as $7 a cwt. Butchers' cows had less snap than has been the case for some weeks and were off about 25c a cwt. Choice cows were $8.50 to $8.75; good $7.75 to $8.25, and mediums $6.50 to $7 a cwt. Canners and cutters were steady at $4 to $5 a cwt. Few bulls, other than bolognas came in this week and these sold from $6.25 to $7 a cwt.

With farmers busy with harvest the trade in stockers and feeders was not too active, but prices keep steady. One load of breedy western feeders brought $9.75 a cwt. Business in springers was good with several outside buyers on the market and prices were up $5 to $10 a head again this week. The market was about sold out at the week end and the prospect favors steady prices for butchers of the right kind and finish.

Calves strengthened throughout the week and ended up $1 a cwt. higher than last week. A short supply and some exports explain the rise. Choice calves are 16½c to 17c, good 15 to 16c, and mediums 12 to 14c a lb., and a few calves are selling below 14c a lb.

Lambs are down half a dollar a cwt., and average good lambs will not bring over 14c a lb. One large shipment of lambs only brought 13½c, with a goodly portion of culls taken out at 11c a lb. Choice light butchers' sheep were firm at 8c a lb.

Outside buyers forced another advance in hogs of 25c a cwt., and the week end bids were $13.50 a cwt. selects f.o.b., and $14.50 a cwt. weighed off cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—There was a little demand here yesterday for wheat and a sale of 40,000 bushels o. No. 3 Northern was made at 6¾c per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, c.i.f. Montreal, but apart from this trading was slow in all lines and the undertone to the market easier.

In sympathy with the renewed weaknes in the cash wheat market at Winnipeg an easier feeling prevailed in the market for Spring wheat grades of flour, but there was no actual change in prices announced. The export trade was inactive owing to the fact that foreign buyers were not disposed to respond to the higher prices aked overnight, and the demand from local country interests was also of a very limited character. The trade in new crop Winter wheat flour was also slow and prices were unchanged.

There was a fair inquiry from United States buyers for millfeed for immediate shipment, but owing to the fact that millers were not disposed to offer freely on account of the continued good demand for supplies for home consumption the volume of business accomplished was small. Locally the market was fairly active with a firm undertone. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was slow and prices were unchanged.

The export trade in baled hay was quiet, but there was a steady demand from local buyers for odd cars, and as supplies were none too large to meet the requirements the undertone to the market was firm.

A fair amount of business was done in eggs in a jobbing way, but the demand was principally for small lots to meet immediate wants owing to the continued warm weather prevailing. In a wholesale way a sale of car of British Columbia eggs en route were made at 39c per dozen for extras, and at 37c for firsts, f.o.b. Vancouver, while some small lots of Ontario extras sold at 43c per dozen, delivered here. Receipts were 5,554 cases.

Owing to the continued steady demand for imported beans and the somewhat limited supplies available on spot a stronger feeling prevailed in the market and sales of broken lots of choice white hand-picked were made at $3.50 to $4.20 per bushel, ex store, while car lots to arrive were quoted at $3.90 to $4 per bushel, ex track.

Owing to the steady increasing demand from local and outside buyers for butter and the smaller supplies coming forward, the undertone to the market was stronger again and prices scored a further advance of ¼c to ⅝c per lb. and the prospects were that they would go still higher in the near future. The volume of business was fair. Receipts were 2,212 packages.

The trade in cheese was quiet owing to the fact that there was very little response from English importers to the offers made overnight by exporters and in consequence the trading on spot between houses was also of a very limited character. The tone of the market for Eastern cheese was firm but the market for Western was weaker. Receipts were 8,587 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—Rising temperatures in Canada meant descending prices yesterday for wheat. Predictions of more frost over the Canadian wheat belt were nearly a complete fizzle, and reports here indicated that up to date the Canadian crop has suffered no damage of consequence from frost.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1¾ to 2½ cents net lower, with corn unchanged to ⅝ to ¼c off; oats unchanged to ⅝c down, and provisions varying from 8 cents decline to 10 cents advance.

Wheat traders promptly got rid of fright about supposed dangers to the Canadian crop, and turned in general to the selling side of the market.

Values were thus left without any adequate support, and the finish was in some cases the lowest point reached yesterday. Smallness of North American export business and instability both of the Liverpool and Winnipeg markets added to a noticeable degree to the selling pressure here.

Fully as much wheat was sold to go into storage in Chicago alone yesterday as was disposed of in all of North America for shipment to Europe. The estimated total in each case was 200,000 bushels. Meanwhile, hedging against newly-harvested wheat everywhere was much in evidence, and word was received that Argentina still has 55,000,000 bushels of wheat available for export. Private reports indicated that Australian wheat acreage is a little smaller than last year, but crop prospects generally fine.

Corn prices were heavy at the finish, buying force having become more or less exhausted for the moment. Denials of frost reports from Iowa tended to weaken the market and so likewise did somewhat larger receipts here of 106 cars. On the other hand, competition for corn appeared to be increasing, and the principal Chicago owners of corn reported that they had sold about all the corn they had afloat at Buffalo or in Georgian Bay, and were chartering vessels to take more corn east from Chicago. Oats followed corn, and failed to hold advances.

Provisions averaged higher. Packers were buying September delivery of lard.

A Trip to the Circus

Well, we boys are up here on Seven Willows Island again for a short stay. It was the Skinny Guy who put it over—he got his daddy to go up and ask our mothers could we go for a few days' trip in the big white houseboat. So we all got our things ready, and sat down to wait for the boat. Clarence Wilks sat looking out at the trees, as if he were dreaming about something.

"What's the matter, kid?" I asked him. "Aren't you going along?"

"Sure thing!" he said, quickly. "Who said I wasn't going along?"

I didn't say any more to him, but I wondered why he wasn't packing up a few things. And then down the river path came a bunch of boys—they were the seven Howard brothers, who do an acrobat act in a circus.

"Hello, Hawkins," says Jack Howard, coming up to me, "We boys have got to join the circus again today, so we just came down here to say goodbye and tell you how much we enjoyed our week's vacation here on this old river bank with you fellows."

"It's nice of you," I said; "by Jinks! Jack, we boys though you circus actors were too stuck up to mix with us fellows at first. And I think Clarence Wilkes owes you fellows a lot for saving his life last week. If you hadn't been acrobats, I don't think Clarence would have got off that cliff rock where he fell."

"Aw, shucks!" says Jack Howard. "I wish we could stay here all the time with you fellows and so do my brothers, there. But we've got to join the circus to-day, and the big tent is being put up at Watertown this very minute, I guess, so we haven't much time to lose. Well, I'll say goodbye."

"Goodbye, Jack Howard," he said, in a low voice; "I'm sorry you're going away. I want to thank you and your brothers for what they've done for me."

Then he turned and walked back into our tent. Jack Howard looked at me and said:

"He's a queer fellow, Hawkins, isn't he?"

"Yeah," I said; "you've got to know how to take him. But he's not such a sissy as you though he was is he?"

"Not by a long time!" exclaimed Jack, with a laugh. "I missed my guess about that, didn't I?"

And when the seven brothers went their way, the other boys went down to the river to wait for the Skinny Guy and his pop in their big boat. I turned and went into the tent. And there sat Clarence Wilks, all by himself, crying like a baby.

"What the dickens is the matter with you?" I asked. But he didn't answer me, so I went ahead and tightened the straps on the blanket bundles and waited for him to say something. At last he talked.

"Hawkins," he says, "some fellows have all the fun in life."

"Yeah," I said. "Life seems funny, sometimes."

Then he didn't say any more for a little while. Just as I was through packing up, he said:

"Those Howard boys sure do have fun, don't they?"

"How do you mean?" I asked.

"Oh, all they've got to do is to act a little bit in a circus, then they can stay and see the whole circus for nothing, and they can see it every day, too."

I stared at Clarence for a little while, and then I shook my head.

"Well," I said, finally, "Clarence, you haven't got as much sense as I thought you had."

"Why haven't I?"

"Because, if you had, you would know that it's not much fun to see a circus when you have to look at the same old think every day. It's no fun for those Howard brothers. It's work—that's what it is—they were glad to get away from it for a week and have a vacation down here on this old river bank."

Clarence looked at me with big eyes, and would have said something, I guess, but just then came the other boys, telling us the Skinny Guy and his pop had arrived, and they each picked up their baggage and ran for the river. I had to wait for Clarence, he was so slow, he was the last to leave, and when he came out he was lugging two suitcases.

"Gee whiz!" I said, "are you moving down to the island for good?"

"I've got to have some clothes, don't I?" he snapped.

I didn't say any more, but I thought a lot. The other boys kidded him, too, when he brought his two suitcases on board. hey said Clarence had to have a clean shirt three times a day, and a dozen white collars and about as many ties, and that's why he had the two suitcases. But I had though of a different reason for those two suitcases and I decided to say nothing about it until I was sure. One thing I made up my mind to do, though—and that was to keep an eye on Clarence Wilks.

When a bunch of fellows get together, like our club down on the island, swimming, fishing and everything like that, you don't miss any of them at once. Somehow, there are too many things to do; and though I had made up my mind to keep an eye on him, I didn't miss Clarence until the morning of the third day. And I had been having such great luck at fishing, that I guess I wouldn't have missed him then except for the missing canoe when I got mine out of the bushes. As soon as I saw there was one canoe that I couldn't see on the river, I began to look around at the boys. And Clarence was missing. I ran back to the houseboat to see if those two suitcases were gone, too. They were.

Then I told the Skinny Guy's pop and the other boys about it. Of course the Skinny Guy's pop was worrid about it. "I told his mother I would take care of Clarence," he says "and we must get on his trail right away."

"Oh, he will come back," says Jerry Moore; "give him time, Mr. Lambert—he's just gone on a little canoe trip by himself—he will be back before night time."

But it got dark and Clarence didn't show up. All the boys went to bed, but I stayed on the top deck of the houseboat with Mr. Lambert.

"Hawkins," he said, "where do you think that kid went?"

"Well," I said, "I guess the poor kid got homesick and went back home."

"I wish I could believe that," says Mr. Lambert. "It would take a lot of worry off my mind. I want you to take a canoe and paddle up there to-morrow, Hawkins, and find out if he's at home."

"All right, "I'll do it," I said.

So I got up early the next morning and got in my little red canoe before the other boys were awake and paddled up to the old home shore. I hid my canoe where the Pelham boys could not find it and then hurried up to Clarence's house and hung around to see if I could get a glimpse of Clarenc. I didn't want to let anybody know that I was watching, but all of a sudden Clarence's mother come out of the side gate.

"Why, bless me, if there isn't that Hawkins boy!" she says. "Why aren't you down on the island with Mr. Lambert and the boys?"

"Oh, I just came home to get a few things," I said, not knowing what else to say.

"How is Clarence?" she asked, suddenly.

Right away I knew that Clarence had not come home. I didn't know what to say. I studied a minute, and then I said

"Oh, he's just as well as can be expected."

She laughed. "Well," she says, "I hope the boys are having a good time."

Then she walked down to the grocery store. I didn't know what to do. I was sure, now, that Clarence had gone somewhere he hadn't any business to go. I didn't like to go back and tell Mr. Lambert that. I knew how he would worry because he had promised our mothers to take care of us boys. It made me fell awfully sore at Clarence for doing a stunt like this. But I walked on, and pretty soon came to Doc Water's house.

"Hello, Hawkins," says Doc, "what's the trouble?"

"You guessed it," I said; "it is trouble all right, Doc."

Then I told him about Clarence. Doc's face wrinkled up. "He always was a pestiferous kid," he says, "and I'll bet you a dime he ran away."

"Oh, if we were only sure he had had run away, it wouldn't make us feel so bad," I told him.

Doc looked hard at me. "Just what do you mean?" he asked.

"Well, Clarence isn't an expert swimmer, you know—and maybe—"

But Doc knew what I had on my mind. "Shut up!" he says, as he got up and put on his coat and hat; "don't say anything like that Hawkins. Nobody's going to make me believe Clarence is drowned—we'll get the Sheriff busy right away."

I walked down to the Sheriff's house with Doc and he and the Sheriff had a good long talk. The Sheriff promised he would get his deputies busy right away to find out where Clarence might have gone.

"Go back to the island, Hawkins" says Doc, and tell Mr. Lambert not to worry. We will find this kid back in a hurry."

I got my little canoe out of the bushes and paddled back down the river. I gave Mr. Lambert the news and told him what Doc said. But it didn't do any good. He said he just couldn't help worrying about it. And the same way with all the other boys in our club. No word came the next day from Doc or the Sheriff. And we boys went out for a little rifle practice with the Skinny Guy's new rifle, but not one of us could hit the target. It's funny the way we boys get nervous when something goes wrong with our club.

The following morning we could stand it no longer, and we all got in the big boat and went back up to the clubhouse. Mr. Lambert told us to scout around the river bank and see if Clarence might be camping out by himself. But we didn't see no sign of him. Doc and the Sheriff were glad to see us, however, and Doc said:

"There's been a boy up here looking for you, Hawkins. He wouldn't give his name, but he came in a gasoline launch and asked for Seckatary Hawkins. If I ain't mistaken, that's the sound of his motor now."

We could hear the "chug-chug-chug" of a motor boat, and we boys all turned to look up the river. It was the prettiest little launch I had ever seen, and it steered straight for our landing.

"It's Jack Howard!" I yelled to the boys, as I started for the landing. They all followed me and the launch shoved its nose into the mud of the bank.

"Hello, Hawkins!" called Jack Howard. "Gee! I'm glad I found you this time—I made two trips down here already to see you—"

"But I thought you were with the circus!" I broke in. "Aren't you working?"

"Sure I am!" he says laughing, "but I got sick and had to take a couple days off, and so I thought I'd come down here and bring you fellows some free tickets so you could see the show before it gets away, because you boys were pretty nice to me when I was down here last week with my brothers. Won't you come up and see the show tomorrow?"

He handed me a bunch of tickets that he had taken from his pocket while he talked. He didn't have to ask twice. Golly! Every boy in the club was grinning at Jack Howard while he talked, and when he handed me the tickets, they gave him a cheer. Doc and the Sheriff stood up the bank with Mr. Lambert, talking in low tones.

"Jack," I said, "how about staying tonight with us down on the island? We have the Skinny Guy's big white boat to sleep in—"

"That'll be fine!" exclaimed Jack. "I don't know when I'll have a day off again, so I might as well enjoy myself."

That night before going to bed, Mr Lambert and Jack Howard sat for a long time up on the top deck, talking. I couldn't hear what they said, but the last thing Jack Howard said was:

"Wait till tomorrow, Mr. Lambert. I'll help you out.

Doc Waters and the Sheriff arrived in a canoe early the next morning. Mr. Lambert acted as though he expected them. "All going to the circus," says Doc, with a grin; "Hawkins have you got enough tickets to take the Sheriff and me along?"

"Sur" I said; "by golly that kid gave me enough tickets to take a regiment along.

There was a fine time all around before we got ready to go. Jack Howard sure liked the island. He said it was just the place he had been looking for all his lifetime to spend a vacation. He was sorry he had to go, but it was time to begin the trip if we expected to get to the circus before the show started. Mr. Lambert wanted us all to wait for the steamboat, Hudson Lee, to make the trip, so we wouldn't have any trouble parking our boats and canoes, but Jack Haward said he had only hired his launch, and he had to take it back, so he let Jerry Moore and me ride in the launch with Jack, and the other boys waited for the steamboat. Of couse we beat them there, and waited for them. Then we had to walk about a mile, I guess, to the circus grounds gosh! it was a big tent. We boys had never seen one that big. And when we went inside—oh, boy! there were more people in that big tent than I ever saw in any one place at any one time. I never saw the like. There were three big circus rings, too, and all kinds of swings and things hanging in the air, on which acrobats did their stunts.

Pretty soon there was a loud crash of music and the show began. We had fine seats. I said to Jack: "You must be sick and tired of seeing this thing day after day, Jack."

"Oh, I don't know," he says; "a fellow kind o' misses it, once he's in it. But I felt sick a few days ago, and Pop said I had to take a rest, and he got another fellow to take my place, and I stayed till they had him trained to do the work, and then I sneaked away and hired that motor boat and went down to your old clubhouse —look, look now, Hawkins! Here comes our act now."

He turned around in his seat and faced the other boys. 'Hey, look, fellows—here comes my brothers now keep your eye on 'em—it's the finest circus act in the whole show! Here they come!"

And there they came— the announcer was just shouting the Seven Howards—most marvelous masters in the art of acrobatics, as the seven figures, dressed in pink tights and shirts, came into the middle ring. I had my eye on the biggest brother—Lafe was his name—I saw him jump upon the platform and quick as lightning the other brothers had climbed upon him everywhere — on his arms—on his shoulders— until they stood one solid pyramid, three men high. And then all of a sudden I heard some shouting— I thought is was the clowns cutting up—but there came two men running out of the seats alongside of us and they yelled and pointed to the top fellow on the pyramid of Howard brothers, and I looked up and—oh, boy! maybe you think I didn't get a shock! That top boy wasn't a Howard brother at all—IT WAS CLARENCE—

"Hooray!" I yelled, and "Hooray!" yelled all the boys in our bunch. We saw now who the two men were that had run out from their seats—Doc and Mr. Lambert—and a policeman was holding them back and wouldn't let them into the ring where the Howard Brothers act was going on. Jack Howard tugged at my sleeve and said:

"Sit down, Hawkins, and get the other boys quiet, too' everything will be all right."

Well, I don't know what else was in the circus show, because none of us waited to see any more. We were all so glad to see Clarence well and alive we didn't care for anything else. And maybe you think we weren't proud of him! Oh, boy! One of our clubmembers, and a regular acrobat in a circus, too! Jack Howard whispered to me: "Come on, follow me, you and the fellows. We followed him down under the seats and through a door flap of a tent, and there we were, in the dressing room of the Seven Howards. Doc and Mr. Lambert and the Sheriff were there, talking to Clarence and another man, who was the daddy of the Howard brothers.

"You've got to go back to-night" said Mr. Lambert to Clarence, "because you folks don't know you ran away from the island to join this circus, and I don't want to tell them, because they will blame me for letting you get away."

"Don't scold the poor kid, Mr. Lambert," says Jack Howard; "he did a good turn, he helped me get a good chance to get well when I was sick and couldn't acrobat any, and he was right smart at learning to take my place. And by golly, if I don't think he's a better acrobat than I am."

"No," says Clarence, "not by a jugful, but if you are well enough to take your place again, I think I'll go back home. I can't get used to staying away from home, somehow."

"Good scout, Clarence," says Jack, laughing; "we had a good time this week, didn't we?"

"I'll say we did," says Clarence, with a smile.

"Yeah," I says, "and you give us enough worry, too, running away like that, we fellows thought you might be drowned or something—"

Clarence was hurt at that. He started to cry. Mr. Lambert said: "What's the use of scolding him? Any of you boys would have done the same thing, if you thought you could have been circus acrobats—"

We all thought that Mr. Lambert said what true, so we didn't make any answer. And all of a sudden we heard a steamboat whistle.

"Goodbye, everybody!" called out Mr. Lambert. "Come on, boys, we'll have to run if we want to catch that boat. Bring that kid and those two suitcases along."

Which we did.

the Howard brothers.

"You've got to go back to-night" said Mr. Lambert to Clarence, "because you folks don't know you ran away from the island to join this circus, and I don't want to tell them, because they will blame me

THE PASSWORD

Last week our password was "Hercules," and by the easy manner in which the majority of our club members solved it we know it was too easy.

So here goes for a much more difficult job. The letters, as usual, are all jumbled together, and this is what it looks like:

ALOGSUNKME

There you are! It's in keeping with our contest this week —a big fish. As soon as you have placed the letters in their right places, you will have the name of a fish which means "great pickerel." Try it now, and see how long it takes you to figure it out.

OUR WEEKLY MEETING

We will now call the meeting to order and present some of the communications from members, and those whose letters follow are going to receive an autographed book of our club's adventures. The first one comes from a member in Indiana who tells about a Junior Seckatary Hawkins club that is to be organized here:

Dear Seck:

We are going to have a Junior Seckatary Hawkins Club in our neighborhood. We have nine members sighted for it. Four of them are not members yet, but are planning to be. We are trying to get others to join, too. When we have it organized I'll write and tell you all about it. We are going to read your stories at each meeting. We want it to be as much like yours as possible.

I read your book "Ching Toy," and now I am reading 'Chinese Coin.' The books don't belong to me, but I wish they did.

Isn't it strange that every time I think of you I picture you as a short fat boy with black hair inclined to stand straight up and a stub nose bedeckled with freckles and a laughing mouth?

I hope this letter is printed, so we will have a book to read in our club.

Wouldn't it be nice if all the boys and girls would have Junior Clubs, too? Yours, fair and square,

MARY LOUISE WEDMORE, 14,
127 E. Ninth St., Munice Ind.

Wouldn't you like to see Beverly Rogers' little ducks? They must be cute. We are very glad to have you as a member of the club, Beverly.

Dear Sekatary:—

I am joining your club as you see and will be very proud to do so. I will tell you about my playmates. They are two little ducks and they are about a month old. One little duck is white, mixed with yellow. The other little duck is yellow and black. I take care of them all the time. They are getting to know me better and will eat out of my hand. They amuse me very much. They will walk a little way and flop down. I could sit and watch them for hours.

Your truly,
BEVERLY ROGERS.

Peterborough.

Here is a letter from last week's prize winner in which Lowery tells you what nice prizes I give. Thanks, Lowery.

Dear Seck.:—

Here is my story and inclosed you will find a blank for one of my playmates.

"My Playmates"

I have quite a few plamates. My favorite is Bill, a boy about my age. He is a little shorter. He knows a lot of games. He is a good baseball player. He also can play tennis good. On these and other games he is one of the best players among my playmates.

At night we play hide-and-go-seek, also touch the finger.

In the winter we play hockey and go out skiing.

Thanking you very much for the lovely book you sent me.

Yours fair and square,
LOWERY McQUADE.

A LETTER FROM THE "SEKATARY"

Dear Club Members:

We boys have been spending a lot of our time down in the shade of the old willow trees that hide the cool banks of Cave River. Good fishing, there. And maybe you think we haven't caught some. Oh, boy! I had a catfish as big as my arm last Saturday, and Shadow Loomis says he caught one twice as big. I didn't see Shadow's catch, but I'll bet it was a fish story, anyhow. It's always the way, when a fellow goes fishing—to hear them tell it, you'd think they had hooked a whale, when you can bet your last cent it wasn't much bigger than a sun perch.

My daddy told me it was always that way. They'll tell you about the big fish they caught—but it got away. And when you hear a story of any kind that you just can't believe you just say to yourself: "That's a fish story." Shadow Loomis has a way of saying things, and whenever he hears something that he think isn't true he says: "It sounds fishy to me."

Well, let's have a contest in which the title will be "A FISH STORY." Don't be discouraged if you have tried in contests and never won—believe me, you never can reach anywhere unless you keep on going, and you can't win if you won't keep on trying. Get busy and write a story of a verse, of if you can't do that very well, just sit down and write a long letter and tell me about "A Fish Story" that you remember. That's all there is to it.

Dear Seck:

I do not belong to your club, but I would like to join. I have inclosed the password and hope it is right. I hope lots of club members will write to me. They will receive an answer for every letter they write to me.

Yours, fair and square,
FRANK Ellis, Jr., 12,
110 N. Maple St., Somerset, Ky.

One of our loyal Tennessee members urges our club to learn swimming, as it helps us to keep fit. Here's the message:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

There are a great many summer sports, but as I have just learned to swim I can hardly stay out of the water. I can swim about fifty feet. I think every one should know how to swim, because some day you may save your life and some other person's too. Another reason is, it is good for nervous people, and it develops your muscles and is good exercise.

Yours, fair and square,
ANDREW B. ANDREWS, Jr., 12,
685 S. Market St., Dayton, Tenn.

PLAYMATES

Two happy little playmates,
Went for a walk one day
And gathered pretty flowers
That grew along their way.

They espied a canary,
Sitting in a tree;
"Let us catch it," cried Harry,
Says Mary, "Let it go free."

The walk made Mary tired
And she sat down to rest,
While Harry chased a blue-bird
To find where it hid its nest.

Then he twined for his little sister,
A wreath of the roses bright;
And when he saw how pleased she was
He smiled in great delight.

Then the children started home
Tired from their play,
And reached there just at sundown,
At the close of a merry day.

I hope Willie Tinney's playmate is able to join the club sometime soon. He will enjoy it just as much as all these other members.

Dear Sekatary Hawkins:

I was glad to get the pin and I am very pleased with it.

My best playmate lives across the road from me. Nearly every day we get out our wagon and play bus or tie our wagons together and play train. Sometimes we play other games.

I asked him to join the club but his mother wouldn't let him. I like the story you put in the paper very much.

I hope to get the prize. I will close now.

Yours fair and square,
WILLIE TINNEY.
Peterborough, Ont.

Here is Dorothy Disney with a nice letter telling how she likes her badge. I'll be looking for your story Dorothy.

Dear Seck.:—

I just received my club pin and certificate and am very much pleased with both.

I solved that word "Ourdreamsete" and found that it meant "True Comrades" which would be a very good motto.

Next week I'll write a story or make a drawing and I hope I will win a prize some day. I just love reading books and "Sekatary Hawkins" books are my favorite ones. Well I don't want to take up too much space so I will close now. 'Bye till next week.

Yours fair and square,
DOROTHY E. DISNEY.
228 Rubidge street.

It's real nice of Ada Riel to send in her brother's membership, and I have sent her a picture. Ada who is 13, wrote the splendid poem that wins this week's prize.

Dear Seck:—

My brother wishes to join your club and I am sending in the coupon.

I am very glad to receive my pin and like it very much.

I am entering on this week's contest and have written a short poem. I have no more to say so I must close.

Yours fair and square,
ADA M. RIEL,

Here's a letter from Florence Lemming, which accompanied one of the nicest drawings I have seen. Perhaps one of these Saturdays I may get a chance to reproduce it on our page, Florence, but of course I can't print colors.

Dear Sec.:—

Since I have joined your club I am sending in this drawing (just for fun). Hoping to hear from you soon.

Yours sincerely,

The following is from one of our boys in Cincinnati, Ohio:

Dear Seck:

I received a book from you, and I am writing a letter of thanks. The book I received is "The Yellow Y." It was interesting and exciting. When I came to a fighting part, I always read fast, so I can find out what happened at the end. I read my book three times already, and I intend to read it many more times, for reading is my hobby. You can hardly tell my book was used. I just was 14 years old. My little brother received his pin, and he admired it above all his others, as I do. I hope my letter wins another book, for I'd like to read the next one. I received a letter from a member and would like to have other members write to me. I will answer every letter, for I like to correspond. I read the story every Sunday and sure do like it, I can't wait 'til next Sunday.

Well, Seck, it's 9 o'clock and I will have to bring my letter to a close.

Yours, fair and square,
CHARLES FREY, 14,
1520 Linn St., Cincinnati, O.

Here's a little message from two new members in Wisconsin, and I'm sure we are all glad to have them in our club, because we may add their names to the list of twins we have on file:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

My sister and I would like to join your interesting club. We are 10 years told and in the 5th grade in school. Our birtliday was May 30th.

We like to read the letter published on the Seckatary Hawkins page and also the stories.

We will close now, hoping to receive our membership pins soon.

Yours, fair and square,
MARGARET and MARION GARY,
Box 54, Arnold, Wis.

And here is one from the capital city of Ohio, written by a member who has been lucky enough to win a prize:

Dear Seck:

I am writing this little letter in order to thank you for the lovely check I received. It will come in handy for my sister's birthday present. I intend to listen on Monday night for the title of the next contest.

Thanking you again and also hoping to receive another check, I will close. Before doing so I wish to say my motto is "Try, try again."

Wishing your club every success in the world, I remain,

Yours, fair and square,
AMY BECK,
945 Nelson Road, Columbus O

And now we adjourn for another week. Get busy at once and get into the contest, and see that your writing or drawing is sent in early. All of those members whose letters were presented in this meeting will be sent a book of Seckatary Hawkins stories. If you happen to be reading this for the first time and are not yet a member, fill out the blank at once and send it in for your certificate and button. Don's forget our radio meeting tomorrow (Monday) evening at 6:16 from Station WSAI.

Bye till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE OLD TOAD

Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard R. Garis)

Not so very many years ago but what you could easily remember if you tried, there lived in a nice, cosy hole house under a stone, an Old Toad gentleman. The Old Toad was lumpy and fat, he was covered with warts and to look at him you would not think him very smart, clever or pretty. But his wife said:

Now though he was aged and lumpy and fat and covered with warts, Old Toad could do three things very well indeed. He could jump, he could croak very loudly, and he could catch flies with his long, sticky tongue which, after all, are the three things in this world that a toad most needs to do.

Old Toad lived under the stone not far from Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow and he and the rabbit were great friends. So every morning when he jumped past where Old Toad was sitting out in front of his hole house, Mr. Longears would twinkle his pink nose and ask:

"How are you to-day, Old Toad?"

"Oh, I'm fine," Old Toad would answer. "Though I am lumpy and covered with warts I can croak, hop about and catch flies with my long, sticky tongue."

"Good for you!" Uncle Wiggily would say and then he would skip off to have an adventure.

But there came a day, after a while, when, as the rabbit gentleman wished the Old Toad, "Good morning!" that the answer was not so cheerful as usual.

"How are you?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"Not so well," replied Old Toad. "I can still hop about and catch flies with my long, sticky tongue, but I can't croak." And to prove that he could not, Old Toad puffed out his throat but only a faint little squak came from it.

"What's the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"I guess I am failing, I am getting old fast," signed Mr. Toad.

"Oh, cheer up!" cried Uncle Wiggily. But a few days later when the rabbit again skipped past Old Toad and asked how he was, the answer came:

"I'm worse. I can no longer croak and I can't catch flies with my long, sticky tongue."

"Never mind," said Mrs. Toad. "You have croaked enough in your life and as for flies, I can catch as many as we need. "You can still hop."

So Old Toad cheered up, but a few days later, when again Uncle Wiggily asked how he was feeling the answer came:

"I am very badly off, indeed! I can no longer croak, catch flies with my long, sticky tongue or hop about. It is too bad! No more hopping!"

"What's the trouble?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Rheumatism, I guess," answered Old Toad. "See!" He tried to hop, but could not and he was so sad that Uncle Wiggily tried hard to think of a way to cheer the poor creature.

"There is no use offering him my red, white and blue striped rheumatism crutch that Nurse Jane gnawed for me out of a cornstalk," though Mr Longears. "I must try and find another way so Old Toad can at least hop about in his last days."

Wondering and wondering what he could do, all of a sudden the rabbit saw Baby Bunty playing with her rubber ball on a long, rubber string, which brought the ball back to her no matter how far Bunty threw it.

"Ha! That will be the very thing for Old Toad!" said the rabbit.

"Why, Unkle Wig How funny!" laughed Bunty. "How can my bouncing ball help Old Toad?"

"I'll show you," said Mr. Longears. And what he did for Old Toad I shall tell you tomorrow night when the story will be about Uncle Wiggily and the jumpity jump—that is if the postman will give the loaf of bread a bottle of milk so it can make itself a sandwich and take it to the muskmelon's picnic party.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE TEMPTED

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.A., Author of "The Springs of Human Action.")

Temptation is a religious term but it is also used widely in everyday situations. We say we are tempted when we have an inducement and an inclination to do what we know to be wrong, what our better judgment tells us we should not do.

No one is ever tempted who is thoroughly good or thoroughly bad. If you have any temptations at all it means that you are not wholly consistent in your ideals and desires. A persons whose impulses and wishes are always in line with his conscience and best judgment can never experience that discord of personality we call temptation.

Temptation is the voice of suppressed evil. Yielding to temptation means giving in to the momentary desire or the voice of the suppressed evil at the sacrifice of a principle and the expense of an ideal.

A sense of shame and remorse follows because one suffers the loss of prestige in his own eyes and the loss of self respect for being disloyal to his own best self. Before yielding to temptation the voice of the suppressed good or conscience becomes strong.

If we give in to temptation it is because our better nature or sounder judgment is overcome by the force of some desire which has gathered force through the attachment of some emotion and together they sweep all opposition before them. But afterwards this partnership is dissolved. Like an unfaithful accomplice it deserts the original desire and the personality is left to face the music alone at the bar of one's own conscience or better self.

We are tempted because we have evil desires or desires that do not square up with our ideals and principles.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. White him, care of The Examiner, and send stamped envelope for reply.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

POPPY, Sally's room-mate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

When Sanderson asks Akers to help Sally he says that he's through with her. Sanderson gives him a black eye. Poppy comes to tell Sanderson that the doctors say Sally will never walk again.

X.—DISCOURAGING HOURS.

"What are you thinking about?" Poppy asked.

He told her unhesitatingly.

"About Sally, and what's to become of her. She'll have to live somewhere and with someone."

Poppy's dark eyes grew shrewish.

"Are you trying to back out of your responsibilities, too?" she asked.

Sanderson's face flamed.

"You know damn well I'm not!" he said savagely. "As far as money goes, she'll never need to worry. But money alone won't make her happy."

Poppy smiled slyly.

"You're not still thinking of marrying her, then?" she asked.

"If I were, she wouldn't have me," he answered curtly. "She's no time for me, and you know it." A sudden idea flashed into his mind. "Look here, what about you?" he asked eagerly. "I'd make it worth your while. I'd buy a place—somewhere in the country—and make it comfortable for you both. You're her friend — she'd be happy with you. What do you say?"

Poppy stared at him, her mouth and eyes wide open, and a lump of fat bacon dripping from the end of her fork.

"What—me?" she almost screamed at him. "Live in the country? With Sally? Leave London? Never dance any more? Not if you were to pay me a thousand a year! No, thank you!"

Sanderson's face grew grim.

"I'm not likely to pay you a thousand a year, or even a quarter of it, which is more than you'll ever earn," he answered brutally. "Well, I've won't argue any more."

"I should say not!" Poppy agreed. She went on with her bacon, eyeing him resentfully from time to time. "Live in the country, indeed!" she murmured again under her breath.

"Oh, shut up!" Sanderson retorted irritably.

They relapsed into silence until the last scrap of bacon was consumed and the marmalade dish scraped clean, when Poppy sat back in her chair with a sigh.

"Well, I guess I can do without lunch to-day," she murmured happily. She smiled up into Sanderson's moody face. "You're not such a bad sort, you know, Philip."

"Thanks very much."

"If only you wouldn't wear that awful hat," she went on, getting more friendly. "And if you'd buy a decent tie."

He cut in rudely.

"I dress to please myself, not to please you, and if you're ready we'll be going."

"You're always in such a hurry," she complained. "We've got all day before us. What are you going to do now?"

"Go to the hospital."

They went out again into the street.

"Well, I'll love you and leave you," Poppy said. "Thank you for my good breakfast, Amen," she added mockingly.

Sanderson turned on his heel without answering. He looked a forlorn, almost tragic figure as he slouched away down the street, with Sometimes walking so close to him that it was all he could do to keep from kicking the dog.

He was more miserable than he had ever been in all his life. It was useless to try and take an optimistic view of the situation, and hope that Poppy had exaggerated. In his heart he knew that she had not; in his heart he knew that Sally's butterfly life was at an end, and that there remained for her—what? Nothing! Just Nothing!

His way led him past Aker's flat, and with sudden impulse he turned aside and climbed the stairs to his door. But no hammering or ringing of the bell brought forth any answer, though after a few moments the owner of the flat opposite came out to see what the noise was about, and to volunteer the information that Akers was away.

"Gone abroad, and not coming back for months," he told Sanderson.

Sanderson went downstairs again. He had been sure there was nothing to hope for from that direction, and yet for Sally's sake he had felt bound to try.

He went along to the hospital and bribed the porter to let him in, but the house surgeon whom he had seen before was engaged, and could not be disturbed.

"If you'll come again during visiting hours, sir——"

"I'll see the Ward Sister, then," Sanderson said stonily.

The porter was in despair.

"It'll cost me my place, sir——"

"If it does, I'll get you another," Sanderson answered stoically. Five minutes later he was talking to the Ward Sister. It was quite true, she told him—quite true what Poppy had said. For once in her life, apparently, Poppy had not exaggerated. Unless a miracle happened, Sally Lingfield would never be able to dance again. It would be wonderful if she was ever able to walk properly. She saw the strain in Sanderson's face, and she added kindly:

"I am so terribly sorry. If you can wait you can see the house surgeon. He is engaged just now, but later——"

Sanderson made an impatient gesture.

"I don't want to see him. He'll only use Latin names that I shan't understand. Of course, there will be no objection to my having another opinion. The highest possible——"

"No objection whatever—anyone you like to call in——"

Sanderson broke in bluntly.

The Ward Sister smiled. She felt almost motherly towards this unhappy giant who seemed to think that money was the golden key that could unlock the door of all troubles.

"It is against the rules," she said deprecatingly, "but if you would like to see Miss Lingfield before you go, I will arrange it. We have moved her into a private ward now——"

Sanderson's face changed.

"You have! She declared to me that she would not go."

"She did not want to, I assure you, but she was so—well, so very troublesome." She smiled apologetically. "Naturally, she takes everything very much to heart."

"Naturally."

"Well, if you will wait a moment I will tell her you are here." She went away, and Sanderson walked over to the window that looked out on to a gray courtyard. To his overstrained fancy it looked like a prison-yard, and he had the horrible feeling that this place was a prison, a house of eternal punishment in which, by his own action, Sally was shut up for life.

The Ward Sister came back.

"I am sorry—I am so very sorry—but Miss Lingfield will not see you. She threw herself into such a state of excitement when I told her you were here that I am afraid it will only do her harm if you insist." Her kind eyes were very sympathetic. "Pardon me, but are you a relation?" she asked.

"No, only a friend—almost her only friend."

"I see. There is a girl who has been here several times—also a dancer, I think."

"Poppy Sladen."

"Yes, that was the name."

The Ward Sister looked as if she would like to have said more, but she kept silent, and Sanderson turned to go.

"Thank you for your kindness," he said bluntly. "I will write to Miss Lingfield. In the meantime"—he laid his card on the table—"that address will find me if anything is wanted, and please remember that no expense is to be spared. Anything she wants—anything!" He looked at her helplessly, powerless to express all that was in his aching heart; utterly at a loss to know what to do for the best. Out in the street the sun was shining; its warmth fell upon his face, and he thought suddenly of the country—the greenfields, and the spring flowers that would soon be lifting their faces to the sunshine. If only Sally had cared for him! He could have made her life so happy, in spite of the tragedy that had befallen her; but as it was—if she had been indifferent to him before, she must hate him now.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

"The stars incline, but do not compel"

SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1928

Neptune in benefic aspect strongly dominates this day, according to astrology, which reads in the skies fair promises for dwellers on the planet Earth.

This is a sway that seems to indicate access of interest in all that Neptune symbolizes and apparently pressages new discoveries and new uses for oil.

Under this direction of the stars interest in what the people eat and drink may be keen.

The planet supposed to rule beverages of all sorts is now in an aspect of power insofar as it can focus attention and exercise disturbing influences.

This is a configuration under which there should be keen intuition and a tendency to reason with the heart as well as the mind.

The planetary government is favorable to the people, especially to those concerned about the income tax.

More thrones are to be endanged, it is prognosticated, and there will be threats of new revolutions under this sinister rule of the stars.

The radio is to play an important part in an international incident, the seers predict, and through it the world is to be more closely united.

The planetary government to-day is supposed to be a most auspicious one for studies of the occult and to pressage the near appearance of a soothsayer who will be much quoted.

The reign of colors in costumes is read by the symbolists as most significant and is said to presage added buoyancy of spirit among the people

This should be an auspicious day for feats of swimming, diving and racing. Athletics are well directed.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will benefit through a secret friend. Unexpected money may come in and it should be wisely used. These people who on the cusp often are temperamental and foolish in practical matters.

Children born on this day probably will desire solitude which will be a boon as they mature, for poets and musicians are subjects of this rule of the planets. They always strive for what is best and often succeed in realizing their ambitions.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 26, 1928

Benefic aspects rule to-day, according to astrology, which finds the configuration promising for many activities.

The morning should be most auspicious for the clergy. Appeals for philathropic objects should be most fortunate under this sway.

Under this direction of the stars, heads of churches may have an unusual number of extra responsibilities not usually carried.

A distinct turning of attention toward religious interests is presaged by the stars, which seem to indicate a renewed interest in the spiritual side of life.

While this rule continues there may be many wrong opinions regarding life and persons nurtured by members of communities and even of churches.

The inclination may be to find fault with one's neighbors especially if they seek any sort of distinction. It is well to hold the mirror up to one's self.

This should be an auspicious time to plan original and distinctive work of any sort. The stars favor individuality.

The evening is read as favorable to writing of any sort. It may be a lucky time for writing cheques for Monday's bills.

Prevalence of propaganda that appeals to emotions instead of logic is forecast and women will be the principal factors in disseminating it, astrologers foretell, and they declare that both political parties will be concerned in it.

Under the planetary government the autumn will be a period of extraordinary events, that affect the social, financial and political worlds.

Heavy storms are forecast for the early autumn and they may prove exceedingly destructive.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a prosperous year that will bring unexpected profits. These people who are influenced by the Leo-Virgo cusp often have spectacular careers.

Children born on this day probably will gain success through high finance or in one of the learned professions. Many bankers are born under this sign which is supposed to impart poise and intelligence, tact and wisdom. The ancients gave these cusp children liberty to choose their own colors and jewels from the two signs that affect their careers.

Culinary Experts Claim That it is Dressing That Makes the Salad

Wonderful List Of Salad Ingredients Available in Canada—French and Mayonnaise Dressings In Use Everywhere—Housewives Advised to Learn to Make These and Other Dressings—Recipes Given.

"Given other ingredients it is, after all, the dressing that makes the salad", say famous chefs and culinary experts. The best of fresh fruits and vegetables should, of course, be used in preparing the salad, but it should be capped with a carefully made, tasty dressing.

In Canada there is available such an abundance of greens and vegetables that salad making presents no problems. Either from our own gardens or from the corner store we can obtain, at a moment's notice, such valuable salad ingredients as lettuce, tomatoes, parsley, shallots, radishes, water cress, beets, beans, peas, celery, spearmint, nasturtiums, chives, cucumbers, peppergrass, sage, garlic, peppers, thyme, endives and artichokes. Here alone are sufficient ingredients for an amazing variety of salads, with an equal variety of flavours.

There are, veritably hundreds and hundreds of salad dressings, but the French or plain dressing and the mayonnaise are in almost universal use throughout the civilized world and, with slight variations, are more generally approved than any other kinds. So much is this the case that if the average housewife learns thoroughly how to make these delightful dressings, she will never be at a loss for a dressing which will please her family or guests. Nevertheless, for connoisseurs and those who find charm in variety, there are listed in another column recipes not only for these popular dressings, but also for others more rarely used.

It is said that a real salad artist can measure to a nicety the amount of seasoning to go into a dressing. The ordinary housewife until she is more experienced, will do well to follow the proportions advised in the recipes. There are ways and means of getting the proper proportions that are easily acquired. For example, the process of dropping oil from a bottle may be facilitated by cutting a groove in each side of the cork; one for the oil to come out, the other for the air to enter. These are culinary tricks that can be picked out by close observation.

SOME SALAD DRESSING RECIPES

French Dressing

¼ cup oil; 2 tablespoons vinegar; 1 teaspoon paprika; 1 teaspoon powdered sugar; ½ teaspoon Keen's Mustard; 2 teaspoons salt; dash cayenne:

Place all the ingredients in a bottle or cruet chill, shake vigorously just before serving. A little onion juice, garlic or Worcestershire sauce may be added if desired.

Mayonnaise Dressing

3 teaspoons Keen's Mustard; 1 teaspoon salt; 1 teaspoon powdered sugar; 2 egg yolks; 2 tablespoons lemon juice; 1½ to 2 cups salad oil:

Into the well-beaten egg yolks stir the dry ingredients, then the lemon juice. Add the oil gradually, beating the mixture constantly. Add a little more lemon juice if it becomes too thick to beat, then add the remainder of the oil.

Russian Dressing

1 cup mayonnaise or boiled dressing (see recipes above); two tablespoons thick Chili Sauce; 2 tablespoons Tomato Catsup; 2 tablespoons Worcestershire Sauce:

Mix together thoroughly the other ingredients and to them add the mayonnaise. Serve this with lettuce, vegetable or mild fruit salads.

Thousand Island Dressing

1 cup mayonnaise or boiled dressing (see recipes above); ¼ cup thick Chili Sauce; ¼ cup catsup; 1 tablespoon green pepper; 3 tablespoons pimento pepper; 3 tablespoons chopped beets:

Stir together the other ingredients and to them add the mayonnaise. This is especially good on head lettuce salad.

Boiled Dressing

½ cup cream; ½ cup milk; 4 tablespoons sugar; 2 tablespoons flour; 2 teaspoons Keen's Mustard; ¼ teaspoon salt; 2 egg yolks; ¼ cup vinegar; whipped cream if desired.

Heat the cream and to it add the dry ingredients stirred smooth with the milk. Cook over boiling water until thick, then add the beaten egg yolks and vinegar and cook for three minutes more. When using dilute with whipped cream if desired.

Cream Dressing

1½ cups sour cream; 3 tablespoons flour; 4 tablespoons sugar; ½ teaspoon salt; 2 teaspoons Keen's Mustard; 2 tablespoons lemon juice:

Heat the cream, add to it the dry ingredients which have been blended together, cook over hot water, stirring until thick, add the lemon juice, and remove from the fire. This is especially good for a fruit salad.

WES DARTNELL RESCUED GIRL

Details of Near Drowning Incorrectly Given By The Examiner.

DR. CLARK HELPED.

The Examiner is informed that the account of the near drowning at Chemong Lake in last night's paper, was not accurate. The girl who was in difficulties was not employed by Dr. Waite but by his brohter and had just recently come to the lake for the first time. She was in bathing near where Dr. Clark and his brother-in-law, Wes Dartnell of St. Catharines, formerly of Peterborough, were paddling around.

The girl jumped off a raft and found herself in water too deep for her to touch bottom. She called for help and Mr. Dartnell, who is not a strong swimmer, went to her assistance, being pulled under. When he came up he broke her hold and found himself on bottom. Meanwhile Dr. Clark, who cannot swim, had come out, using an automobile tube as a float. He aided the girl to keep afloat and gave instructions to his little son, eight years old, to bring out the boat. This the boy did, and first the girl, and then Dr. Clark took hold of the gunwales and were drawn into shallow water.

NEWYORT, Ky., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—Nine prisoners, one a convicted murdered under a life sentence, escaped from the city jail here some time during the night. HOW INSULATED WALLS PREVENT LOSS OF HEAT.

There are several kinds of insulation on the market, which may be classified as board materials, semi-board or flexible materials and poured materials. With the exception of cork, the major portion of the first three classes is composed of some fibrous materials.

Since the function of insulating materials is to reduce the conductivity of walls, they must necessarily have a high resistance to the flow of heat or a low conductivity, and there must also be a unit of measure for this conductivity. This unit is taken as the number of B.T.U's. passing through one square foot of the material per hour per degree difference in temperature between the two surfaces for material one inch thick.

The main thing to remember about this constant is that it is a measuring unit for the conductivity and the smaller it is the better the material. The numerical values of the constant have wide variations as there are wide ranges of materials.

One point which should be remembered when dealing with insulating materials in that insulating value is always quoted on material one inch thick, whereas the average commercial thickness is one-half inch. If the materials are manufactured in more than one thickness the builder should be sure that he gets the thickness specified.

Back plaster was formerly considered to be a good insulator, but its real value is more that of a wind stop, as its conductivity constant is high. Building paper is also often confused with insulating materials and while it has a good insulating value per inch, of thickness, the value of the thin sections used is not so much as a resistance to heat flow as it is to air leakage.

Just what should be considered as properly insulated wall depends upon many factors that no definite construction can be set up as a standard but a wall which, in addition to being well built, contains one-half inch of good standard insulating material seems to be about the average practice. For instance, if a wall was built with lath and plaster on the inside of the studs, sheathing, building paper, and lap siding on the outside, and in addition to this one-half inch of good insulating material was used, it would be considered reasonably good construction. — Copyright 1928. WITH CLASSIC CHARACTER.

(John Methven, Architect.)

Few comparisons it seems could give a more complete contrast than that of the modern Canadian small home and the structures of ancient Greece and Rome. Nevertheless there hovers about this charming little house some of that air of graceful permanence which is such a beautiful characteristic of the buildings of those great departed civilizations.

Of course, although the design may be called Colonial, there is more than usual of the original classic from which the Colonial was evolved, about it. The detail is designed to give this effect to the highest possible degree without departing from the requirements of simple and practical construction. Ancient beauty of proportion and modern cosy conveniences are combined.

A complete five room bungalow suite is provided on the ground floor, while the attic is so arranged that three good size rooms may be formed there.

SINGLE PROTEST McQUEEN SAYS

Denies That Canadian Officials Were Complaining Continually.

MANY JUSTIFIED.

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—P. J. Mulqueen, president of the Canadian Olympic Games Committee, arrived here this morning with several officials and more than thirty members of the Canadian Olympic games team on the Laurentic, and in a statement declared emphatically that Canada did not protest continually at the Olympic games as many people had imagined from press despatches.

"It is quite true that we made one protest, purely on a moral question, and that is as far as we went," he said. "True, there were many occurrences which would save justified complaints and particularly with regard to general arrangements, but it is erroneous to say that we kept filing protests.

COURTESY APPRECIATED.

As we occasionally hear of a lack of courtesy shown to and overcharge made to tourists, I am sure that such charge cannot be laid against citizens of Peterborough. We recently had visitors from the metropolis of the border states, and while here they made visitations to some of our leading stores, making purchases to a considerable extent, and they commented on the courtesy shown them at every place visited. No disposition on the part of salesman, or saleslady to sell them something they did not want. They remarked on the tastiness of the window dressing, and said they compared very favorably with the best on Broadway. Asked as to comparative prices of purchases made they said prices were lower than in New York. In their journey from New York by motor, they crossed on the ferry from Clayton to Gananoque a delightful sail of an hour among the islands in that vicinity. They were shown every courtesy by the Customs officials, and little delay was experienced. They found the highways equal to any they had travelled over in New York State, and were charmed with the view of Rice Lake at Bewdley. During their stay they made various trips over country roads, and were interested in the changing character of them. This was particularly noticeable on the trip to Buckhorn, when one emerged from well-tilled, productive farms, to as fine a piece of Nature's handiwork as can be seen any place at that famous fishing place. A basket picnic, served on Nature's table, clear granite rock, was something new to them, but which they thoroughly enjoyed. From bits of conversation overheard, I am led to believe we can look forward to an annual visit from them.

PALLISER FAMILY BACK HOME AFTER 7,800 MILE MOTOR TRIP

Children Were Getting Homesick So They Turned Back at Spokane.

VISITED STAMPEDE.

Campbellford People Have Made Similar Long Trips For Several Years.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 25 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Spokane, Wash., was quite far enough for the younger members of the Palliser family for one summer. On Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Palliser and family arrived at their home here after spending eight weeks touring the various points of interest between here and the State of Washington. For the past six years Mr. and Mrs. Palliser have enjoyed this kind of vacation, and their tours include two to the Atlantic coast, first to the United States seaboard, and last year to Nova Scotia. This year they headed west in time to be among those present at the Calgary stampede. The westward journey was made as far as possible through Canada, following the route through North Bay, Sudbury and the Soo. From there they went through the States as far as Duluth, and entered Canada again at Emmerson, Man. All told, they have traversed 7,800 miles of road since leaving here.

Interviewed yesterday afternoon, Mr. Palliser recalled many of the interesting features of his trip. He had no trouble save once, when he was sideswiped in Chicago on his return journey. The Canadian roads, he said, were just as good as those across the border. In Manitoba he travelled mostly on paved and improved gravel highways. The roads in Saskatchewan and Alberta were good but there was not as much pavement on his route. The roads of Idaho and Montana were the worst he had ever seen and much worst than are to be found in this district, he said, and people were always complaining of the bad roads here. In South Dakota and Minnesota the roads were excellent.

"When you were so close to the Pacific, why didn't you go on?" Mr. Palliser was asked.

"Well to tell you the truth, I knew I ought to be home and the children had had enough. They were homesick, especially the boys."

The Calgary stampede, Mr. Palliser described as marvelous. There were contestants from all over the western states as well as the prairies and foothills of Canada. He still can not understand how some of the riders managed to stay on long enough for the animals to get out of the chutes. It was "real" western stuff, he said, and not the garden variety that comes here as the genuine article.

From Calgary, the party went to the town of Hayter where they called on J. B. Palliser, a brother. Delighted with the district of Banff, they spent a week there and at Radium Hot Springs and Lake Louise. It was rather convenient to be able to find the proper temperature to suit your mood by moving either up or down the mountains. While there, the party also visited the Plane of Six Glaciers.

At the border of Alberta and British Columbia the party found a very interesting feature of the Great Divide. Not far from Lake Louise, there is a mountain torrent of considerable size which rushes down the mountain side and is actually naturally divided in fairly equal proportions by a point of land, part of the water going west to the Pacific and the other portion being started on its way to the Atlantic. The eastern stream was slightly larger, he thought.

In Yellowstone Park, every member of the party was thrilled by the bears, particularly the "hold-up bears. These will stand at the side of the road and wait for a car to stop. Then they rise on their hind feet and come to the car to beg. The Pallisers had provided themselves with cookies for the occasion. The rangers of the park claim that the mother bears teach their cubs to beg. One cub was taken out onto the road and when the mother left it there, the cub followed her back into the bush. The second time, it received a sound cuff and then it stayed. The car approached and stopped and a cookie was tossed to the cut sitting there alone. But the cub refused to eat. The mother made her appearance and snatched up the cookie. A second was thrown from the car. This time the cub snatched it up instantly and another bear was added to the "hold-up" membership roll.

The entire trip was made in a sedan with trailer carrying complete camping equipment. In the beginning, the sedan was highly polished and looking, as it was, a new car. When it arrived in town yesterday afternoon it carried the dust of 7,800 miles of road, and an assurance that it was a perfect outing.

Honor Memory Of Valentino

LONDON, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—Scores of black-garbed men and women, with women largely in the preponderance, gathered in the gardens of the Italian hospital in Queen's Square here yesterday to honor the memory of Rudolph Valentino on the anniversary of his death.

Many of the women wore a red rose, the motion picture actor's favorite flower. To a fence bordering the garden had been fixed a life size photograph of Valentino, wreathed in laurels.

A proud record indeed was that established by a Peterborough man at the Seventh Annual Exhibition of the Canadian Galdiolus Society, held in Lindsay on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, when a large number of private growers, as well as many of the principal floral companies of the Dominion, brought forth their finest displays.

Conspicuous among the exhibits was that of Al. Spencely, 36 Monaghan Road, which carried off no less than nine first prizes, three seconds and two third prizes. Mr. Spencely is well known as a grower of beautiful flowers and this latest achievement has resulted from a wealth of experience in the proper cultivation of gladiolus.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

MANY A TIME I'VE worked through the night till the dawn "came up like thunder" out of Ashburnham 'cross the river and "touched with rosy fingers the winking minarets" of the courthouse on the hill.

• • • • • • •

Other nights I have sat gazing at the sky until it looked as black as a hole in the universe, only to see it gradually spread over with the glory of a silvery sunrise.

• • • • • • •

I have seen the dawn over our own Peterborough lakes when the track of a sun on the water was as straight as the path to glory—and again I've seen it on the Atlantic when the mountainous seas broke it into a million scintillating points of light.

• • • • • • •

On Thursday . . .

• • • • • • •

I saw the sun rise behind our ship as we ploughed Lake Huron—and I felt that life has nothing more to offer. It was so superlative that even the Thesaurus has no sufficient adjectives to offer.

• • • • • • •

But as a newspaper woman, with all the inhibitions of the profession, I was as much surprised by the likenesses as at the differences. Here, the sun rose over the edge of Manitoulin Island—on the Atlantic it rose out of the sea—in Peterborough it first appeared behind Armour Hill—in Europe its roseate hues shone on one first through a willow tree—on the western prairie it burst upon one in its full glory with a startling suddenness.

• • • • • • •

The same sun.

• • • • • • •

Therefore, logically, the sun is nothing to write about (though I WOULD like to tell someone about this wonderful sail!), so let's consider more practical matters.

• • • • • • •

These C.P.R. lake trips are attracting hundreds this year, and, really, the excursion is much like an ocean voyage, especially crossing Lake Superior where land is lost sight of. Probably that is why so many costumes are seen that would be equally appropriate for a voyage to the Continent.

• • • • • • •

On the promenade last night I saw many adorable costumes, nearly all in the season's favorite blue, white or red, or combinations of them. One outfit, a pleated white crepe de chine dress, a white felt hat, and a Chanel scarf, had its boating atmosphere added by a white sail-cloth coat snugly belted. The tri-colored scarf was knotted and waved jubilantly in the breeze.

• • • • • • •

Another very trim costume consisted of a man's white polo jersey, with the neck open, and a dark blue suede belt. The skirt was the popular wrap-around model with side pleats.

• • • • • • •

• • • • • • •

While most of the women on board wore hats, there was a good percentage allowing the lake breezes to play with their short tresses. In spite of the announced ban on the boyish bob, more than a few refuse to give up the style. Certainly it has its good points on a lake trip!

• • • • • • •

A dainty frock that seemed simple enough for sports occasions and yet appeared chic for informal daytime wear was cut in circles with the neck turned back over a separate vestee. The front skirt was plaited and set on a wide scalloped outline. The back was one piece.

• • • • • • •

In the dining room—reminiscent of train dining cars—I saw a feminine-looking one-piece frock that seemed to be more of an advance Fall model than a hang-over from the Summer mode. It had a flared flounce set on diagonally, a wide bow at the left side, and tucks which gave a draped hip effect at the waistline. A sash made the hem uneven.

• • • • • • •

Amid all the crowd, there was one Beau Brummell who stood out because of the trimness and fitness of his clothes. Women who are interested in seeing their menfolk properly turned out for Summer will be interested. He wore a double-breasted light grey flannel jacket, white flannel trousers, white shoes with wing tips and black soles, blue shirt and collar with white crocheted tie, and panama hat with a black band.

• • • • • • •

Coming back nearer home, let me tell you about something new in the way of bathing suits seen at Chemong the other day. It was of fashionable two-piece style, but the material was of a plaid mixture in brilliant colors.

• • • • • • •

Smart little frocks of chintz with very full skirts and tight bodies are ideal for Summer cottage wear, and are very much in vogue at many Peterborough resorts. They are always neat and smart for either morning or afternoon wear, but of course would never do for a "dress-up" party.

• • • • • • •

A postage stamp is only a little thing, But if you don't keep a supply of these stickers on hand, an important letter may be delayed. Keep a few in your stationery box.

• • • • • • •

More requests are coming in every week for the home helps. The sleeveless jacket instructions were all used up quickly, and I had to give an order to have fifty more printed. These helps are not patterns, but each includes a sketch showing how to cut a pattern. Have you sent for them yet?

• • • • • • •

Peterborough Exhibition gives women a chance to display their ability in their field of work. I hope to obtain the recipes of the winning preserves, cakes, and home-cooking, so this page should be more valuable than ever next month when such splendid items are published.

• • • • • • •

Don't forget that I am always glad to receive hints for publication. If you know a better way of doing something, pass on the idea to your neighbors through this column.

• • • • • • •

Have you included sweaters in your Summer wardrobe? If you have several, you are playing the game of fashion. Smart sweaters are seen in light weight pull-over styles and also in coat styles. In fact, sweaters are the leading fashion everywhere. It's an inexpensive means of smartness, for one well-chosen skirt may be the complement to several sweaters.

A Tip or Two

For dishwashing, keep bits of soap and use in a tin can, with holes punched in both ends, for a suds producer.

Use asbestos, soapstone, or a heated brick for an iron stand and the iron will hold heat much longer than when an ordinary stand is used.

Dietitic Dissertations

(Specially Written for The Examiner.)

III.—CARBOHYDRATES

Carbohydrates are composed chemically, of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen—the last two, usually, in the proportion in which they occur in water (H_2O). For dietetic purposes they are often classified as starches, sugars and cellulose. We will refrain from going into the classification based on the relative complexity of the carbohydrate molecule. (Clearly I remember the first time my eye encountered the word "monosaccharides"" Never having heard it, I gave it a fearful and wonderful pronunciation which made it sound more like the name of some old Greek hero than that of the simplest form of carbohydrate).

The chief work of carbohydrates in the body is supplying energy. Sugar does this in a very ready available form. For feats of strength that are quickly over there is need of an increased proportion of carbohydrate in the diet. Sugar also has high fattening properties, lessens muscle fatigue and is indirectly a protein sparer. Cellulose is scarcely affected by digestive juices; it helps in elimination of waste.

Carbohydrates come, mainly, from vegetable world, though some—as liver starch (glycogen) are found in animal world. The chief sources are:

1.—Cereals: Wheat and wheat products; corn and corn products; rice, oats, barley, rye and their products; tapioca, sago.

2.—Sweet Foods: Sugar and sugar products; honey; sweet fruits; preserves, jams and jellies.

3.—Sweet and Starchy Vegetables: potatoes, Irish and sweet carrots, parsnips, and other root vegetables; corn; dried legumes.

For ease of digestion and development of flavor starches should be well cooked. Cereals should be given five minutes over direct heat, then a long, slow cooking above water.

A common error, we are told, is to allow carbohydrates a too large place in the diet. We are also told that women are more prone to this error than men. (Is the old legend about femininity being composed of "sugars and spice and everything nice" the cause or the effect of this?) The over use of carbohydrates is a danger when we derive them almost exclusively from bread, cakes, pastry, and candy.

ENTERTAINING GUESTS

A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties.
By LAURA.

JAPANESE GARDEN PARTY.

Labor Day is the last holiday before the school bell calls a great many back to study, so wouldn't it be jolly to entertain the bunch with whom you have been associated during the summer months around the cottage?

A Japanese Garden Party could be worked out beautifully in the woods around the cottage with long strings of colored light or Japanese lanterns strung from branch to branch. Set out among the trees, enough of tables to accommodate all of your guests (card tables would be most suitable). But instead of giving out cards and score cards, supply each table with rolls of different colored crepe paper, and tissue paper flowers. Also several pairs of sharp scissors and tubes of paste.

As soon as your guests have been seated announce that a prize is to be given for the best made and most original Japanese kimono designed and put together by the girl, and another prize for the winning gentleman. As soon as the costumes are finished, each must don his own handiwork and wear it during the rest of the evening. Votes for the winner may be cast on little Japanese cards. The man's prize might be a framed Japanese print, while to the girl, a gay Japanese crepe kimono is sure to be popular.

For the luncheon, the tables are cleared and set with Japanese paper cloths and napkins and a big picnic basket placed on each table. These baskets would contain, besides the necessary cutlery, silverware and plates, boxes of sandwiches, cake and chicken salad served in scooped-out grapefruit. Each basket of salad would, of course, have to be wrapped in waxed paper to prevent the contents spilling.

A delicious dessert is made by using the sections of grapefruit, mixed with peeled white grapes, and sections of orange, serving them in paper drinking cups, around which big pink or yellow chrysanthemums have been cleverly constructed, so that the effect is of the fruit being in the hollow of the flower itself. Powdered sugar, chopped nuts and candied cherries are sprinkled on top of each dish.

Small cups of black coffee should be passed at the last but a bowl of punch should be handy for those desiring a cold drink.

After the lunch, if an orchestra can conveniently be arranged, dancing may be continued on the porch or in the garden. Still with their kimonos on, the spot would make a wonderful scene during the dance numbers.

OUT OF PAWN.

By Peter Jones.

Because Marietta had a birthday and because Dick was in love with Marietta, Dick had to give her a birthday present. But how? That was the question.

Nothing that Richard Jameson tackled seemed to turn out a success. If he got a really good job the firm employing him went bankrupt, or went out of business, or took in a new partner with a swarm of poor relations who crept into the best positions.

And now he was twenty-seven years old, out of a job and practically broke, while Marietta, to whom he had been engaged for three years, was living in luxury with her rich aunt. Dick had proposed in one of his short-lived fits of prosperity, but things soon went wrong and Dick was too conscientious to marry a girl for whom he could not suitably provide.

That the much-sought Marietta was really in love with Dick was proved by the fact that she was content to wait till the clouds rolled by. So the approach of Marietta's birthday found Dick with just five dollars in his pocket and a board bill due. Dick took account of stock. In the course of his varied career he had not been unacquainted with the pawnbroker, and fate seemed to point again to the three gilded pills, those armorial bearings of the De Medici, which signify the same thing to-day on the front of Uncle Simpson's shop in Chatham Square that they did when they blazed on the front of the Florentine palace of Lorenzo the Magnificent! Money to loan—if you've got the collateral.

For collateral Dick selected an ancient watch, a very warming-pan of a watch, with gold enough in it to salt a mine. It had belonged to his grandfather. After some haggling Dick got on the watch nearly half what it was worth—enough to buy for Marietta a modest but presentable souvenir of her natal day. Marietta, of course, expressed delight at the "beautiful present, which was just what she wanted," kissed the present, also kissed Dick and mildly reproved him for his "extravagance."

Dick had gone directly from the pawnshop to the purchase of his present, and from the purchase of his present directly to Marietta's, and then directly home. Arriving at his lodgings, he took off his overcoat, and, remembering, felt in the pockets for his pawnticket. Horrors! It was gone!

"Let her go!" exclaimed Dick recklessly. "This is the last straw, but what's the odds!" He savagely caught up his mail, which his landlady was accustomed to leave lying on a little table in his room. One envelope, bearing in its upper left-hand corner a firm name well known to him, caught his eye. He tore it open eagerly and read the enclosed letter almost at a glance. Then he sat down and read it over again several times.

When Dick called at Marietta's the next morning there appeared to him not Marietta but her aunt, Miss Maria Dawkins. She was a large, plump, matronly appearing woman, with the kindest eyes imaginable and an air of being satisfied with the world and all the people in it.

"Marietta will be down presently," said Aunt Maria. "Let's see; we will give her just ten minutes." And to Dick's horror and amazement the old lady pulled from the belt of her black silk dress Dick's grandfather's huge gold watch and consulted it. As the young man sat petrified, with his gaze fixed upon the golden warming-pan, Aunt Maria laughed.

"Yes," she said, "I found the pawnticket on the hall floor after you had gone. It must have dropped out of your pocket when you pulled out Marietta's present. I understood what had happened. Then I got the watch out of pawn the first thing this morning. And I recognized it as soon as I set eyes on it. I should have known that watch anywhere, even if Josiah Westcott's name hadn't been engraved on the inside of the case. Yes, this was your maternal grandfather's watch, and if Josiah Westcott hadn't seen fit to marry your grandmother perhaps he might have married me. But it wasn't to be; and here I am still single at—never mind what age. So I'll just keep this watch and you can have Marietta instead. If you haven't got money enough to take care of her I have enough to take care of you both. Come, speak up, is it a trade?"

"It's a swap, Aunt Maria," cried Dick joyfully, "and here's my hand on it. But just look here," and he handed her the letter which had caused him so much thought the night before. It was from a western land company, of which Dick had once been manager and in which he held some little stock—a company which had got into litigation and into the hands of a receiver. But now, Dick was informed, the court of last resort had rendered a momentous decision in favor of the company, the receiver had been discharged, oil had been discovered on the company's property, everything was booming and they wanted Dick to take his old place as manager at a good fat salary.

"Good enough, Dick," said Aunt Maria when she had read, "but don't think I'll let you off on our dicker because you are rich!" And then consulting the golden warming-pan she called up the stairs, "Marietta, time's up! Come down here at once. I've made a trade; I've swapped a new love for an old one."

ROCK AND CLAY

Men are always chipping rocks
And laboring with stone,
Working with the granite blocks
And leaving clay alone.
Building gallows on a hill
And prisons in a yard,
Men are always waiting till
The clay is baked and hard.
Though they labor well and long,
Work with all their might,
Men are always fighting wrong
And never helping right.
In the alleys, on the docks,
Little urchins play;
Men are always chipping rocks
And never moulding clay.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

MILLBROOK

The minutes of the first directors' meeting of the East Durham Women's Institute, held at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Hassard on May 17, 1901, make interesting reading.

Subjects suggested for papers were: "The Cultivation of the Pansy"; "Butter Making with the Separator"; The clumination of the Sweet Pea"; and "Table Decoration". These to be taken up," the secretary, Mrs. Mulligan, adds, "If four members would write amateur papers on them." Apparently the same difficulty which confronts the president to-day when she endeavors to secure volunteers to prepare papers for the regular meetings, had to be overcome at the very beginning of the organization in the community.

Directors' meetings seemed to have been held regularly every three months, judging by the minutes next recorded:

"On the first of November, 1901, the directors held a meeting in the Town Hall, in the afternoon, there being present: Miss Ada Richardson; Miss M. Fair; Miss Lowes; Mrs. J. R. Eakins; Mrs. Thorne, Mrs. Hassard; Mrs. Mulligan. After the president, Miss Richardson, had taken the chair subjects were chosen for the regular meetings to be held in Millbrook and Bethany on the 5th and 6th of December consecutively."

"Moved and seconded by Mrs. Hassard and Mrs. Thorne: That the subject, "A Chat with Housekeepers on Housekeeping," be given in Millbrook, and "As Others see Us," at Bethany, by Miss L. Rose, of Guelph.—Carried.

Moved by Miss Fair and seconded by Mrs. Eakins: That Miss Lowes be asked to give a paper on "The Care and Feeding of Fowl," and Miss Kelly one on "Preparing and Cooking Fowl for the Table"; these to be given, if required, at the regular meeting.—Carried.

Moved by Mrs. Mulligan and Mrs. Eakins: That Mrs. Jonn Allen and Mrs. J. B. Smith be appointed auditors for the Institute year.—Carried.

It was brought before the meeting that the prize to be given by the Institute at the Agricultural Fair for Table Decoration had not been attended to in time for the fair of 1901, and that the secretary see Mrs. W. C. Allen about the prize for 1902.

The selecting of the Winter Flowers was then taken up: It was decided to favor Evans and Co. of Hamilton, with an order for 189 hyacinths, 126 double and single narmissus; 126 freesia, and 8 more expensive bulbs for the Premium Plants.

The secretary was instructed to call a special meeting as soon as the bulbs arrived, and also to see if some of the members would prepare papers to be read at the meeting.

The meeting adjourned."

That interest was not always sustained would appear from the brief entry: "On November 7, 1901, there was called a joint meeting of the executives of the Farmers' and Women's Institutes, in the Town Hall. Only the secretary attended it."

MOUNT PLEASANT

George A. Putnam, B.S.A., superintendent of the Women's Institutes for twenty-five years coming March 1, takes this opportunity of outlining very briefly to the officers and members of the 1,070 branch Institutes scattered throughout all sections of the province, a few of the factors, which have resulted in the building up of an organization which has exerted such a beneficial influence upon the individual, the home and community life.

First—A membership composed of women of responsibility who were anxious to acquire greater efficiency as home makers and community builders.

Second—Adherance to the principals of recognizing no class, sectarian, or party distinctions and avoiding the consideration of features which would antagonize groups of members.

Third—Adopting a basis of organization in the branch, district and subdivision which makers it impossible to elect district and provincial officers on the basis of party or sectarian affiliations.

Fourth—The spirit of service in the home and to the community, then to local public institutions and provincial undertakings.

Fifth—Standing for a wholesome social life in the community and assisting in providing amusement and entertainment of an educative and elevating character.

Sixth—A definite basis of effective co-operation on the part of Government service and local voluntary organizations. The Department of Agriculture undertakes to provide instructors and literature to the Women's Institutes along such lines as are recognized to be of unquestionable value to women of responsibility, provided the Institute members will hold regular meetings of educational value at which local talent and the literature available is utilized in such ways as are thought to be of greatest value to the individual members. This co-operation has undoubtedly enable the Government to render efficient service at less cost than would have been possible without the voluntary local organizations; and on the other hand it would have been impossible for the Institutes to have carried on so effectively without the literature furnished, lectures and instructors provided and assistance in formulating a basis for organization and extending the work through district, sub-division, convention area, and provincial organization. It has been a very happy, effective and mutually beneficial co-operation between government service and voluntary local groups. It is stated by those who have had the opportunity of studying systems of Government assistance in other countries that Ontario presents an example, through co-operation of the Government with the Women's Institutes of most effective results at a minimum of outlay.

The most valuable development in the Women's Institutes is a realization on the part of the women of rural Ontario that they have within themselves the power to acquire information of practical every day service to the community. The undertakings of the present day in hundreds of groups would have been looked upon as impossible by the leaders of twenty-five years ago.

Groups of women in the rural districts should no more consider effective effort towards individual advancement a wholesome social life and efficient community service without a Women's Institute or similar all-embracing local organization, than they would think of trying to provide adequate education for their children without a school. It is most gratifying to see the women in all sections of the province accepting responsibility for extending the work to new centres and giving assistance to the branches in need.

The Women's Institutes of both Canada and England are successful where they follow closely in the aims and ideals so clearly defined in Ontario's beginnings.

Women's Institutes began in England in 1915, although many meetings were held in 1914 and at the end of 1905 there were only a dozen Women's Institutes and only a dozen meetings had been held. There are now over 4,000 Women's Institutes in England and Wales and over 300,000 women will have found opportunities for self improvement and service through their W.I. membership, which is now the greatest single organization of women in the world.

There is no doubt about the value of Women's Institutes' work in any country where it is carried on.

THE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE AT THE C.N.E.

As has been for a number of years, there will be a Women's Institute tent at the Canadian National Exhibition, located west of the Women's Rest Room, just inside the Dufferin Street entrance. The main purpose of this tent is to provide a rally centre for Women's Institutes, officers and members, as well as their friends, where work of the Institutes, and ways and means of making the work more effective may be discussed.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture will co-operate with the Provincial President and other members of the Provincial Board, of which Mrs. Thomas Cooper of Warsaw is a member, in making a collection of illustrative material, literature, programs, posters, rugs, needlework, basketry, gloves and other articles from 9.30 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day, and it is hoped that all women from rural districts who are interested in work for educational, social or community purposes will make this tent their headquarters.

In the afternoons, from Wednesday, August 29, until Friday, September 7, there will be programs: 1, Programs and Posters; 2, Historical Research and Community Day; 3, Old Time Costumes, Hat and Dress Parade; 4, Health Day; 5, Choice Preparation and Consumption of Foods; 6, Junior Day; 7, Rally Day for District Officers; 8, Agriculture for Women and Canadian Industries; 9, House Planning and Labor Saving.

On September the fourth those who have been members for twenty years or over are invited to meet in the Women's Institute Tent at 11.30 a.m. They will be entertained at luncheon and afterwards have an opportunity of enjoying the program put on by the juniors. There are at least four members of Warsaw Institute who have been members for twenty years.

District Presidents and Secretaries who have held these offices any time during the last three years will be entertained at the same hours on Wednesday, September 5. Two members of Warsaw Institute are eligible for this.

There will also be a Woman's Institute exhibit in the west wing of the Women's Building.

MARION'S MAIL

Dear Marion:

I have a beautiful girl friend who has "IT". I am pretty, but to no avail. The boys come rushing to her, but I am just a friend of hers. What can I do?

ITLESS."

It might not be a bad idea to get as a running-mate some girl not so blest with "IT."

But listen: Tables have a great wayof turning. In ten years or even sooner, YOU may be the one on top of the wave and your ITful girl friend way down in the hollow—not wishing her any hard luck.

These girls with "IT" have so many boys to choose from that they get all muddled up and generally pick the worst one possible. The less showy maidens meanwhile cop off the desirable men.

For heaven's sake, look around you. Observe the pictures of brides in the rotogravures. A few have prettiness. Fewer still have "IT"—although here's another point: "IT" is a matter of individuals. You have it for one, not for another. No one has it for all.

"My dear Marion:

My husband says he loves me, yet he admits he loves his mother best. I feel he should love me best. We have a little son, three years old. Shouldn't my husband love me more than he does his mother? I think so much of his mother, yet I am miserable.

LINDSAY."

The tie of blood between mother and son and mother and daughter is often tremendously strong. But it is so different from the love a man bears to his wife that the two loves cannot be compared. When your husband says he loves his mother "best" he probably means best in the sense of its being a love of the spirit. When a man loves a woman well enough to marry her it is more than spiritual love. It is spiritual, mental, and physical.

The greatest of all human love is said to be the love of a mother for her child. This love is surely yours. Be content with it, plus the honest human love your husband has for you, and don't be miserable because you cannot make him admit he puts you before his mother.

He is probably one of those who has a mother obsession. Lots of men have. Sometimes it is justified, sometimes not. But a man's love for his mother is of such different quality than that for his wife that they do not need to conflict. If he didn't love you pretty much he would have stuck to Ma!

I didn't print all your letter, because there are so many to get in. I'm delighted to hear from a Lindsay reader, and assure you all services of The Examiner are open to readers anywhere. We have subscribers in every Province and in many States, so that Lindsay seems almost like home!

MARIE (Warkworth): Teeth should be straightened while the child is young. The best work is done between the sixth and twelfth years. Straightening teeth of persons over 18 may be done, but the work must be done slowly. If they are moved too rapidly there is danger of an undue amount of absorption of the bone, so that the teeth do not become tight again.

Please write to Dr. McCoy, care of The Examiner, about the other suject mentioned in your letter, as it is outside my province.

* * * * * *

O.T.A.: It seems to me you would like a good deal to drink and a long time to drink it in. That's your lookout. Your letter is not suitable for publication.

* * * * * *

"Dear Marion:

I do so hope you can help me with advice. For five long years I have done factory work, which I loathe. I make no friends because they think I think I am better than they. Going to work in the morning simply makes me sick. Yet I don my beautiful black satin gasoline-perfumed dress and march to the bus. 'Nother thing. I am bowlegged, and people never tell me about it to hurt my feelings—oh, no, never? I work with a girl I thought a friend, and whenever we argue she brings up the subject. It isn't my fault, Marion. If I had my way I would have the prettiest legs in the world. For all that, I am a good dancer; I don't think any girl any better visits Chemong or Ryes. And I'm not bad-looking. Mother calls me an old maid, just like you said in your mail box a few days ago. She teases me about my prim ways, reminds me I am bow-legged and why don't I walk like this or that, as others do. As though that would help. I have one girl friend, and pray I can keep her.

Can you advise me, Marion?

My dear, my dear—get out of your rut and your unhappy environment. Your letter shows too much intelligence for you to waste yourself on work you hate surrounded by cruel people. Your life is all before you. The world is wide. Opportunities are everywhere for a girl with initiative, courage, persistence, and brains.

First of all, forget (or ignore) the silly bowlegs. What of it? Wear your skirts longer than the rest of the girls, adopt that as your "style" and stick to it, though the heavens fall (but they won't).

Your mother is the last person on earth who should twit you for bowed legs. It was probably her fault they got bowed in the first place, for bowed legs come often from babies being allowed to stand and walk too soon. No mother should deliberately say things to hurt and humiliate her daughter.

You can do anything you set your mind to. Choose the work you would like, and can do, and go after it just as a hunter goes after his quarry. Get a more attractive job for now, and study. The evening classes which I understand they will have at the new Vocational School will give you your big opportunity.

Remember your assets and forget your shortcomings. You have grown sensitive from being cruelly treated, that's all.

And if you can't forget your bowed legs, here's one last tip. Consider them with a sense of humor. Make fun of them yourself before your kind friends have a chance to. You'll find beating them to it takes all the wind out of their sails.

Marion

TO A LITTLE LADY

I kiss the look of your shining eyes
And your parted lips with song unsung . . .
The proud little shoulders, the fearless feet—
For you are so young—so young—so young.

I still the worldly words on my lips . . .
God show me the place where your cross is hung,
That I may snatch it away in time—
And keep you forever so young—so young.

—Judy Shea.

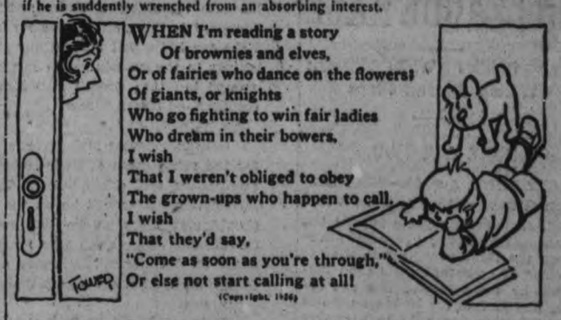
A Wish

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

WHETHER children are obedient or disobedient is largely dependent upon the standards required by their environment and the attitude of those in authority. Sometimes our method to gain obedience is the cause of apparent failure. If the child is engrossed in play, or a new book, the carelessly shouted orders of a grown-up may go unheeded because the child resents the interruption which so ignores his individual interests. A child should be treated as courteously as an adult. He has plans and affairs of his own which are just as important to him as grown-up occupations could ever be. If these plans are interfered with let it be with some explanation and consideration for the child. For instance, when bedtime comes and he is reading or drawing, ask him a few minutes early to please get ready for bed when that chapter or that picture is finished, and so spare him the opportunity for resentment which would probably, yes and legitimately, come if he is suddenly wrenched from an absorbing interest.



WHEN I'm reading a story
Of brownies and elves,
Or of fairies who dance on the flowers!
Of giants, or knights
Who go fighting to win fair ladies
Who dream in their bowers,
I wish
That I weren't obliged to obey
The grown-ups who happen to call,
I wish
That they'd say,
"Come as soon as you're through,"
Or else not start calling at all!

Athletics Gain on American League Leaders

YANKS LOSE DOUBLE BILL

New Yorkers Unable To Connect With St. Louis to Lose 5-2 and 3-1.

ATHLETICS WIN 1-0.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—The lead of the world champion Yankees was reduced to three games here yesterday when the New York defenders found their citadel sacked twice in the same afternoon at the hands of the St. Louis Browns, 5 to 2 and 3 to 1, as the Athletics nipped the Cleveland Indians by 1 to 0.

The Yanks were unable to hit Alvin Crowder in the opener and were even more helpless against George Blaeholder in the second game. The former Tulsa star had the champions shut out until the ninth, when Tony Lazzeri collected his tenth home run. Bill Dickey followed with a triple, but uggins permitted Heimach to bat for himself. He rolled to Blaeholder for the final out.

Wally Schang started the scoring in the third with a homer, and hits were bunched for a total of four more in the sixth and the seventh. Pipgras fanned nine, but had to have Wiley Moore finish the game.

CARDINALS GAIN IN LEAGUE RACE

Beat Phillies While Pirates Wallop Second Place Giants.

CUBS WIN TWO.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—When Burleigh Grimes started as if he would pitch an uncertain game against the Giants at Pittsburg yesterday afternoon, the Pirates resorted to the expedient of overcoming the Clan McGraw by main force. The net result was 19 hits for 29 bases off five Giant hurlers for a 16 to 5 victory in the third game of the series.

The Pirate attack included two triples by Grantham, one by Paul Waner, a double by Bartell and Pie Traynor's home run within the lot. The Pirates collected six runs off Joe Genewich and Jack Scott in the second and put on outbursts for four each in the fourth and seventh, as Jim Faulkner, Larry Benton and Vic Aldridge paraded through the box.

St Louis Cardinal pennant chances boomed when Earnest Orsatti crashed out a home run in the first inning to give the Cardinals the necessary margin for a 1 to 0 victory over Philadelphia.

With the Giants bowing to the Pirates, the Red Birds' advantage in the pennant race was increased to nine percentage points, and one and one-half games. Orsatti's circuit wallop was his third in the six games he has played since being recalled from the minors.

The Cubs won a doubleheader from Boston, 4 to 1 and 4 to 3 and climbed back into third place, only three and a half games from the leading St. Louis Cardinals.

GOLF BALLS MET AND SANK IN CUP

Unique Incident Took Place on Wentworth Falls Golf Course.

MELBOURNE, Australia, August 25.—(Canadian Press).—A unique incident in golf took place recently on the Wentworth Falls golf course on the mountain links.

Doctor Alcorn and E. A. Avory, of the Leura Club, were playing with the professional E. Barnes. The tee shots of Mr. Avory and Barnes at the ninth hole finished in opposite sides of the green. Unknown to each other both players hit their second (chip shots) at the same time. They met in the air and then dropped into the hole.

The only other known instance of two balls being played at the same hole and meeting in mid-air occurred at St. Andrew's, Scotland in May, 1926, when Colonel Howard and Lieut.-Colonel Buchanan Dunlop played to the 16th green. The balls, going towards the same hole, met twenty yards from the pin. The Australian case is unparalleled.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Remember the second game of the intermediate O.B.A.A. series between Raybestos and Cobourg here this afternoon.

Alex. Kay has taken over the management of the Riley and Hickey bantam team and has called a practice for Monday night in James Stevenson Park at 6 o'clock sharp. Having played superior ball all through the city league season it is now up to the players themselves to carry on the good work in the O.B.A.A. finals. Every player is asked to be on hand at this workout as it is likely that the team will play their first game this week.

The Frost playgrounds baseball team, champions of the Hamilton bantam section were defeated at St. Catherines on Thursday by a score of 4 to 1. As Hamilton won from St. Kitts in a game played on their home field last Saturday by a score 4-1, the teams are now tied and will play-off at Oakville to-day.

On account of Harrison's victory over the C.G.E. on Thursday night, the North-Enders must meet the Knights of Columbus in the final game of the schedule on Monday night in Confederation Park. A win for Harrison puts them in second position in the league standings with a place in the play-offs. The game will be called at 6 o'clock sharp.

Those arbiters, Oscar Hett and Babe Sheppard who are handling this series did the game on Wednesday without a complaint The first time Belleville fans ever sat back and listened to decisions without giving opinions as to the ump's family tree and naming his draw-backs for the world to hear. Hett almost breaks his arm signalling a strike and that made a hit right away. Sheppard is the man famous for his water-drinking ability. The Babe can kill a pail without any effort whatever, generally between innings in the seventh. He carries a mere three hundred pounds around but that doesn't stop him from bending over to give his decisions.—Oshawa Times.

Oshawa's junior and juvenile teams travel to Toronto to-day for the retun game of their series with Elizabeth playground representatives and champions of Toronto. Chick O'Neill, an ex-McCormick player will be on the mound for the Juniors and he should star there as he had more experience than his fellow moundsman Jack Ogden who struck out seventeen Lizzies in their game on Wednesday. Reeves and Knox will face the fighting playgrounds team for the juveniles.

It is considered likely that the Peterborough juniors will enter their second series of the O.B.A.A. play-offs on Wednesday afternoon.

LEAFS ARE DOWN IN SECOND PLACE

Drop Game To Seventh Place Bears While Orioles Rest.

TORONTO, Aug. 25.—To-day the Baltimore Orioles are on top of the International League ladder, one point ahead of the rapidly retreating Leafs, said retreat being more responsible for the rise of the Dunnmen than any extraordinary prowess shown by the present pace-setters. Yesterday at Maple Leaf Stadium Bill O'Hara's men dropped an 8 to 7 decision to Newark, this being the thirteenth time in the last sixteen starts that the locals have finished second. They tied one game and won two others. With a record such as that it is little wonder that they have finally been deposed, the surprising part of it being that they maintained the lead as long as they did.

When the Bears came to town after losing nine games in a row it was suspected that the Leafs would help them add another reverse or two to that string and thus take away from Toronto the doubtful honor of dropping the most games in succession this season. But O'Hara's men were rather inconsiderate to the hundred or so fans who attended and also to their own pennant chances. They declined to win this game or at least it looked that way. They had chances galore to break it up, but these went aglimmering.

Keys Hit Heavily

MONTREAL, Aug. 25.—The Reading Keys staged a marathon here yesterday afternoon at the expense of the Montreal Royals, and when they got through circling the bases the score was 17 to 8. The visitors ran wild on the paths in the first two innings, scoring ten runs, and then tallied much as they pleased after that. From the time that Clark hit the first ball pitched for a home run the game was a slaughter of performing moundsmen. Hubbell, with a ten-run lead, lasted the route, although clouted unmercifully by the Royals, but Miller, local starting pitcher, was taken out after three runs had been scored in the first with none out. Dunagan finished the game, pitching the entire nine innings.

Six home runs were hit in the flock of extra-base blows collected by both teams. Pitcher Dunagan, whose batting average is in the neighborhood of .150, hit a home run off Hubbell with none on base. Dunagan, however, ran true to form in his other three trips and struck out. Conroy, with six runs, matted in, led the assault on the local pitching pair.

DELP-NOVOTNY IN GOLF FINALS

Will Contest Play For Western Amateur Championship at Chicago.

EVANS ELIMINATED.

BOB O'LINK CLUB, Chicago, Aug. 25 (Associated Press).—Frank Dolp of Portland, Org., and Gus Novotny of Chicago will contest the finals for the western amateur golf championship as a result of two bizarre matches yesterday in which Dolp put out no less a veteran than Chick Evans, eight times champion, 3 and 2, and Novotny eliminated Lawrence Moller of Quincy, 4 and 3.

None of the four played championship golf. Evans took as many as 82 strokes in the morning round, and was seven over par on the remaining 16 holes before he lost, 3 and 2. Moller took 82 blows for the first circuit, and was 10 above par for the other 15 holes before he lost, 4 and 3.

Dolp, who was champion in 1926, used 13 strokes more than par for 34 holes, and Novotny was 16 above par for 33 holes. Evans seemed wholly off his game.

FINAL GAME ON MONDAY NIGHT

K. of C. and Harrisons Will Play—Harrisons May Win Second Place.

The final game of the City Softball League will be played Monday evening at 6.00 o'clock sharp when Harrison's Northenders meet the K. of C. This game is the last scheduled game of the series and a win for Harrisons will give them second place, while a win for the K. of C. will tie Harrisons and C.G.E. for second place.

K. of C. are playing great ball lately, winning their last two starts, and are going to field their strongest team on Monday in an effort to defeat Harrisons. Had the Knights fielded a team at the start of the season like they did at the latter part they would be up in first place.

A great crowd is expected out for Monday night's big battle, and they are assured of a great struggle. The game is called for 6.00 p.m. sharp.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By a Wise Cracker

Stoney Lake, Aug. 22.

Mister Sporting Editor:

Say, Mac, this is a SOS call. You know that story in The Examiner the other night what told about the bass biting at a diamond ring on a girl's finger. Lookit, Mac, old scout, I need that diamond the worst way. See if you can't lock up the dame and borrow the rock for a week or so, for I've got to get me a fish someway, and already I've tried everything else. I've saw bullfrogs, and black snakes, and mud turtles, and loons, and gulls up here, but not a fish. I've got sunburn, blisters, a lame back, a dirty look from the ball and chain, and the horse laugh from everybody elee, but I haven't got a bass nor a lunge. You know me, Mac. I'll keep on trying, but I sure would like to try that diamond bait for a while. I'd like to break my last year's record, and I can do it—if I catch anything.

You can gather from this, Mister Sporting Editor, that the fishing ain't as yet so hot up here, but everything else is lovely. Ain't nature grand, Mac? When Mister Kipling wrote that stuff about a dress that was nothing much in front and something less than half of that behind, he couldn't see what the girls would be wearing up at Stoney Lake in '28, and take it from me, Mac, I can't hardly see what they're wearing either. But understand me, I ain't kicking about it—I'm merely reporting the bare facts. As the old fellow said when he looked at a flapper climbing outa a car, "I don't know what we're coming to, but it won't be long now."

Well, Mac, I see where the Raybestos team, after all the mad scramble last week, has had to wait for a game. Them O.B.A.A. officials sure get excited every year when the play-offs arrive, and the result is that while 1 bunch has to play games every day for a week to get a winner, some other league drifts along at its own sweet will and gets away with it. Anyway, the Rays is a game bunch of battlers and they seem to thrive on work. Sorry to see the Kiwanis outfit get the air; they looked good, but in a kid serious you can't never tell. At that they showed some youngsters of promise.

The Royals had a dickse fit taking care of Kingston, but they done it. It would been a sheame if they had been nipped off in that third game, for they should never of had to play a extra fixture. (They had Kingston down and out here in the 2nd battle, but tossed the game away—and sometimes a mistake of that kind means going out for the season. The Royals showed it ain't impossible for a Peterborough team to beat Kingston, but you could never of proved it by the Petes srs.

Well, Mac, I really can't take no more time off to-day. It looks like a day when the fish would be just yearning for a chance to bite, and I'm sure one of the Chesterfield lads when it comes to satisfying the muskies. If I get a couple, old timer, I'll ship you down enough for a real fish dinner.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

DUBLIN, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press) —Visiting Trinity College Library, Gene Tunney came across a first edition of Shakespeare which he handled lovingly and parted with reluctantly. Likely to Meet Shaw.

LONDON, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Antibes, France, where George Bernard Shaw is holidaying, says that Gene Tunney is likely to have his desire to meet Shaw satisfied. The author will be back in London soon and said he hoped to meet Tunney. They had something in common, he said, in that both disapproved of Shaw's book, "Cassel Byron's Profession."

CHURCH PROBLEMS TO BE DISCUSSED

Deepening of Spirituality and Furtherance of Missions Among Subjects to be Discussed.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Convening in Young Church in this city on Sept. 5 for consideration of current problems, the General Council of the United Church of Canada will be on ground familiar to the makers of church union. It was when meeting in Winnipeg in 1902 that the Methodist General Conference, in response to a challenge from the late Principal Patrick, of Manitoba College, issued its declaration that conferences on union, with the Congregational and Presbyterian Churches, would be "a source of gratification."

Again in 1916 the Presbyterian General Assembly, meeting in Winnipeg, took the decision which led to the organization of the United Church of Canada nine years later.

The two previous General Councils, at Toronto in 1925 and at Montreal in 1926, were occupied principally with organization of the United Church of Canada. The forthcoming third General Council, which is the first in two years, will probably be fully occupied for 10 days or more in considering plans for furtherance of the church's tasks, especially in evangelistic and missionary directions.

For the year 1929 and 1930, leading up to the 19th centenary of Pentecost, it is anticipated that the United Church of Canada as a whole and in its congregations will direct its effort toward deepening of spiritual life and reaching out after uninterested persons and hostile groups.

At an early session of the Council the retiring moderator, Rev. James Endicott, D.D., LL.D., who has toured the eight foreign missions under instruction from the Council's executive, will report on the outlook for Christian extension abroad.

One major problem of organization, that of setting up a pension fund for ministers and their dependents, was left over from the last General Council for further consideration and development. This year a constitution for the new fund has been prepared and will be presented by the commission first appointed in 1925 to that task.

Two matters which were thought contentious were referred to committees by the last General Council. The one on cadet corps and officers' training corps has been thoroughly studied by a large committee and an exhaustive report is to be presented. The report on the second question, the ordination of women and their place in church courts, was completed last year and has been before the Presbyteries for their report back to General Council.

Besides the 422 commissioners regularly elected by conferences this year, the General Council will bring to Winnipeg many visitors desirous of witnessing the proceedings, which will include public meetings to be addressed by speakers specially selected for their participation in the actual work of the church on the frontiers, in special fields and in mission lands.

Important local arrangements are being perfected by a Winnipeg committee, of which Sir J. A. M. Aikens is honorary chairman, L. J. Reycraft, K.C., chairman, and Rev. J. A. Cormie, D.D., secretary.

TILDEN BARRED INDEFINITELY

Tennis Star Found Guilty of Violation of Player-Writer Rule.

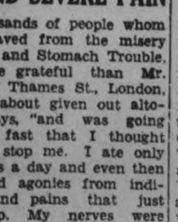
REFUSES COMMENT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—William T. Tilden, gaunt veteran of the tennis courts, has been barred indefinitely from amateur competition.

The lank Philadelphian, veteran of nine Davis Cup campaigns, six times holder of the national singles title, and by many regarded as the greatest tennis player of all times, was found guilty early to-day of violation of the amateur player writer rules of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The committee, announcing its decision in a lengthy statement, held that Tilden clearly had violated the player writer rule by his newspaper articles on the English championships this summer at Wimbledon, where he was a competitor. Tilden, who is in Boston, refused to comment but friends intimated he would seek reinstatement at a meeting of the executive committee next month.

Soccer Notes



A special meeting of the local soccer association will be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms on Monday evening at eight o'clock. Representatives and executive members please be punctual, owing to a large amount of business to be transacted.

In all probability the Quaker Oats football team will request their reinstatement in local soccer so as to take part in the cup competitions.

Deloro has intimated by letter that their representative would be present on Monday evening and have declared themselves to play in the three cups yet to be played.

The draw for the trophies will be drawn and schedule arranged so as to complete the season's games.

INDIGESTION, GAS AND SEVERE PAIN

Of the thousands of people whom Tanlac has saved from the misery of Indigestion and Stomach Trouble, none are more grateful than Mr. Fred Hill, 349 Thames St., London, Ont. "I had about given out altogether," he says, "and was going down hill so fast that I thought nothing could stop me. I ate only two light meals a day and even then suffered untold agonies from indigestion, gas and pains that just doubled me up. My nerves were wrecked; every bone in my body ached: I could not sleep; and just felt sick all over.

"Tanlac fixed me up so I could eat anything from soup to dessert without having indigestion. All my other troubles vanished like smoke. I picked up twelve pounds and never felt better. I never thought anything could do for me what Tanlac did."

Tanlac corrects Stomach Trouble and builds up the whole system because it is nature's own remedy for the sick—roots, barks and herbs. Remember, your money back if it doesn't help you; so get a bottle at your druggist's to-day.

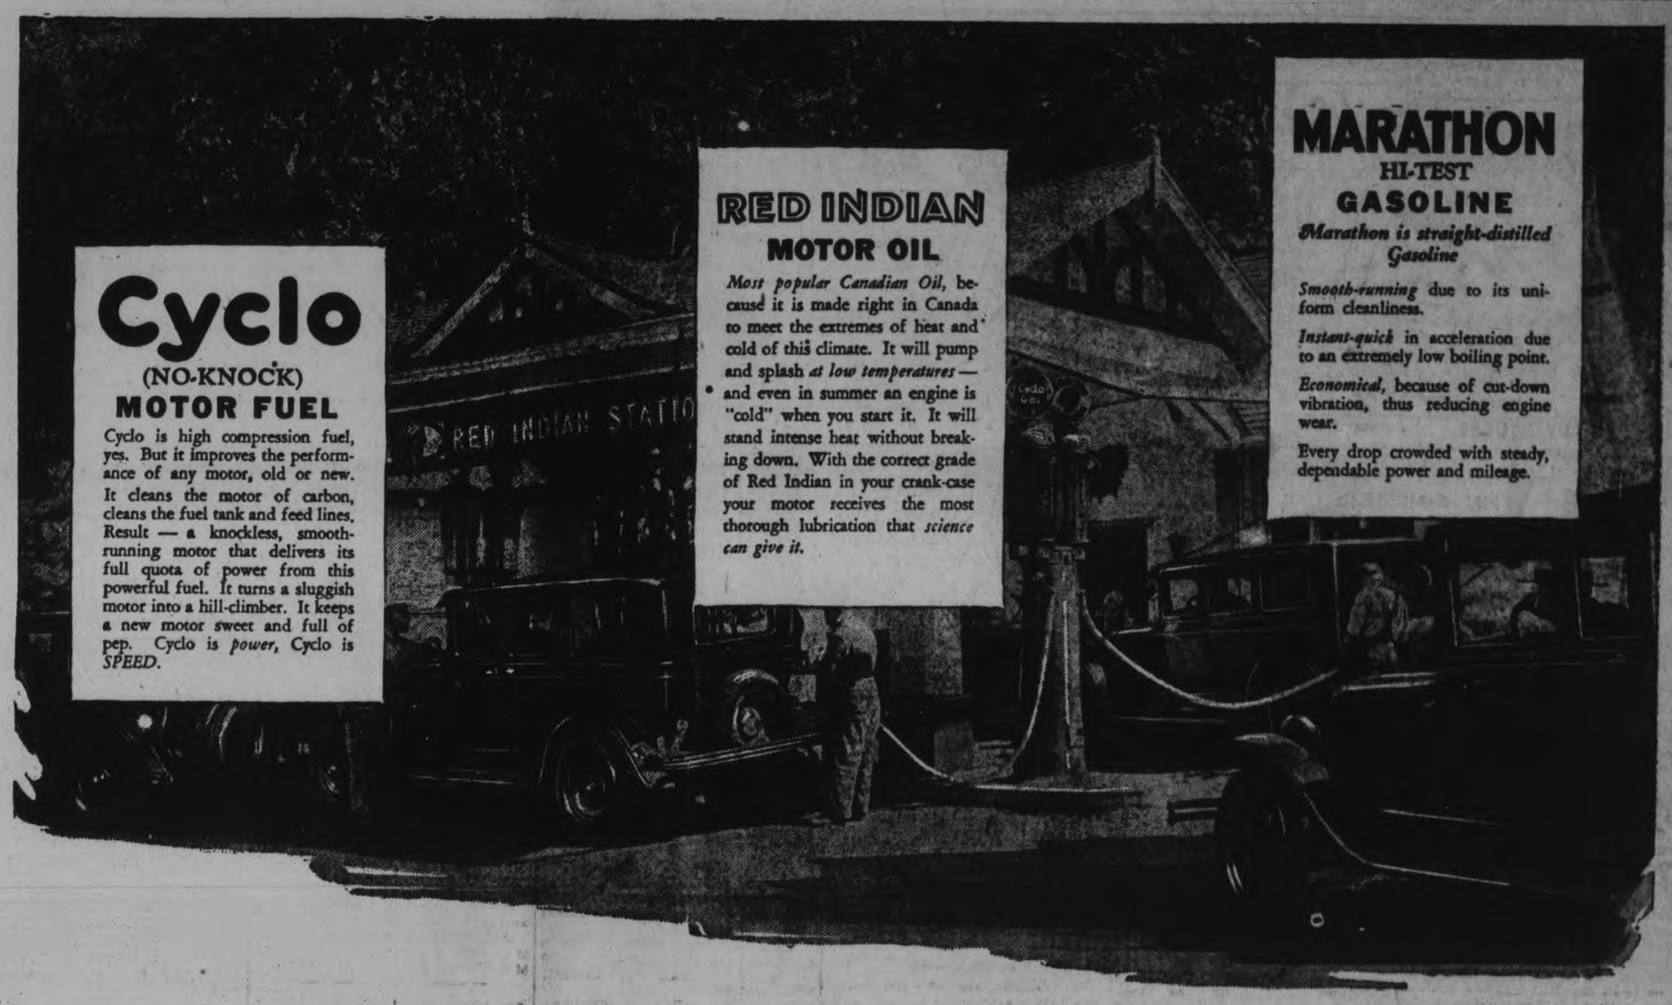
Had Dolores Costello not already attained the heights of fame, her performance in "The Heart of Maryland" would place her there. She possesses not only exquisite beauty but real interpretive genius, swaying her audiences at will. Better even than her characterizations in "The Sea Beast," "When a Man Loves," "The Third Degree," "A Million Bid" and "Old San Francisco," is her portrayal of the heroine of "The Heart of Maryland."

The world knows "The Heart of Maryland," and that it brought dazzling success to Mrs. Leslie Carter, thirty years ago. It has had many revivals and always successful ones. Audiences an hundred years from now will in all possibility thrill at the perils and loves of Maryland Calvert as avidly as they do to-day. There is an immortal something about the great Belasco play, and Warner Bros. have presented it in a setting of marvelous beauty and they have spared no effort in getting the best cast obtainable. Among the many historic figures of the time appear Lincoln, Lee, Grant.

Highlights of the production include the Lincoln Inagural Ball; the exciting capture of Maryland's brother; the moment when the aged General is forced to sign the death warrant of his own son; the shelling of Boonesboro; the scene in which Maryland swings in mid-air from the clapper of the great bell that the signal for her lover's execution may not be given; others in which the Southern drummer boy figures; and the sequence in which Maryland, accused of treachery, falls before the firing squad

"The Heart of Maryland" is a credit to Warner Bros., well known for splendid productions, and it adds many a gem to the already glittering crown of Dolores Costello.



Cyclo
MOTOR FUEL

Cyclo is high compression fuel, yes. But it improves the performance of any motor, old or new. It cleans the motor of carbon, cleans the fuel tank and feed lines. Result — a knockless, smooth-running motor that delivers its full quota of power from this powerful fuel. It turns a sluggish motor into a hill-climber. It keeps a new motor sweet and full of pep. Cyclo is power, Cyclo is SPEED.

RED INDIAN MOTOR OIL

Most popular Canadian Oil, because it is made right in Canada to meet the extremes of heat and cold of this climate. It will pump and splash at low temperatures — and even in summer an engine is "cold" when you start it. It will stand intense heat without breaking down. With the correct grade of Red Indian in your crank-case your motor receives the most thorough lubrication that science can give it.

MARATHON
HI-TEST GASOLINE

Marathon is straight-distilled Gasoline

Smooth-running due to its uniform cleanliness.

Every drop crowded with steady, dependable power and mileage.

We, at the Red Indian Service Stations, have the highest admiration for a fine automobile.

TO GUARD
That Marvelous Machine
The Modern Motor Car

honestly believe to be the greatest of all engineering achievements, from carelessness and abuse.

In our eyes, the MOTOR CAR is a miracle of mechanical engineering. To our ears, the hum of a perfectly tuned motor is sweet music.

We know those motors. We refine oils and fuels that such motors must have if they are to continue as smooth-running efficient machines.

We accept the task of guarding those wonderful machines — of protecting what we

The men in charge of Red Indian Service Stations love to hear a sweet-tuned motor hum. They naturally prescribe the oil and fuel that will keep each motor sweet. That's McColl-Frontenac Service.

CANADIAN PAINTERS EXHIBIT FINE WORK

Montreal Arts Club Shows Worthy Samples of Native Talent.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press).—It would be hard to find a setting better adapted to the requirements of the small exhibition than the general room of the Montreal Arts Club.

For the 40 or more landscapes, studies, drawings and wood-cuts make up an intimate collection with a personal flavor that can be best appreciated in this room, where the artists whose work it represents are wont to gather for discussion and recreation—a collection to be viewed without haste amid comfortable surroundings.

Here are two or three striking harbor sketches, products of the sure skill of Adiren Heber, a tramp steamers flaunting all their port accoutrement of booms and ropes and winches. In their portrayal Mr. Hebert has caught the sonorous rhythms and harmonies so often more fundamentally present in the utilitarian than in the ornamental expressions of contemporary life. In contrast he presents two figure bits, "The Charleston" and "The Flapper," the appeal of which is instant.

Scattered about the wall are a number of examples of Thurstan Topham's art, the most impressive being a green-blue symphony, entitled "Undine," the composition of which is highly characteristic. Then one must pause to enjoy the decorative quality of "The Spruce-Studded Hillside," a winter landscape by A. Wilkie Kilgour.

Several sketches from South Carolina done in delicate pastel shades by Guy Brock offer quiet enjoyment. The intellectual interest of the visitor is sharply gripped by a drawing by Edwin Holgate in which winter woods are employed with original effect. The austere force which marks this artist's wood-cuts, the almost niggardly restraint, is here finely manifested.

Two paintings from the brush of Harold Beament indicate that this young painter is gaining surely in power, both intellectual and pictorial. The handling of the distant sunlight on snow in "The Old Carioie" constitutes one of the most pleasing achievements in the exhibition, while in the other entry Mr. Beament has portrayed the aurora borealis with refreshing individuality.

Among the other exhibitors are W. H. Taylor, Wilfrid Barnes, A.R.C.A., R. H. Lindsay Smith, Felix Shea and D. H. MacFarlane.

COMMANDS ARE NOT INVITATIONS

LONDON, August 24.—(Canadian Press).—"Lady Diana Doubleglouces-ter regrets that she was unavoidably prevented from obeying their Majesties' Command to attend the garden party at Buckingham Palace."

Announcements like this in the social columns of the London Press—published for a fee of three guineas per insertion—were of frequent occurrence directly after the interesting function at the Palace last month. They have caused amusement rather than respectful interest, among those who have real knowledge of procedure in high social matters.

In the first place an invitation to a Garden Party at Buckingham Palace is not in the nature of a "command." The invitations are issued on the joint behalf of the King and Queen, and it is the Sovereign of the Realm alone who possesses the prerogative of issuing "commands." In point of fact the Lord Chamberlain is 'commanded' to issue the invitations (and indicates so on the card of invitation). And it is not deemed necessary for anyone to offer a public apology to the King or Queen.

The Truck Driver

I believe Champion is the better spark plug because of the way Champions stand up in hard truck service.

Champion is the betterspark plug because it has an exclusive sillimanite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal thatremains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes whichassure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

The world is as good a proposition as ever for those who work, Henry Ford said on his 65th birthday the other day. He said he expected to "get more done" in the next five years than in the last twenty.

Heavy Building Causes Demand For Metals

TORONTO, August 25.—In a summary of the iron, steel and machinery markets, Canadian Machinery and Manufacutring News makes the following comment this week:

Demand for structural steel and reinforcing bars, on account of the heavy building activities prevailing all over the country, is vigorous and should be sustained over the fall and early winter. Heavy orders have been booked and others ar pending.

Pig iron markets are showing a slight improvement and are recovering from the usual seasonal depression with increased sales in foundry and malleable iron reported. Rail mills are active and further contracts are expected shortly that should keep production steady throughout the fall.

Inquiries are now apparent for last quarter iron and steel, and several buyers have booked small lots on immediate delivery for winter use. Warehouses report good business and splendid prospects ahead. The expected rise in copper and brass has failed to materialize, and prices are firm. Scrap metal prices have had a heavy drop in one or two instances, aluminum coming back to $10 and scrap zinc to $4.50.

The market for scrap iron has had an encouraging revival, reflecting the improved tone of the iron and steel markets in general, and prices are showing a tendency to firm up. Crop reports continue excellent and, granted favorable weather conditions, the biggest crop in the history of the Dominion is confidently expected.

Favorable Weather Calses Low Prices

CHICAGO, Aug. 26. —(Canadian Press.)—The favorable harvest weather in Canada and a much lower Liverpool quotation than looked for, led to early downturns to-day in wheat prices here. Many wheat traders, however, showed decided inclination to go slow on selling. Opening prices: Wheat, Sept. 109½, Dec. 114 3-8. Corn, Sept. 89½, Dec, 72½. Oats, Sept. 37, Dec. 39 7-8.

International Nickel Still Is the Favorite

TORONTO, Aug. 26. — (Canadian Press.)—International Nickel continued to climb and was the most active issue on the Toronto stock exchange this morning. Nickel closed at 184½, equalling the record high mark set yesterday afternoon. General listlessness was apparent in practically all the other stocks, only the leaders in everyday sessions registering any sales. Brazilian Traction was unchanged at noon with a closing price of 54½. Cockshutt Pow was off ¼ to close at 28¼. City Dairy remained stationary at 57½. Massey Harris sold off half a point, closing at 43. On the unlisted board Carling was up a half point to 27½, Canadian Malting gained 1 3-8 and Imperial Oil closed at 69¾ for a net gain of 1¾.

Malartic.

TORONTO, Aug. 25. — Consequent upon recent splendid development at this property, the Hon. J. E. Perrault has issued instructions to have work started immediately upon a highway to this property. This will be of considerable importance to the Cadillac-Fouriere-Malartic area where a great amount of development work is now being carried out. This issue Thursday was subject to very heavy profit-taking and the way it was absorbed shows Malartic to be in a splendid technical position. It should easily reach muoh higher prices on receipt of further favorable development news.

Barry Hollinger.

According to H. C. Crow, there is a decided improvement in the 1250-foot level of this company's Boston Creek property. "The first three rounds in this, about 15 feet, gave an average grade of $10.90 over 54 inches," stated Mr. Crow. He stated further, "It will be some time before we will actually know how good the 1,250-foot level really is." A raise is also being put up from the 1,125-foot level. This raise is now up something over 20 feet and it is anticipated one will be encountered within a short time, judging from 1,000-foot level results. Mill feed is coming from all over the mine, from the sixth, seventh and eighth levels, and from two stopes on the 1,000-foot level. In addition to this, development rock from the 1,125 and the 1,250-foot levels is going through the mill, which is now treating between 80 and 90 tons daily.

Barry is in a fairly sound financial condition, only current accounts stand against a substantial cash amount in the treasury. The company also has 300,000 shares of stock and 1,500,000 shares of Patterson Copper.

Bunker Hill Extension.

A report from Port Arthur yesterday morning states this company has purchased for $100,000 cash a property one-half mile from Banning Station, or 150 miles west of Port Arthur on the Canadian National Railway. The report states further that Bunker Hill Extension are prepared to start diamond drilling operations immediately, and it is anticipated a large amount will be spent on development work.

While the volume of trading yesterday was considerably less than Thursday, at 905,255 shares, more attention was paid to the higher-priced issues, notably among which might be mentioned the two Lindsley stocks, Sherritt-Gordon and Sudbury Basin, and the Kirkland Lake issues.

Sherritt-Gordon was under accumulation throughout the session and sold from the opening of $6.30 to $6.50, closing at the top for a gain of 15 points. While Sudbury Basin was inclined to be erratic, selling between $7.70 and $7.95, it closed 8 points higher at $7.73-5.

Under the leadership of Lake Shore, which, influenced by a report yesterday morning that high-grade ore had been encountered on the 400-foot level, moved up to $23.25 for a gain of $1.50, the Kirkland Lake issues were in better demand. Teck, closing at $9.20 bid, was up 5, and Wright-Hargreaves at $3.49-$3.49½, was up 4. Tough Oakes was also in good demand, and gained 2¾ points to close at 30-30¼. Bidgood was quite steady and closed practically unchanged at 66½-7.

Reflecting favorable news that has been coming from the property lately, Crown Reserve gained 3 to close at 43-5. Hollinger was weaker again, closing off 25 at $8.75-$9.00. The two other Porcupines were better, Dome closing 25 points up at $8.10-50, and McIntyre at $21.50 bid was up 40 points. Anticipating further favorable development news from diamond drilling over the week-end, Newbec was still under accumulation around 30c.

Following the leadership of New York copper stocks, Noranda closed firmly yesterday and was up 55 at $54.95-$55.00. Amulet was slightly stronger yesterday and closed 4 points up at $3.96-7. International Nickel was very heavily traded in on all the industrial exchanges, and was up $4 at $104.00 to $104.50. Malartic was the big trader of the session and again absorbed heavy profit-taking, closing up one point at $1.53-4. A number of the smaller issues were unable to hold their gains of Thursday and showed from fractional to two-point losses.

The action of Canadian mining stocks in the face of a very tight credit situation has been sufficiently impressive to encourage in the past few days a substantial amount of investment buying. A continuance of this buying appears probable. It is evident that the drastic decline in values since last winter has made a number of the mining stocks quite attractive to investors and speculators who had been keeping away from the mining market.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 25.—With the announcement for the Bunker Hill Extension's negotiations for the J. J. Law claims, reported in the next bulletin, is the official announcement that the company has ceased operations on the original Sudbury property. Aggressive exploration work is now being carried out in the various mining fields an average of three properties per week being examined by the company's engineers. The company is fortunate in halving the services of five such men as Messrs. Hitchcock, Young and Smith in addition to two other engineers whose names have not been disclosed. Exploration work is now centred in the fields around Swastika and Michipicoten.

As a consequence of these activities, the company is able to announce the purchase of an option on a group of five claims near the White Lake Mines (Peterson Cobalt). This ground is situated next the Marcus Daly property in the Mississagau Forest Reserve. The claims will be examined by two of the company's engineers and an independent. One left Toronto last night. He will be joined in Sudbury by another of the company's men and the independent engineer will also be on the scene soon.

Strength in Chatput Hughes displayed lately is attributed to the fact that diamond drilling, being carried on from the 2,800-foot level of the edjoining Kirkland Lake Gold, into the former property, is giving interesting results. Another constructive factor is that the Teck Hughes is reported to be sinking a new shaft within 300 feet of the Chaput Hughes line.

A report from Kirkland Lake this morning was to the effect that Lake Shore had made a rich strike at the 400-foot level.

Further reports of the find on the Trout Creek Mines property near Swastika came down over the wires this morning. The vein is stated to be opened for 30 feet now, showing six feet of high grade ore.

Word from the White Lake Mines is to the effect that a new vein has been discovered on the east side of the property, running high in chalcopyrite and bornite. This is in addition to the five veins already exposed on the west side, and which have been stripped for three-quarters of a mile. At the White Lake property of Peterson Cobalt stripping is now in progress, and excellent values are said to have been encountered along the vein which extends on both sides of White Lake, and apparently passes underneath also. Pits have been sunk along the vein at intervals and continuation of the vein has been found in each.

Drilling will start at White Lake in about a month, according to the present plans of the management and drills will operate horizontally from the side of the elevation in which the mineralizatio noccurs. It is expected to materially lower development costs in this way.

Premier New Ore Body May Add Million

Stewart.—Although details are difficult to obtain, it now appears to be a fact that Premier Gold Mining Co. has added something like a million dollars to its known ore reserves in a recent strike of ore said to assay around $100 a ton. The strike was made in the original Premier mine.

Reports from the property indicate that the find was made in a zone paralleling the old or No. 1 ore body and located about 200 feet to the south, although your correspondent can not state this definitely to be a fact. A crosscut tunnel is said to have been run from the No. 2 level, encountering the new ore body, which is designated No. 2 ore body.

There is reason to believe that the discovery of this ore was made by diamond drills several years ago but the company's conservative policy did not permit it to include it in its estimated reserves.

Not until the ore had been acually opened up by a tunnel did it figure definitely in the company's plans.

The strike adds to the belief that the old Premier is still very much alive and may supply tram ore as well as mill feed for some years to come.

Quatsino is Neighbor of Coast Copper. Offering of 500,000 Shares in New Company is made on Western Market.

An offering of 500,000 shares of Quatsino Gold-Copper Mines, Ltd., at par, is being made by R. P. Clark & Co., as fiscal agents for the company. The issue is arousing considerable attention as the property is located on the Coast Copper (Old Sport) group of claims on Vancouver Island and is completely surrounded by Coast Copper with the same mineralized zone traversing it.

Quatsino Gold-Copper owns, in all, 980 acres. Some of the most valuable ore uncovered on Coast Copper's property is near the Quatsino Gold-Copper boundary, thereby increasing the value of the latter's ground.

Incorporated as a British Columbia Company, Quatsino Gold-Copper Mines Limited, has an authorized capitalization of 3,000,000 share of $1 par vaue. On completion of the present financing 1,500,000 shares will be outstanding.

Besides its close assocation with a property controlled by the consolidated Mining and Smelting Company and for which an important future has been widely predicted, Quatsino Gold-Copper enjoys the advantage of coming on the market as a high-grade copper proposition at a time when copper is coming into its own again.

It is believed that "Smelters" has developed Coast Copper to a point where the construction of a large ore treatment plant and railway transportation would be justified. Such improvement at Coast Copper would gratly improve the status of the new company.

Consolidated Smelters in a New Field.

Sufficient evidence of Consolidated Smelters' interest in the mining possibilities of the Omineca or Grand Trunk country, B.C., is supplied by their actions in acquiring properties in that area and the commencement of preliminary development.

It is reported on good authority that the Consolidated Company has concluded arrangements with well-known properties in the Babino Mountains, having as a nucleus the Harvey group, and including the Driftwood Creek groups, the Judges group, the Silver Star group and claims owned by J. Wright and F. H. Johnston of Smithers. This makes a

STATESMEN HAD LONG DISCUSSION

King and Kellogg Talked On Chicago Steal and St. Lawrence Canal.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—A special wireless desaptch to the New York Times from the Ile De France described the meeting between Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg of the United States and Premier Mackenzie King of Canada. The despatch says they "held an important conference discussing the various problems affecting the two countries," and continues:

"It is understood that the two statesmen went over the old problems long bothering both countries, the St. Lawrence waterway and the Chicago drainage canal. Mr. Kellogg agreed that Canada ought to have a right to all water power developed on the St. Lawrence where the river runs through wholly Canadian territory and that two countries should share power equally where the river runs between them.

Mr. Kellogg also agreed that the United States alone should deepen the Great Lakes channel to provide for the passage of ocean going vessels and pay an apportionate cost of all international construction.

Mr King believes that a large part of Canada is not ready for the St. Lawrence development, having no immediate use for the power and fearing also that it would be detrimental to influential Montreal and Quebec. He thinks that should the United States right the injustice done Canadian shipping in lowering the lakes level by the Chicago drainage Canal, it would greatly appease Canadian opinion, part of which is fearful lest the United States take advantage of Canada in any international power and waterways scheme. Also he felt that Canadian opinion would be won over were the United States to grant better tariff rates on fish imports from the Maritime Provinces and also on dairy products."

WEDDING BELLS

GREEN—EAGLESON.

The marriage of Miss Jean Eagleson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Eagleson of Park Hill, Ont., to Dr. John C. Green, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. G. Walter Green of this city, was solemnized at eight o'clock this morning in St. Andrew's United Ghurch by the Rev. David Wren.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very smart in a French frock of oyster white printed chiffon with black bandings, and small cloche hat of black felt and satin, rhinestone trimmed. She wore a dainty corsage of rose-buds and lily of the valley.

The bride's sister, Miss Ann Eagleson, attended her, wearing almond green georgette and matching hat, and corsage bouquet of mauve and pink sweet peas. Mr. J. D. Fanning supported the groom.

Among the many gifts received by the bride was a silver tea service from the staff of the Canadian Packing Company, where the bride had been a valued member.

total of 30 claims taken under option by Smelters for immediate development.

The Harvey group which is about 12 miles from Smithers has seen considerable development by shafts and tunnels. Results obtained are said to be encouraging, a large number of mineralized zones having been opened up and good silver values disclosed. It is thought that Smelters will undertake a drilling campaign as soon as the necessary equipment can be put on the ground. Meantime the general plan is being formulated and work is to be carried on in tunnels and on surface of the Harvey group by a crew under the superintendency of a Smelters' representative.

Important developments are now underway at Cheltonia-Kirkland Gold Mines Limited, holding 286 acres in the northwest part of McElroy Township. Surface work has been going on for over six months and the result obtained apparently warrant an extensive drilling campaign. Capitalization is set at $4,000,000 of which 1,320,000 shares, $1 par, have been issued. Recently completed financial arrangements will place over $100,000 in the company's treasury which will permit of development on a large scale.

FINANCIAL BRIEFS

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.— Rumor has it that Johns-Manville will acquire American Encaustic Tile before the end of the year in line with the expansion inaugurated with the proposed purchase of the Paraffine Co. Both deals, it is said, will be taken care of out of the proceeds of the additional common stock which stockholders are running to about 10% in excess of those for 1927, it is officialy stated.

Acadia Interest is Well Earned

For the first six months of this year it is understood that Acadia Sugar Refining Company shows earnings substantially in excess of interest requirements. Through surplus earnings the company's cash position is showing betterment and its net working capital position at the end of 1928 is expected to show marked improvement.

Canadian refiners have made representations to the Dominion Government in an endeavor to have the Dupming Act applied to importations of Cuban refined sugar at very low prices. Relief from this unfair competition will mean much to Acadia Sugar and other Canadian refining companies.

Distillers-Seagrams

Distillers-Seagrams Corporation have under construction another additional warehouse with a capacity of 50,000 barrels or 2,000,000 gallons. This is in addition to the new warehouse of 80,000 barrel capacity just completed. The new plant will be even more efficient than the present buildings as advantage has been taken to make improvements through experience gained. Business for the company is reported to be showing a steady gain as new brands are being brought into production.

OUTLAWRY OF WAR TREATY IS SIGNED

15 Nations Enter Pact

Stresemann, of Germany, First To Sign, With Kellogg, U. S., Next.

TEN MINUTE CEREMONY.

Czecho-Slovakia Last To Sign Other Nations Asked to Work For Peace.

PARIS, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press)—The renunciation of war treaty was signed this afternoon by the plenipotentiaries of fifteen nations.

Dr. Gustave Stresemann, German Foreign Minister, was first to sign the historic document, attaching his signature at 3.45 p.m. (9.45 a.m. Eastern Standard Time).

Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg was second to sign the treaty. Premier King signed for Canada and Lord Cushendun for Great Britain.

By the pact 15 countries renounced war "as an instrument of national policy." With its signing all the peoples of the world were invited to join in an great effort to achieve permanent universal peace, Soviet Russia being asked to take part through the French government.

Significantly Dr. Stresemann, the first German Foreign Minister officially received in Paris since the war of 1870, was the first to sign under the alphabetical rule applied in the names of the signatory countries. (Germany is Allemagne in French). The United States was considered as being America in order to make Secretary Kellogg the second signer. Foreign Minister Hymans of Belgium was third and Foreign Minister Briand of France, came fourth.

The signatures for Great Britain and the Dominions were as follows:

For His Majesty, the King of Great Britain and Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the seas, Emperor of India, for Great Britain and Northern Ireland and all parts of the British Empire which are not members of the League of Nations, the Right Hon. Lord Cushedun, Acting Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

When Foreign Minister Briand had finished the address of welcome and the pact had been read, both were translated into English. This took 43 minutes and then the French Minister, after a burst of applause, rose and invited Dr. Stresemann to sign the historic instrument.

The treaty provides that "the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts, of whatever nature and of whatever origination, they may be "shall be sought only by pacific means."

The preamble declares that any signatory power which seeks to promote its national interests by resort

Rev. Hutchinson Explains To Press Nothing Secret About Visit To Canada

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—That there was nothing secret about his visit to Canada, that his secretary and his "man" knew where he was and that his Bishop knew that he was on a holiday were statements made at Brooks, Alta., by Rev. Franklin Hutchinson, of England, who has been reported as having disappeared mysteriously.

Rev. Mr. Hutchinson had no hesitation in explaining his mission and movements when it was brought to his attention Saturday that press reports indicated that he had left his parish secretly and had concealed his movements.

Rev. Mr. Hutchinson said that he had come to Canada to study conditions at first hand. He was making observations, particularly with reference to opportunities for young men on Canadian farms and he intimated that he intended to work on the land and in the harvest fields to gain experience regarding the actual situation.

He proposed to remain in the Brooks district probably a month and later he hoped to study methods employed in various colleges in Canada. He was interested in educational matters, he said.

MANY CRASHES BETWEEN CARS OVER WEEK END

All Accidents Reported Result in Slight Damage to Vehicles.

NO PERSON HURT.

Fenders, Lights, Etc., Suffer When Cars Collide at Many Intersections.

There were numerous accidents in Peterborough over the week-end but all were minor, damage consisting of bent fenders, bent radius rods, broken tail lights and in some cases ill feeling. No one was injured.

The first over the week-end was at the corner of Hunter and Queen streets. F. J. Merritt was driving east on Hunter street and Garret Murray was coming west on the same street and turned to go south on Queen street in front of Merritt's car and the two collided.

Murray's car suffered a damaged fender and bent radius rods, while there was damage done to Merrit's fender and steering gear.

The next one was at the corner of Barnardo Avenue and Water street. Garnet Inkpin, driving one of Fontaine's taxis, was proceeding north on Water street began to turn west on Barnardo avenue and a car driven by H. White of 518 Bonaccord street collided with him damaging the left running board and tearing the left rear fender from the taxi. White, who was on his way to Lakefield and in a hurry, offered to pay the damages.

The new pavement at the corner of McDonnell street took its first accident, at 2 p.m. on Sunday. Archie McPhate, a licensed chauffer, was driving west on McDonnell street and when he was half way across the intersection at Reid street his car and the car driven by George Lindsay, of 558 Park street, coming north on Reid street met in a collision. McPhate's car suffered damages about the rear left fender and when the car skidded because of the impact the front right tire was punctured. The radius rods on Lindsay's car were bent. Both parties agreed to settle the damages between themselves.

Alec. Turner reported to police headquarters that while he was driving his truck north on Park street an automobile No. 357-657

Big Caterpillar Has Many Eyes

Though his exact classification could not be determined, one of the largest of the worm farmily brought in to the Peterborough Department of Agriculture office was that presented on Friday by D. J. Sheehan of Indian River.

Fitting comfortable into a large Oxo box, the larva of a sphinx moth measured fully three inches long and three quarters of an inch in thickness, and was unusual in that it boasted not only the conventionall number of "Feelers" etc. but covering its body were uniformly placed spikes that appeared to have eyes in them. Through the courtesy of J. B. Nelson, local Agricultural representative, the big fellow will be sent to Toronto for examination.

CLEVELANDERS HAVE BIG CATCH

Eight Lunge and Limit Number of Bass Caught in One Day.

AT CURVE LAKE.

The record 'muskie' catch of the season at Dan Whetung's Curve Lake Indian Village was registered on Wednesday by a party of Clevelanders, including Senator L. T. Collister, United States Attorney A. E. Bernstein, John A. Du Bois, Merle Stern, Martin Monaghan and John Lewis Stussler.

The party accounted for a total of eight 'lunge and the daddy of the string tipped the scales at 22 pounds. The big fish, hooked by Mr. Stern while trolling, put up a thrilling battle before Guide Sam Taylor was able to get him into the boat. For more than thirty minutes he threatened to break the light twelve pound line Stern was using. Time and again the 'lunge almost won freedom in the weeds, but finally the contest proved too stiff and surrender ended the battle.

Other 'lunge caught by the party ran from eight to thirteen pounds. In addition the party caught the limit of small mouth bass.

SIX ARE BELIEVED LOST IN SEAPLANE ACCIDENT

Plane Disappears On Run Between Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle.

ANXIETY FELT.

VICTORIA, B.C., Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—Six people are believed to have lost their lives through an accident to the seaplane which left Victoria Saturday morning on the regular passenger run between Vancouver-Victoria-Seattle. The passengers are Dr. D. B. Holden, physician, of Victoria; Thomas Lake, Far Eastern manager of the Union Oil Co., just arrived from the Orient, and a couple who are believed to be Alexander MacCallum Scott, British M.P., and Mrs. Scott. The identity of the Scotts has not been positively established.

Pilots Harold Walker and L. Carson of Seattle, were in charge of the plane. No trace has been found except a large oil spot on the water opposite Fort Townsend, Wash., and two hats which drifted ashore about the same place. The weather is very foggy and seaplanes which have been searching since Saturday night are hapdicapped in their search. The missing plane, which is owned by the British Columbia Airways Ltd., should have reached Seattle early Saturday evening. The service was inaugurated only a few weeks ago, and on the first trip Mayor L. D. Taylor of Vancouver, travelling as a guest, ran into the propeller of the plane when he alighted in Vancouver and suffered a fractured skull.

Anxiety Felt.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 27 (Associated Press).—Anxiety was felt last night for the safety of the six persons in a ten-passenger cabin plane of the British Columbia Airways which had not been heard from since it left Victoria.

Lieut. Commander J. D. Price in a naval seaplane and Clayton Scott, commercial pilot in a pontoon equipped plane, flew over the entire course of the passenger plane Saturday, without finding a trace of the craft. Coastguard boats sent out from Port Townsend, midway between Seattle and Victoria, reported they were unable to find trace of the plane and that it apparently had not passed over that town.

Commander Price sighted a big oil spot on the water near Port Townsend, which he encircled for fifteen minutes without finding a trace of wreckage.

If the all-metal plane came down on the water, Commander Price said, it would not have been able to float more than two or three minutes. The ship was equipped with three motors, any two of which were capable of sustaining flight.

The naval commander suggested that the plane might have flown into the water in the fog.

"The fog was so heavy that it blended right in with the water," he explained. "Flying low, as a pilot is compelled to do in such weather, it would be only too easy for him to strike the water."

SEARCH PENINSULA.

SEATTLE, Wash., August 27 (Canadian Press). — The search for the British Columbia Airways monoplane, with four passenegrs and a crew of two, missing since Saturday morning when it encountered a dense fog on a trip from Victoria, B.C., to Seattle, turned to-day to the Olympic Peninsula south-west of Port Sablock, where the plane was reported seen by three women and nearly a dozen children.

They said the plane flew over the town about 11 a.m. on Saturday so close they could read the words painted on the fuselage.

Coastguard officials believed the pilot was heading for the clearings in Chimacum Valley, 12 miles south of Port Townsend, and south-west of Port Hadlock. A forced landing there, airmen said, probably would mean a crash with injuries to those on board.

Sank In Harbor.

PORT ANGLES, Wash., Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Information indicating that the missing British Columbia Airways plane, which is believed to have carried six persons to their death while en route from Victoria, B.C., to Seattle on Saturday, crashed in Washington Harbor, about thirty miles south of here, was received here to-day.

A fisherman, whose name was not learned, reported that a large monoplane circled low over his boat, the second time so low that he ducked to prevent being hit by the under carriage, and then crashed into the water some distance away. By the time he reached the spot, the plane had sank into the water. It happened at 11 a.m. on Saturday, he said.

Technical Men To Study Recommendations Offered By International Representatives

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press)—The conference of representatives of Canada, the United States, and Cuba, called in an effort to provide an equitable distribution of radio channels among the countries, adjourned its closed sessions yesterday to enable technical men to study the recommendations for action at a later meeting.

The members included the federal radio commissioners, Laurent Beaudry, first secretary of the Canadian legation; Commander C. F. Edwards, Canadian superintendent of radio; W. D. Terrell, chief of the radio division of the United States department of commerce; Captain C. C. Hopper, chief of communications of the navy department; William R. Vallance, assistant solicitor of the state department; and Rafael Altunaga, counsel of the Cuban embassy.

The three day conference dealt with the assignment of different services to different frequencies, Commissioner Pickard said. The group also considered suggestions of division of wave bands on an exclusive and shared basis.

Restaurant Sign On Cemetery Fence

On the Kingston--Toronto Highway just south of Welcome an enterprising Port Hope restaurant proprietor located his sign at a very queer point of advantage. If the location of the sign is a proof of his hospitality and a recommendation of his dishes it is feared that he will suffer a loss of business.

On the corner fence of a cemetery is located his sign and the following slogan is inscribed thereon: "Tired?—Hungry?—A good place to rest." Whether this means the restaurant or the cemetery many tourists have been wondering.

DISCRIMINATION IS NOT COMMON

Some Farmers, in Fact, Express Preference For Miner-Harvesters.

PAY PREVAILING WAGE.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Except in isolated cases, British harvesters have not been discriminated against by farmers in Manitoba who sought their services, according to the belief expressed here by government employment officials.

In some districts farmers are expressing preference for the British workers, especially in Saskatchewan, where the miner harvesters are being paid the prevailing rate of $4 per day.

On Saturday twenty three British harvsters protested to Winnipeg aldermen, claiming they were being discriminated against in the matter of wages.

ROTARY ENJOYS ENTERTAINING TALK AND MUSIC

TALKS ABOUT BUTTER.

Ric Roberts and Si Perkins of Ohians Orchestra Play For Club.

Rotary to-day at the Monday luncheon in the Empress Hotel accepted a unique program which left the members in the gayest mood. The change from the serious to the lighter vein was acceptable to all the members present, who had music injected into their lives by those apostles of the modern rhythm, Eric (Ric) Roberts and John (Si) Perkins, of the Ohioans, who held sway at Chemong Park.

Not to be neglected was James Matthews, of the Canadian Packing Company, who, in his classification talk, told of the dairy industry in Canada after an original but entertaining fashion.

Hailed with the song, "Ham and Eggs" and "The Big Butter and Egg Man," Jim took the floor. Sixty years ago, at the time of Confederation, he said, there were no creameries, but since then the industry has made more progress than any other industry. In 1875 there were no separators, and they used the whole milk system separating by the shallow pan and skimming off the cream, or the Coolie system, which was deep cans in which the milk was allowed to settle and then drained to the cream line. Both methods caused a lot of waste. The first separator was built by De Laval in 1876, and was introduced into Canada three years later, and since then there have been great strides in the industry. Quebec claims to have had the first creamery, but Teeswater, Ontario, also contests for the honor. Co-operative creameries at first were not received well by the farmers, but in Ontario there has been fairly good progress in the idea of the farmers shipping to the creamery from its surrounding territory. Creameries in the West recently have outstripped the East in production. Alberta manufacturing 23,000,000 pounds of butter a year, most of which is exported.

Mill Pond Claims Lad

John Smith, 17 Year Old Barnardo Boy, Is Drowning Victim.

DIVES FROM BRIDGE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MOUNT PLEASANT, Aug. 27. — John Smith, 17, was drowned in Best's Pond here yesterday morning about 10.45 while bathing with a number of other young men and boys. He dove off the bridge over the flood gate and it is thought that he struck his head on the bottom.

Only one of Smith's companions, a lad who was standing on the bank, noticed him come to the surface after the dive, waving his hands, but thought he was joking and made no outcry. When Smith did not come up again, however, William Kesle, one of the bathers, waded out and brought the body to shore, where the boys attempted artificial respiration to the best of their knowledge, but with no success. Dr. Earle of Omemee, who had been summoned, arrived soon after and pronounced the boy dead. Dr. H. A. Turner of Millbrook, coroner for the district, also attended and after examination gave permission for burial.

Smith was a Barnardo Home boy, and worked for Robert Ruth, Mount Pleasant, for three weeks, coming from Janetville, where he had worked on a farm for a man named Armstrong. Examination of his effects revealed that he is survived by his mother and a sister in England and they were at once notified by cable.

The pond where the fatility occurred has long been a favorite rendezvous for bathers. The last drowning there occurred long before the time of the present generation of swimmers, however, as it was about forty-five or fifty years ago. Samuel Endicott was the pond's victim at that time.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon with service at Elliott's Funeral Parlors, Millbrook, at 2.30. Interment will be in St. John's cemetery, Ida. The Rev. John Riddell of Grace Presbyterian Church, Millbrook, will conduct the service.

Cushendun and Stresemann Final Ministers To Arrive at French Capital.

CITY DECORATED.

German Minister's Mission To Deal Strictly With Signing of Pact.

PARIS, August 27 (Associated Press). — The stage is in readiness for the momentous ceremony to-day which will link for all time the names of Frank B. Kellogg and Aristide Briand with efforts to put an end to armed conflicts between nations.

Lord Cushendun, acting British Foreign Minister, and Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany arrived yesterday afternoon, completing the list of actors who will appear on the international stage and affix their signatures to a document renouncing war.

The arrival of Herr Stresemann, who was greeted with great deference at the North Station, brought the significance of the anti-war pact to the attention of the French people with great force. He is the first member of the German Cabinet to enter the city of Paris in 37 years. Two wars have been waged between France and Germany since that time, and despite improved relations between the former enemies, his presence here, it is thought, would still be inopportune had not Kellogg and Briand furnished a fitting occasion. Herr Stresemann himself expressed this sentiment, declaring:

"The fact that this pact is to be signed in Paris and that I have the honor of affixing to it the first signature in the name of Germany gives it symbolic value. It is a new step of great importance in bringing together France and Germany."

The German Foreign Minister's mission here, it is authoritatively learned, will be limited to the signature of the pact. There will be no talk of evacuation of the Rhineland or of a revision of reparations.

The desire is to bring out in all its force the moral effect of the pact against war and Herr Stresemann's presence is regarded as helping greatly to that end. This also is the reason why in a confirmed republic today's ceremony will take on the pomp of regal functions with ushers closely resembling Royal minions.

For the same reason that will limit Herr Stresemann's activities here, Premier Poincare and M. Briand will abstain from raising the question of debts or any other subject than world peace with Secretary Kellogg. It is pointed out that revision of reparations and allied questions require several months more of preparation, which means any eventual re-opening of the debt question must necessarily be deferred to the same extent.

Paris, which is already beflagged in honor of the occasion, burst into a profusion of light last evening when all public buildings were illuminated and people began to show lively interest.

Secretary Kellogg had a cordial twenty-minute talk with Premier Poincare during the afternoon, in the course of which every subject was taboo except personal amenities and peace. Mr. Kellogg gave a dinner last night at the Embassy to the signers of the pact with M. Poincare and the diplomatic representatives of all signatory countries as additional guests. The menu was distinctly French and as given out at the Embassy was absolutely "dry." Here Stresemann excused himself on the orders of his physician who accompanied him from Berlin.

The German Minister made a call on M. Briand soon after his arrival at the German Embassy. A considerable crowd assembled around the Foreign Office and cheered him lustily when he arrived and departed.

The 1928 renunciation of war treaty which is to be signed to-day condemns recourse to war for the solution of international controversies and the signatory nations renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another.

Treaty Ceremonies In French Capital Will Be Closely Akin To Regal Pomp

PARIS, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The pact for the renunciation of war will be signed here to-day with ceremonies closely akin to regal pomp.

Ushers in gala attire will precede and follow the procession of delegates, one of them carrying an ancient halberd such as king's minions used to do in royal processions.

As they arrive at the Quay D'Orsay the delegates will be received with strict compliance to the formal by Master of Ceremonies Becquade Fourniers, who though a stern Republican is said to be capable of outdoing any royal functionary in his important role.

The Master of Ceremonies will escort the delegates into the presence of Foreign Minister Briand in his private workroom. When all are assembled the ushers, dressed in blue jackets, red knickerbockrs and white stockings will lead the procession to the Clock Room in this order:

Kellogg of the United States; Cushendun of Britain; Briand of France; Stresemann of Germany; Hymans of Belgium; Laleski of Poland; Benes of Czecho Slovakia; Mackenzie King of Canada; Cosgrave of the Irish Free State; Manzoni of Italy; Uchida of Japan; MacLachlan of Australia and Smuts of South Africa. Death List Swelled To Seventeen In New York Subway Train Crash

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—One additional death yesterday brought to 17 the death list of the Times Square subway wreck of Friday when a heavily loaded car in a southgound Interborough Rapid Transit express train was derailed at a switch as it was leaving the station.

Of the injured, 21 were still in hospitals yesterday, 14 of them reported to be in serious condition.

A detail of police required to handle the crowd of 5,000, which gathered at the first funeral of wreck victims when services were held for a young woman and her six year old son, who died together when the ill-fated subway car tore itself in two against the tube structure.

"Man failure," was given as the cause of the accident by the transit commission. William Baldwin, I.R.T. maintenance man, who had been repairing the switch was held in $10,000 bail on a charge of homicide by negligence.

The transit commission in its first report said the switch had apparently been thrown either from Times Square Station signal tower in the tunnel or by manipulation of the valves close to the track by which the switch was controlled while the ninth car of the ten car train was passing over it.

PREMIER CLEMENCEAU EXCLUDES POLITICAL ROSES FROM GARDEN.

ST. VINCENT SUR JARD, France, Aug. 27 (Associated Press).—While former Premier Clemenceau was strolling in his beautiful flower garden here Saturday he was asked what comment he had to make on the Kellogg peace pact, the formal signing of which will take place in Paris to-day.

"I think Juliet is the best rose when it opens properly," was the ex-Premier's nonchalant reply.

"The Tiger" resisted all efforts to get him to change the subject.

"Politics are so strictly prohibited here," he said, "that I have excluded even the Georges Clemenceau and Raymond Poincare roses. It is true that I have one of those beautiful Madame Edouard Herriot roses, but women are not yet in politics in France.

"I have taken all the time I can give talking about flowers, so I cannot say anything more even about peace, if it is only that a little more humility and a great deal less haughty ambition in the world would do as much as peace pacts to prevent war."

THOUSANDS Save Themselves

You, too, can avoid this Scourge!

MANY thousands are correcting the evil of constipation. Many thousands are happily avoiding the scourge of habitual faulty elimination which paves the way to physical breakdown.

They have heeded the doctor's oft-repeated warning: You must have sufficient roughage in your diet—insufficient roughage is a chief cause of constipation. They eat Post's Bran Flakes regularly. It provides just that needed roughage which acts as a safe, efficient body regulator. We've made it good to eat. You'll delight in its appetizing flavor.

Make this two weeks' test and note the difference

Constipation must not be neglected. Start a two weeks' test now. Order a package of Post's Bran Flakes from your grocer.

Start by eating a dish of Post's Bran Flakes for breakfast. Eat it as a cereal, with milk or cream. You will like it as well as any cereal you ever tasted. Do this every day for two weeks. We predict you will find a real difference in the way you feel, and that you have been "regular" all the time. But don't stop at the end of two weeks. Eat Post's Bran Flakes every morning for health and regularity. Post's Bran Flakes is sold by all grocers, in a wax-wrapped package. Ready to eat.

It is dangerous to experiment with patent medicines and drug laxatives. They bring only temporary relief and may make matters much worse. Ordinary cases of constipation brought about by too little roughage in the diet should yield to Post's Bran Flakes. If your case is abnormal, don't experiment. Consult a competent physician.

LYRICS OF LIFE

(By Douglas Malloch)

THE RICH WITH AGE

All through our lives we go on gathering treasure,
The rich with age, how very rich we are!
What memories we have to give us pleasure,
Time cannot alter or misfortune mar.
A little house amid the grass or heather,
That was our father's house so long ago,
And there again we all sit down together,
Beside the sea, or in the firelight's glow.
Then our own house, with our own babes around us,
This, too, comes back, however long the years.
How many nights what phantom shapes have found us
And brought us smiles, smiles even through our tears.
The little happenings all happen over,
The little dramas once again unfold,
And bring a memory of even Rover
Waiting upon the doorstep as of old.
And later years bring later friends and neighbors,
We keep on gathering from day to day.
The lowest man amid his hardest labors
Looks back at life along a friendly way.
How poor the young, their path however pleasant,
With much to do and little to recall.
The rich with age have more than just the present,
They have the past, the loveliest thing of all.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE SNEEZE

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D., author of "The Springs of Human Action.")

Sneezing is one of the common reflexes. Other reflexes are winking, hiccoughing, yawning, gasping, sobbing, smiling, squirming, trembling, shivering, shuddering, wincing, grasping, etc.

The reflex is the simplest type of action capable for a creature endowed with a nervous system. It is an inborn reaction. The act is definite, quick and automatic.

The chief function of a reflex is to protect the organism from immediate harm. Winking protects the eye, coughing protects the lungs in getting rid of foreign substances and mucus that accumulates in colds and congestions. Grasping protects from a fall due to sudden losing of balance. The same is true of all definite reflexes. They are ready-made acts for ready-made situations.

Among the most useful true reflexes is sneezing which protects the nasal passage from foreign objects and from anything that is likely to poison or injure the person.

The stimulus for this reflect is not the same for all people. A woman of my acquaintance says that she cannot take a lump of sugar without sneezing. Pepper and snuff and other irritants almost universally induce sneezing.

Another peculiarity of sneezing as compared with other reflexes is that the response is also varied from person to person. Thus some people always sneeze three times if they sneeze at all. Athers have a different number as high as twelve or more. This may be primarily a matter of habit and the factor of anticipation.

Sneezing, like most of the reflexes, is a protective mechanism. Taken together the reflexes are the emergency kit of the physo-physical organism.

PAN DESECRATED.

London.—The children of London are deeply resentful over the indignity inflicted upon one of their dearest friends—the statute of Peter Pan, in Kensington Gardens, which, during the night, was tarred and feathered by unidentified vandals.

The youngsters who daily gather with their nurses and school teachers about the figure of James Barrie's immortal boy hero, wept on seeing the bronze body of their friend in uncouth tar and feather garb.

The statue was modeled in 1912 by the late Sir George Frampton, president of the Royal Society of Sculptors. Inspired by Barrie's story, "Peter Pan in Kensington Gardens," the statue is situated within a short distance of the round pond and broad walk which Barrie immortalized.

Among the host of mothers, nurses and teachers who take children to the statue to illustrate the famous story, is Lady Farren, who has become known as "Lady Pan" because each Saturday she meets a group of children in the shadow of the statue and tells them nature lore stories.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

POPPY, Sally's room-mate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

When Sanderson asks Akers to help Sally he says that he's through with her. Sanderson gives him a black eye. Poppy comes to tell Sanderson that the doctors say Sally will never walk again.

XI.—SALLY'S ADVICE.

Sanderson wandered back to his flat, where he found Mrs. Kiff in the midst of a vigorous "turn-out" of his sitting-room. She stared when he walked in; it was seldom that Sanderson put in an appearance during the day.

"I hope as that you've not come in for lunch, sir," she said severely. "It's my turning-out day and you can see for yourself what a mess the place is in."

Sanderson stood in the doorway regarding her helplessly.

"I don't know what I've come in for," he said grimly. "Anyway, I can go out again."

"It's a nice day for a walk," Mrs. Kik said uncompromisingly. "A nice day for a breath of the country fields."

Sanderson hesitated, looking at her.

"Do you like the country, Mrs. Kiff?"

"Like it!" Mrs. Kiff sniffed inelegantly. "It's the only thing in life that I do like," she told him. "Bricks and mortar are all right in their way and my bread-and-butter's here, but some day—if I can ever save enough—good-bye to London for me. A cottage in the country, and a few chickens, and a patch of garden where you can grow a cabbage——" She stopped her eloquence abruptly, looking a trifle ashamed. "Well, we all has our private dreams," she added, bridling a little.

Sanderson shut the open door, and came a step further into the room.

"How would you like a job in the country, Mrs. Kiff?" he asked.

She looked at him suspiciously.

"What sort of a job?" she inquired.

Sanderson shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, well, looking after a cottage, and waiting on a—well, on someone who is not very strong, with me down for week-ends, perhaps."

"What part of the country?" she demanded.

"Oh, anywhere! I haven's thought about it yet. "It's just an idea of mine. There you are! I make you the offer. Twenty-five shillings a week, and everything found. You can have the chickens and the cabbage-patch, too, if you like, as long as you don't expect me to look after them."

Mrs. Kiff's keen eyes suddenly misted over as if with tears.

"You're making fun of me, sir," she said, and her voice was quite changed; it sounded somehow young, almost like a girl's.

"No, on my honor," Sanderson answered.

Mrs. Kiff fixed him with solemn eyes in which one could almost see the shuttle of thought passing to and fro as she weighed up the pros and cons of this amazing offer. Then suddenly she picked up her duster which had fallen to the ground, and resumed her vigorous polishing.

"You find the cottage, sir," she said practically. "Find the cottage first, and then we'll come down to hard tacks."

"You're a brick, Mrs. Kiff," he said gruffly.

The day following her interview with Philip Sanderson, Poppy Sladen called to see Sally. As she had heard nothing more, she was confident that things had been satisfactorily fixed up, and that her responsibility with regard to her friend was at an end.

It was always easy for Poppy to believe the thing she wanted to believe. She felt almost happy as she walked through the streets to the hospital. The sun was shining, and she was wearing a new hat, the result of careful pinching and saving over the matter of food, and last night she had met a new admirer at the cafe where she was engaged to exploit the boldness of her eyes and the slenderness of her legs.

Certainly he was elderly, red-faced, and not at all attractive, but he had not minded paying for Cliquot, and at parting he had expressed the earnest desire to see her again. So Poppy felt that her star was in the ascendant until she reached the small private ward wherein Sally lay at the end of the highly-polished passage, and met her friend's antagonistic gaze.

"Hallo!" said Poppy, not very happily. She knew Sally well enough to know that the sullen look in her eyes boded no good, and she felt uncomfortably aware of her new hat.

"So you've managed to find your way here at last, have you?" was Sally's greeting. "I wonder how you'd like it, to be left all day by yourself. Not a soul to speak to except a pie-faced nurse who comes and rams filthy medicine down your throat every half-hour, or a fool of a doctor who pinches and pummels you till you could scream."

"Hasn't Philip Sanderson been?" she asked.

"He came, but I wouldn't see him," Sally answered. "If you think I want that lanky, miserable creature hanging around me, you're mistaken."

Poppy flushed.

"What do you want, then?" she asked bluntly.

Sally shut her eyes, perhaps to hide the tears of weak unhappiness that sprang to them unbidden.

"I want to die," she said tersely.

There was a tragic silence, then Poppy dragged up a chair and sat down.

"Look here, my girl," she said in her most business-like manner, "it's time you stopped fooling, and listened to common sense. I'm sorry all this has happened, you know that, but it's not my fault, and I can't help it, can I? The thing you've got to do is to be sensible, and make those who can help it pay for the damage."

"What do you mean?" Sally's blue eyes opened; all wet they were, and sorrowful. She looked like a helpless child at that moment, instead of the shrewd woman of the world Poppy Sladen knew her to be.

"I mean Philip Sanderson," Poppy said firmly.

"I don't want him. I hate him."

"If you gild a pill over it's not so bad," Poppy declared sententiously. "Besides, if you send him about his business, what are you going to do when you come out of here? I can't keep you, can I?"

"I don't want anyone to keep me, I want to die."

"Then you're a fool," Poppy said bluntly. "We do know the worst of this world, but we don't know what is coming to us in the next." She rose to her feet. "Well, you think it over."

"You're not going already?" Sally asked hurriedly. "Oh, don't go yet. I shall have to lie here for hours and hours by myself—for all the rest of the day. Don't go yet, Poppy, there's a dear."

Poppy hesitated. Much as she loathed sickness and hospitals, she was sufficiently kind-hearted to spend the rest of the day with Sally, but she was shrewd enough to see that loneliness and fear of the future was probably the only thing to drive her to make friends with Philip Sanderson, so she kept her face averted as she carefully powdered her already flour-white cheeks and answered:

"Can't waste any more time now, my chicken. I've got to look after Number One. I'll come again tomorrow." She gave Sally's slender hand a remorseful squeeze as it lay on the cotton quilt.

"Don't you be a little idiot," she counselled kindly, and was gone.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

TUESDAY, AUGUST 28, 1928.

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

(Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Until late to-day adverse stars are strong in their influence, according to astrology. It is well to be conservative.

The rule may incline to vacillation and uncertainty of action as well as opinion. It is a first-rate sway under which to change votes.

It is easy to precipitate a quarrel while this configuration prevails. Arguments should be avoided, especially with business or domestic partners.

This is a most unfavorable sway for dealing with banks or for making friends with one's creditors. Money matters are subject to sinister influences.

New fortunes are to be made in the coming year when marvellous opportunities are to come to Americans.

There is a good sign for recent college graduates and, in the field of aviation business openings will be numerous, it is foretold.

In other words, airplanes will offer as important opportunities to build new business concerns as automobiles have realized in the last few years, the seers foretell, for Uranus presages marvellous growth of trade.

The evening should be favorable to educators and other leaders of thought. It is an auspicious rule for those who speak over the radio.

It should be lucky to make new acquaintances of persons of opposite sex, while this configuration prevails.

Light and witty conversation is supposed to be spontaneous under this sway of the stars, which enables women to make a good impression on strangers.

September may be a month of many misfortunes on the planet Earth, according to astrologers who read perils of war in Europe. Roumania, Russia, Bulgaria and Turkey may be affected.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be cautious in love affairs under this direction of the stars. The year may be rather an anxious one. These subjects of Virgo are usually too much interested in their friends' love affairs and sometimes cause trouble.

Children born on this day have the augury of success in life. These subjects of the middle sign of the Earth tripilicity are usually fine scholars and are often musicians. Girls are especially fastidious in dress.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Bed-time Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S MAGIC GARDEN

Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard R. Garis)

"Good morning, Uncle Wiggily!" called a voice in front of the rabbit gentleman's hollow stump bugalow one day.

"Oh, good morning, Mrs. Toad!" answered Mr. Longears. "And how did you leave Old Toad when you came out to do your shopping?"

"I left Old Toad bouncing up and down in the jumpity jump you made for him, thank you," said the toad lady.

"And was he happy?" Uncle Wiggily wanted to know, for he, himself, was very happy, as you might be sure by looking at his pink, twinkling nose.

"As happy as one can expect," was the reply. "Of course Old Toad can no longer croak, nor catch flies with his long, sticky tongue. But I can do both these thinks for him.

And since you made him the jumpity jump with rubber strings, so he can bounce up and down as he sits in it, that is almost as good as he jumped. Oh, he is very happy.

"I am glad to hear that," spoke Mr. Longears, and he made up his mind that when he went out adventuring he would call on Old Toad and pass the time of day, as the saying is.

Old Toad was a very ancient hopper gentleman who, as I have told you in other stories, grew so aged that he lost his voice for croaking and could no longer catch flies with his long sticky tongue, as all toads do. For a time, however, Old Toad could hop, but at last rheumatism put a stop to this fun and Old Toad was very unhappy until Uncle Wiggily, having seen Baby Bunty bouncing a rubber ball with an elestic cord on it, had an idea. Then the bunny made the jumpity jump for old Toad.

"Well, how are you?" asked Mr.

Longears a little later as he hopped past where Old Toad lived in a hole under a big rock.

"Oh, I'm fine," whispered the ancient jumper who could no longer croak. "Look at the beautiful garden I have," and, sitting in the jumpity jump and bouncing up and down on the rubber cords, Old Toad pointed to a patch of weeds in front of his home.

"That is my flower garden," whispered Old Toad, waving a paw at the bunch of weeds. There was burdock and plantain, pig weed and nettles growing in the hard, sun baked earth. "I know some toads would not call that much of a garden" went on the ancient hopper, but it is all I have, so I make the best of it and pretend that the weeds are roses and honeysuckles and lilies and pansies and all manner of flowers. I can shut my eyes and even pretend to smell the perfume. Ah!"

"Dear me!" said Uncle Wiggily to himself. "This is too bad. Here is Old Toad who can no longer hop about, croak or catch flies with his long, sticky tongue, and yet he is happier over a make believe garden of weeds than some folks are over hundreds of flowers. I wish I could put some real blossoms in his garden."

But when Mr. Longears looked at the hard, baked soil and saw how thick the weeds were and when he thought how late in the summer season it was, the rabbit knew that no real flowers would ever grow that year.

"Well, you certainly have a fine garden," said the rabbit, who was pretending as hard as was Old Toad. "My! My! Smell those roses!"

"Aren't they wonderful?" whispered Old Toad. "I tell you I'm mighty lucky! And I'll soon be having chrysanthemums, I guess."

He laughed as best he could, and Uncle Wiggily chuckled as he said: "It wouldn't surprise me a bit."

But when the rabbit hopped on, after leaving Old Toad a few gum drops to cheer him, Mr. Longears thought and thought:

"How can I make some flowers grow for Old Toad?" And then, as Mr. Longears saw something down the Woodland path he gave a shout of joy and said: "Ha! I have it! I will make a magic garden for Old Toad. Yes, he shall have a magic garden!"

Mr. Longears hopped toward a bunch of something he had seen Mrs. Twistytail, the lady pig toss out of her window. The rabbit saw a flash of red, blue, yellow, purple and pink.

"That will be just what I need to make a wonderful magic garden," chuckled the bunny uncle. "I'll surprise Old Toad."

And how this was brought about you shall hear in the next story when, if the taxicab doesn't turn over on its back and spin its wheels in the air like an egg beater, I'm going to tell you about Uncle Wiggily and the queer flowers.

"BOBBY" STEWART IS DEAD.

For fifty-one years Robert Stewart was a druggist at Norwood. He was a quiet, unassuming little man, rather reclusive and eccentric, at least as such we respectfully remember him, a contemporary of the late Dr. Ford and of those older villagers, Pearce, Buck, O'Reilly, and others, who in recent years had reached the venerable age of old-timers.

"Bobby" Stewart had been one of the few remaining links with the citizenship of the older Norwoods extending back to the early seventies. Peterboro street had known his several ships for a long life-time. A few years ago he moved to a farm at Blairton where he lived alone. Three weeks ago he went to Toronto, where he died suddenly on Friday. Years spent in a quiet eddy of life and then a sudden sweep out into the crowded stream through the mists of eternity!

THE TORONTO EXHIBITION.

If Toronto's arrogation of national auspices for its Fall Fair were not so characteristic of the city's deep-seated selfishness and its acquisitiveness, the rest of the country might ungrudgingly acknowledge the abundant actuality of the title Canadian National Exhibition.

The Toronto Fair can never be a Canadian national exhibition unless it has the unqualified support of national sentiment, and that affection will never be whole-hearted while the handsome surpluses of the Toronto Exhibition are annually poured into the Toronto municipal treasury.

In spite of such reservations hosts of us have pleasant memories of the Toronto Exhibition, especially the first impressions of that place of wonders, whose generous gratuities, though they were only manufacturers' samples, burdened us at the end of a day of keen foraging.

We have outgrown the allure of samples, but the appeal of the "Ex" remains, not in all its pristine variety, probably because the sense of marvel and romance dims within us, but nevertheless drawing us back from time to time, some of us annually perhaps, faithful regulars paying toll to Toronto's enterprise and showmanship.

Would that this year's trip were that first one when we were very young.

WHO CAN EVER FORGET?

Ten years ago to-day there was in progress one of the important battles of the Great War, a battle in which the Canadian corps led the van. It was the prelude to the famous Diocourt Queant line batter in which the corps crushed a boasted defence and hastened the enemy's retirement, which it had started with the smashing blow at Amiens on August 8.

In the batter which opened ten years ago yesterday morning, and lasted ten days, the Canadian corps lost nearly 2,000 killed and missing and had 8,000 men wounded. It was a heavy list, high officers admitted, but they considered the achievement in the face of terrific odds.

In all that last wonderful period of the war from August 8 to November 11, the Canadians suffered 46,000 casualties, including 7,000 killed in action and nearly 3,000 missing.

It is Peterborough's sons of this glorious army that the war memorial is designed to honor. It will perpetuate their names and deeds for all time. It will indicate to rising generations and to visitors that the people who gave so generously during the great struggle that Peterborough was known far and wide for its patriotic efforts have not forgotten.

Who can ever forget, who lived through those stirring days when the khaki ranks marched to C.P.R. or C.N.R. stations, marched out to war where the men from Peterborough acquitted themselves so nobly.

The erection of the memorial is a civic duty, but one which requires the wholehearted support of every individual citizen.

A LESSON FROM TUNNEY.

So much has been written about Gene Tunney and his phenomenal success that the novelty of it all must soon wear off, exactly as he desires it should. But one little homily may be pointed out for aspiring youth who remember that this United States marine returned from the war like millions of other soldiers, out of money and out of work.

In the beginning Tunney had only such intangibles as personality and determination, and of course physique.

In his reading he may see those lines:

Self-reverence, self-knowledge, self-control,
These three alone lead life to sovereign power.

He had or he gained all three, and everything else was added to them. He had will power to lay and hold his course and he was naturally a gentleman, with a gentleman's sensitiveness and reticences. He was a serenely determined young man and a likeable one. It was his gentlemanly, attractive qualities that won the influential friends, bankers, editors, clergymen, manufacturers, college presidents and so on. The limelight of publicity revealed him to the world, and the attachment of the U.S. Marine Corps was a fillip to his reputation.

Gene Tunney found many men eager to help him on his way up, especially when he had emerged from obscurity clean, idealistic, ambitious; just as other champions had found many men of a different kind ready to pull them down.

But, a young man doesn't have to be a champion to choose the right road and the right crowd!

OSHAWA'S EXPANSION.

The recent 112-page "Greater Oshawa Edition" of the Oshawa Daily Times is an editorial and typographical achievement of which the publishers, Charles M. Mundy and A. R. Alloway, have every reason to be proud.

The purpose of this encyclopaedic number is to emphasize at home and to broadcast as far as it circulates the rapid constructive expansion of the motor city and Central Ontario. Not that Oshawa needs much press propaganda. The automobile trade and its patrons are ubiquitous and indefatigable reporters of Oshawa's progress and its occasional slumps, but the Times has demonstrated in an impressively graphic and thorough survey of the development of its community that it has been alert to its own local obligations and opportunities, and has not lagged behind the accelerating pace that has been set and maintained by its first citizen, Mr. R. S. McLaughlin.

The Times claims a population of 25,000 for Oshawa, and the city's present momentum shows no signs of slackening. Testimonies from some of its manufacturers refer to their satisfaction with the city's cheap power rates, a condition which Peterborough out of the fatuous fullness of its heart largely helped to create by insisting upon sharing local water powers with its necessitous neighbours. Ratepayers of Peterborough may find some satisfaction in the very agreeable news that a few local investors have done very well indeed—in Oshawa real estate.

NEWSPAPER INDEPENDENCE.

Quoting the Brántford Expositor's remark that "perhaps the most outstanding feature of the record of the press of Canada in the past few years, particularly since the days of the Great War, has been the general abandonment of a purely partisanship attitude," the Toronto Globe says that this is a statement the truth of which is evident and adds that there can be no argument as to the national benefit that is bound to result from the change. The Globe also points out that one disposition in places where only one paper is published is either be mute on public questions or to "play up what pays"—in other words, to serve the predominant local interest. Fortunately, it adds, the pussyfooting press monopolist has so far gained no great hold.

One of the chief problems of an independent newspaper—such as the Border Cities Star—is to praise or criticize men or actions without laying itself open to the charge of partisanship. If a Conservative be praised for something, there are hide-bound Liberals who instantly label the paper a Tory organ. If something done by Liberalism merits approval in the editorial columns or is referred to in the news columns, there are Conservatives just as ready to say that the paper has gone over to the Liberal party lock, stock and barrel.

So far as the Star is concerned, this paper has at one time or another been accused of speaking for the Conservative party, for the Liberal party and for the Progressive party, when the fact of the matter is that it speaks for none. It has no party allegiances. It publishes all the news without fear or favor. It is fair to all sides. It will praise or criticize—it has always praised or criticized—as it sees fit, and quite without regard to the party affiliations of the man or interest involved. The Star refuses to be mute in questions of public interest, and it has never proceeded nor will ever proceed on the theory of "playing up what pays."—Border Cities Star.

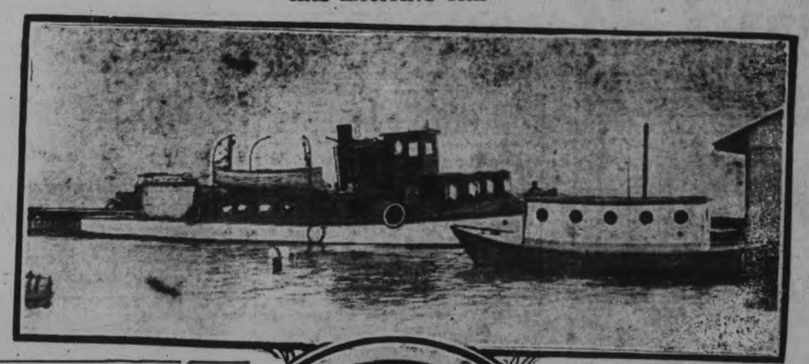
SCIENCE MAY END WAR.

That London is vulnerable to attack from the air and that defence planes have not yet reached a sufficient margin of speed to overcome possible bombers, was the practical result of the recent spectacular air manoeuvres that, despatches say, failed to create any very large measure of interest among the teeming millions of the metropolis. What happened, however, recalled the sinister and significant truth of the statement that the real war menace to the world does not come from armies and navies, but from the workshops and the laboratories maintained by the great chemical industrial corporations. So evident has this become that the proposal has been actually advanced to end further research work directed towards the development of still deadlier poison gases than those already discovered. Impossible as this would probably prove, the fact that the suggestion has been brought forward indicates how this side of modern warfare is gripping the popular imagination. The effect has also been heightened by the extraordinary advances in chemical science and the movement for the closer linking up of such vast organizations as the Imperial Chemical Industries of Great Britain and the Interessengemeinschaft of Germany.

The crux of the position is that these great instruments of chemical research, no matter how inocuous their activities may be in time of peace, can be instantly turned to war purposes whenever that is demanded. In this connection, too, the movement towards international combinations becomes of supreme importance. Recent reports of the great British and German organizations show that they have pooled their laboratory resources. Trade secrets have become the common property of the joint industry. Nor is the research work confined to their own particular staffs. Even universities are enlisted in order to perfect dyes, alloys, lacquers and hundreds of synthetic substitutes for wood, metal and cloth. While exploring for attributes and substances that can be used for the advantage of mankind, it is impossible to avoid discoveries that spell injury and destruction to the human race, the valuable and harmful elements cannot be separated without suspending research itself. Though it is evident from the British report that the dominating spirits of these gigantic combinations recognize their social responsibilities, that consciousness may not descend to their successors. Yet more and more are individual men and women of all ranks and classes becoming dependent on the chemical laboratories.

Because of this, Lord Melchett, better and more widely known as Sir Alfred Mond, of nickel fame, regards the chemical combinations of the present day in the light of public utilities rather than profit-making enterprises. To Socialists they wear the more dubious aspect of mechanisms of the capitalistic exploitation of science. Notwithstanding the financial depression of 1926, the British chemical trust paid 8 per cent. on its ordinary shares and 7 on its preferred. Its German affinity paid 12 per cent. on its outstanding shares. But if monopolies aim to survive, they must be governed by high principles, Lord Melchett holds. They should beware of the perils behind unenlightened exploitation of science and concentration of capital. In this lining up of European chemical monopolies for control of world markets some will see nothing but a provocation to war. But the men guiding the present course of British and German industrial science seem more inclined to reach agreements that will prevent war than are the statesmen. Sir Alfred Mond himself organized his British trust after the Labor Government of the time had refused to aid him to arrive at an agreement with the German combination. Scientific industrial leaders may, indeed, be the pioneers of a new industrial day that will discard war as an anachronism and an absurdity.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

HAS EXCITING TRIP



Capt. Albert McKenney, who has been piloting boats on Lake Nipissing for 45 seasons, last week-end experienced one of the most thrilling periods of his life. The excitement started last Thursday when he rescued a man from drowning at the North Bay wharf. Later Thursday one of the pipes on his boat, Miami Beach, broke and burned his engineer. After the accident, Capt. McKenney proceeded to pick up a fishing party, but a storm forced them to seek shelter. The next day they started out again, being towed by two smaller boats, but were forced to give up. Some of the party were taken to North Bay and Capt. McKenney took food to those still on the boat and then returned Saturday with another boat and towed them to their destination. Then Sunday evening he saved a boy who fell in the water while playing on the wharf at North Bay.

A Thought

"COVERED UP"

This article is not intended for you. This pointed editorial is placed here for your neighbor to read, and should be not considered as relating to you, or your interest, but it will hit the other fellow and hit him hard.

Your next-door neighbor does so many things contrary to reason. He is the most ridiculous fellow in town, the most absurd actor in the city.

True, he does not salt his ice cream, nor does he search for his likeness in the back of a looking-glass, but, for downright foolishness he is the limit.

He insists on eating certain foodstuffs that he knows will harm his health. He spends more money than he can afford to. He hangs out so late at night that the next day he is not worth his office space. He indulges himself in so many ways, irrespective of the certain consequences, and you know, and everybody knows, that he is making some very grave mistakes.

But the strangest thing in all this is that this man you have in mind is not aware that "you" know, and that "everybody" knows what a laughing stock he is making of himself.

He thinks that he is fooling "you" and "everybody," but he is fooling only himself.

Many folks are poking fun at him and joking about his mistakes, but he goes right on making his mistakes and thinking he is covering them up, but "you" know and "everybody" knows the way he is wasting his opportunties, his health, and his money, and doing a lot more fool things that do not pay.

And the unfortunate part of all this is that you cannot go to him and tell him what a monkey he is making of himself, for this friend or acquaintance reserves the right to tell you to go to the hot spot or mind your own business.

If you do succeed in getting an attentive audience and then give this man some good advice, he will probably turn the table on you and tell you a few things about yourself that you have always felt were pretty well covered up.

The trouble with us humans is that we are very much like the ostrich who sticks his head in the sand and considers himself "covered up."

We are all open to more censure or more ridicule than we think we are. Few are exempt from the searching eye of the searchers and all are exposed to treacherous tongue of the gossip, and this means that our next-door neighbor should watch his step, but personally we are perfectly safe. Of course we are.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God. Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness" sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you and persecute you, and small say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.—Matt. 5: 3-11.

Our Father, we adore Thee as the centre of all pure spirits and we pray Thee to make us like unto Thyself. May our minds think pure thoughts. May our very lives be pure because Thou art pure.

Cleanse us and sanctify us, and constantly save us, our Father, lest we should break down under the wear and tear of the world and fall beneath temptations that without Thy purity and strength we could never resist. In Jesus' name. Amen.

The United States demand for millfeed continued good and a moderate amount of business was done. The domestic trade was fair and the undertone firm. Standard grades of rolled oats were quiet and firm.

An active business was transacted in all grades of eggs and values were steady. The receipts Saturday were 963 cases.

Prices fo rall qualities of butter were firmly maintained under a good demand. The receipts were 5,408 packages.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—Uneasiness over the relative low level of wheat prices compared to other commodities, especially corn, stimulated wheat buying Saturday, and helped to lift values. Advices were also current that frosts in Canada had been renewed overnight, and that more unwelcome cool weather was ahead on the Canadian Prairies.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm, ⅝c to 1c net higher, with corn showing ⅛ to 1⅜c advance; oats ⅛ to ⅞c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 17c. At first, the wheat market here tended downward, influenced by reports of favorable weather for the Canadian harvest and by much lower Liverpool quotations that expected any aggressive prussure to sell, however, was notably absent, and with strength developing in corn prices, the Chicago wheat market soon turned upgrade. Previous speculative sellers of wheat made haste to even up accounts for the week-end, especially as offerings proved to be light as the market went higher.

Topmost prices of the day were obtained for wheat just before the market closed. In addition to frost reports from Canada, word was at hand late in the day that rain had been interfering with harvest operations in Alberta province. Meanwhile, traders virtually ignored announcement that export demand Saturday for wheat from North America had been disappointing, and that 200,000 bushels of wheat had been sold to go into store here.

An outstanding feature Saturday in the grain trade as a whole was the significance attached to a brief statement by one of the largest operators here. He said that there appeared to be an opinion liberal deliveries of corn in Chicago would be witnessed on September 1, but that he was selling corn freely at premiums up to 15c a bushel over the September market price, and that with this condition prevailing, the possibility even of deliveries does not exist.

Under such circumstances, September delivery of corn scored a rapid advance. Deferred deliveries representing corn still in the fields and not to be harvested until after September were easier early, but raillied with September. Arrivals of corn in Chicago Saturday were of fair volume, totaling 106 cars. Official figures given out after close showed that the open interest in the September delivery of corn has diminished only moderately during the week, being now 29,916,000 bushels, against 33,325,000 bushels a week ago.

Oats prices were influence somewhat by the fact that the movement of oats has fallen off to some extent.

For the most part, provisions held within rather narrow limits.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Blue and corn color shaded taffeta was used for this picturesque frock, with solid colored blue used for the lining of skirt and collar.

(By Mary Marshall)

Now that both sides of the skirts of many of the new evening frocks show quite distinctly there is need again of skirt linings. And assuredly the frock with skirt that sags at the back providing a background for the legs and ankles is to be an important fashion for some months to come.

But some of these sagging skirts are not lined. I saw a new frock of chiffon velvet to-day with the Cut in here ..... skirt turned up with a narrow hem and left unlined although the wrong side was to be seen for five or six inches where the skirt hiked up in the front.

Some of the new velvet frocks are lined or rather deeply faced with chiffon to match—sometimes in taffeta and sometimes in light metallic cloth that gives a silver lining to skirt and sometimes to sleeves and bertha as well. The sketch shows bertha and hem with scalloped edge. It is a fact you have perhaps noted that in this cubistic age the curved line of the scallop has been used repeatedly in the new frocks and coats for autumn.

You cannot think about new evening frocks for autumn and winter without considering the possibilities of tulle, which has been used to some extent all summer and has been used generously in the most recent collections. It is used gathered and puffed for the more bouffant types and in flat folds and tiers for the straighter silhouettes.

In the so-called street shades—brown and darker blue and cherry red—tulle proves to have a lightness and "esprit" that few other materials possess in these darker tones.

Darker blue especially may be worn effectively for evening in tulle—while in other fabrics it seems too heavy for evening.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

OUR MOTHERS certainly have the most important place in the world to fill, don't you think so? Most men believe that they are "supporting" their wives and this gives them a dominating attitude and to the women a humble gratefulness. The man does, of course, support his wife in the way that an employer supports his employees, by providing for them. If a married man loses his wife, he just begins to realize how much more he has to pay to keep his home in shape than he ever paid his wife. The work may be done equally as well, but is there the same interest in the home when mother is gone? Certainly not—then let us more than "support" our mother—let us give her co-operation as well as our daily love. It is partly this labor of love—home-keeping—with all it means of family life and motherhood, which brings down the recognition of the value of woman's work outside the home.

• • • • • • •

In business life a woman is expected to work for less than a man—in teaching, in the store, or office. There is some justice in this, too, where the man assumes a heavier part of the load, and does things which could not be asked of a woman, or if a man has spent longer in preparation for the job and is more fitted for it; but it is very often unjust, especially if the woman is as capable and does as good work—and often she does better—as the man.

• • • • • • •

Men beginning to realize, I think, that housekeeping is no slouch of a job. It requires brains and experience and much labor. Besides, this, the average homemaker must put into it much effort, of heart and soul and after hours, which money could not buy. Often I have heard the exclamation, "Oh, if you had followed me all day." She tries to be at her best when the husband and family arrive home at night, but often she would rather crawl into bed than get dinner or try to be cheerful during the meal. The dignity of home-keeping, and its inestimable value and necessity as a background for family life should receive greater recognition, else the home life—the basis of national welfare and human welfare—will go on the rocks. Women will not forever be the patient dumb animals who are willing to throw their heart and soul into a work which is not appreciated—especially in this age when she is so capable of holding a high place in the business world.

Even though you have a refrigerator, isn't it desperate hard to keep the butter from becoming terribly oily? I know I hate to sit down to a meal, when the butter is weeping bitter tears during these suffocating days. If you will buy a tin box about ten inches square without a lid, and a small quantity of silver sand and put it into the box covered with half a pint of cold water, you will have a good refgrigerator for your butter. When the sand has absorbed the water place your butter on top of it, either in paper or a dish.

No longer must the mackintosh present a dull appearance! Raincoats are offered now of rubberized crepe de chine in striking plaids trimmed with plain complementary colors and having a plaid scarf of the same material to match, or of single tones trimmed in plaids. They will bring color to the cloudiest day. There is also an exquisite quality of velvet which has been waterproofed, so that it may be worn as an evening wrap in rainy weather. This velvet will not spot when rained upon.

I wonder how many pounds, or might it be tons, of face powder was used in Peterborough last year? When a secret of the British women's toilet table was revealed, it was found that last year the women of England, Scotland and Wales bought more than 170 tons of German face powder, rouge, lipsticks and other toilet preparations. A well-known dealer said that the earnest researches of German chemists are constantly devoted to the alchemy of the toilet table. Great progress has been made in the permanent of lipstick, but up to the present time, none has been invented which can be guaranteed not to come off on table napkins.

It's great, isn't it, to be away for a while from all your business associates? There is one girl who works in a department store—once again I must say, I can't say which—and all year she looks after customers from sixteen to sixty who come in to buy flapper dresses. And while she searches for a frock that will make her customer look a toothpick, she hears them talking about dieting and their daily dozens, and she gets rather sick of it all. Eventually comes her turn for vacation, and she spends two wonderful weeks at camp. Upon returning to the store, she is asked by her fellow-employees if she had enjoyed her vacation, and promptly replies: "I liked it fine. I was out in the country where men are still men and women are deep chested."

BUTTER SCOTCH COOKIES

(Contributed by Mrs. J. W. Perrin, Cavan.)

2 eggs;
2 cups brown sugar;
½ cup butter;
3½ cups flour;
1 teaspoon soda;
1 teaspoon cream of tartar.

Method—Beat eggs, add sugar and butter, which have been previously melted. Add flour, soda cream of tartar sifted together; let stand over-night in a loaf form. Slice and bake in a hot oven.

DRY FASTER.

Stockings and socks will dry much more quickly if after washing, rinsing and wringing, you run your hand through them all the way to the toe and thoroughly separate them.

The best iron smoother is an old telephone book or magazine, tearing off the sheets as they become soiled or torn. A broken phonograph record makes an excellent iron smoother. Just run the iron over it.

A good and cheap home-made furniture polish is made by mixing together ½ pint of turpentine, ½ pint of vinegar and ½ pint of linseed oil.

A wooden box outside the kitchen door, with a lid on hinges is a splendid receptacle for the milk bottle until ready to take it in.

A handy funnel for filling salt and pepper boxes, etc., can be quickly made by using the corner of an envelope cutting off a small part of the tip.

MARION'S MAIL.

"Dear Marion:

You have given advice on so many matters that I begin to think you know almost everything. I enjoy reading your columns very much, and never miss them, so I know I shall see your reply to this when you find time to answer.

My shoulder blades are very prominent, although my face is full enough. They seem to stick out, and make sharp corners through my dresses. I wonder if you can tell me how to correct this, or how to cover it up?

Yours sincerely,
KATHERINE."

I don't know everything, Katherine, or even very much, but I know where to find out most things people may ask about. In the newspaper game we have many sources of information about which I may tell you sometime in an expansive moment.

You can't decrease the size of the shoulder blades, but you may cover them up with flesh, rounding them out gracefully. To do this you must get at least eight hours of sleep, spend as much time as possible in the open air, and eat fattening foods. If, as you say, your face is full enough now, you might keep this down by massage.

Dear Marion:

I came to you a little while ago with a problem which you solved in a lovely way—perhaps you remember? I really never did believe in newspaper advisers before, but you have surely converted me. Your little personal word of cheer and help just pulled me out of a 'slump,'—but here I am again. This time I have confidence that you will be able to tell me aright what to do.

About four months ago I feel in love with a boy who reciprocated my advances. At his vacation he had a reconciliation with his former sweetheart, and I hear they will be married soon. We (or I at least) had planned a little home in the south end of the city, and I had even picked out what kind of furniture I would to have in it. For a month I hoped he would have a change of heart—but there has been no word from him. He has repulsed every advance I have made. I feel I must have him, for life is not worth living without him. How can I win him? What can I do? Please help me.

JUDY."

These are the letters that give me a heartache, Judy, just as your wonderful poetry must have picked the heart-strings of many. Now I know that your lovely little poem had its origin deep in your own heart. But don't you know, girl and boy, that when the person you love doesn't love you in return, but someone else, you simply can't do anything but bear it? Love cannot be compelled, especially when there is another sweetheart to complicate matters.

If I had the magic to help you, Judy, believe me, I WOULD. Don't you suppose I know the pain of it? And the despair and sometimes the desperate, helpless anger of it? . . .

But there is no cure but time. You can help time along by putting yourself in a new environment, having a complete change of surroundings, getting away from old reminders. You can also help time do his work by telling yourself you will live to be GLAD it happened. For you will find another boy to love, who will love you in return, and adore the house and furniture you choose for it, and help make a sweet home of it. And you will be glad you waited, glad you HAD to wait.

You may not believe this now, but it's true. We don't find our lifemates so easily.

Don't despair; you will find as I have said that joy will seem all the sweeter for this sorrow.

TRAVEL-LOG.

OUT-OF-DOORS IN BARCELONA.

You can spend your time in Barcelona, Spain, visiting the noble Gothic cathedral with its distinctive Catalonian characteristics, of the ancient palace of the Gothic kings and the Archives of Aragon, or wander about seeing exquisite archways, facades and doorways; but if you are wise, you will believe at the outset that the chief charm of Barcelona lies out-of-doors. Boulevards and avenues, parks and gardens blossoming in every corner of the old city and the streets teeming with life—these are the fascination of Barcelona. Here you will pass a group of pirate-looking Spanish sailors, with their bare feet in sandals, girdles with bright red sashes and gay handkerchiefs. There you will see public porters still wearing the "Liberty Cap" of the French Revolution. Yonder will be the open-air cafes and colorful stores, and then on the Rambla, that broad and beautiful avenue which cuts through the old city down to the quays, you will find the flower market. Here, every morning, the stands are filled with fresh violets, roses, carnations, lilies, herbs, fruits, and you walk through the finest garden street in the world.

"FAIRY FEET."

By Dorothy Douglas.

The little courtyard in the Washington Square district was flooded with music—music so beautiful, so inspiring and so wonderfully modulated as to make even the most grumpy of residents the happier for being within hearing distance.

In the studio just above, a young girl swayed and danced to the rhythm of Jim's music. Her slim figure, light as thistledown, flung itself in complete abandon about the room like a rose petal blown by a summer breeze. Her feet, fairylike and unshod, skipped across the rug with the lightness of a wraith.

She was fearful lest the person below, to whose music she practiced her dancing steps should hear and be annoyed.

Daphne had practiced to many and varied accompanists, but never had she felt so sure of her art, so completely inspired and capable of becoming a greater dancer as she did when swaying to the music of the stranger below. Her very soul seemed in harmony with the unknown musician and she wished she might have such a partner for the dancing act she was arranging for the autumn season.

And because Jim Carr was sensitive to sound—elusive and timorous though it might be—he was conscious that someone was dancing above him. The movement of those fairylike feet sounded like nothing so much as the wings of a captive butterfly fluttering against its prison bars.

Jim's only restful moments of the day were those when he was seated at his piano and his constant hope was for the day when he could consign his office stool to the past and take up music as a definite career. He was saving money toward that goal—that place among the loved struggling artists of the profession.

He sighed profoundly at the visions conjured up and somehow the soft pad-pad of the fairy feet above gave impetus to his dreams. His hands fell away from the keys while his dreams held sway.

Daphne stopped dancing with a great throb of pain. Her eyes were like black stars and the inspired step she had been on the very verge of capturing threatened to be lost in that silence. The feet that had fluttered along like autumn leaves on a wind-blown path ached to go on with the dance.

Her dismay was acute. With true Bohemianism, that thinks not of the conventions, and with great tears of disappointment hanging on her dusky lashes, she rushed down the stairs and knocked at the door of that unknown musician.

Daphne was somewhat abashed, however, when the door was opened by a smiling young man. But art is art, and she plunged into her reason for intruding.

"Oh," she cried with her most appealing smile, "please forgive me but I was just on the verge of grasping a new dance when—when the music stopped. Could you—would you be so very kind as to play that one teeny-weeny fifteen minutes more for me? You don't know how much I would appreciate it." She stood breathlessly making her request in so quaint a manner that not even a grizzly bear could refuse her and Jim was no grizzly.

Jim laughed so joyfully that something delightful was cemented right then and there between them. "I'll be happy to play for you," he said swiftly; "I'm always a bit afraid of overdoing the playing and annoying my neighbors. Wait—" for Daphne, shy now at the enormity of her unconventional behavior, was furtously anxious to get upstairs and darted away. "I will only play under the condition that I will be permitted to come up and criticize the dance—after you have perfected it."

"Oh, I would love it," Daphne cried with suddenly rose-hued cheeks. "I have longed—to talk with you about the possibility of an act being arranged. I can dance better to your playing than to any other and could give my very best to the public if—"

"You scamper right upstairs now while the mood is on you to create that step, and when it is safe and well worked out—just tap on the steam pipes and I will come up and we can have a really, truly business talk. I'm keen to get away from office work and this may be a particularly harmonious arrangement. We'd better take hold of an opportunity when it is just with us. Hop upstairs now and practice, for if we are to form a team, we will have to work it up quickly."

Jim Carr never did know just why he said that, but he certainly did know that Daphne balancing on the steps leading up to her studio was a most wonderful sight to gaze upon and that his urge was to keep her there—just to gaze at.

That being a bit foolish, he sent her tripping lightly up to improvise the new dance that was destined to be their first step to fame.

Jim sat down at his piano and a second later, as if she had been poised in readiness, he heard the patter of her feat and knew she had not lost the silver thread of inspiration. In fact, if he had known it—there was more inspiration than ever before. But then, Daphne had always felt in complete harmony with that erstwhile unknown musician and the meeting had but strengthened the bond.

Jim's heart was pounding with the rhythm of those fairy feet, and he knew that almost at once he could kick the office stool into the past and take up life with Daphne—Daphne. Dancing and—Love.

A Tip or Two

Plant one or two sprouting onions in a pot of good mold and place on the kitchen window sill; shoots soon appear, which may be removed for flavoring soups, etc., and others soon take their place; the onions continue sprouting a long time. Chives and parsley can also be grown in this way.

To keep lid on a boiling pot, drop a teaspoonful of butter into the water when boiling dry beans, or other starchy vegetables. The butter acts the same as oil on troubled waters and keeps it calm and manageable. If edges of saucepan are well buttered, it also helps.

To clean soapstone set-tubs or sinks, sandpaper the surface, first with coarse, then with fine sand paper. After it is clean rub linseed oil over the surface to prevent further soiling or discoloration. Rub a cloth dipped in linseed oil over the surface once a month afterward. No other attention will be needed.

When heating irons turn an old bucket or deep pan upside down over them, or cut out the bottom of a worn-out tea kettle with a can opener and cover the irons with it. They will heat much quicker and save fuel.

For an excellent iron holder use old felt hats cut into squares and placed one on the other, or use old stocking legs covered with a piece from an old kid glove. To keep the holder cool, pad it with pieces of leather from old shoe tops.

RAYBESTOS TAKE FIRST O.B.A.A. ROUND

Win From Cobourg 6 to 1

Masterson Given Good Support To Win Home Game.

HURLERS GOOD.

Rays Were Impressive Both On Defense and Attack.

Casey Masterson's fine pitching and his teammates' good work in the field and at bat, gave Raybestos a 6 to 1 victory over Cobourg here on Saturday afternoon, the local help cleaning up their first O.B.A.A. round in two straight wins. A large crowd saw the contest. In the third innings, at the announcement of Umpire-in-chief Colling, fans and players stood with heads bared as a mark of respect to the late Herb. Wolfe.

Cobourg failed to rathom the homesters' defence, while Eddie Campbell on the mound for the visitors, had to work overtime in his efforts to hold the Rays in check. Campbell gets full credit for a fine pitching performance. The expected batting attack by himself and his fellow-wallopers did not materialize, which is saying a whole lot for Masterson's twirling.

The Rays were impressive both on defense and attack. Apart from Deb. Hillier, who played brilliantly at Cobourg, but put in a bad afternoon here, the infield handled the ball faultlessly, and against first class pitching, the batting order displayed plenty of strength. The team also showed speed on the runways.

Hillier walked and was safe at second when Mann muffed a throw from the pitcher on Rogers' sacrifice. The catcher picked up Scully's short tap and pegged out, Hillier going into third. Moore grounded out and Corrin walked, filling the bases. Barry lined out to first.

In the second, Mann who homered at Cobourg with the bases loaded, was thrown out by Scully. Drumm walked, Rollings filed out to O. Nicholls, and Landymore forced Drumm at second, on a grounder to Hillier. O. Nicholls was whiffed. Harold Nicholls beat out a roller to Mann. He stole second and third. Masterson fanned. Hillier popped to the shortstop.

The visitors scored the first run in their third. Eddie Campbell was passed. Jones struck out, but Markey singled through second into right, Campbell's runner going to third, and scoring when Rogers dropped the ball from H. Nicholls' throw on Hutton's grounder down third. W. Campbell filed out to Moore, and Mann's drive was taken by Barry for a nice catch.

Rogers fouled to Markey. Scully was safe on the shortstop's fumble and he stole second as Rollings dropped a nice throw from the catcher. Moore doubled to left to score Scully. Moore took third on Corrin's liner to first, and scored when the pitcher fooled the third baseman with a throw that went through. Barry grounded out.

In the fourth, Drumm was safe when his grounder went through Hillier. He was sacrificed by Rollings, and made third on Landymore's liner to first. Masterson threw out Campbell.

O. Nicholls was passed going to third on H. Nicholls' drive into left for two bases. O. Nicholls scored on a passed ball through the wire netting and H. Nicholls, who had made third, tallied on Masterson's infield out. Hillier walked and was caught off the bag on a throw from the pitcher. Rogers doubled into right and Scully popped to Mann.

Jones opened the fifth with a single between H. Nicholls and Hillier, and Markey shot one through second. They were both clean hits. Hutton was struck out and W. Campbell was deadheaded, filling the sacks. Mann rifled one at Masterson who threw to the plate and got Jones, and Scully tossed out Drumm.

Moore walked, advanced on Corrin's infield out, and went home on Barry's single into right. O. Nicholls popped to the shortstop and Mann threw out H. Nicholls.

In the sixth, Rollings went out, H. Nicholls to Barry. The Rays' third baseman got the ball over dead on. Landymore missed three, but had to be thrown out. One of Masterson's fast balls crashed into Ed. Campbell and Hillier's fumble of Jones' grounder put two on. Markey ended it with a grounder to Scully.

Masterson flew out to right, and Hiller struck out. The Rays shortstop was having a bad day. Rogers tripled to left in consequence of which Scully was robbed of a double. Jones being out far enough to reach the second baseman's blast with his gloved hand for a fine catch.

The hitting and fielding plays were putting more pep in the contest. Harold Nicholls took a foul fly from Hutton in the visitors' seventh, and Casey Masterson almost lost his head when W. Campbell lined a screamer to the pitcher. Masterson, however, grabbed the Spalding to make a marvellous catch. Mann struck out.

Moore bounced a single off Mann and took second on a wide throw by the pitcher to Markey. Corrin and Barry fanned and O. Nicholls rolled out to the box.

Drumm struck out in the eighth. Masterson threw out Rollings, and Moore took Landymore's fly.

H. Nicholls popped to Hutton. Masterson singled through first. Hillier finally hit safely, a single into right. On the return of the ball, Hutton threw low to second to get Hillier, and Masterson went in with the fifth run. Rogers struck out, and Scully filed to Markey.

In the ninth, with Ed. Campbell up, the visitors had a chance to get going. H. Nicholls, however, took his grounder to get the runner to first. Jones' singled through second, but when Markey grounded down first, Barry threw to second and got the runner. Payne batting for Hutton lined out to first.

FRANK DELP NEW AMATEUR CHAMPION

Defeats Novotny To Win Golf Honors For Second Time.

BOB O'LINK CLUB, Chicago, Aug. 27. — (Canadian Press). — Defeating three star golfers from the Pacific northwest was just a trifle too big a job for Gus Novotny, of Chicago, when the last of the trio shot within four strokes of par for 33 holes.

Frank Dolp, of Portland, Saturday became western amateur golf champion for the second time in three years by beating the fighting Novotny, 4 and 3, after the Chicagoan had downed Bon Stein, of Seattle, defending title holder and Dr. O. F. Willing, Pacific northwest amateur and open champion.

Novotny did not give up without a terrific struggle, although he was 7 holes to the bad when Dolp took the 19th with a birdie. After cutting the lead to three he missed a 30-inch putt on the 33rd green to lose the hole to Dolp's 18th par, to say nothing of 7 birdies the Portlander had.

Helen Wills Makes Debut In Politics

NEW YORK, August 27—(Canadian Press). — Helen Wills women's tennis champion, made her debut to-day in politics.

She announced that she would vote for Herbert Hoover, and she accepted from Mrs. Louis Stade, head of the women's committee for Hoover, the chairmanship of the sports division.

Miss Wills' vote goes to Hoover, she said, because "he has proved, at home and abroad that he is a great man."

DERBY COUNTY WINS HONORS

Scores Victory Over Blackburn Rovers in First Division Match.

ENGLISH SOCCER.

LONDON, August 27.—(Canadian Press).—Derby County as a team and Dean, the master Everton centre forward, won the individual honors in the English League first division soccer matches Saturday. Portsmouth, who trimmed Huddersfield Town, staged the biggest surprise. The soccer season opened in England Saturday and 750,000 spectators saw the inaugural matches, despite the fact that the weather was pleasant and first class cricket matches were competing for attendances with the winter game.

Dean, who broke all records last season by goals scored in league games, got off to a fine start by doing the hat-trick for Everton against Bolton Wanderers.

Derby County scored a sensational win over Blackburn Rovers, the cup holders, by five goals to one at Derby in the presence of 18,000 people. They achieved victory through thrustful forward line work. Bedford and Crooks scored for the County in the first half. Whitehouse, two, and Ramage, (late of Coventry), added the other three. Rigby netted for the Rovers.

Win Over Aston Villa.

Leeds United signalized their return to senior company by a fine win over Aston Villa. Thirty thousand of their fellow citizens saw Leeds suppress the Villa team. Keetley performed the hattrick for the victors, Wainscoat getting their fourth counter. York registered for Aston Villa.

Thirty thousand people jammed the Portsmouth grandstands. The goal which gave the southerners the match was scored by Weddell in the thirty-fourth minute of play in the second half.

The Wednesday, who narrowly escaped relegation last season, made a good start by beating Arsenal before 23,000 people. It was one all at half time, Hooper scoring for the Sheffield team on a penalty kick and Jones for the Londoners. The Wednesday got two more through Marsden and Hooper after Arsenal had been temporarily in the lead through a goal by Brain.

Decision Reversed.

The other match between Londoners and a Sheffield team—West Ham United versus Sheffield United at Upton Park saw the decision reversed, the Metropolitan team winning very impressively. Ruffell got three goals and Barrett one for the Hammers.

Burnely and Sunderland played before 20,000 at Burnley. The Lancashire team won, their goals coming from Burton, two, and Devine. Halliday scored for Sunderland.

Played To Draw.

Manchester United and Leicester City played a draw through the goals of Rawlings for the former and Hines for the latter. Twenty thousand passed the turnstiles.

Everton had to journey to Botlon Wanderers terrain. Dean scored one goal in the first half and the other two soon after the interval. Gibson got Bolton's markers in the second half.

The record gate for the day was at Birmingham, where the locals played Manchester City. Forty-five thousand paid to see the game, which was won by the home team. A close second was the 40,000 crowd which witnessed Liverpool's defeat of Bury at Liverpool. Miller, two, and Whitehurst, were the scorers.

Gallagher, Newcastle United, and Ferguson, Cardiff City, two noted players, each scored for their teams, which were deadlocked at the end of the game.

In the second division Tottenham Hotspurs made a first step back towards the first dvision by beating Oldham Athletitcs. Twenty thousand 'Spurs saw them win. Scorers were: Okes, Roberts, two, and Osborne, for Tottenham and King for Oldham.

Bradford were behind at the interval through Miller's goal for Barnsley, but won out in the end through goals by Lloyd, from a penalty, and Hart and started their career in the second division auspiciously.

Chelsea showed they have not lost much as a drawing card, even though they did give a most uneven display last season, for 35,000 crowded the Stamford Bridge stands. Chelsea smashed Swansea Town by four goals to nothing.

Bradford City's enoromus score of eleven goals against Rotherham United was made up of three goals each by Edmunds and White, two each for Scriven and Harvey and one by Burkinshaw.

May got all of Wrexham's four counters against Chesterfield, while Parsons, Barrow and Goddard, Queen's Park, each did the hat trick.

Scottish League.

GLASGOW, Aug. 27. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—Chief interest in Scottish soccer Saturday lay in the second visit of Hearts to this city. They were matched with Clyde and were a great disappointment. The best they could get was a draw, one all. Only the fine work of Harkness between the posts saved them. McMillan put Hearts in the lead and then Simpson equalized with a shot that was disputed. The ball hit the cross bar and the Hearts captain argued it did not go in. There were two other draws, Raith Rovers and Third Lanark and Falkirk and Partitck Thistle, no score being registered in either match.

Hamilton Academicals collected their first points against St. Johnstone and Airdrie defeated Kilmarnock. The three winners were all performing away from home.

Celtic beat Ayr by Gray's two gaols, while Motherwell and St. Mirren overcame Queen's Park and Dundee respectively by the odd goal in five.

Both hurlers did well on the mound but Masterson starred, the visitors being unable to fathom the hooks, curves and straight balls which he whaffed over the plate. The infield for the locals handled the ball faltlessly and against first class pitching the batting order displayed plenty of strength.

BUFFALO IN FOURTH PLACE

Defeat Skeeters in Double-Header For First Division Place.

ROCHESTER SECOND.

BUFFALO, N.Y., August 27.—(Canadian Press).—Buffalo climbed back into the first division in the hectic International League pennant chase by taking both games from Jersey City here yesterday by scores of 4 to 3 and 10 to 4. The second game went seven innings. The Bisons, who have won eleven of their last twelve, rest in fourth place, a fraction of a percentage point behind Reading, but are only one game out of the lead.

The Bisons won the opener by bunching hits on Bream in the first and the ninth, while Henderson and Higgins were hit hard in the second. The veteran Cuban, Emilio Palmero, recently acquired from the Braves, won the opener and Ogden the second clash.

TAKE SECOND PLACE.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., August 27.—(Canadian Press)—Billy Southworth's Rochester Red Wings took second place in the heated International pennant chase here yesterday afternoon by trimming Baltimore Orioles in both ends of a twin bill. Guy Cantrell weakened in the ninth inning and the homesters won the first game, 5 to 4.

In the second Rochester pounded out 11 hits off Coumbe, Bolen and Allen to walk off with a 10 to 3 decision. Art Decatur, who finished both games for the Red Wings got credit for the double victory.

A crowd of nearly 12,000 witnessed the games yesterday. It was the fourth straight victory for the locals over the Birds and seven victories out of eight in the present home stand.

TAKE DOUBLEHEADER.

MONTREAL, Que., August 27.—(Canadian Press)—Reading and Montreal met for the last time this season here yesterday afternoon and the Keys wound up the inter-club series with a whirlwind finish, taking both games of the doubleheader, 8-0 and 5-1. Socks Seibold scored his 20th victory and seventh shutout of the season in the first game and Columbia Eddie Lautenbacher outpitched Don Miller to win the decision in the nightcap. Herb. Thormahlen, who was scheduled to twirl the first contest for the Royals was ordered home by the club physician with a bad attack of fever and 14,000 people, one of the season's best crowds were robbed of the prospect of a fine pitching duel, Falk who twirled the first game for the Royals was no mystery and the Keys and certainly none to Moore Reading centre fielder, who smacked his 15th home run of the season in the first inning to practically win the game out of hand before two men were out. Oddly enough, Moore's 14th homer of the season, clouted on Saturday was made in the first inning with two on base and one out.

ROBINS WIN FROM GIANTS

Del Bissonette's Twentieth Homer Aids Brooklyn Take 4-3 Victory.

PLAY TIGHT BALL.

NEW YORK, August 27.—(Canadian Press).—Del Bissonette's twentieth home run, knocked over the right field fence with two out and none on in the tenth, gave Brooklyn a 4 to 3 decision over the Giants yesterday.

If Carl Hubbell had been able to retire Bissonnette, the game doubtless would have gone into the records as a tie because the day was murky and darkness was falling rapidly. Jess Jetty opposed Hubbell for first nine innings but gave way to a pinch batsman in the ninth as the Robins tied the score. Jim Ellis entered the contest just in time to get credit for winning.

Errors played a prominent part in most of the scoring. Jackson's two base wild throw on Flowers, Cohen's error on Ricondo's attempted sacrifice, and a force out gave the Robins their tieing run in the ninth.

The defeat, coupled with the victory of the Cards over the Phils, dropped the Clan McGraw to a position three and one half games behind the leaders.

The leading St. Louis Cardinals won another contest from the Phillies this time by a six to one margin, and increased their advantage in the circuit to 3½ games.

The victory showed among other things that the Cards are again hitting, while the hurlers seem to have regained their cunning on the mound. Sherdal won his sixteenth victory, while his teammates collected ten safeties off three Philadelphia pitchers.

Cincinnati beat off Pittsburgh, their closest rival for fourth place, by defeating them 4 to 3. The Pirates were held in check by Charles "Red" Lucas until the ninth when they threw a scare into the Red rooters by scoring a trio of runs and had the tying run on first base with two out. Bartell fanned for the third out. Cincinnati pecked away at Brame and scored runs in the fourth, fifth, sixth and eighth innings.

Hal Carlson stoped Boston with five hits and the Cubs won the final game of the series, 6 to 3. It was the fourt straight over the Braves.

The Cubs hit Greenfield hard, getting 15 safeties which were good for 18 bases. Kiki Cuyler and Woody English led the Cub attack with three hits each and with McMillan played a spectacular game in the field.

STRESEMANN CALLS ON FRENCH PREMIER

PARIS, Aug. 27. — (Canadian Press.)—Premier Poincare of France and Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany met this morning for their long heralded and much discussed interview. They spent an hour and twenty minutes together, but the subject of their talk was not revealed. To-day's interview was the first official reception to a German Foreign Minister since the war of 1870 and it was attended by great pomp and ceremony.

EXHIBITION NOTES

The work of moving the dairy cattle barn undertaken by Contractor Fred Dummitt has been accomplished without a hitch from beginning to end, not even the losing of a board.

This building now rests upon a concrete foundation, on the south boundary of Exhibition Park and in correct lines with the other stock buildings. Much credit is due to Mr. George Kent, who had charge of the work. And now the attention of Mr. Dummittt is turned to the building at the itnersection of a 30 foot roof connecting this dairy barn to the new cattle barn, 150 feet in length, substantially built by Mr. Dummitt

The buildings will be completed and ready for stock Sept 1st.

Well lighted sleeping quarters and dressing rooms are provided in each barn, including the new horse barn with its 48 stalls, finished in a real workmanlike manner by Fred Finnie.

The work of filling and grading the floor space of these buildings is well under way.

Up the line additional sheep pens are being erected which will afford accommodation for approximately 100 head. This was found necessary because of the assured entries already to hand from some appreciative and satisfied exhibitors of 1927 who are planning to come with a much larger entry than that of last year.

IN POLICE COURT

Thomas Flannery who pleaded guilty to being drunk in a public place early Saturday and was remanded until Monday changed his mind later in the day and paid a fine of $200.00 and costs instead of the option of spending two months in the common jail. The fine for the second offence of drunkenness is from $200.00 to $500.00.

Found guilty of exceeding the speed limit while driving south on George street, at 11 p.m. on August 21, Ormand Braden was fined $10.00 and costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning. Braden admitted not having a properly functioning speedometer.

Thomas Calvert, charged with vagrancy, pleaded guilty and was released after promising to leave the city. He had come here from London, Ontario.

Growing out of an accident on the detour road to Chemong on the evening on August 11 last, a long drawn-out case finally terminated with the defendant being found negligent and fined $10.00 and costs. From the evidence, it appeared that a motor car had been struck, or, as the traffic officer termed it, "sideswiped" by a second car driven by B. E. R. Nokes, as they were proceeding east over the last part of the detour. The officer maintained that Nokes had been guilty of negligence in not exercising proper care as to where and when he should pass the other car. Magistrate Langley, in considering the case, pointed out that there was no indication of very great carelessness, but that the defence had failed to dispute, evidence of the complainant to the effect that there was plenty of room on which to pass. There was, he said, some evidence of Nokes failing to handle his car in such a way as to pass without touching the plaintiff's car.

THE AIRPLANE IN BUSINESS

James E. Williamson, Space Buyer For McFadden Publications Inc., Uses Airplane Largely In Commercial Activities.

Using the company's Lockhead-Vega monoplane, James E. Williamson, Space Buyer for Macfadden Publications, Inc., is making an air tour of fourteen key cities for conference with wholesalers and distributors of the various Macfadden magazines. This is one of the first instances on record where a business concern not directly affiliated with the aircraft industry has used a plane for the regular conduct of its activities. The plane has been in almost constant service since its acquisition earlier in the year.

Just before starting the flight, Mr. Williamson called attention to the fact that Mcfadden Publications is using the air in more ways than one, True Story Hour, which it sponsors, having been on the air over the score of stations of the Columbia Broadcast System every Friday night since the first week in January. The use of the plane in business, he stated, is simply in line with the organization's policy of commercial progress.

Before being tuned up for the present trip, the plane made an international good will flight to Mexico City, taking up the route that Carranza, the Mexican ace who was claimed by a storm on his return trip, had started to fly home over. On its Mexican trip the machine carried Zoe Beckley, one of the organization's feature writers, who visited Carranza's mother.

Prior to the Mexican trip, Bernarr Macfadden himself, used the plane to cover the National Democratic Convention at Houston, for the corporation's newspapers.

Illustrating the extent to which an airplane may be employed in commercial activities, Macfadden representatives in Rochester, Buffalo, Toronto, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Baltimore will be seen on this trip. And the time consumed will be but a fraction of that required to make the same itinerary by rail.

THE GRAPE CURE

Grapes are rich in valuable mineral salts and vitamins. They are rich in potash, sodium, calcium, magnesium, phosphorus, sulphur, silicon and iron. These are organized in a form that can be readily absorbed by the blood for use in the tissues which are always hungry for these vitamins and salts.

In Europe the grape cure has long been recognized as a good regime for those who suffer from many diseases, particularly anemia, diseases of the liver and kidney trouble. The patients use no other food of any kind, but live exclusively on grapes, drinking as much water as they desire. From three to eight pounds are used daily, and this grape fast may continue for a month or more.

The strong tartaric acid of the grape sometimes irritates the mouth but this can be avoided by washing the mouth several times daily with a solution of bicarbonate of soda and water.

Grapes should always be used by themselves, either in place of meals or as an exclusive diet for several days. Many cures have been reported from this fasting regime, and I can recommend the same diet to any of my readers who contemplate going on a grape diet.

Grapes have been cultivated for food from prehistoric times and their use may have ante-dated all other fruit, even the forbidden apple. The making of wine from grapes is perhaps one of the oldest industries, as it has been done for at least six thousand years.

Grape juice is one of the most nutritious drinks when fresh, unfermented, or preserved by pasteurization. The best unfermented grape juice is made from good table grapes, with nothing added to the juice, which is bottled after being carefully pasteurized.

When prohibition went into effect, many farmers dug up their vineyards. This was a mistake, since the use of grape juice has been increased to such an extent that grape growing is now one of the most profitable farming industries. The price per ton of wine grapes is actually several times that of ten years ago.

Grapes contain from 12% to 26% of grape sugar, and from 1% to 3% nitrogenous substances as well as the mineral elements.

During the grape season it is well to leave a dish of grapes standing in some convenient place in the home. Grapes should not be eaten too close to a meal.

Grapes in the form of raisins are a very valuable food, and can be used in any part of the world, since they keep well. They are rich in energy materials.

Take advantage of grape season, and you will be richly rewarded with an increase in good blood. An exclusive diet of this most delicious fruit will give a rest to your overworked digestive organs, and the whole alimentary canal will be cleansed and purified by this delectable fruit of the vine.

Raisins ground in with dried meat make an excellent pemmican which is often used by Arctic explorers and large expeditions, as it will keep almost indefinitely if protected from moisture. This combination is quite wholesome, and forms a well balanced meal by itself.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. R. L. J. writes: "Please tell me how I can overcome fainting spells, and what causes them. I cannot have a slight pain without turning very weak and sick, and unless I lie down under a fan or apply wet cloths to my head I will faint. I cannot even listen to people telling of operations without a fainting spell which leaves me weak for half a day. Severe pain will not make me sick or faint, but slight, uncomfortable pains always make me sick to the extent that I almost faint."

Answer: You may have some kind of heart trouble, or you may be overnervous, due to wrong mental and physical training. Of course, I cannot tell you specifically what is causing your trouble without a personal consultation and examination.

Question: Mrs. G. D. J. writes: "Will you please name the foods that are non-catarrh-producing? I have a cold in my head constantly. I may have chronic catarrh. If so, can diet cure this trouble?"

Answer: You can use all of the non-starchy vegetables and the fruit without producing any excessive catarrhal mucus. All of the foods high in calory value, such as the starches, sugars and proteins may be said to be catarrh-producing if used in large quantities. The hydrocarbons, that is, the fats and oils, also contribute their share in adding to the toxins which irritate the mucous membranes and produce catarrh. The best diet for you to take is one free from starches, sugars and fats, but with a small amount of protein and plenty of non-starchy vegetables.

Question: K L. asks: "Are sulphur and molasses good for the blood? If so, how often and how much should be taken?"

Answer: The sulphur and molasses treatment is no doubt effective in removing some intestinal toxemias, but a fruit fast is far superior for accomplishing this effect.

SHEEP CLUB MEN MEET IN TORONTO

Warsaw and Indian River Representatives Among Those Present.

Clarence Tedford and Ted Rose of Warsaw and Ronald McDonald of Indian River returned last week from Toronto after representing their respective sheep clubs at a meeting of representatives from various parts of the province. Trips through the Co-operative Wool Growers' Warehouse, at Weston, as well as visits to the stock yards and abbatoirs and a large woollen mill were taken advantage of by the boys who thereby gained a knowledge of what happens to their lambs and wool after leaving the farm.

The clubs in this district will hold their fairs on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

DOLORES COSTELLO PLAYS BELLE OF THE OLD SOUTH

Dolores Costello, star of Warner Bros.' "Heart of Maryland," now playing at the Regent Theatre today and Tuesday for a run of two days, has never been so appealingly beautiful as in the role of Maryland Calvert—the girl, who, while passionately loving the South, found her heart divided against itself in love for a soldier of the North.

This exciting and glamorous story of Civil War days has had numerous revivals since it won fame for Mrs. Leslie Carter thirty years ago, and always successful ones. It is suffused with a passionate intensity which makes it perennially interesting.

Warner Bros. have given it marvelous settings and a cast which includes many of the most celebrated names of the day. Among the great characterizations are Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln, Jefferson Davis, General Robert E. Lee and General Grant. Bacon directed.

ONLY ONE GAME PLAYED IN AMERICAN LEAGUE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Braxton, Washington left-hander, held Cleveland to five hits yesterday and struck out seven men in the only American League game, the Senators taking the third game of the series 5 to 1 at Washington. Miljus and Bayne were touched for nine hits. Judge, Washington first baseman, drove in three runs.

THIS year, again, five hundred Peterborough youngsters will stride gallantly forth to meet and conquer the threatening ogre of living expenses.

Without experience, with few set preferences in merchandise—and with enthusiasm as their only ally—they will demand from the merchants of Peterborough the inevitable requisites of home-making.

Two hundred and fifty boys will set off for two hundred and fifty jobs with high purpose and renewed determination.

Two hundred and fifty girls, wondering a little, will plan two hundred and fifty homes . . . . and seven hundred and fifty meals a day.

Together, they will excitedly ponder the spending of thousands of dollars.

What kitchen utensils? What furniture? Which curtains? The selection of a rug becomes a problem of infinite dimensions. The buying of a vacuum cleaner is a great adventure! Silverware. Linen. China. Glassware. New food products to meet their divergent tastes . . . . which they stoutly maintain are exactly alike!

Young hopefuls. More alert than any generation the world has ever produced. A generation of readers, trained to recognize advertising as a source of information and a guide to values.

They want two hundred and fifty talking machines . . . . pianos . . . . radios . . . . cars. Some will be able to buy them now. The rest will choose them now.

During this year, the first of wedded life, advertising will give them established preferences in merchandise and in places where they buy it. Familiar store names will spring to their lips . . . . laying the foundation for the buying habits of a lifetime. Next year they will be added to those other thousands who patronize advertising stores as a matter of course.

And The Peterborough Examiner, supreme in its field, is the only medium by which Peterborough merchants can reach these young people just starting The Great Adventure.

Wheat Averages Lower Restrained By Weather

CHICAGO, August 27 (Canadian Press)—Influenced by the pressure of hedging sales against the newly harvested wheat, prices averaged lower early to-day. Unfavorable weather in Canada, however, tended to restrict offerings. Opening 7-8 cent off to 1-8 cent up, wheat later held near to the initial limits. Corn, oats, and provisions developed firmness, with corn starting ¼ cent lower to ¼ cent higher, sagging a little more and subsequently scoring general gains.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 109 7-8, December 115¼; corn, September 91 1-8, December 73 1-8; oats, September 37 5-8, December 40¼.

Wave Of Selling Strikes Market

NEW YORK, Ag. 27.—(Canadian Press.) — The marking up on call money rate from seven to seven and a half per cent. coincident with the calling of about $40,000,000 in bank loans, temporarily checked the resumption of upward price movement in to-day's stock market. Waves of selling swept the market and carried more than a score of popular issues down two to four points below Saturday's final quotations, but buying support was quickly supplied and new leaders were brought forward by pool operators. Outside of the credit of the situation the chief outside interest centred in the publication of a series of July railroad earnings reports most of which made a favorable comparison with the same month of last year

With the outside public apparently in a buying mood the operators for the rise whirled up their favorites, forcing shorts to cover with large losses in several issues. National Biscuit was bid up early eight points and Loose Wiles lifted five to a new high record at 64 5-8. Electric Auto Lite extended its gain of four points by touching a new top at 93¾ and Mack Trucks, American International, Continental insurance and Abraham and Strauss sold three or four points higher.

Lake Shore Climbs Heavily At Toronto

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Firmness was general in practically all of the stocks on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange this morning. The most notable gain being that of Lake Shore which closed at noon with increase of $1.00 over close on Friday. Malartic with a turnover of 76,600 also displayed firmness, making an eight cent. gain for a close of $1.62. Amulet was up nine, Barry Hollinger closed one half higher at 45½, Bathurst gained one, Bidgood was up a half, Kirkland Lake moved up four closing at 150 and Laval Quebec was up one. Sudbury Basin was off 15 cents. Teck Hughes closed at $9.40 for a net gain of 20 cents. Wright Hargreaves dropped three cents. McIntyre climbed 70 cents. McIntpre climbed 70 cents to noon close of $21.75.

Toronto Market Dull; Nickel Again Features

TORONTO, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—Dull trading in almost every issue was the rule on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, International Nickel proving the only exception. Nickel was again the leader, both in point of sales and in activity, ranging in value from 104½, its record high of Saturday, down to 102½, closing firmly, however, at noon at 103½. Other stocks to show activity were American Sales Book, which showed a net gain of a half, closing at 78, and Brazilian Traction, which closed at 55 for a gain of a half. Coniaghut was off ¼ to 23.

In the unlisted section, British Amalgam Oil closed at 7¾, and Northland Gas was at 38¾, a loss of a half.

During the past month the [illegible] downward tendency of the [illegible] has affected all Canadian stocks which has brought them to levels that seem unusually low compared with prices that obtained in the earlier part of the year. The effect of this downward tendency has been to swing market values into line for buyers.

To a considerable extent the break has been due to a tightness of the money market, experienced more particularly in Eastern Canada, where lending institutions have caused liquidation of call loans against various types of securities placed as collateral. Liquidation of call loans has been general during the last six weeks to two months, and has in turn resulted in forcing brokers to ask for constantly increasing margins or to refuse to accept business except on an outright cash basis.

In addition to the forced liquidation which has been under way, the decline has been assisted by professional bears, who had been anticipating a reaction from the "boom" market that had prevailed in Eastern Canada and the United States for an unusually sustained period. The reversing of market trend had been awaited by professional traders for quite a time, and they were quick to turn the break to their advantage.

Funds for Harvest

The reason for the attitude of the banks in general tightening of loans is stated to be largely due to the huge cash requirements necessary for moving the bumper grain crop now being harvested. The situation, therefore, as far as the money stringency is concerned, is purely a temporary one, which will react threefold when the crop has been harvested and its marketing has brought a prosperous period to the Prairie sections. This condition should be reflected by the markets of Canada some time during the fall, and those who are now in a position to take advantage of present market levels should have no hesitation in making their commitments.

It seems to be the general opinion among those who are closely in touch with the market situation, not only in the West but in Eastern Canada, that the decline has gone far enough to fully correct the over-speculative condition of three or four months ago. While it is true that bear markets may be continued for a sustained period at times, it must be borne in mind that present market reactions are taking place, despite the fact that general conditions in Canada have never been more fundamentally sound, and that business and industrial conditions generally cannot be viewed as otherwise than satisfactory. Our present prosperity is based on firm foundations, and it is most unlikely that it will be short-lived.

Upward Trend Due

The market reactions above referred to, therefore, have been due more to a tightness of money and an overextended speculative position than through any halt in the progress of industrial conditions. Strong hands have taken advantage of the technical situation to absorb offerings at present levels, and there seems little doubt that both Western and Eastern markets will emerge from the present depression in a much healthier condition.

To many of our clients who have been awaiting the usual period of summer quiet to pick up stock at bargains which obtain at no other time of the year, we suggest that the present is an excellent time to make their purchases.

The information contained herein has been obtained from sources which we consider reliable and while we do not guarantee it, we believe it to be accurate.

JITNEY DRIVERS ON PILGRIMAGE

Will Drive From Hamilton To Toronto To See Attorney General.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—Fifty cars driven by jitney owners of this city started out for Toronto at noon to-day to besiege the Attorney-General's office. They will ask why there has been a delay in issuing a fiat to permit an appeal against the fines levied by the city upon the drivers for operating on the streets without licenses.

A GROWING TIDE OF PATRONAGE

Finding Its Way To Johnston Nash Motors Garage.

Since the opening of Johnston Nash Motors, corner of George and McDonnel Streets, last spring, a growing tide of patronage has found its way to this new and up-to-date garage. Modernly equipped throughout with all the appliances necessary for car and truck repairing and tire vulcanizing, quick and efficient service by expert workmen has won the patronage of a gratifying percentage of automobile owners.

Within the past three weeks this energetic business firm has installed a powerful service truck capable of taking care of any wreckage, large or small, or tire trouble, on the road. This equipment and skilled workmen promptly respond to any phone calls, day or night, from motorists in trouble.

As the name implies, Johnston Nash Motors are representatives for the Nash cars, and handle, of course, those standard repair parts always found in a garage of any pretension, together with Atwater Kent radios. Car washing is also featured and attractive gas pumps arrest the eye of passing motorists.

CHILDS GIVEN FIRST HEARING

Appears in Police Court For Committal To Fall Assizes.

HAS RECOVERED.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 27—(Special)—Almost completely recovered from the effects of the tragedy in which his girl friend, Gertrude Yelland, lost her life, Robert Childs, of Woodstock to-day appeared in the county police court here before Magistrate Patterson for preliminary hearing on a charge of murder.

The burns he sustained from the chloroform in the alleged suicide pact are practically healed.

It was not expected that the preliminary would add much to the story told at the inquest. Statements from Dr. S. M. McClay, the first doctor to see the body of the dead girl, evidence of the drug clerks who sold Childs the choloroform and statements from police officials who have been in charge of the investigation, were expected to be sufficient to establish the prima facie case necessary to have Childs committed for trial, which will be held at the fall assizes, opening on September 17. The defence will probably concentrate its efforts on having the charge reduced from one of murder to one of aiding and abetting in a suicide, under section 269 of the criminal code, but this will be opposed by Crown Attorney Ball, who is determined to have the capital charge go before the jury when the case goes to trial.

POLICE ON TRAIL OF COBOURG PAIR

La Chance and Boy Were in Brantford On Saturday.

COBOURG, Aug. 27.—Capture of J. H. La Chance, alleged kidnapper of 15-year-old Patrick Taylor of Cobourg, may be effected within the next 24 hours. The two have been traced as far as Brantford. Chief Constable J. C. Ruse received a message from Brantford last night to the effect that La Chance and the boy had been staying at a house in Brantford, and that when the owner of the house heard that they were being sought he went to report the matter to the police. While he was gone, the message said, La Chance and the boy, Taylor, left the house.

"Pat" Taylor has been missing from his home here since Aug. 10, when he left as an assistant to La Chance who claimed that he was a "Government surveyor." He was to have worked with him on a surveying job near Weston and beyond receiving one letter in which he said that he was at Weston and wanted some clothes sent, Mrs. Delbert Taylor, the boy's mother, had had no word of him.

A warrant is out for La Chance charging him with the theft of articles from George Anderson, with whom he boarded while he was in Cobourg.

Toronto authorities made extensive search in that city, but all clues proved fruitless.

BOY KNOCKED DOWN.

Bruise On Knee Only Result of Fall From Wheel.

Clifford Moore, who resides on Rubidge Street, had a narrow escape from serious injury about 3.45 this afternoon while crossing George Street from in front of The Examiner Office. His wheel was struck by a car driven north by an American visitor from Ohio, yet he escaped with a bruise on one knee. The driver of the car in an effort to miss the young lad, was forced to skid his car violently on the pavement.

MANY CRASHES BETWEEN CARS

also coming north on Park street struck his truck with enough force to break the tail board. Turner failed to secur the man's name. The owner of the car whose number is given is J. C. Duncan.

The final accident happened when K. Cullen, driving a taxi for D. Foster was proceeding east on McDonnell street a little east of Water street and M. Gishman backed out of a lane on the south side of the street. The two collided, damaging a fender and the spare tire of Cullen's car. Gishman was backing at a fairly fast rate of speed because he could not stop until he struck the curb on the opposite side of the street. He said he did not sound his horn because he did not see Cullen's car approaching. The brakes on both cars were good.

Ormand Braden of 547 Waterford street this morning paid $10.00 and costs for the privilege of not having a speedometer. This is the aftermath of his driving 35 miles and hour on George street, when he was overhauled and stopped by the police, to whom he gave the alibi that he had no speedometer and had to guess how fast he was going.

The confiscated liquor is only that which was produced in court as an exhibit in the case.

The case was the first of forty-six against all the liquor exporters on the Essex County water front. Hearing of the evidence against the others started this morning.

Wedding Bells

BRAUND—TILLCOCK

The wedding was solemnized quietly on Thursday, August 23 at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Woodstock, Ont., by the Rev. Canon Appleyard, of Ivy Annie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Tillcock, 30 Lafayette Avenue, Peterborough, and Lorne Melbourne, eldest son of Mr. W. J. Braund, of Albert street, Peterborough Ont. The couple will reside in Woodstock.

BLACK—MOWRY

St. Paul's United Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, August 22, when Helen Stuart, only daughter of Mrs. A. P. Mowry, 146 Walmer Road, became the bride of Mr. George Mitchell Black, son of Mr. James K. Black and the late Mrs. Black of Paisley, Scotland, Rev. Harold F. Young officiating. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns, asters, and gladioli. The bride entered the church on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Norman L. Paterson of Peterborough, wearing an effective period frock of pale rose georgette, with large picture hat in beige mohair, with streamers of rose velvet ribbon, beige satin shoes and hose to match, and carried a shower bouquet of Easter lillies and lily of the valley. Miss Lilla Jones was bridesmaid, wearing a picturesque gown of yellow frilled georgette, with picture hat of beige mohair, and carried an arm bouquet of purple phlox and yellow roses. Mr. Howard Taylor acted as best man, and Messrs. T. Newell and M. Cronkrite officiated as ushers. Mr. F. W. Watson played the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin." During the signing of the register Mr. W. R. Black, brother of the bridegroom, sang. The bride and groom left on a wedding trip down the Saguenay, and will visit at Murray Bay and Tadousac.

DERRICK—GRIFFIN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in Bethany Tabernacle at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon, when Greta Viola, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Griffin, 141 London street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Ray Derrick, only son of Mr. Frank Derrick, 479 King street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. K. Mills.

The church was prettily decorated with a profusion of gladioli and mauve and white asters, the guest pews being marked with mauve asters tied with mauve ribbon.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the "Lohengrin" wedding march. She wore a lovely gown of shell pink georgette with plain bodice and skirt made of tiers of gold lace, with a scalloped hem of georgette. Her large picture hat was of white mohair faced with pink georgette and and she wore long white silk gloves and blonde kid shoes with matching hose. She also wore the gift of the bridegroom, a red fox fur neckpiece, and carried a bouquet of Madam Butterfly roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Lillian Campbell, was in French blue georgette, made with tiered skirt. She wore a large picture hat of French blue mohair, with gloves and shoes of two-tone effect in grey and blue, and grey silk hose. Her bouquet was of Columbia roses.

Little Miss Joy Collins, niece of the bride, was a dainty flower girl, wearing a frock of crisp white organdie embroidered with sprays of wild rose buds and a close fitting bonnet to match. She carried a basket of pale pink and white sweet peas and gysophila.

The wedding music was played by the bride's youngest sister Miss Mary Griffin, who wore a gown of ecru lace over metallic peach-colored silk with white georgette hat. Her silk gloves, kid shoes and silk hose were also of white.

Mr. Hugh Morton acted as best man. Ushers were the bride's brother, Mr. Earle Griffin, and a brother-in-law, Mr. Alex Johns.

Later, Mr. Derrick and his bride left by motor for Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in a sport coat of grey tweed with a grey felt hat, black patent shoes and matching hose, and fox fur chocker. On their return they will reside at 563 Romaine street.

DENNIS FITZPATRICK.

DOWNEYVILLE, Aug. 27. — The funeral of the late Dennis Fitzpatrick, who was found dead at his home, was held Friday morning from the residence of his brother, William W., to St. Luke's church and cemetery, with Rev. Father Galvin saying the mass and also preaching the funeral sermon and who in his remarks said this sudden death should be a warning to all to be ready.

The late Mr Fitzpatrick was well and favorably known by all both here, in Ennismore and Lindsay, where he had many relatives and friends, for he lived all his life of 80 years here on the farm where he died.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Wm. C. Herlihey, Thos. Morrissey, William Powers and Thos. Flynn from Emily, and Joseph and Martin Doran, of Ennismore.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MRS. MARTYN PETHICK.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 27.—The death of Mrs. Martyn Pethick (Emily Amelia Meadows) occurred at an early hour on the morning of Friday, August 24, following an illness, fraught with much suffering, which extended over a period of several months.

Deceased was born at Carmel, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Meadows, their homestead being later established at Dale, near Port Hope. She was one of a family of eight children, six daughters and two sons, only four of whom still survive, Mrs. M. E. Thorndyke, of Wesleyville; Mrs. George Meadows, of Embro; Mrs. William Jackson, of Gliddon, Saskatchewan; and Mr. Albert E. Meadows, who lives on the home farm at Dale.

In March, 1891, deceased was united in marriage to Martyn Pethick, their home being for some time at Zion, west of the village, on the farm now occupied by Wilbert Wood. In December 1901, they moved to Millbrook, and lived for several years on Union street; between two and thre years ago the large and comfortable residence of the late Major Winslow, west on King street, was purchased, though ill-health, unfortunately, prevented Mrs. Pethick from the full enjoyment of her new home.

A life-long member of the Methodist and United churches, she was also connected with the Women's Mission Auxiliary and maintained always an active interest in its work and welfare.

Besides the sisters and brother already mentioned, deceased is survived by her husband, and two daughters, Misses Stella and Lila Pethick, both of whom are at home; there are a number of nieces and nephews.

The funeral took place from her late residence on Saturday, at 2 p.m., her pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, assisted by Rev. Joseph Wilks, having charge of the services. The pallbearers were six nephews, Messrs. Harold and Cecil Hubbeard; George McCullough (Newtonville); Alan Meadows (Dale); Victor Thorndyke (Wesleyville); and Wesley Brown, Millbrook. The large number of beautiful floral tributes gave evidence of the esteem and affection in which deceased was held by a wide circle of relatives and friends. Carrying the flowers from the house were: Messrs. H. Meeking, Port Houe; H. Strong, Peterborough; V. Thorndyke, Wesleyville; and R. J. McKnight, Millbrook.

Among those from a distance who were present for the funeral, which was very largely attended, were: Mr. and Mrs. H. Meeking, of Port Hope; Mrs. (Dr.) Lyal Telford, of Vancouver, B.C.; Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Meadows, of Dale; Mrs. Meldrum and family, of Dale; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Meadows, of Port Hope; Mrs. W. H. Harcourt, Port Hope; Mrs. M. E. Thorndyke, of Wesleyville; Mr. Byron Meadows, Port Hope; Mrs. M. Tamblyn, Orono; Mrs. W. Draper, Toronto; Miss Alberta Brock, Peterborough; Miss Esther McGlennan, Colborne; Mrs. Edgar Osborne, Toronto; Mrs. Robert Pue, and Mrs. Lord, of South Monaghan, and Mrs. Robert Pethick and Miss K. Young And Hastings Are Friends Again

TORONTO, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—George Young and Bill Hastings, who drove a dilapidated motor cycle to the Pacific Coast in 1926, when Young won the Catalina swim, and who later were estranged, are friends again. Circling the deck on the steamer Northumberland on their way to Port Dalhousie on Saturday, the two crashed into each other at a corner. They glared and were about to pass on when Johnny Walker, Young's trainer, yelled, "Aw, be yourselves." Both lads smiled, shook hands and turned to walk the deck together.

ROTARY ENJOYS TALK AND SONGS

the equipment and the grading of cream and butter, which have built up reputations and increased sales as users of second-class butter can get second-class butter and so on.

There was a statue made of butter at the Wembley Exhibition last year of the Prince of Wales and his horse, and Jim Matthews assisted in the making of this. When samples of butter were tested by the spectators, they were very much impressed, and some decided that Canada was not entirely a land of Indians.

In the West the cream is shipped by train as the roads are rendered impassable by rains. They also bring cream in for long distances which the East would be ashamed to do, because here there is a greater need for hurry owing to weather conditions and electric storms. Also it seems easier to educate the Western farmer than the Eastern man. Here it is hard sometimes to convince a shipper that it takes number one cream to make number one butter.

In the West the butter makers are usually experienced Danes, who are already acquainted with the process by the time they arrive, but in the East the butter makers have to be educated. Fifty-seven per cent. of the butter last year in Saskatchewan was made in co-operative creameries.

Cream is driven to the creameries in the East and is graded, and is used at once, as cream takes up the elements of the atmosphere, and they can be tasted. There is metallic cream, which takes the taste of the containers; there is yeasty or gassy cream, and there is gasoline cream, which is absolutely useless for butter.

Some tastes can be got rid of by pasteurization but others it is impossible to remove. He then told of pasteurization and explained that the future of the industry depended upon co-operation.

Rotarian Ross Dobbin, who was chairman in the absence of Rotarian W. R. Morris, introduced the speaker and John Crane thanked him. Jim used notes but explained that he never used these when addressing an intelligent gathering.

Ric Roberts and Si Perkins, musicians, also were part of the program and the audience was delighted with their rendition of The Indian Love Call, Miss Annabelle Lee and Mighty Lak a Rose, in which Si took piano solo parts between choruses.

Then everyone took part in Jim's program, Si at the piano, Ric with the saxaphone, and the Rotarians lending their voices to the singing of "The Bells of St. Mary's," "Smile," and "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles." Not satisfied with this, Bob Abbott had the congregation sing "Sweet Adeline."

Bob Brown, a former member of the Peterborough Rotarians, paid a return visit and he had to sing "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "My Hero," all joining in the chorus.

More community singing was indulged in, with John Crane at the piano, when the gathering sang "All the Nice Girls Love a Sailor," which someone suggested be sung for Fred Roy, who has just returned from a trip to Europe. The passing vacations were also remembered by the song "In the Good Old Summer Time."

To-day's visitors were: E. A. Schoeffel, a Rotarian of Zelienople, Penn.; E. A. Cameron of Belleville; Dr. A. W. Heyl of Evans City, Penn.; Hern Fannie of St. Catharines, and Rotarian Bob Brown of Middletown, Ohio.

BOY HURLS FORK; KILLS FARM HAND

Young Man Fatally Hurt When Tine Pierces Artery.

HAMILTON, Aug. 27.—Ernest Salmon, 19 year old Barnardo Home boy, is dead on the farm of Jonathan Young, Mount Hope, as a result of injuries received on Friday afternoon when a pitchofrk was thrown at him, it is alleged, by Jean Dermanuel, 11 year old nephew of Mr. Young. Salmon had been working for Mr. Young since Aug. 3, and on Friday afternoon had been placed in charge of the lad, who was visiting from Wesleyville, Pa. They played in the barn for a short time, and some teasing by the older youth is said to have ended with Salmon running out of the barn and closing the door on the child's foot. Dermanuel is said to have picked up a pitchfork, and hurled it at Salmon ,catching him on the right shoulder.

The tines penetrated the right lung and severed the main artery from the heart, the unfortunate youth dying within a few minutes and before Dr. Ridge of Mount Hope could reach the farm.

Dr. Ridge notified Dr. O. J. Newell of Hamilton, Coroner, who made some investigation and then decided to hold an inquest next Wednesday night.

CUPID MAKES HIT AMONG ATHLETES

Joe Wright and Jean Thompson Hard Hit By His Darts.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 27 (Special to The Examiner, by Lou Marsh)).—A couple of real Olympic romances may be the outcome of the Canadian team's' journey to Amsterdam.

No, Ethel Catherwood, Queen of Beauty at the Games, has not lassooed herself a Duke or a Prince, nor has Fanny Rosenfeld picked herself a Dutch husband, though she often joked about it.

No, the two on whom Dan Cupid scored a bull's eye, it appears, are young Joe Wright, winner of the Diamond Sculls, and Jean Thompson, the youthful "Penetang Pansy," one of the sweetest little girls on the team.

All the way back on the boat she and Joe were inseparable. As I write this, they are tucked away in the quietest corner of the athletes' special car, telling the oldest tale in the world.

No, I am not kidding. The budding romance was the tid-bit of the return journey, and for once the tabby cats could find nothing to purr about. It was real, too open and above board and too sincere. And if you think things are not serious, just ponder over the fact that Pa Wright made some keen inquiries into the young lady's antecedents and did everything but hand the youngsters the paternal blessing. For some reason or other, he seems sweet upon the romance.

Of course, Joe and the young lady had to stand a lot of good natured chaffing from the rest of the Olympic party, but you can wager a doughnut against Christie's yearly output that if there are any wedding bells, the girls' Olympic team will be in the front pew and the first to shout congratulations.

And Vic Pickard, the Hamilton pole vaulter, has crashed, and crashed hard, for another member of the girls' team. Her name is a secret, but this romance started on the trip over, lasted through the sojourn in Amsterdam, and survived the trip home.

King's Wharf

KING'S WHARF, Aug. 27.—(Examiner Correspondence). — The raspberry season is over and was a good season but short. Large numbers were picking them every day.

The gardens here are the best in years especially the potatoes, they are a wonderful crop. There are some wonderful fields of corn and buck wheat. The weather has been good for both. The other grains are not so good as there was too much rain and it is straw broken and rusted.

Messrs. Albert Herlihey and Joseph O'Leary spent Sunday the guests of friends in Peterborough.

Messrs. Joseph and Martin Doran and sister, Mrs. Agnes Harrington of Ennismore attended the funeral of their uncle the late Dennis Fitzpatrick.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Devine, Mrs. Peter Perdue, the Misses Mary and Lucy Sullivan, Anna Devine and Robt. Sullivan and Martin Devine were among the many who attended the excursion to the Martyrs Shrine Sunday.

Messrs. Dorgan and Herlihey have started threshing in this part and the hum of the threshing machine is heard all around, threshing peas and fall wheat, both of which were badly damaged by the recent rain.

IN MEMORIAM.

GRIFFIN.—In ever loving memory of our dear son and brother, Milton F. Griffin, who gave his young life on the battlefields of France, August 27th, 1918, at the early age of 18 years and two months:

We shall see him again in the light of the morning,
When the night has passed by with its tears and its mourning.
Where the light of God's love is the sun ever shining,
In the land where our loved ones rest.

Other Nations Will Adhere To Treaty

Announce Wish to Sign

Rumania, Jugo-Slavia, Denmark, and Peru Would Renounce War.

RUSSIA INVITED.

U. S. Senate Expected To Ratify Treaty—No Reason Apparent For Dissent.

PARIS, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—The signing of the Kellogg-Briand war renunciation treaty already was apparent to-day. Nations in various parts of the world had announced their desire to become parties to the pact.

The original signatures were still wet when telegrams and cables of adherence by other countries began to pour into Paris. The Governments of Denmark, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Peru were among those having expressed this wish.

The compact is now open to adherence by all civilized nations. An official invitation to join in the pledge has been handed by the French Ambassador to Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs at Moscow.

Discuss Senate Action.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press).—"What will the United and large quantities of literature tion which interests Washington, now that the Kellogg-Briand peace treaty has been signed.

The answer to it at this time is that there appears to be no reason why the pact should not be ratified promptly but this view is qualified by the admonition that many things can happen in International and domestic affairs before next winter to change the current outlook.

Fortified by the undeniable public will toward International pacts that will make armed conflict less likely and still absolve the United States from foreign entanblements, the administration is expected to put the full force of its prestige behind the treaty when it is presented to the senate.

LOCAL MILITIA MEN PROMINENT

Rural Units From This End of M.D. 3 Make Good Showing.

BANDS LEAD SERVICE.

Militia men from Peterborough District are quite prominent in the camp activities at Barriefield camp, where the militia men from Military District 3 are assembled under canvas.

Sunday was an idea day for camp life and a large number of people attended the church parade which was held on the main camp grounds at nine o'clock. There were about 900 men on parade and the service was conducted by the chaplain of the various units.

During the service the singing of well known hymns was led by the massed bands of the Northumberland, Durham, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiments under the leadership of Band baster W. Pearson of the Northumberland Regiment.

At the initation of the camp commandant, Brigadier Anderson, District Officer Commanding, General A. E. Ross, C.M.G., D.S.O., M.P., was present and presented the team from No. 3 Detachment, Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, the district shield presented by the Canadian St. John's Ambulance Association, and the May Otter trophy won in Dominion wide competition with their individual cups and trophies.

Major Garnet Greer, M.C., formerly of Peterborough, came in for his share of praise by Brig. General Ross who stated in the presentation: "I am bound to congratulate Major Greer, Medical Officer for Military District 3, under whose training this team attained such a remarkable degree of efficiency. I remember Major Greer when he joined us in France only a young officer and since that time he has rapidly come to the forefront among the members of his profession."

"J. R. McKelvey, chief for the Officers' Mess of the Northumberland Regiment, whose home is in Norwood, has been attending camp at Barriefield every time it has been held for the last forty years and has been cooking for the Northumber-

Talking Movies Record Every Detail; Public Will See And Hear Singing

PARIS, August 28. — For the first time in the history of international diplomacy, every word, every sound, in fact every scratch of the famous gold pen, was recorded when the representatives of fifteen nations signed the Treaty in renunciation of war at the French Foreign Office yesterday afternoon.

From the moment the first plenipotentiary entered the Salle de l'Horloge until the statesmen descended to the lovely office gardens for tea, the new sound-recording motion-picture camera registered the historic event.

The Salle de l'Horloge had been transformed into a regular movie studio for the signing ceremony, and fifteen regular movie cameras grinded from every angle.

Electricians had been working night and day making the arrangements, for great delay was encountered in obtaining the necessary permission.

The American company whose enterprise was responsible for the talking film, will rush the negative to New York aboard the liner Ile de France, thus permitting the American people to "sit in" upon the most important international gathering since the conference of Versailles in 1919, a little more than a week after it happened.

A battery of strong sunlights and other paraphernalia placed the delegates in the atmosphere of a film studio, in which each played a stellar role.

FIRE RESULTS IN FOUR DYING

Toronto Couple and Two Children Succumb to Burns Received in Home.

TWO OTHERS INJURED.

TORONTO, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—The number of victims of the fire which early this morning resulted in the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Klianman and their 3-year-old son, Sidney, was increased to four later in the day when the eldest child, Sadie, aged 14, died in St. Michael's Hospital.

Morris, 8, and Benjamin, 6, two younger children, are still in a serious condition.

Police this afternoon are investigating the story told by the girl Sadie, just before her death, that her father had recently received threats of harm to himself and his family. Relatives have also made similar statements.

Firemen are of the opinion that Klianman and his wife, finding there was no scope of escape for the entire family, sacrificed their own lives for their children. Klianman's body was found covering the living bodies of his two boys from the flames and smoke. Mrs. Klianman had the dead body of her baby clasped to her in an effort to shelter the little one.

The [illegible] family lived on the third floor of the building at 203 Queen street east and the fire which started in the store on the ground floor about four o'clock made such rapid headway that their escape was cut off. It is reported there was no fire escape on the building.

The charred bodies of the father and mother, along with the body of the baby clasped to the breast of its mother, were found in the front room. When the body of the father was lifted, Morris and Benjamin were found in a position which indicated that Mr. Klianman had covered his two boys to protect them from the flames and suffocating smoke. Across in another corner of the room Sadie Klianman was found lying near a window.

The three children are lying in St. Michael's Hospital, suffering from the deadly fumes which filled the apartment. The condition of Sadie and Morris is very serious.

Two stairways acted as a flue to draw the flames upward, and within a few minutes of the outbreak the interior of the building was a mass of flames. When the firemen arrived ladders were run up and Deputy Chief Sinclair was the first into the room where the family had sought refuge.

Relatives state that the family had made arrangements to visit the Canadian National Exhibition to-day, where a happy picnic was planned.

STEAMER RAMS TUG IN HARBOR

Fireman of Smaller Vessel Missing After Crash.

TEN MEN SAVED.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The passenger steamer Chester W. Chapin of the Providence line rammed and sank a tug to-day in Hell Gate, off Ditmar's Cove, Astoria. The fireman on the tug was reported missing. The other ten of the tug's crew were rescued by a motor launch.

A fifteen foot hole was torn above the waterline on the starboard side of the steamer, bound from Providence with 250 passngers. After the collision the steamer swung on to a reef where she lay for nearly an hour before being pulled off by two tugs. She reached a North River pier two hours later.

18,865 TICKETS PUT IN BOX DURING TWIN DOLLAR DAYS

E. Deannard and Eva B. Turner Tied For First With 18,864.

WELL ADVERTISED.

Tickets Seen in Box From Nearly Every Village For Miles Around City.

Dollar Day generally manages to introduce a few surprises, and the result of the estimating contest was evidently a big one to a large number of estimators. Thousands of tickets were marked by people who had reasoned that if last August produced a total of 13,000 or so in one day, this time with a twin Dollar Day the result should be almost doubled. Others simply based their estimates on the last, three Dollar Day figures, and were content to take their chance on something nearly the same. By far the greater number of blanks were filled in with estimates in the 13,000's and 14,000's or 22,000 to 25,000. There were the usual few who tried in between figures, and these were the ones who proved to be nearest right, for the actual number of tickets in the box was 18,865. Numbers around 17,000 and 19,000 were fairly popular, but the tickets that were marked in the 18,000's were comparatively few.

Of the number chosen in this section, the most popular one was 18,888, for there were twenty-two tickets with these five figures inscribed on them. There was ample evidence that the 1928 Summer Dollar Day was the best advertised for some years. Thousands of tickets were sent from Marmora, Bailieboro, Indian River, Norwood, Frazerville, Bethany, Millbrook, Havelock, Campbellford, Lakefield, Cobourg, Hastings, Hall's Bridge, Birdsalls, Keene, Mt. Julian, Bridgenorth, Lakehurst, and Douro, and even some from St. Catharines, Ont., and Rochester, N.Y., were noted by the sorters.

One of the top prizes went to a Hastings shopper, and an R.R. 4 man secured a $5.00 prize as his reward for estimating within 11 of the correct figure. The 84 stores that participated had a lively two days' business, dampened a little on Friday by the rain, but more than made up by a steady volume of trade on Saturday from opening hour to closing time.

Following are the winners of the merchants' bonus fund of $150.00 which will be paid at The Examiner Office on Saturday morning, September 1st.

1—E. Deannard, 479 Donegal Street	18,864	$37.50
2—Eva B. Turner, 391 Monaghan Road	18,864	$37.50

The feat sets a new record for this type of endurance, and Kemp has issued a world challenge to say that he is willing to meet anyone of his weight any time.

According to reports the champion is to receive $2,000 for his performance and a free trip to America, both prizes being donated by an American piano manufacturer.

YOUTH DROWNED AT BROCKVILLE

Runs Into Creek When Chased From Corn Field By Farmer.

INQUEST ORDERED.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Aug. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Dr. E. J. F. Williams, coroner, has ordered an inquest to open this evening to investigate the circumstances of the death late last evening near the mouth of Jones Creek, west of here in the township of Front of Yonge, of James Healey, a Brockville youth who is believed to have been drowned when running away from a farmer in whose cornfield he and some companions are alleged to have been.

Healey was a member of a party camping at the mouth of the creek and last night started off with others in a motor boat for the purpose of obtaining corn. Their presence in a field situated a short distance west of the summer residence of Sir Clifford Sifton is said to have been detected by the owner of the property, who gave chase, and Healey is understood to have jumped into the water in an effort to escape. Two members of the party left in the motor boat heard a cry but through inability to start the craft could not respond to it, and when their associates joined them and began a search with flashlights, they found Healey lying dead in the water not far from the shore.

56 WOMEN PASS DOCTORS TO-DAY

Ten of Those Entered For Big Swim Fail To Appear.

TORONTO, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—Fifty-six women swimmers, entrants in the women's marathon swim at the Canadian National Exhibition tomorrow, passed the medical examination to-day. Sixty-six women were entered in the race, but ten of these failed to appear for examination, and consequently are out of the race. Mrs. Martha Huddleston, former world's champion endurance swimmer, was among those who did not appear.

CAR LICENSES ISSUED IN 1903

Fee Was Then $2, With Extra Dollar For License Marker.

FIRST YEAR OF ISSUE.

Motors to be used on the highways must be registered by September 1, according to the following from a circular sent out by the Provincial Secretary's department. Though there are comparatively few motor vehicles in this city, for the benefit of those contemplating purchase of a "horseless carriage" the paragraph from the circular will probe of interest. It reads in part:

"Under the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to regulate the speed and operation of motor vehicles on the highways' every owner of an automobile or other motor vehicle except manufacturers or dealers not using machines for private use, is required to file with this department a statement containing a brief description of such vehicle together with his name and address. The authorized fee for registration is $2.00."

Ah, Yes, but that was way back in the good old days of 1903. And it went on to say that "the department has deemed it expedient to issue in conjunction with the permit, marker which shall bear the registration number of the motor vehicle in aluminum figures of the regulation height of three inches, also an aluminum plate bearing the words 'licensed by the rovince of Ontario. This marker is to be pisplayed in a conspicuous place in the rear of the vehicle so as to be plainly visible.

"These markers shall be supplied by the department for the sum of $1.00 and if you will kindly enclose this sum when remitting the fee of $2.00 for your permit or license, a marker bearing the registration number of your vehicle will be furnished to you with said permit."

Around the City

The fire department received no alarms yesterday so the men at the hall are taking advantage of the temporary lull and are making rapid progress in the laying of the hardwood floor in the northern wing of the building.

Newfoundland Progressed Enormously Both Financially And Commercially

MONTREAL, Que., August 28 (Canadian Press). — Financially and commercially Newfoundland has progressed enormously during the last five or six years, and the outlook for the future is still more promising, declared Sir John Bennett, former Colonial Secretary of Newfoundland, in an interview here yesterday. "The credit of the colony," said Sir John, "is excellent. Recent loans have been raised under very favorable terms, and business failures during the last two or three years have been a negligible quantity. All that is necessary now is a wise and sound legislature that will be pledged to serve the colony's interests first and foremost, as against any party or personal aggrandizement."

"As regards that portion of Labrador which now belongs to Newfoundland," said Sir John, "we stand in a much better position than we did before with regard to our potential wealth. We have a tremendous amount of timber land and unequalled water powers, not to speak of huge mineral prospects. So that Newfoundland may well feel proud of her possession. Of course, time has not sufficiently lapsed, as regards Labrador, to allow of very much development, or, in fact, any very settled policy, but I am convinced that with her great commercial possibilities Labrador will have a wonderful future."

Wind Causes Havoc On Streets To-Day

Men's hats rolled along the pavement, dust blew in great clouds and pieces lodged in the eyes of pedestrians, and ladies' skirts misbehaved this morning about ten-thirty at the corner of George and Charlotte streets when a miniature cyclone struck the heart of Peterborough's business centre. Sweeping down the street blowing papers, signs and what-not before it, it struck passersby unprepared, in some cases with embarrassing results.

HARVEST HELP NOT IN DEMAND

Apparently Farmers Have Managed To Get Crops Into Barns.

LIST DECREASING.

Employment conditions about the city are fairly good, according to the latest reports from the bureau. The urgent demand for farm help has dropped off. The reason suggested is that the harvest season is well advanced and that the farmers have in some way managed to get their grain crops in. In the past weeks there have been rush calls for help but these at the present time are not so numerous.

The other day there was a request for road workers which was rapidly filled. This came from the Peterborough-Port Hope Highway, while others yesterday were sent to the construction work along the Chemong highway.

The list at present is small. Farm hands still are wanted, a mechanical draftsman is desired, and it seems that there is a steady demand for die makers.

The general trend of most of the applicants was expressed yesterday when a hardy fellow entered the office and asked the representative if there was any kind of work but farm work on the list.

4,317 PEAS IN QUART SEALER

OTHERS CLOSE.

The contest held by The Examiner in connection with twin dollar days added a good deal of interest to the event. The total number of peas in the quart sealer was 4,317 and four estimates came within one of the correct number.

J. Howland, 269 Burnham street 4,316
Mrs. S. H. Long, 458 Driscoll Terrace 4,318
M. E. Elliott, 598 Water street.. 4,316
L. Brownscombe, 165 Murray street.. 4,318

They will divide first urize $10.00, second prize $5.00, third prize of $4.00 and fourth prize $3.00, receiving $5.50 each.

C. Long, 133 Simcoe street, 4,321, gets the 5th prize of $2.00.

Mrs. J. Chambers, R.R. No. 11, Peterborough, 4,333, 7th prize, $1.00.

Mrs. D. A. Pugh, Lakefield, 4,300, 8th prize, $1.00.

The prizes will be paid Saturday morning at The Examiner Office.

PRIZE GARDENS ARE ANNOUNCED

Judge Comments On Small Number of Entries Received.

FINE LAWNS NOT ENTERED.

Awards have been made in the lawn and gardens competition conducted by the Peterborough Horticultural Society. In the open class for the best kept home surroundings, first prize went to Mrs. Robert Harstone, 565 Water street. Mrs. R. R. Hall, 459 Reid street, was placed second and C. H. Rogers, McFarlane avenue, third.

In Class B, open only to amateurs for the best lawn and surroundings, Mrs. T. W. Bell, 847 Water street, who led this class last year, was again first and retains possession of the Bradburn cup for the second year. Mrs. W. H. L. Melles, 303 Boswell avenue, took second prize, and Miss Deyell, 185 Crescent street, third.

First award for the best working man's garden went to Thomas W. Meredith, 172 Lansdowne street, with Mrs. T. W. Bell second. Only two entries appeared in this class, which should have had at least twenty.

Window boxes, hanging baskets and urns shown by J. J. Turner & Sons were declared to be the best shown in the class for such. Those entered by Mrs. T. W. Bell were placed second, with Mrs. James Pammett, 431 Chambers street, third.

Considering the fact that Peterborough has the best Junior Horticultural Society in the province, the entries in the class for flower beds cared for solely by boys or girls under 16 years of age, were lamentably few. Only two gardens were entered, those of Anna and Eric Edmonton, 465 Donegal street. The latter was placed first.

The grounds of the Canadian National station were placed first with the Utilities grounds, Aylmer street, second, and J. J. Turner & Sons third in a class for the best kept grounds of factories and similar commercial buildings.

School and public institution grounds were considered together in a class. Among those entered the Isolation Hospital was placed first and the Standard Medical Clinic second, with King George school third.

One of the most noticeable features in connection with the whole competition, according to J. S. McGiffin, the judge, was the fact that there were very few entries and that even these were not all representative of the best to be seen in the city. During the tour of inspection, many places were observed which might easily have been entered and have stood high among the prize winners. A little more interest on the part of the citizens would not only encourage the officers of the Horticultural Society in their work but would greatly improve the competition.

A feature which might well be introduced another year, said Mr. McGiffin, would be a class for the best kept service station. All over the city new stations are being built, many of them on prominent corners, and usually the grounds are improved by the planting of flowers. By making a new class for these stations some real competition should be encouraged and no doubt the service station would be still further improved.

Open Class.

Class 'A" (open). For the best kept grounds surrounding premises:

1st, Mrs. Robert Harstone 565 Water street.

New Record Is Set In Canada

Ottawa Report Reveals Most Prosperous Conditions. Yet Recorded.

TREMENDOUS INCREASE.

All Branches of Enterprise Are Prosperous Conditions Dominion.

OTTAWA, Ont., August 27 (Special to The Examiner). — Employment in Canada is increasing steadily, and reports received at Ottawa indicate that 6,506 of the principal firms in Canada employed at the beginning of the present month more people than on any other similar date in the Canadian records. These firms gave gainful work to 1,000,085 persons, as compared with 973,463 a month previous.

Construction and manufacturing showed pronounced gains, while there was an upward trend in transportation, mining trade, communications and services. There was an important advance in Ontario on August 1 when the 2,961 important rms cooperating in the reports increased their staffs by 11,346 persons to a total of 411,684. The greatest movement was in manufacturing and construction, but growth in transportation, mining communications and services also was notable. The present employment index number is 1,136, the highest since the record was started in 1920.

Continued expansion was reported in Toronto city, where 831 employers reported 114,137 people employed, an increase of 1,176 over the previous months. All these figures are cross sections of the employment situation, reports being received from representative firms in the various industries. The level of employment in Toronto was much higher than the corresponding period in other years.

Manufacturing, especially in iron and steel construction, transportation trade and communications recorded higher activity. In Hamilton also there were substantial increases particularly in the iron and steel industry.

SCHOOLS OPEN NEXT TUESDAY

Pupils Will Resume Work Sept 4—Few Changes in Staffs.

SCHOOLS ALL READY.

Peterborough students get "the break" this year for with September 1, falling on a Saturday and the following Monday being Labor day holiday, they will not have to start to school until three days later than Provincial regulations call for. In other words, public schools Vocational school and Separate schools in the city will open next Tuesday, August 4 and on that day four thousand or more students will file into the corridors and class rooms to begin another ten months of more or less unbroken studious preparation. Those successful in last year's campaign will set out, new fields to conquer, while new resolutions to "do better" will go 'under fire."

Inspector Mowat, in conversation with The Examiner to-day stated that with very few exceptions the same teachers would be presiding as were on the staff last. The schools have been completely cleaned, and in some cases renovated so that everything is in readiness for the big parade on the morning of September 4.

SECOND $3,000 FINE IMPOSED

PAID IMMEDIATELY.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—For the second time within two days, a fine of $3,000 and costs was levied on a border liquor export company by Magistrate D. M. Brodie, in Windsor police court today. The fine was assessed on the International Transit Corporation which has been on trial since Friday, charged with having illegal possession of liquor under Section 90, sub-section 1, of the Ontario Liquor Control Act.

The judgment in to-day's case, unlike that in the case of the Erie Transit Company, fined on Monday, was delivered orally from the Bench, immediately after arguments in the case were heard.

The fine was paid immediately.

STOWAWAYS FOUND ON BYRD SHIP

Negro Boy, Aspiring To Record Like Peary Aide, May Get Chance.

TWO YOUTHS PUT ASHORE.

Quarrel Over Possession of Hiding Place Their Undoing.

ON BOARD THE BARK THE CITY OF NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Attempting to equal the record of a fellow of his race who accompanied Admiral Peary to the North Pole, Robert White Lanier, a negro boy of 20, was found Sunday afternoon as a stowaway on board the City of New York, the flagship of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, which sailed from Hobcken en route to the Antarctic.

Lanier, who was born in Brunswick, Ga., and for some years has been living with his sister in Jersey City, was the third stowaway that Commander Byrd's crew had located on board, the first two having been sent back earlier in the day on the harbor tug Scout.

Two Boys Put Off Ship

An 18-year-old boy who said he was Jack Solomon, of New York, was transferred to the Scout off Thompkinsville, S. I., after Commander Byrd declined permission for the lad to become a member of his Antarctic crew because of his slight build. The third boy, who was so angry that he would not give his name, was put off and taken back to New York on the Moran soon after the City of New York had begun its voyage.

While stowed away for more than a day under the forecastle head, hidden between the wing of a spare propeller and the side of the ship, Lanier had withstood the effects of a fumigation of the ship, but capitulated when the aroma of watermelon from the crew's mess was wafted up the hatch and he crawled from his hiding place in stockinged feet.

Boarded Ship With Rowboat

Between bites of watermelon, his first food or drink in many hours, he told how he had hired a rowboat, dodged the police patrol and boarded the ship under cover of night.

Lanier begged to be allowed to go to the bottom of the world with Commander Byrd in any capacity. He termed Commander Byrd a man of his own heart. Lanier by his dogged determination to be the first negro to go to the South Pole has shown himself to be a man of grit.

Quarrel Revealed Stowaways

The hiding place of the two stowaway who were put off the City of New York in the harbor was revealed to the crew as a result of a heated quarrel, it was disclosed by Jack Solowitz, 18, of Brooklyn, one of the unsuccessful youths.

Solowitz, who was brought back by the tug Scout, said he told Commander Byrd that his name was Jack Solomon. A thin, stooping lad with curly hair, he said disconsolately that he had sought to make the long voyage in the hope of "building himself up." Formerly a runner in Wall Street, he has been out of work for several months.

Solowitz said that by a coincidence all three stowaways, who did not know one another, hid under the forecastle deck and met there. The first to be discovered by the crew was a boy who was so downcast at his failure that he refused to give his name. Solowitz was found next, while Lanier remained concealed until evening. At the headquarters of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition at the Hotel Biltmore C. E. Lofgren, personnel officer, indicated last night that Lanier would be made a member of the expidition.

BOYHOOD SCENES GREATLY CHANGED

Man From St. Paul, Minn., Revisits Old Friends at Cavan.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, August 28. — Mr. A. Matchett has returned to his home in St. Paul, Minn., U.S.A., after spending several weeks visiting friends and relatives in Toronto, Cavan, Bethany, and other places in Ontario. Mr. Matchett sees many changes in his native province. He was one of a large family and was born in the house occupied at the present time by his nephew, Richard Matchett, Eighth line of Cavan.

His mother, Ann Carr emigrated from Wexfgord, Ireland, with her mother when she was 12 years of age. His grandfather Carr died in Ireland some time about the year 1810.

The first school in what is now known as Cavan Centre, was on the corner of the farm owned by Mr. William Pudsy. It was a log building. The first school teacher he remembers was Miss Sarah Ann Sharpe, sister of the late Mr. David Sharpe. Two weeks' holidays were given in summer and one day at Christmas. Afterwards it was increased to four weeks and later six. An oak rod was used in school instead of a strap and he remembers yet how it hurt, especially the thumb joint.

Spinning was one of the accomplishments of the girls; also knitting.

The first place of worship which he attended was on the ninth line, where the cemetery is. There was a church but this was afterwards moved to Cavanville. The Rev. David Savage was the first minister. Mr. Matchett also remembers the Rev. James Caswell and the Rev. J. F. Pilcher among the pioneer ministers.

Ninth Line, Ebenezer, Mount Pleasant; Fraserville, South Monaghan and Rice Lake formed the circuit at that time. There were two ministers on this circuit.

At first the junior pastor was boarded free, three months at a time, from one home to another. Afterwards he paid one hundred dollars a year for his board and the maintenance of his horse. His salary was about two hundred dollars. The

FASTEST MAN FALLS IS 118 MILES AN HOUR, ARMY TESTS SHOW

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.— A popular belief that a person falling from a great altitude would be killed or rendered unconscious before reaching the ground has been exploded by Army fliers, the War Department stated today.

"The experiment department of Wright Field of the Army Air Corps," it declared, "can definitely state that a man falling from any altitude with a parachute pack attached never attains a velocity of greater than 118 miles per hour and does not lose consciousness."

Scientists, citizens and soldiers, the Department said, have been under the belief that a person falling from a great altitude risked loss of life even without hitting, by travelling at such a terrific speed as to succumb before he reached the ground.

The Army Air Corps conducted many experiments to determine if the belief was correct, there having been an assertion a year ago that an aviator who was forced to jump and who failed to pull the rip cord was in full possession of his senses during his drop.

A dummy of the size and weight of a 180-pound man, with a service parachute attached and unopened, attained, it was found, a velocity of 118 miles an hour within a period of eleven seconds and after falling 1,200 feet in quiet air, but from that time on no increase in speed was attained.

"These facts," said the Department, "were established after numerous tests."

HOT-DOG PUZZLES BAY STATE BOARD.

BOSTON, Aug. 28.—Whether or not a hot dog is a necessity of life is undetermined, so far as the State Commission on Necessaries of Life, which has been wrestling with this question for a month, is concerned. The commission goes no further than to find that common usage determines if a commodity is a necessity of life.

Representative Thomas H. Carr of Boston alleged that "exorbitant and excessive prices" are charged for hot dogs at the American and National League baseball parks and that these prices represented profiteering in a necessity of life.

The Presidents of the Boston Red Sox and the Boston Braves contended that hot dogs, soda cigars and peanuts, pie and coffee as sold at the baseball parks could not be called necessities of life. "No one needs to come to the park to get their meals or luncheon," said the heads of the baseball clubs.

While the commission found no basis for a charge of profiteering, it reported:

"While it is true that the baseball game is held between meals, the nervous excitement which it usually creates tends to stimulate the demand for food, refreshments or tobacco."

The commission suggested that the edibles in question might be sold at regular booths at regular prices to eliminate the "costly" seat-side service now in vogue.

PAVING WORK NEAR FINISH

EXCAVATION WORK DONE.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 28 (Examiner Staff Correspondence)—After being entirely or partially barricaded for several weeks, Front street is now open to traffic, with the pavement completed through the business section from Bridge street north. Merchants have felt the decrease in their volume of business, but Saturday night the conditions returned to normal and in some instances above that.

The light-colored surface of the stretch is a factor to be noted in conjunction wit hthe lights. The street is much lighter now than when the roadway was oil treated. When the work of filling the space between the curb and the sidewalk is completed, this street will present an appearance second to none.

Excavation work for the three miles and a half of street that the town is pasing this year is now completed, and a few days will see all the concrete laid. The work of surfacing wil lbe completed a few days after that. Already the west side of the town is finished and this comprises the major portion of the work. There is only one connecting link on the east side, and this is practically half finished now. There remains to be completed a portion of North Front street, Front street south and Mill street. By the end of the month most of this should be done.

LEAGUE PROGRAM MOST INTERESTING

Petherick's Young People Will Be Guests of Rylstone Group.

(Examiner Correspondence)

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, August 28.—Forty were in attendance at the League service on Friday evening when Gladys Simpson, social convener was in charge of the program. Frank Naish acted as leader for the evening. The Whippets led in the night's attendance and have a substantial lead in the contest. Following a hymn by the Ford group, the scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Simpson and a devotional talk by Fred Barnum. Miss Evelyn Barnum gave an organ selection, folowed by a reading by Mrs. Harry Barnum. Current eevnts by L. Anderson and the topic on best things at summer school by Gladys Simpson completed the program. A most interesting contest was then put on by Gladys Simpson, each group being required to give the proper names to the hymns of which Mrs. Fred Barnum played a few notes on the organ. This taxed the musical ability of everyone and the Stars and Chevrolets were tied at the finish. A tie-breaker gave the extra points to the Star group.

The next League meeting will be held on the first Thursday in September. On Tuesday of this week the local league will be the guests of the Society at Rylstone for a social evening with an interesting debate planned for. The Zion Leaguers will provide the remainder of the program.

The Pethericks softball team met a team from Seymour West in a friendly game at Stanwood Orange Garden Party on Thursday evening and emerged victors by a score of 9 runs to 6 after a 6 inning encounter, the last spasm being played in somewhat dim light. The west side boys presented a snappy infield with Atkinson and McArthur starring with one-handed stabs while Hooper and Macoun were good on grounders. Reynolds was hit hard and often but only the long ones got past the fielders.

Anderson's homer with two on in the third and McKeown's smashing circuit clout to deep left in the final

BERRY EXPORT DEMAND GROWS

Peterborough Men Shipped Hundreds of Boxes To Montreal This Summer.

SURPLUS USED UP.

The story of how another "export" industry has come into existence in and around Peterborough, is told in the records of shipments over the C.P.R. lines to Montreal, during the past few weeks, during which a number of Peterborough fruit growers have shipped hundreds of boxes of berries to the markets of that city. It is a seasonable industry which has sprung up and grown from a small beginning to one of considerable importance, and is the explanation of why Peterborough markets and stores have not had to cope with an oversupply. Peddling from door to door has almost become a thing of the past.

Production Surpasses Demand

Truck farming by residents on the outskirts of the city had long since provided a supply of berries that far exceeded the demand from Peterborough folk and an outside market became a necessity—shipments to Toronto were not found feasible, because there, too, the adequate supply made prices quite low.

But later there was found in Montreal a ready market to which berries could be sent on the night trains, thereby going on sale the next morning fresh at prices that made the business profitable from the local growers' viewpoint. Yearly the number of boxes shipped has been increased.

Certainly here is a new Peterborough and district industry which will stand for great further development and is providing another link in the chain of goods produced here and consumed on the domestic markets as well as being shipped abroad. As the larger centres of the Dominion increase in population and numbers they will depend more and more on supplies coming to them from the outside. Peterborough growers are awake to the situation, and no less than four main ones have begun the building up of this trade.

SERIOUS CHARGE HEARD IN COURT

Allan Dunk is Committed For Trial—Young Man Goes To Jail.

VAGRANT SENTENCED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 28.—There were three cases to be tried by Magistrate Floyd in Police Court here yesterday. The court-room and the police office were the scene of considerably more activity than is usually the case on a hot summer afternoon. The first two cases were of a criminal nature. The third was a nominal charge of vagrancy which ended in the accused being given one month in Cobourg to undergo observation and treatment.

Allan Dunk was the first to appear before His Worship. He was charged under the criminal code with attempting to commit a serious offence against a seventeen-year-old girl. A. Cochrane of Cobourg appeared for the Crown, and N. A. MacColl, Campbellford, defended Dunk. The alleged offence was committed August 15th, this year. After hearing the evidence of five witnesses, including the girl, her mother and Chief Light, Magistrate Floyd committed the accused for trial at the next regular session of the peace. The girl's story was corroborated by her mother, with the exception that the girl claimed to be seventeen years of age and her parent swore that she was but sixteen. The difference was a mistake on the part of the girl, said the mother, since she had given her age as one year older on one occasion when she had been seeking employment. The mother gave the date of birth and the address to the Crown for vertification. Dunk, upon advice from his counsel, did not wish to give any evidence. The Magistrate committed Dunk for trial at the next assizes and fixed bail at $2,000. This was not forthcoming, so the accused had to return to the jail at Cobourg.

Obstructed An Officer.

The second case was that of Clarence Hankinson, charged under section 169, sub-section A, of the criminal code, with obstructing an officer. At a previous hearing, Hankinson had pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by a magistrate. The offence was alleged to have been committed on the afternoon of December 20th, 1927, when Hankinson made his escape from local police and was only re-taken about two weeks ago. He was sentenced to three months in prison, the time to date from August 10, the date on which he was arrested.

Chief Light was the first witness. He said he had no warrant for the arrest of Hankinson, but knew that there was one issued for him on a charge of car theft. The affair for which Hankinson had been brought to answer had taken place at the home of James Parcels, here, about 12.45 in the afternoon. According to the Chief's story, he was acting on information received by telephone when he went to the Parcels house and knocked on the door. He was met by Mrs. Parcels, and went to the upper room. It was dark there and he struck a match. Hankinson gave the name of Flynn and the Chief seized him by the wrist and attempted to bring him downstairs, but the man broke the grip and managed to get under the bed. This the Chief saw when he struck the second match and seized a pair of legs that were protruding. Someone hit him over the head with a bottle. He struggled in the dark and then jumped down the stairs amid a shower of bottles. While he was summoning assistance, the two men in the upper room made good their escape.

House Wrecked

Mrs. James (Annie) Parcels was the second witness. She recalled the visit of the chief, told how she had admitted him and said that he had called twice to the men upstairs to come down before he had gone up to take them. His arrival upstairs had started a great commotion in which the bed was broken and the stove pipes knocked down. It was the "Awfullest mess you ever seen" she said. She had not known Hankinson previously but recognised the man in court as the one who had been at her home. Light had ordered her to summon help by going to the station and asking Major Bygott to phone for Constable Duncalfe. When she returned her house was a wreck, she said.

This ended the case for the Crown and Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C. took up the defense. He first called Hankinson himself. The young man recalled the night in question but could not remember what conversation had passed between himself and the chief. The chief had grabbed him by the ankles when he was under the bed, he said, but he had not at any time struck the officer. He had been knocked into the corner, he said and that ended the battle for him.

"Are you quite sure you did not hit the chief?" Col. Boggs asked.

"Certain" Hankinson replied.

Asked what he had done after he effected his escape, Hankinson said that he had returned to Toronto two days later and gone to a hospital where he remained for several weeks. Upon his discharge, he returned to his home. He could not see in the dark room and therefore did not know that the man was an officer, but believed him to be one.

To Crown Attorney Cochrane, Hankinson said he would not say that he did not give the name of Flynn. But there was no reason why he should not given his correct name. He believed the police were after him. It was not his wrist that the chief had grasped because he had ducked under the bed to get out of the way. The chief had got hold of his legs and his grip hurt so much that he wriggled till he got free. He was ready to admit that he had resisted arrest and that there had been quite a scuffle which broke the bed and brought down the stove pipes. Madden, his accomplice had been the huskier of the two and had put up the greatest share of the fight. Madden is already serving his sentence.

Has Good Character

George Seguire was called by the defense and gave the accused a very good character. He had never heard anything against Hankinson and had known him for many years. He had always been a steady worker at the paper mill and said he had known Hankinson for about fifteen years. He was "Always a pretty straightforward going boy," Potts said. He had also known the boy's father for a number of years.

This closed the case for the defense and Col. Bogs rose to address His Worship. He said that there was no doubt but that his client had attempted to avoid arrest but had not resorted to violence. The chief was undoubtedly struck over the head, but could not say by whom since it was so dark. Hankinson had denied the act. Madden had been a more powerful man and had put up the stoutest resistance. There was no doubt that Hankinson had evaded arrest, but had not used force. Col. Boggs pleaded for leniency on the part of His Worship, asking that the accused's good name be considered and the good character which his neighbor and foreman had given him. If there was nothing to be gained by having a good character, there was little use in striving to have one.

The young man had chanced to get into bad company and was the victim of circumstances. He came from a good family and had been given good character by two men who had known him almost since childhood. This was the first offense that had ever been brought against him. Col. Boggs concluded his address with a strong plea for leniency.

Crown Attorney Cochrane said that he would agree to a suspended sentence if he thought it was in the best interests of the public. But he did not think this was so in this case. He did agree, however, that the sentence should be as light as possible, and not as heavy as had been meted out to his two accomplices.

Magistrate Floyd questioned Hankinson as to the event for which he had been brought to court and also regarding his family. Hankinson said he was a married man with a child fifteen months of age. He had provided for his wife and child's support before going to jail. He sentenced the young man to three months, sentence to begin August 10, when he had been arrested.

Vagrancy Charged

The third case was of brief duration. It was a nominal charge of vagrancy brought against James E. McCann, who gave his address as Healey Falls. He is a returned soldier, having gone overseas as far as England, and is at present not in good health. He could show no visible means of support and was sent to Cobourg for one month. While detained there he will receive medical treatment and be under observation.

BETHANY UNITED CHURCH

(Examiner Correspondence)

BETHANY, August 28.—On Sunday evening in the United Church Rev. James McMullen of Belleville, who has had charge of the evening services during the month of August, owing to the absence of the pastor, read for his lesson the 57th Psalm. He chose for his text the last part of the 5th verse of the 12th chapter of Jeremiah, "Then how wilt thou do in the swelling of the Jordan."

Mr. McMullen's sermon which was very interesting was a temperance sermon and was filled out with many fine truths. Miss Verna Belle Lee sang a solo just previous to the sermon.

Rev. A. Poulter, who has been touring England during the months of July and August, is expected to resume charge of his work here next Sunday, September 2.

Discuss Immigration With Premier Bracken

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—Immigration matters from all angles were discussed by Lord Lovat, Under Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, with Premier John Bracken of Manitoba and other members of the Provincial Government yesterday.

Following the conference Lord Lovat stated that he was strongly desirous of promting settlement of British in the Dominions.

"About 100,000 immigrant have been coming to Canada each year of late, an dof that number 50,000 have been from Great Britain. I would like to see a good many more British immigrants," he declared.

It is understood the discussion with the members of the Provincial Government was in connection with schemes for increasing the proportion of British immigrants in the future.

His Lordship expressed himself as highly gratified at the success of experiment carried out in Manitoba this year, whereby 100 boys were brought out from Great Britain and settled on farms within the province. Reports from the farmers indicated that the youths were adapting themselves readily to their new work.

CATCHACOMA.

CATCHACOMA, August 28.—Mrs. Lehner has acquired the lease of the Westlake property here from John Westlake and is now the sole proprietor. She will continue to run the mail for Mr. Westlake.

Mr. and Mrs. Tweedie have moved up to Catchacoma from Peterborough and are now living with their daughter, Mrs. Lehner.

There have been many inquiries from tourists about lakeside properties here but the number is limited and there is no haste to sell.

There was great excitement over the government's letter to the petitioners for good roads, promising them.

It is understood that John Westlake has fully recovered his health.

DEMONSTRATIONS WELL ATTENDED

Farmers Showed Great Interest in Poultry Expert's Visit.

Received with an enthusiasm far beyond what was expected owing to the busy harvest season, the poultry culling demonstrations and schools conducted in the surrounding farming district last week by E. S. Snyder, of the Poultry Department, Department of Agriculture, Guelph, assisted by J. B. Nelson, Peterborough representative, proved that there is an increased interest in the raising of poultry since last year.

Demonstrations were held at the farms of W. H. Bell, Smith Township, Miller Brothers' farm at Warsaw, and George McNerney's farm, Ennismore, in which those in attendance were shown the proper methods of selecting the best egg-laying types. An average attendance of about twenty-five persons was quite encouraging to Mr. Snyder.

School of Instruction.

With their newly acquired knowledge they will be able to give valuable assistance to their neighbors as well. It is understood that over 600 hens were inspected in one day of the school's duration. Among those in attendance at the school were E. Bell, R.R. 7, Peterborough; K. Petrie, R.R. 8, Peterborough; E. Petrie, R.R. 8, Peterborough; C. Purdy, Cordova; H. McQuigge, Havelock; P. AN OLYMPIC ENDOWMENT.

If the United States has fewer athletes of Olympic talent than formerly, and Uncle Sam certainly acknowledged his disappointment at his defeat in the classic events at Amsterdam, he has at least more money than ever. And he is a good spender on his own folk.

Some promoters of athletics are proposing an endowment fund of two million dollars for future American Olympic squads. The interest on that sum should go a long way toward making things comfortable for the pampered performers from United States tracks and fields.

It might be more effectual to make a Greek gift of two millions to the frugal Finns. Get them well fed and a bit paunchy, and their monopoly of the middle distances would soon be broken.

MORE MINERS ARRIVE.

Two thousand British miners arrived at Quebec over the week-end, a few days after it had been reported from the west that no further farm help was needed. The first wave of eastern Canadians had been amply ers to absorb as many of the unemployed as possible; supplemented by thousands of harvesters from the Pacific coast and the northern states. Evidently these miners have been sent on to the west as originally planned.

News of this influx of labor is far from comforting to Canadian unskilled workers. Employment here this year has been exceptionally satisfactory, but if the harvesters from the Old Country remain in Canada during the winter they become numerous economic competitors with those who have become established here. In many instances the man who fares worst is the native, who has helped build up a Canadian city and has a home and family, but receives no particular sympathy on that account.

Everyone realizes that Great Britain faces an extremely serious social and industrial problem in the present unemployment of 1,300,000 men, according to last week's figures. Premier Baldwin appealed to employ- but competitive business cannot undertake charitable measures. Manufacturers could express their sympathy, but little material co-operation.

ST. PAUL'S ITSELF AGAIN.

St. Paul's Cathedral, London, is now reported to be within sight of complete restoration. Four years ago this masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren, one of the architectural triumphs of the seventeenth century world, was a cracked and precarious fabric. So rapidly was it approaching collapse that a London municipal surveyor condemned it officially as dangerous.

Within its shadow was the office of the London Times. Those responsible for the conduct of that journal realized the urgency of the case and started a fund for repairs which eventually reached a quarter of a million pounds. The best engineering skill was enlisted. The vast piers that supported dome and roof were cut open and concrete and rustless steel forced into the holes by hyraulic power until the entire core, previously only dry and broken rubble, had been converted into a block of hardest reinforced rock.

The work is now declared to have succeeded beyond expectation. The piers have become compact. Two years' toil may still be necessary to complete the restoration, but all doubt as to the stability of the structure has been removed. The incomparable dome and tower have been saved for the admiration of generations to come. A meritorious undertaking has been crowned with entire success.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE WEAKNESS OF SOCIALISM.

Sceptics of the equality promised by elaborate schemes of socialism have always argued that the strong would eventually dominate the weak in the possession of property originally divided and distributed in equal portions. Apparently they can find substantial support of their contention in Bolshevik Russia.

The peasants welcomed the revolution because they were to share the great estates. But at the outset it was impossible to reduce all the peasants to a common level of equality. When the land was leased or virtually given to them some already had a little more than others of this world's goods.

The poorer peasants found the task of managing their affairs and cultivating the land too much for them, and apparently they were quite willing to dispose of their allotments to better-equipped neighbors to whom also they hired themselves. Those who accumulate land by this means are called Koulaks.

Of Bolshevist preparations for war, he says: "According to official figures sixty-eight thousand workmen are producing the materials of war in eighty-five munition factories, twenty-one aeroplane bomb factories, fifteen rifle and gun factories, twenty-five powder and cartridge factories, and various establishments turning out chemical war material. To these figures must be added German aeroplane production of the Junker concession.

Finally, there exists, as everyone knows, German war factories established in Russia."

CANADA AS EXHIBIT A.

Since Governor Smith of New York has made prohibition a major, if not the paramount, issue of the United States presidential campaign, references to the Canadian experiments in liquor legislation are beginning to appear in American newspapers.

President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern (Chicago) university classified as an uncompromising dry, says: "The Canadian population is rural, and their laws would not work in such centers of population as New York and Chicago."

The inference from that statement is that the Volstead law does "work" in New York and Chicago, which to say the least is interesting information.

Then Senator William Borah of Idaho announces that government control in "British Canada" is an utter and lamentable failure. This Senator declares: "Liquor is plentiful, corruption is flagrant and bootlegging is universal."

The people of Peterborough and Central Ontario as a whole can speak of the results of government control as they have observed them, and they cannot possibly recognize their city and district in Senator Borah's blurred picture of public demoralization. In fact it sounds more like Mr. Mencken in a mild quip at either New York or Chicago, or both.

Whether government control has accomplished all its sponsors expected is too large a question for glib opinion. There is plenty of liquor, that is the government stores are well stocked, but corruption is not flagrant and bootlegging is not universal. It is safe to say that there has been little "corruption" in this country under prohibition, license or government control, and we hope we do not appear pharisaical in that assertion and as for bootlegging in this district it has become almost negligible.

Those who desire liquor can buy it in the public and official stores, and visiting Americans if they will have beer, wines or whiskey, do not have to stoop to hypocrisy and law-breaking to get it.

It is unlikely that Senator Borah has been in Canada since the various provinces adopted government control. That is how he knows all about it.

TWO GREAT BRITONS DEAD.

The epitaph of the last of the great Victorians cannot be written so long as George Bernard Shaw, Lord Balfour, Lord Rosebery or C. P. Scott is alive, but two of them vanish with the passing of Viscount Haldane and Sir George Otto Trevelyan.

Both exhibited that peculiarly British combination of literature and practical politics. Though Haldane did not reach the eminence in any department of life that Trevelyan attained in letters, he had a more encyclopedic mind and in variety of intellectual interests he surpassed any of his contemporaries. He was distinguished as a statesman, jurist, philosopher, and scholar. His success at the Bar came early, but even before that he was a finished scholar, with a special leaning toward German metaphysics, a field in which he won high repute as the leading British interpreter of Hegel. When the Liberal Government years before the war sought to effect a better understanding with Germany, Haldane was the logical envoy because of his knowledge of the German tongue and German thought. In his post-war memoirs he clearly and candidly described his mission to that country, and the causes of its failure. It was a cruel irony which made his ante-war familiarity with Germany, which was turned to good service for his own country, the occasion of his exclusion from the British Ministry in the midst of the war. He was literally hounded from office by the Northcliffe press on the ground of pro-Germanism, though as Secretary of War he had reorganized the British army system and made possible the amazing achievement of the transportation to the French and Belgian fronts of the whole British professional army within a few days after the declaration of war, and of the rapid mobilization of the Territorials in the wake of the regulars. No wonder Lloyd George to-day says Lord Haldane was the victim of black ingratitude. His persecutors accused him of using the phrase "Germany is my spiritual home" to a German interviewer before the war. Haldane disdained to defend himself during the crisis, and only after the war did he repudiate the language attributed to him. It must be assumed that Asquith dropped him from his coalition Cabinet in 1915 with the greatest reluctance, under pressure from his political opponents.

Nothing in Lord Haldane's public career was more surprising than the last stage of it. His acceptance of his former office of Lord Chancellor as a member of the MacDonald Government in 1924 gave the Labor party the advantage of a master mind in a post for which none of its regular members had been in training. Perhaps Lord Haldane's resentment of his treatment at the hands of the older parties governed his course. After the Government's downfall he continued to support the Labor cause, and if he had lived he would undoubtedly have returned to the Woolsack in the event of another Labor administration next year. As a member of the judicial committee of the Privy Council for years before his death he heard many Canadian cases—some of them quite recently—and no British jurist was more familiar with Canadian constitutional history.

Sir George Trevelyan, the nephew of Lord Macaulay, was the heir of a great literary tradition, which has been maintained by his almost equally famous son, George Macaulay Trevelyan. The elder Trevelyan's biography of his uncle is a classic, and he wrote also a history of the American Revolution, which his inherited Whiggism, turning to radicalism, disposed him to color in favor of the Colonists. It is a more flattering picture of the revolutionists than is painted by the modern school of American historians. Sir George began his official career as far back as 1868 as civil Lord of the Admiralty, and he was a member of the last Gladstone Ministry. He left public life in 1897, but his pen was busy for nearly twenty years afterwards. He was a magnificent survivor of all that was best and most progressive in nineteenth century thought and idealism, and his two sons, George and Charles, are among the most representative men of the twentieth century.—London Advertiser.

EXPERIENCE VS. YOUTH

In business and industrial life, experience and judgment count for more than mere energy. The experience and judgment of a man over fifty years old will carry him through to success where the mistakes in judgment of a younger and more energetic man will often lead him to failure.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Holy are Thou, and may all Thy creatures worship and adore Thee. May we who dwell in this house truly fear and love and trust in Thee above all things. We bless Thee for all Thy goodness and tender mercies, especially for the gift of Thy dear Son and for the Bible, the revelation of Thy will and grace.

A Thought

IT'S AN OLD STORY

(By Edgar Guest)

Co-operation brings out the best that is in a man. It acquaints him with the possibilities of his business and the speediest approaches to the gate of success. It offers him a wealth of counsel and the warmth of a brother's heart. It can do no more than offer. The man who will not take its offerings, and taste of its fruits, will never profit from its membership. When you hear a man knocking his organization on the ground that he can't see any benefit from it, please enquire what he has done in it, and what he has tried to do through it. Please remember that we may give advice, but we cannot give conduct and "they who will not be counselled cannot be helped."

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 28—(Canadian Press)—Extreme dullness marked the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday. The only trading of importance in the spot cash market was a sale of a round lot of No. 3 northern wheat at 6¾c per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, and a small lot of No. 2 northern at 12¾c over, C.I.F. Montreal.

The local market for car lots of wheat and oats was strong and prices for the former were advanced three to four cents per bushel, and for the latter one to two cents per bushel. The demand was limited with Manitoba No. 5 wheat quoted at $1.10 tough No. 6 wheat at $1.02, feed wheat at 86c.

Oil wells beyond the equator, tank ships transporting a better crude from far Peru, tank cars, refineries, thousands and thousands of men—all these enter into production of Marvelube, a better oil made from a better crude. And then there are the years of research and experiment; millions of dollars expended in perfecting better methods of manufacture, and the unending, jealous vigilance that maintains Marvelube quality always. Only Imperial Oil Limited has resources to make Marvelube, only Imperial Oil has access to Peruvian crude, the better crude from which this better oil is made.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

PERENNIAL FLOWERS are after all, easier to take care of than having to plant the seed or plants every year. Now is the time to plant them. Certain kinds which are slow to germinate, should be started in June or early in July. Other kinds give best results when they are planted as soon as they ripen.

• • • • • •

Hollyhocks are readily grown from seed sown at this time of year, in fact, it is better to grow new plants already in the ground. After all —hollyhocks are not really perennials, although they are taken as such. They will last for two or three years if they are cut down as soon as the flowers fade, but renew themselves by scattering their ripened seeds.

• • • • • •

It is not easy to move Columbines when the plants are well grown, but it is very easy to raise new plants from seed, which may be sown at this time. If it is possible to sow the seed where the plants are to remain, it would be better, but the seedings may be shifted to their permanent location if moved when small. Columbines when used in variety are among the most beautiful of early flowers, and are more worthy of attention than they have been receiving.

• • • • • •

Forget-me-nots are old-fashioned flowers, but never lose their charm and are readily grown from seed sown now. When they have been established for a year or two, forget-me-nots often sow for themselves but will gradually deteriorate, for which reason it is wise to buy new plants or to grow plants from fresh seeds. The variety known as Victoria has been popular—but there is a new variety which is even better. It is well to remember that forget-me-nots like a little shade, although they will grow in an open spot which is not extremely hot. Have you noticed how they are being used in Peterborough? They give lovely color just now beside the green shrub which has run its course for this year.

• • • • • •

Ofter it is very hard to water newly-planted seed, for the force of the water pushes the seeds out of the ground. This can be easily remedied, however, by covering teh seed with cheesecloth. The water applied to this will soak through gradually, and without doing any harm. The covering will, of course, have to be removed as soon as the seeds appear above the ground.

After a long season of using silk and parchment lamp shades, the fashion is now turning to mica—the material which was used in the windows of the old-time hard coal stove. Through this mica the glow of the coals made the living-room cheery—you've been in one I'm sure where this added greatly to the atmosphere of the home. The electric light now shines through it and does the same thing; but the mica of lamp shades is a much more refined article, softening the light. It comes in many color tints and may be made to harmonize with the furnishings of any room.

You may buy silver compounds or a silver polishing cloth, but it is much more economical to make your own, and it is a very simple process.

A good silver paste is made from whiting and gasoline or denatured alcohol. You simply rub this on the silver and rub it off, taking the tarnish along with it. Almost all silverpaste you buy contains gasoline or naptha and this will evaporate, so it is wise to buy it in small quantities or you will soon find your mixture dry.

• • • • • •

To make a silver polishing cloth, make a thin paste of whiting and gasoline, spread it on a square of flet and let it dry. Iron with a very hot iron on both sides and it is then ready for use.

• • • • • •

The most simply way to clean silver is to put a tablespoon each of common salt and baking soda in boiling water in an aluminum pan. Drop the silver into this and boil for a few minutes, then remove the silver and wash it with clear water.

I heard a woman in the north end of the city talking about her dirty windows the other day. She WAS on a rather dusty street, but I couldn't see why her windows could be any dirtier than anyone else's; but she's one of those fussy women who must have her windows, as well as all the house, cleaned every week. I can't see for the life of me, why it would do any more good if she washed them every day—they'd only get dirty again, and a lot of energy would be wasted. She might just as well have been sitting on the porch enjoying the slight breeze of the day. She says that before washing the windows, the frames should be all dusted, using a wooden skewer and a cloth for corners and grooves. And that soap and water for washing them should not be used when the sun is shining on them, because they will get all streaked—of course most of us knew that. I suppose after the sun goes off she goes at it. A few drops of kerosene or bluing in the water used or a little alcohol on a cloth will make them shine beautifully—enough anyway to make her neighbors known that she had been at them—if they hadn't already noticed her. Tissue paper, or even newspaper, is also excellent for polishing, and steel wool is fine for removing spots from the panes.

PRESIDENT-ELECT.

Miss Laila Scott, president-elect of the Canadian Federation of University Women's Clubs. Miss Scott, who is on the staff of the University of Toronto, being a specialist in French and German, was elected at the fourth triennial conference in Vancouver.

who knew your people and—well, I went to see your mother. I asked her not to tell you about it. She approves of me perfectly. I even write to her and I keep her posted about what you are doing. She said she haped you'd marry"—Dora turned her head and said so low that Howard could hardly hear, "she said she hoped you'd marry me."

"But, of course, you wouldn't think of me that way," said Howard, forgetting his salesmanship completely.

"Of course I would, silly," said Dora. "If I hadn't been thinking of you that way almost from the first time I ever met you, why do you think I made an excuse to go to New England and look up your mother and everything? But from the way you've been talking this afternoon, I think I have made a mistake."

By this time Howard really was on his knees before Dora — taking her hands in his and looking entreatingly into her pretty face.

"Dora, dear," he said, "I know I have nothing to offer — it's a bad bargain for you — but will you — won't you marry me?"

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

BY MARY MARSHALL.

One does not have to choose between a fur collared coat and a fur scarf because the fur scarf takes a place in a woman's wardrobe all its own. The woman who has fifty or sixty or a hundred or two dollars to spend for some luxury can hardly do better than to get a fur scarf, and August is the time when many women seem to like to buy their furs. There are occasions when a fine quality fur scarf may be worn to very good advantage with an afternoon or dinner gown. The coat frock of wool that may be worn on warmer days in the vicinity of New York, all through the autumn—and in some parts of the country all through the winter—really needs a fur scarf to solve the neck problem. And of course the two-piece tailored suit never looks better than when worn with an animal scarf.

There are three skinned sable scarfs made to be worn draped around the shoulders or fastened closely with one end round the neck and the other and hanging down at the right side. Of course any woman would like a scarf like that. There are similar scarfs of so-called Hudson Bay sable that is dyed muskrat. Stone marten scarfs are decidedly smart and, of course, there is a wide variety of fox scarfs, among which nothing is in better taste than pointed fox.

The sketch shows a rather unusual fox scarf—made sans head or tail with silk ends instead. Of course the one from which the sketch was made was new, but it occurred to me that the woman who had a fox scarf on hand which she wanted altered in an upto-date fashion might find this a convenient model to copy So often the head and tail of a fox scarf show wear before the rest of the fur is at all worn.

In place of head and tail the fox collar sketched above shows ends of beige and black printed chiffon to match the frock with which it is worn. There is also a black flower. The smart little collar below is a necklet of blue ostrich worn with blue printed frock and hat in three tones of blue

Little capes are worn over many of the new autumn frocks to give the extra warmth needed on cooler days and they are of course decidedly smart. If you would like a diagram pattern for one of these capes, with a sketch of the completed garment and directions for making please send me a stamped self-addressed envelope and I will send it to you at once.

TRAVEL-LOG.

SHOPPPING IN ALGIERS

It is always a happy morning when I can look out of my porthole and see the radiant hues of the city of Algiers, rising in terraced majesty from the bluest of Mediterranean harbors. The two friends I had with me had never been in North Africa before. had never been in a mosque and had never had the questionable importance of being an attraction to scores of tatterdernatlion Arab beggars. They soon grey weary of the mosque, which, of course, they had to enter with slippers, and were glad to be in the fresh air again. It was a poor little mosque, anyway. Then, of course, they had to see some of the public buildings, and look up in their guide books all the references to Ali Ben Hassein, the last Dey of Algiers, and then my friend's wife caught sight of a long, narrow row of shops and all the instincts which had been inhibited since leaving Fifth Avenue, New York, re-asserted themselves. We had to follow. No one could blame her. Here, for almost nothing, were marvelous copper water jars that looked centuries old, baskets of weaves never seen elsewhere, rugs, things to smoke, and things to eat, things to wear, and things just to admire and hold as curios. Truly you should bring an empty trunk with you to Algiers if you wish to feel that you have done justice to its bazaars an dto yourself for having been privileged to see such a place.

SALESMANSHIP.

By Jane Osborn.

There was hardly a situation in his life to which Howard Tuttle did not apply some one or another of his several principles of salesmanship, and usually with perfectly satisfactory results.

One day when the name of Dora Scott came up between himself and Dora's cousin, Fred Yates, in the locker room of the country club — and Fred Yates remarked that there was not man in Crofton or anywhere else thereabouts who had a ghost of a chance with Dora — Howard simply said: "Oh, is that so?" and having locked away his golf bag and sweater went off whistling.

The truth was that Howard had definitely made up his mind to ask Dora to be his wife. She was by all odds the prettiest girl in Crofton, she had a charming disposition, and the fact that her father was one of the richest men in Crofton was simply an added advantage thrown in.

Thinking of Dora, Howard had a deep desire simply to fall on his knees before her, tell her of his consuming love for her, mumble something about his own unworthiness and implore her pity. But that, as Howard reflected, would be the worst sort of salesmanship.

So instead of going directly to see Dora that afternoon as he had thought of doing, he drove slowly along a secluded road that led out beyond the golf course and figured the situation out. He had told Dora he would arrive at four. Time enough at half-past. It frequentry worked to keep a prospect waiting.

As Howard had figured it out there were some six sorts of prospects. With some the best salesmanship consisted of rather noisy enthusiasm concerning the goods to be sold. With others the best procedure was to create the impression that something was to be had for practically nothing. Others had to be put into a good mood—an expensive lunch and a show usually did the trick. Howard tried to think of Dora simply as a prospect. Finally he cubby-holed her in the last of his six clasifications—the sort of people who never want a thing unless they feel that it is almost impossible to get it.

Dora was waiting for Howard on the shady verandah of her father's house when he drove up. He sat down beside her and paid her an offhand compliment or two—nothing too personal, of course. Then he talked about golf, about the weather, about the last dance, plans for the next dance, about some of the other girls in Crofton.

"The thing I like about you — or one of the things, I should say—" remarked Howard, "is that you so obviously have no idea of marrying. It seems to cramp a girl's style if she is always considering the men she knows as possible husbands."

"I don't see why it should," said Dora, rather resentfully. "Only, of course, I can't imagine considering any man as a possible husband. Most men are impossible—but when a girl meets the man she feels she—she really likes—I don't see why she shouldn't think of him seriously."

"But then you never could think of me seriously," said Howard, looking off through the honeysuckle vines that shielded the verandah from the lawns beyond. "And perhaps it is just as well that you couldn't. You see I don't suppose I shall ever marry —at least none of the sort of girls I meet here in Crofton."

"No?" said Dora — and Howard listening with what he thought was perfectly concealed intentness, did not know whether she was really indifferent or only wanted to appear so.

"You see, I have to consider my family. I'd have to be sure the girl I married would be congenial — and the girls here wouldn't. My people are very strict — old-time Yankees. So if I ever do marry I'll have to find some prim little school ma'am who doesn't smoke or dance or drive a fast car or—"

"Well, I don't smoke," said Dora.

"Only because you don't like it," said Howard. "Dora, you are a very charming girl, but you are about as far removed from my mother's ideas of a daughter-in-law as any girl could be—so it's just as well you wouldn't have me anyway."

Dora was laughing to herself softly.

"You'll have to think of some other excuse," she said. "Because I know your mother and she likes me. You see, last summer when I was staying in New England I knew some people

"Amazing—so many women must learn this from others"

The embarrassment of this grave social offense is finally ended. This scientific sanitary pad is now treated by patented process to end all offense.

WHERE smart women gather socially—or in business—even the most attractive are guilty of offending others at certain times. Yet they, themselves, seldom realize it. When told, they become miserably self-conscious. They try in vain to overcome the difficulty by makeshift methods. Now science offers safe and certain relief from this fear.

Kotex now scientifically deodorizes

Millions of women have learned to depend on Kotex within the last ten years. It has brought them better health, greater peace-of-mind under trying conditions. Now comes an added advantage. Kotex chemists have discovered (and patented) a process that absolutely ends all odors. After several years of research, the one remaining problem in connection with sanitary pads is solved.

No more bulky outlines

That awful feeling of being conspicuous because of the bulkiness of old-time methods is gone, too. Kotex pads are rounded and tapered so there is no evidence of sanitary protection when worn. You may add or remove layers of filler as needed—a thing all women appreciate. There is a new softness, because both filler and gauze have been specially treated. Finally, Kotex is so easy to dispose of, eliminating all need of laundering.

4—Adjust it to your need; filler may be made thinner, thicker, narrower as required;
and

The Planter of the Tree

By RUBY M. AYRES

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

POPPY, Sally's room-mate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

When Sanderson asks Akers to help Sally he says that he's through with her. Sanderson gives him a black eye. Poppy comes to tell Sanderson that the doctors say Sally will never walk again. Sanderson plans to get a cottage in the country for Sally and Mrs. Kiff.

XII.—SALLY ALL ALONE.

Sally lay very still, listening to her departing steps, the tears trickling slowly from beneath her closed lids.

There was a very frenzy of despair in her heart. She had faced trouble of all sorts before, but never any so great as this. She had danced her way through life on bread-and-cheese, and slept on a hard bed, but at any rate she had always danced! And now her one pleasure was taken from her, and she was left high and dry on the shore of despair—helpless as a felled tree cast up by an ebb tide.

There was nobody to whom she could turn. Josh Akers, for whom she hungered with all her heart, had not been near her, and she knew now he would never come again.

Poppy was too full of her own concerns to be seriously bothered with her; there remained, then, only Philip Sanderson.

"And I don't want him. I don't want him one little bit," Sally told herself in anguish.

When she was well she had enjoyed his company up to a point; she had enjoyed riding in his car, and she had enjoyed the knowledge that apart from herself he disregarded all women, but now such small satisfactions were swallowed up and thrown aside.

She wanted someone to love her and care for her—someone whom she could love in return. What was the use of resting her tired head on a shoulder which gave her no thrill? What was the use of taking money from a man who was no more to her than the iron end of her narrow bedstead, or the empty wooden chair beside her, upon which Poppy had just sat and talked in her level, sensible voice?

And yet, when she left the hospital—and she knew it would not be so very long now before they wanted her bed for someone else—what was to become of her?

Sally had met other girls in just such a position as her own. One—a girl named Jessie Wayley, who had danced in the chorus at a West End theatre, had developed consumption, and drifted from one hospital to another, and from one sanitorium to another, friendless and hopeless, until at last she had died.

"And I shan't even die," Sally told herself in panic. "People who are crippled like I shall be never die young. They just go on till they're old and hideous to look at, and then they die in the workhouse."

She shivered from head to foot at the thought. And she had been so ambitious, had hoped for so much.

Another girl she had known—not nearly so pretty as she was, or such a dainty dancer — had married the younger son of a title, and now bought all her clothes in Hanover Square and drove her own car. Sally had been ambitious, but not so ambitious as that. All she had wanted of life was to be the wife of Josh Akers.

It had not seemed a great deal to ask, but he had thought it too much. The aching pain in her heart was very near to hatred as she remembered their last meeting.

She had cried, and he had sworn at her. It had been a mistake to cry—she could see that now. Men hated tears and scenes. If you wanted to keep a man in love with you, you had to be always laughing and cheerful. If you wanted to keep a man faithful, you must never show him how greatly you cared.

If only she could have things over again—just six months; just three! But now it was too late, and the future of which she had hoped such great things was like a black, bottomless pit into which she knew she must fall unless some strong, kind hand stretched out and saved her.

Only that morning the nurse, who meant to be kind, but who was always so terribly busy and business-like, had said to her:

"Let me cut your hair off. You'll be so much more comfortable with short hair."

Sally had almost killed her.

"Don't you dare to touch my hair!" she raved. Her chief beauty! To think that anyone had dared to make such a cold-blooded suggestion! Philip Sanderson loved her hair she knew; he was not a man who said a great deal, but she knew that he loved her hair.

There was something silently kind about him, in spite of his blunt speech and queer personality. She was sure that he would not have mocked her as Josh Akers had done.

It made her cheeks burn to remember the stinging things Josh had said. And yet she had gone back to him—gone back like a dog that had been whipped, ready to forgive and kiss the hand that thrashed her. Well, that part of her life was ended; she had got to carve out some new and strange path for herself now—some lonely path!

Sally dreaded loneliness! Her greatest horror had always been that some day she would find herself friendless as Jessie Wayley had done—that some day she would have to die alone.

Panic seized upon her. Anything would be better than that! Even Philip Sanderson would be better—a thousand times better. A house in the country—ugh! how she hated the country! —and someone to look after her, so Poppy had said, holding out as a great inducement these things which she herself would have loathed. Someone to look after her! Some paid, disagreeable woman, who would bully her and treat her as a half-wit!

Sally tried to raise herself on her elbow, but the pain in her side hurt her and forced her back on to the pillow again.

Horrible, horrible, this utter helplessness. She who had been as light as thistledown on her tiny feet.

She remembered once going with Poppy to a Christian Science meeting. She did not know why they had gone—just out of curiosity, she supposed, but the speaker had impressed upon the audience the wonderful effect of will-power.

"Never give way! By will-power one can conquer most weaknesses. Hold fast to the thought of health and strength, and health and strength will be yours."

"All tommy-rot!"—so Poppy had whispered to her at the time, but now, weak and defeated as she felt herself to be, it seemed to Sally that perhaps, after all, there might be a glimmer of truth in what they had heard.

"Never give way! Hold fast to the thought of health and strength, and health and strength will be yours."

She lay very still for a moment, her eyes closed; then slowly and with infinite difficulty she tried once more to raise herself in bed. The perspiration poured down her white face with the pain and the supreme effort, but still she persevered, until she had forcer herself to the edge of the narrow bed. If only she could get on her feet once more, she was sure she would find these last nightmare weeks only a dream.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 29, 1928

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate).

Sinister stars rule this day, according to astrology which reads in the horoscope many adverse aspects.

Early in the morning the sway is more kindly than later. The influences encourage constructive thinking and should be favorable to planning for the day.

There is a lucky sign for farmers and other workers who may find that the day develops pleasant surprises.

This should be lucky for using or acquiring machinery, for all labor-saving devices are well directed.

Under this direction of the stars, both men and women may show nervous tension that may easily produce quarrels and misunderstandings.

Care should be exercised in speaking until the danger of angry retorts is past. Domestic atmosphere may easily precipitate thunderstorms today.

Accidents of various sorts may be numerous under this rule of the stars which presages a disaster on the water.

Critical attitudes of mind may be prevalent to-day and for this reason the seers warn everyone to avoid harboring destructive thoughts of every sort.

As the summer draws to a close there may be much mental depression, for the stars are in aspects conductive to despondency and regret. A positive point of view should be maintained.

Again Mexico seems to be subject to threatening aspects and it is wise for residents of the United States to be satisfied with their own coutnry as a place for business and investment until better aspects prevail.

The Southern States may be affected to a certain extent by adverse planetary aspects that arouse old enmities and sow new discords, but they are to benefit greatly in the new year when there will be harmony.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of business trips and unexpected journeys. These subjects of Virgo are usually capable and efficient and they succeed in whatever they undertake.

Children born on this day probably will be vigorous and active with the sign representing the hidden fire of earth of guide them, they usually succeed in big enterprises. Many scholars are born under Virgo, who have great persistence and forcefulness. Writers, editors, musicians and public speakers belong to this sign.

POST'S BED BUG POISON.

Post's Bed Bug Poison is composed of carbolic acid, Methyl Hydrate and Corrosive sublimate. When this preparation is used according to directions it is sure death to bed bugs, cockroaches and insects of all descriptions. Two or three applications are all that is necessary, but as it is very poisonous, this preparation should be kept out of reach of children.

UNCLE WIGGILY

To-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S QUEER FLOWERS.

Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard R. Garis).

"Don't you want that any more Mrs. Twistytail?" asked Uncle Wiggily as he stopped hopping in front of the sty house where the fat pig lady and gentleman lived. Only just now Mr. Twistytail was down at the brook, teaching Curly, Floppy and Speakie Squealer how to swim.

"Don't I want what?" grunted Mrs. Twistytail in surprise, leaning out of her windows and looking at Mr. Longears.

"Don't you want that?" Uncle Wiggily pointed to something the pig lady had tossed to the path. It was something red, pink, blue, yellow and purple and these colors were flowers.

"That old hat of mine? Do I want that?" grunted Mrs. Twistytail, laughingly. "Indeed and I don't! I just threw it away for the ash cart."

"Then I'll take it," said Uncle Wiggily, picking up the hat.

"Dear me!" grunted the pig lady. What in the world are you going to do with an old hat that I'm throwing away?"

"It isn't the hat I want so much as I do the cloth flowers on it," said Mr. Longears. "Those are artificial cloth flowers, aren't they?"

"Oh, yes," was the grunting answer.

"I always like plenty of flowers on my hats and this time I bought plenty. But the hat has gone out of style, so I threw it away."

"The flowers are still good," said Uncle Wiggily, and he pulled the bunch off Mrs. Twistytail's old hat and held the make believe blossoms to his pink, twinkling nose.

"There's no smell to them!" laughed the lady pig.

"I've found that out," Uncle Wiggily answered. "But I can buy a bottle of perfume in the eight and nine cent store."

"Dear me, Uncle Wiggily! This is very strange!" cried the lady pig. "What in the world do you mean by pulling cloth flowers off my old hat and talking about sprinkling perfume on them to make them smell sweet? What's the idea?"

"The idea is to make a magic garden for Old Toad in place of the weeds he has to look at all day long," was the reply. "To-night after dark, I am going to fasten sprays of these artificial flowers on the pigweed, ragweed, burdock and plantain that grow in what Old Toad calls his garden. He makes believe it has in it roses and violets and honeysuckle. But it is only pretense. Now he shall look out on some real colored flowers and they will scent the air for him. He need never know tney are only make believe artificial cloth flowers off an old hat, perfumed from the eight and nin-cent store."

"No, I think not," said Uncle Wiggily twinkling his eyes as well as his pink nose. "You see Old Toad can no longer hop about. He has to sit in a jumpity jump, a sort of bouncing swing I made for him and he can only look in his garden. Of course green is a lovely color, but when I put in the red, blue, yellow, purple and pink flowers it will really be a magic garden."

"How kind you are!" murmured the lady pig.

That night, when it was still and quiet in Woodland, Uncle Wiggily went to the patch of weeds which poor Old Toad called his garden. Working quietly, Mr. Longears wound the wire stems of the cloth flowers on the burdock and other plants. Then from a bottle the bunny uncle sprinkled perfume on the old hat flowers.

In the morning when Old Toad hobbled out to his jumpity jump in front of his house beneath the big stone, he could hardly believe his eyes.

"Oh, you are a good make believe pretender!" laughed Mrs. Toad.

"I'm not pretending at all! See the real flowers! Smell the real flowers!" cried Old Toad. "Oh, what a beautiful magic garden!"

If Mrs. Toad knew about the trick she said nothing. So all day Old Toad sat in his bouncing jumpity jump and looked at the cloth flowers and smelled their perfume. He was very happy.

"I wonder how it all happened?" said Old Toad.

"I wonder?" murmured Mr. Longears, slyly twinkling his pink nose as he hopped past and stopped to speak to Old Toad. "I wonder?" So the poor old creature was made happy. And if the potato masher doesn't try to cut the grass with a golf ball and make the needle wink its eye I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Gup's tail.

in Winnipeg cash wheat prices a weaker feeling developed in the local spring wheat flour market and prices were reduced twenty cents per barrel. Winter wheat flour was quiet and unchanged.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued good and prices were steady. The undertone to the market for standard grades of rolled oats was firm under a fair demand.

A feature of the egg trade was the stronger feeling that developed for fresh extras and prices were marked up one to two cents per dozen. This was attributed to the increasing scarcity of supplies. Other grades were steady. The receipts were 811 cases.

The inquiry for imported beans was good and values were firmly maintained.

The strength which characterized the local butter situation last week was again in evidence today and prices scored another advance of 1-4c per lb. The trade was moderately active. The receipts were 80 packages.

Little business was transacted in cheese but values were firm. The receipts were 4,304 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press)—Grains moved on to firmer ground on the Chicago market yesterday as foreign news came in to check a ripple of selling.

Indifferent buying of wheat at the start eased prices off a fraction but the enthusiasm of sellers waned as the session progressed. A firm market at Winnipeg, top prices at the day's close on the Liverpool board and adverse crop reports in Europe were factors inducing confidence in buyers and all deliveries of wheat here finished the day at or near the highest mark of the season.

Few showers were reported from Canadian harvest fields but unsettled weather was predicted in two provinces and on the northern border of the states, with a possibility of local frost. Stocks of wheat at the Canadian lake ports decreased 4,769,000 bushels to 6,055,000, compared with 14,699,000 bushels a year ago. Local traders paid considerable attention also to the counsel of the acting secretary of agriculture advising farmers to hold such wheat as they were able to store. Wheat closed firm at ⅜ to ⅝ higher, September $1.11⅛, Dec. $1.16⅛, March $1.21⅛.

Heavy buying for September delivery featured the corn market. Corn opened strong but met a wave of settling at mid-session which was checked by the rapid rise of September at the end to a point 2¼ to 2⅝ above Saturday's finish.

Country offerings continued light, and indications of showers in the domestic corn belt were attended by unfavorable European crop forecasts although cables reported heavy arrivals of Argentine corn.

Corn closed strong, ⅝ to 2⅝ up, September 93¼ to ½, Dec. 73½ to ⅝ and March 76⅛ to ¼.

After opening easy, oats rallied in sympathy with corn and closed ⅛c higher, with September at 38.

Provisions were irregular, pressure from local commission houses sending lard down while ribs advanced a fraction. Lard was 7 cents lower to 5c higher, ribs unchanged to five cents higher, and bellies unchanged.

His father and mother often walked from their home to the ninth line to church. Then they drove a team of oxen. Afterwards they rode horseback, each taking a child. His wife organized the first Sunday school in the old brick school. This Sunday school is still carried on in the new school of S. S. No. 7.

In those days grain sold at Millbrook, brought the following prices: Oats 25c; wheat 65c going as high as $1 or $1.25. Cows brought $15 to $25; steers $18 to $20.

The first self binder used on his farm caused a great deal of interest. People drove for many miles to see it work.

He especially admired the hoops worn by the ladies and girls. He says the women found it as hard to keep their knees covered as they do to-day.

Mr. Matchett moved to St. Paul in 1893 and has resided there ever since.

Mr. Matchett although 74 years of age, is still hale and hearty and enjoyed running his nephew's binder, just to see if he could still manage it.

He enjoyed his visit and meeting so many friends and relatives. He found his own immediate neighborhood much changed, only a few of the old residents remaining. In fact there are only four farms in the hands of the same families as resided on them in the days in Cavan.

One is the farm on which Mr. Matchett was born, now occupied by his nephew Mr. Richard Matchett. The Kelly farm Mr. Eber Syer's and Mr. R. S. Staples are the other three farms still occupied by the earlier owners.

Mr. Matchett has two sisters residing in Bethany, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Staples. Mr. Sherwood Matchett came over to make a short visit and accompany his father home. They are now at their home in St. Paul.

The Cavan Women's Institute are holding a corn roast on Tuesday evening at the home of the secretary, Miss Eileen Hunter. The menu will be corn and pie.

Harrisons Are in Softball League Play-Offs

WIN FROM KNIGHTS 15-4

PLAY-OFFS ON FRIDAY.

By virtue of their 15-4 win over the K. of C. last night night at Confederation Square, Harrison's will meet De Laval for the championship of the City Softball League.

Last night's battle was far better than the score indicates. K. of C. lead Harrisons 4-2 going into the sixth inning, but a home run by Montgomery with the bases loaded changed the count to 6-4 for the Northenders. They were blanked in the seventh but broke loose in the last two frames to score nine runs and wallop three K. of C. pitchers. The Knights scored three runs in the first and one in the fifth for their counters.

Dundas drew the pitching assignment for Harrisons, and turned in a nice card. He was given airtight support by his team after the first inning, when three errors and a couple of hits gave the Knights a trio of runs.

Darling was on the rubber for the Knights and went great guns until the sixth when Montgomery's long homer caused his downfall. He was succeeded by Murphy, who in turn gave way to LeBarr when the going became too rough. LeBarr finished although being hit hard.

Murphy's work at second and LeBarr's at first featured for the Knights. Connors with three hits and L. LeBarr with two were the hitting stars of their team.

Clarke, in right field for the Northenders handled seven chances without a slip, his fielding featuring. Ross, Dorrington and Calladine also turned in nice fielding cards. Three home runs were made by the Northenders, Montgomery poling out two of them, one with the bases loaded, and Calladine getting the other. Montgomery's all round work was a real treat to the large crowd of spectators.

The teams:

K. of C.—M. Clancy, ss; Murphy, 2b, p; L. LeBarr, 1b, p; E. LeBarr, c; Ranger, 3b; Bennett, cf; Lynch, rf; Connors, lf, 2b; Darling, p, cf.

SOFTBALL FINALS OPEN NEXT FRIDAY

De Laval and Harrisons Will Meet in Local League Play-offs.

The first game of the play offs for the championship of the City Softball League will take place Friday evening at 5.45 p.m. at Confederation Square when Harrison's Northenders will meet the De Laval. This should be a great series as both teams are capable of playing good ball and have been.

De Laval went through the season with only one loss registered against them, while Harrisons suffered three defeats.

Both teams possess good pitchers and heavy hitters, the De Laval boasting such stars at Frick, Galbraith, Fowler, Jake Hall, Cooper and the Miller brothers, while Harrisons have Montgomery, Calladine, Bob Ross, Dundas, Dorrington, Dobson and the Vinette brothers.

The play off games should be productive of great ball and should draw big crowds.

ROYALS ARE ON THE RAMPAGE

When it comes to making things tough, rough and nasty, these Royals from Montreal know how. The pennant race in the International loop this year is about the keenest in baseballdom. The Toronto Leafs have had things pretty much their own way when it comes to holding down first place, but the dashing Royals have been right on their tracks. In the first series of games playedon the Leafs' home ground, the Royals did everything but wipe their feet on Bill O'Hara's stalwarts, and when they left they took the league leadership with them.

One thing the Royals have is 100 per cent. support from the French-Canadian fans, who have been converted into A1 ball fans and are behind the Royals through thick and thin.

George Stallings, so-called "miracle man of the diamond" got his nickname from his sensational handling of the Boston Braves in 1914 when the baseball fans placed the Braves on the shelf for the remainder of the season. George stepped in and not only won the league title but walked of with the world's series.

Among the Royals' outstanding stalwarts this year in the pennant race is the veteran catcher Thomas Daly. Daly was formerly with the Chicago White Sox. With this club he toured the world and played before notables of Europe. It was during this world tour that Tommy covered himself with glory by swatting out a home run to win a game. Possibly one of the most interesting things about Daly is that he is one of the very few Canucks to reach major league ball. He is a New Brunswick boy.

Bob Shawkey is Montreal's pitching veteran. Though he is still good and is still a worry to many of the boys in the Toole loop, he is not quite as good as in his early days. He played part of a season with last year's world champions, the New York Americans, and was later traded to one of the minor league clubs and ended up as one of the Jersey City franchise.

Bucky Gaudette is probably the brightest prospect the dashing Royals have at the present time. Bucky burned up the road to fame about two years ago, and is still making headway in that direction with the Royals.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

Kiwanis Juveniles are asked to call at Police Station between 7 and 8 o'clock on Wednesday night for birth certificates.

Alex. Kay will take temporary charge of Riley & Hickey bantam team during the absence of Ernie Wolfe, the regular manager. As this team will play the winner of Toronto-Guelph and Hamilton-St. Catharines play-offs, they will not likely get into action until next week.

* * * *

Elizabeth Juveniles and Juniors were returned victors in their fixtures with the two Oshawa crews. The Juvenile team won 8-6 andwill go into the next round of the provincial play-offs. The Juniors forced the St. Andrew's into a third and deciding game when they defeated them 4-3.

Harrison's go into the City League softball play-offs by reason of their win over the Knights last night in Confederation Park. The first game will be played on Friday night, August 31, and this should be a great battle. The De Laval went through the season with only one loss chalked up against them, while the North-Enders have suffered three defeats.

* * * *

Last night's fixture was a tight game up until the sixth inning, when a homer by Montgomery for Harrison's with the bases loaded changed the count from 4-2 for the Knights to 6-4 for the North-Enders. The victors added more to their list in the last frames to wallop three pitchers for nine more runs.

The Buffalo Bisons staged a grand slam in the hectic league race yesterday when they vanquished the Baltimore Orioles 6-3, while Toronto and Rochester met defeat. This coup put the Bisons in a virtual tie for first place, although Reading and Toronto hold a fractional edge over the Bisons, and are in a deadlock for the top. The contest was featured by several brawls between the Oriole club and Umpire Meyers. Manager Dunn was chased from the field, to be later followed by Maisel, Brower and Lamotte.

EVERYTHING READY FOR APSLEY FAIR

Many Interesting Events, Including Dance—Tourists Numerous.

(Examiner Correspondence)

APSLEY, August 28.—Considerable work has been done on the fair grounds during the past week by working "bees" and individual voluntary labor but much remains to be done to have everything in shape by September 5th and 6th, the date of the fair. The track for the speed trials is being graded, and practically the whole of the grounds has been fenced. The judge's stand and exhibition building have yet to be erected. Mr. B. F. Harvey has very kindly promised three cushions, valued at five dollars each, as special prizes in the ladies' work department. Mr. G. A. Gillespie has promised to judge the dairy products.

The anual fall exodus of cattle from this district has commenced, the Tate brothers, cattle buyers taking out between forty and fifty head yesterday.

Mr. Hilton of Norfolk, Virginia, proprietor of the Marvirlol Camps, Loon Lake, gave a dance on Wednesday night at his new cottage on Paudash Point, which was very largely attended, about two hundred people being present.

Though many of the tourists are returning home, every day sees new arrivals passing through the village, en route to Paudash and other points the majority being from the States.

CARDS GAIN IN STANDINGS

PIRATES WIN 9-4.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—The St. Louis Cardinals threw water on the smouldering pennant hopes of the Cubs yesterday by whacking Blake and Root for thirteen hits and a 11 to 3 victory in the opener of their three game series at Chicago.

By their victory, the Cards increased their lead in the National League race to four games over the idle Giants and to four and a half over the Cubs.

The Cubs nicked Rhem and Johnson for twelve safeties, but were unable to bunch them as did the Cards. Every Cardinal except J. Wilson and Rhem got one or more hits, while Bottomley cleaned the bags with a timely double in the seventh inning, clinching the game. St. Louis also scored four runs in the ninth off Charlie Root after two were down.

Riggs Stephenson, Cub left fielder, has been called home to Alabama, where his father is seriously ill, and Cuyler shifted from right to left field, while Heathcote took Cuyler's place in right.

Pittsburgh drove Luque from the mound in the sixth inning, and defeated Cincinnati 9 to 4. Paul Waner worked the Cuban for three straight passes before the latter was taken from the box. The Reds got fourteen hits off Fussell, but could not group them for runs.

EXCURSION SUCCESS.

Gilmour Memorial Sunday School Members Visit Fenelon Falls.

BRIDGENORTH, August 28. — The annual excursion of the Gilmour Memorial Baptist Sunday school, was held on Friday August 24 by Steamer Stoney Lake to Fenelon Falls.

In spite of the unpromising weather the attendance was very satisfactory.

Although the rain poured heavily, everyone was in good humor. The boat reached Fenelon Falls at 12.30. All disembarked and viewed the beautiful scenery.

At 2 p.m., began the homeward journey which was much more enjoyable, the rain having ceased.

In spite of the weather conditions, this was one of the most successful excursions held by the Gilmour Memorial school in recent years.

New Zealand Bowlers Win From Ottawa

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—The New Zealand touring lawn bowlers registered a 65-shot victory over the Ottawa and district team in an expertly played match on the Victoria greens yesterday. Of the two rinks on the Ottawa side which vanquished their opponents, one was led by the veteran local bowler, James Hoey, while Dr. English of Brockville captained the other.

At the mid-period of the matches Mayor Arthur Ellis welcomed the visitors to the Capital. He referred to splended spirit of sportsmanship manifested by the New Zealanders.

T. D. Finn, Eastern Ontario Lawn Bowling Association President, expressed the pleasure it give the Ottawa district bowlers to entertain the tourists.

LEAFS AND KEYS TIED FOR FIRST

FIGHT AT BUFFALO.

TORONTO, August 28. — Toronto and Reading are locked in a tie at the top of the International heap this morning as a result of the Keys defeating the Leafs, 3 to 2, in the first game of the series, played at the Fleet Street Park yesterday. The Bisons trounced the Orioles and are just a fraction back of the first two, and three other teams are still in the race, and then some.

Boston Braves defeated the Leafs, 4 to 1, in the exhibition game which followed the league fixture, scoring two runs in the eighth and a pair in the ninth. Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Braves, played through the ninth innings and had little trouble convincing the three thousand fans that he is a mighty fine ball player and just as good as the big league critics claim him to be.

Johnny Prudhomme and Nick Harrison had a tight battle in the tilt that counted and the Keys broke a tie and won out in the ninth. Dale Alexander lifted the ball over the right field barrier in the fourth inning for his twenty-fifth home run of the season. Rabbitt Whitman, of the Keys, drove the ball over the same fence for a homer in the sixth inning.

Bisons Pull Up.

BUFFALO, August 28.—The Buffalo Bisons staged a grand slam in the hectic league race here yesterday when they vanquished the Baltimore Orioles, 6 to 3, while Toronto and Rochester met defeat. This coup put the Bisons in a virtual tie for first place, although by the workings of arithmetic Reading and Toronto hold a fractional advantage over the Bisons, and are in a deadlock for the top.

The contest was featured by the pitching of Williams, and marred by several brawls between Umpire Meyers and the Baltimore players. The game was held up five minutes in the second inning when Meyers chased Manager Dunn from the bench. Dunn came on the field and staged a pulling and hauling match with Meyers until the umpire had to call Deputy-Sheriffs on the field to aid in removing him from the centre of the diamond, where he held forth in civies, coat in hand. Later Meyers chased Maisel, Brower, and Lamotte from the Baltimore bench.

Mamaux Checks Reds.

ROCHESTER, August 28. — Al Mamaux was effective in the pinches yesterday afternoon, and Newark made off with the first game of the series with Rochester, 7 to 2. Joe Jenkins hit a homer over the left-field fence in the eighth with one man on base.

Close Call for Royals.

MONTREAL, August 28. — The Royals outlasted the Skeeters here yesterday, winning by 5 to 4 in a hard-fought battle.

YANKEES WIN DOUBLE BILL

Defeat Detroit Tigers 4-3 and 5-2 To Increase League Lead.

ST. LOUIS ROUT SOX.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—The Yankees took advantage of Philadelphia's idleness yesterday to increase their lead to four games by winning both ends of a double header from the Detroit Tigers, 4 to 3, and 5 to 2.

Tom Zachary made his new debut in the opener and won a left handed pitching duel from Earl Whitehill.

Clever use of the bunt by Manager Huggins won the first game for New York. Durocher bunted with two out in the sixth and sent Meusel home with the tying run. In the eighth, Gehrig led off by reaching first on a bunt, took third on Ruth's single and scored the winning run on Meusel's sacrifice fly.

In the second game, George Pipgras won his twenty-first game of the season, outpitching Owen Carroll. He was well supported and his team did some timely batting.

St. Louis routed the Red Sox in a double header, winning 8 to 6 in the opener and shutting out Boston in the second game 4 to 0. After being held hitless for five innings in the first game, the visitors dropped on Harris for five runs in the sixth. Manush drove in four runs in this game. Ogden's four hit pitching and Schulte's perfect batting were the features of the second game. The St. Louis centerfielder made three doubles and a homer, scored three runs and drove in the other St. Louis tally.

Uhle was hit hard yesterday, but he was effective with men on bases, and Cleveland gained an even break in a four game series by beating Washington 5 to 3. Hudlin relieved Uhle in the ninth with two on base and none out, and caused Rice to line to Dorman and Goslin to hit into a double play. Lind, Cleveland second baseman, got three hits as did West, Washington centerfielder.

WALKER WINNER IN HIGHER CLASS

Middleweight Champion Makes Impressive Debut as Light Heavyweight.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—Micky Walker, middleweight champion, made an impressive entry into the light heavyweight ranks last night when he scored a sensational knockout over Armand Emanuel, San Fracisco, in the seventh round of their ten round bout. A short right to the jaw as Emanuel came in dropped the latter for the full count after he had just regained his feet from taking a nine count.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

"All we need to make this story a comedy knockout is a cast of real troupers" said Charlie Murray when he finished reading the "script" of "The Head Man," adapted from Harry Leon Wilson's novel, "The Boss of Little Arcady."

So Eddie Cline, famous comedy director who was to make the picture, and various First National officials consulted with the comedian on the selection of the players who would support him in his latest mirth offering. The result was the fine cast seen in "The Head Man," coming to the Regent Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

Loretta Young, the newest and one of the most promising of leading ladies, had just finished a picture opposite Lon Chaney. Her work was so fine that she was chosen for the ingenue lead in "The Head Man." Opposite her in the romance of the whimsical, appealing story is Larry Kent, also a comparative newcomer and a rising light among leading men.

The rest of the cast reads like a "distinguished service on stage and screen" list. Lucien Littlefield has one of the best roles of his colorful career in Ed. Barnes, crony of the hero. E. J. Ratcliffe, Irving Bacon and Harvey Clark are small-town politicians.

Martha Mattox and Rosa Gore, made up as twins more alike in appearance than the proverbial two peas, are feminine high spots in "The Head Man." Dot Farley, veteran comedienne, and Sylvia Ashton have other roles laden with comedy responsibility.

From these players down to the last extra, 'twas Charlie Murray's idea of a "real cast of troupers." How well they succeed in the picture—let the spectator judge

Why We Do What We Do.

Father Time is a tricky fellow. He seems to delight in being contrary or else he is a confirmed practical joker. He always does the opposite of what you want him to do. If you are anxious to have time move along at high speed he barely moves; if you want him to stand still he leaps a thousand leagues at once.

Time takes wings when we are having a good time because we are unaware of sequence of events. Our minds are occupied with other things.

Time flies when we are busy for exactly the same reasons. In looking back to a busy day that is past it sems long because there are so many more events to mark the day. As you recount each incident you are impressed with the succession of events in time. But during the immediate the busier you are the faster time disappears because there is no break in the succession of events.

Another reason why time flies when we are busy is that we don't want it to go so fast. We keep hoping we had more time in which to accomplish a necessary piece of work.

This is true of anything desirable. There is never enough of it. A pint of ice-cream seems little enough to a small boy even though it gives him a stomach ache; whereas a teaspoon of castor oil is just a teaspoon too much. Here is a fundamental principle of human conduct. The pleasant experience we tend to continue and the painful experiences we avoid as completely and quickly as we can.

Time is relative. It is relative to our interest or the lack of interest in what is going on. Time is accurate enough as measured by the clock and registered by the calendar, but it is like an accordion as registered by the mind. It may be squeezed into a small space or pulled out to tortuous length.

As sure as you become interested in what you are doing and forget time completely, it will run away with you. To stay the hands and feet of time you must keep your eyes glued on the clock.

HANDING THE BATON.

The British empire won the two mile relay race against U. S. A., at Stamford Bridge, in the world's record time of 7 minutes and 8 4-5 seconds. The photo shows Phil Edwards of Hamilton, handing the baton over to D. G. A. Lowe of England. Lowe, the Olympic 800-metre champion says he has run his last race, and will devote himself to law.

CANADA'S ATHLETES RETURN HOME

Joe Wright, Jr., of Toronto, who won the Diamond Sculls in England this summer, does not devote all his spare time to rowing as this picture, taken on the White Star liner Laurentic, on which he arrived in Montreal, proves. The winner of the most famous amateur rowing event in the world is fond of children, and he does not hide his feelings. Apparently his young girl friend is much more timid, judging by her attitude. The Canadian Olympic games girls' team, which also returned on the Laurentic, are shown on the top. Left to right, front row: Myrtle Cook, Alexandrine Gibb, the manager; P. J. Mulqueen, Olympic committee, president; Miss Marie Parkes, the chaperone; Ethel Smith. Back row: Dorothy Prior, "Ginger" Catherwood, sister of the high jumper; Ethel Catherwood, Fanny Rosenfeld, Jean Thompson and Jane Bell.

IN POLICE COURT

A man appeared for sentence this m[illegible] at a previous appearance on a charge of chicken theft. He had been remanded and had spent the past six days in jail. A fine of $20.00 and costs was imposed by the Magistrate, reparation for the chickens having already been made.

Following disposal of this case, His Worship called for argument in the case of reckless driving preferred against George B. Clapper of Hastins. Clapper's trial had taken place in Havelock some time ago, the result of his having knocked down and seriously injured John Gibbs of Havelock in that village on August 8, but argument had been deferred.

Alex Elliott, appearing for Clapper, and G. W. Hatton, K.C., County Crown Attorney, presented their respective sides of the case in fairly brief manner at the conclusion of which His Worship reserved judgment until next Tuesday.

IS IT A POSE?

(By Jeanette.)

She was a lady of generous girth and a build far from streamline in effect. She said "I eat very little. I have a couple of soda biscuits and two cups of strong coffee for breakfast, a glass of orange juice at eleven o'clock and a very frugal dinner at six. And I never eat mid-day lunch." She emphasized this so strongly that we were impressed by the recital. Two days later we dropped into her favorite lunch room. She was sitting there, with a large plateful of roast beef in front of her. Flanking plates held cabbage and potatoes. A hovering waitress bore in a generous slice of blueberry pie.

A slim maiden of nineteen summers posed gracefully in front of a mirror. She was admiring the look of a white coat on her graceful figure. She said: "I only have two meals a day. I never eat dinner." In a few minutes, her mother joined her. "Hazel, I ordered lamb for today," she said. "You said yesterday you were tired of beef and pork."

Turning to the audience, she remarked: "I don't know how Hazel manages to keep so slight. It must be all the exercising she does that keeps her down. She has such a speindid appetite."

The thing time it was a waitress who entertained us with the story of her lack of interest in viands. We had ordered a sizable lunch. She regarded the order with a noticeable lack of interest. We said: "Which of the fish dishes is the nicest?" She answered languidly: 'I don't know, really. I never eat fish except on Friday. Most days I don't eat much at all. I never have any breakfast. She went away with a superior look. We regarded her from the rear, and noted that she was inclined to "embonpoint," as the French put it. We hadn't an opportunity of viewing her mealtime efforts, so probably she doesn't eat much after all, and the plumpness of her figure may mean that she is dropsical. But we have a hazy idea that she may get along like Mrs. Casey in the story. She was ordered by her doctor to stop eating potatoes at her meals, and did so, making up for it by having a of spuds occasionally, in between times.

LYRICS OF LIFE

A WAYSIDE WELL.

He met her by a wayside well.
You think the maid his thoughts recall?
Ah, no. I doubt if he could tell
He ever met the maid at all
He saw her, but he saw her not;
His mind was busy with great plans.
The man the maiden's eyes forgot;
The maid has not forgot the man's.

And all those dreams of his came true,
Those dreams of wealth and hopes of fame;
And yet he wonders, all life through,
Why with them not one sweetness came.
He never found his happiness,
And wonders why, and cannot tell.
For he will never know, nor guess,
He passed it by a wayside well.

LACHANCE AND COBOURG BOY ELUDE POLICE

Disappear While Brantford Man Is Notifying the Police.

LETTERS FOUND.

Couple Last Seen Short Distance From Brantford Yesterday at Noon.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 28.—Unmailed letters written by 15-year-old Pat Taylor, of Cobourg, found in a room in a Mohawk street boarding house, have provided the police of Brantford and other cities mentioned with some clues which are being speedily followed up in their quest for the boy, missing from his home since August 10, and his alleged kidnapper, "Capt." J. H. Lachance. The pair had been staying at the Brantford boarding house since last Wednesday, but when Lachance was questioned on Sunday by his suspicious landlord, following publication of the facts surrounding the disappearance of the boy, they dropped out of sight again before the police could be notified.

The missives were on scraps of paper addressed to "Mother" and signed "Pat." There were three of them, and no doubt was left as to the identity of the writer, as mention was made several times of Mr. Lachance. The boy said he was well, told of the receipt of money for his services, purchases made, including a new suit and a pair of shoes, and discussed plans of future movements.

Posed as Priest.

The man who is alleged to have kidnapped "Pat" Taylor, the Cobourg boy, is well educated, Mr. Bissett, who met him here assisted to find the boy and his alleged captor a home and a job said. Bissett met the pair on the street and understood that he was an escaped monk who had left the monastery with the lad and that he was glad to get away and save himself and the boy from the attention of those in the monastery. The man also gave a different name, saying he was Rev. James O'Leary, D.D., and backed up the clerical nomeclature with much prayer. He knelt in prayer and made a profound impression on those whom he came in contact with. When Bissett wanted the man to say something about the story seen in the Toronto press re the kidnapping the man again relied on prayer and supplication that Bissett would not deliver himself and the boy to the police.

The boy appeared to be well content and showed that he had been well treated, saying that he would not leave his partner. The pair also showed a cheque for the sum of $50, but where it was from could not be ascertained. In addition to this help of clothes the man was to have started at the blacksmith shop of the Verity Plow Company Monday morning and was all set to start. Jack Kerr, foreman of the plant, promised the position.

Bissett states that the man was about 5 feet 2 inches in height, dark complexioned, clean shaven and wore a grey suit several sizes too big and looked very untidy. He wore a hat that was donated by friends.

The boy impressed all who saw him as being a smart, well-educated lad, fresh complexioned, dark, wearing no hat. Bissett was in doubht as to what action to take, but thought that the lad being so well content there was nothing suspicious about the affair, particularly as the man intended to settle down here and earn a living. The police were in the dark about the whole story as they had not been informed about the disappearance of the lad, and were not on the look-out. They immediately got busy when Bissett told his story yesterday morning, but this was too late.

They have been traced as far as the village of Scotland by the police. The pair left Brantford on Sunday evening and were seen near Scotland yesterday about 11 o'clock. They were travelling on foot, in very leisurely style, and spent some time in the vicinity of the village, calling at a farm house for a drink of water, and purchasing a bottle of milk and some doughnuts in a store in the village. The bottle was afterwards returned to the store and the couple were seen resting under a tree near the village.

No trace has been found of the two since noon, but it is believed they are still in the vicinity and a close watch is being kept for them.

Relatives Anxious.

COBOURG, Aug. 28.—The uncertainty which has surrounded the fate and whereabouts of Pat Taylor, who left his home in Cobourg on August 10 last in company with a man who gave his name as Lachance, and who professed to be a surveyor in the employ of the Dominion Government, has caused much concern to the many in Cobourg who know the 15-year-old pupil of the Collegiate Institute. The one message received by his parents came in a letter a few days after he left, in which he stated that he was working with Lachance at Weston, that he was well and that he wanted some clothes sent him in care of the King Edward Hotel.

His parents were hourly more anxious about him, and eventually the police were asked to search for him and his companion. The search, started then, failed to bear any definite fruit as far as locating the lad until late Sunday night when a message intimated that he had been traced as far as Brantford.

Much mystery surrounds the man Lachance with whom Pat Taylor left for Toronto. He had been in Cobourg for several weeks before he engaged Pat to assist him in some surveying work in the harbor. At different places he told different stories, and it was the variance in these stories which first raised suspicion among those in Cobourg, who had been thrown into association with him. At times he claimed to have been a teacher in a Catholic College, at others he claimed to be a Christian Scientist.

Weakness In Liverpool Is Reflected In Chicago

CHICAGO, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—Weakness in Liverpool was reflected in wheat prices at Chicago in the opening trade to-day. Quotations at the outset fell from ¼ to 7-8 cents below Monday's close. Scattered selling was attended later by further moderate re-actions, while the corn market firmed up, opening steady at yesterday's closing figures to ¼ cent higher. Oats and provisions were fractionally lower.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 110¼, December 115 7-8; corn, September 93½, December 73 5-8; oats September 37 7-8, December 40¼.

International Nickel Reaches Record Price

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press).—International Nickel reached its record price at the morning session of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day when it soared to 106⅞. It suffered a decline during a rather brisk trading but rallied before the close, registering a net gain of 3⅜ to sell at 106½. International Nickel rights demonstrating the most activity of the morning, was up ⅛ to 4¼. Outside a few of the other better known leaders trading was exceedingly dull and although prices registered slight gains, few issues were called for.

Brazilian Traction was up ⅝ to 55½, Cosmos Imperial up one to 27, Cockshutt plow up ½ to 28½, Hayes Wheels up one to 33, Page Hersey up ⅝ to 95⅝, and Steel of Canada up two at 187. Walkers and British American Oil remained firm at 54⅞ and 37½ respectively and Northern Bakeries was unchanged at 39½.

High Money Rates Fail To Stop Price Advance

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—High money rates had a restrictive effect on trading in to-day's stock market, but speculators for the advance retained control of the price movement. New leaders were brought forward in the amusement, chemical, food, metal, motor accessary, and public utility groups. Early gains ranged from one to nearly six points with more than a dozen issues lifted to new high levels. There were several soft spots scattered throughout the list.

Call money renewed at 7½ per cent as against seven yesterday, and held steady at that figure throughout the early trading despite the calling of about $15,000,000 in bank loans.

Revival of activityand strength in International Nickel, which soared nearly six points to 106½, the highest price on record, was one of the day's features. Biscuit shares continued to anticipate increased earnings as a result of lower wheat prices, National Biscuit extending its early advance to 4½ points, while Loose Wiles attained a new peak at 66½, up two and a half. Fleischman nand American Best Sugar also eclipsed their previous 1928 high prices.

Noranda Strong Leader On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—Noranda was a strong leader in an uncertain market on the standard Mining Exchange to-day, climbing another two dollars a share at the noon closing price of 57.00, the session's high mark. A few other substantial advances were shown and losses apparently balanced the gains. Malartic at 1.69 at noon gained eight on a big turnover, while Bidgood improved to 68 and Howey firmed a couple of points at 103. Sudbury Basin at 7.65 was ten points better. The Kirkland Lake stocks generally were firm, with Teck Hughes improving eight at 9.13 and Kirkland Lake Gold gaining four at 1.55. Wright Hargreaves, however, suffered one of the session's biggest recessions, losing thirty-one points at 3.27. The Western issues were firm, though Hudson Bay lost 30 at 18.00. Sherritt Gordon at 6.85 and Kootenay Florence at 23 were both improved.

MAYLAND OIL

TORONTO, Aug. 27. —According to recent advices from Calgary, drilling troubles are now over at this company's well in the Turner Valley oil fields. The well is presently down 2,200 feet and is now cased past the bit which was lost some time ago. On Saturday the casing was cemented and it is anticipated drilling will commence again early this week.

This well, located one-half mile south of Home and on the centre of the Turner Valley structure, with identical geology to Home, is conceded to have more than ordinary chance of becoming a producer of merit. They anticipated reaching the production level of 2,600 feet in about two weeks' time.

The company has the highly modest capital of 300,000 shares of $1 par value of which 222,503 shares have been issued. It has, in our opinion, exceptionally good speculative possibilities at this time.

Tough-Oakes

According to a report from Kirkland Lake, the mill at this property was started up yesterday for the purpose of treating high grade recently ehcountered at the 400 and 1,000 foot levels.

Macassa

A despatch from our field man in Kirkland Lake states that this company are making arrangements to sink a shaft to a depth of 1,000 feet on Kirkland Lake Gold break. The report states that many holes of 600 and 1,000 feet have been drilled through this break commencing at the Kirkland Lake boundary. Values are reported to average $8 over a 7-foot width.

Malartic

A report from our field man in Rouyn has the following to say regarding this promising property in Fourniere township:

"The very much improved values being obtained on the 375 foot level practically assure this operation becoming a mine of considerable size. Sufficient ore of good grade has been opened on the third level, in conjunction with what is known on the first and second levels to warrant this assertion.

"It is now seen that commencing at the first level, which gave for a length of 535 feet an average value of approximately $6 a ton over a width of 32 feet, the values gradually increase to the third level where 80 feet in from the shaft in a south crosscut this large body comes in with splendid values. Following some high grade, a 76 foot section ran $8.12 over this great width. This was followed by a low grade section which possibly may be mined. During the last few days a ten foot section of high grade has been opened up beyond the low grade. Should it not be considered profitable to mine the low grade section, a total width of over 100 feet of considerably better ore than that showing on the first level has been opened up in two sections on the third level. Diamond drilling has indicated that the length of 535 feet drifted on the first level will be even surpassed on the third.

"A further large body of ore is partially developed some distance from the south on the two upper levels. From present knowledge this is similar to the north body, excepting that present work indicates somewhat better values. Between the two large bodies and almost at right angles to them is a vein 120 feet long which on the first level gave $10.50 over 6½ feet."

TENDERS WANTED.

SEALED TENDERS will be received up until 12 Noon August 31st, covering the Erection this year of Punch Press Building, Steel and Brick Construction. Plans and Specifications may be secured at the Company's Offices, Park Street. Lowest or any Tender not necessarily accepted.

BRITISH ACADEMY RECEIVES HOME

Sir Charles Wakefield Pays For Re-decorating Burlington House.

The celebration of the Earl of Balfour's 80th birthday has created widespread interest in Grea. Britain.

The British Academy, a learned society of which Lord Balfour has been president for many years, has recently been given a permanent home at Burlington House. The funds for panelling and decorating these rooms were donated by an anonymous donor. The London Times, however, recently announced that Sir Charles Cheers Wakefield, Bart., on the specific request of the committee, admitted that the cost of reconstruction and adapting the premises was done at his expense.

The Academy took formal possession of its new quarters and at the same time celebrated the 80th birthday of its president, Lord Balfour. The Prince of Wales was a guest of honor, and proposed Lord Balfour's health.

RELATIVES WANT MORE INFORMATION

Young Owen Sound Woman Was Strangled to Death in California.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Aug. 28. —(Special to The Examiner).—Relatives of Mrs. Frank Kelly, young Owen Sound colored woman, strangled to death at Oakland, California, nearly two weeks ago, are still awaiting word from the Oakland police regarding the circumstances of her death.

The body was buried in Greenwood Cemetery last Friday, and it was only yesterday that her relatives revealed the fact that the death certificate gave the cause of death as strangulation. A post mortem examination had been made on the body, and friends here are endeavoring to secure more details. The telegram, which came from California, simply stated she had died suddenly and gave no further details.

A letter had been received from Mrs. Kelly in June, stating her intention of coming back to Owen Sound. It is understood that when the casket was opened here it was discovered there had been a post mortem made by physicians in Oakland to determine definitely the cause of death.

Mrs. Kelly's marriage was the outcome of a war-time romance, which began when she sent several gift boxes to France. Some of these were received by Frank Kelly, a North Carolina negro serving in the Canadian Army. A correspondence sprang up between them, and on his return from overseas, Kelly came here to meet the girl. They were married soon afterward, although he was over 40 years of age, and settled in Toronto. They have been separated for several years, however, Mrs. Kelly having gone to Seattle and Oakland. Her husband was last reported as living in Buffalo.

A PEACEFUL IDYLL.

What is Life? Is it a never-ending routine of shopping, visiting theatres, or attending dances? Or is it the sitting beneath a canopy of leafy trees imagining that the hardships and worries of life are far distant, and in front of us the steady lap of waters? The latter, we all agree, for it has many compensations not found in the former. It is in the country that we sing a new song, with the hidden brook offering its peaceful accompaniments. It is with the Noble trees, and hills and valleys, that the beauties of life are reflected, and the highest emotions creep forth. Go to the Kawartha Lakes, Muskoka, Georgian Bay, the Bungalow Camps at French River and Nipigon or the many other delightful spots for which Ontario is noted and revel in the peace and beauty of forest and stream.

Let the Canadian Pacific assist you with your trip, consult their nearest agent for travel particulars. 2d-28-31

LIGHTNING HITS POWER HOUES

OPERATOR INJURED.

(Examiner Correspondence).

YOUNG'S POINT, Aug. 28.—During the fierce electrical storm which raged over this district at about two o'clock this afternoon, lightning struck the power house of the Lakefield Cement Company, which is situated here, causing a fire which destroyed all the machinery in the solid brick and stone building. This is the second time during the past few months that such a disaster has overcome the power house here, and thus, for the second time, the Lakefield Cement Company is deprived of part of its supply of electric power.

William Webb, Jr., who was attending the power house at the time, was forced to escape from the building by breaking through a window, and so severely injured was one of his arms, that it was necessary for him to visit a doctor in Lakefield. William Webb, Sr., seeing the fire, rushed into the building and shut off the power.

CLIMBING SEASON IS NEARLY OVER

Harvard Boys Have Hard Task Ascending Mount Cavell Recently.

JASPER, Alta., Aug. 28. — (Special.)—What will probably be the last ascent this season of Mount Edith Cavell has just been accomplished by John Weber, Swiss guide of Jasper, and two Harvard students, Everett L. Willard, Jr., of Chicago, and Stewart Boal. "Snow and ice conditions were so bad," said Weber on the return, "that I do not think anyone will be going up again this year. I have climbed Cavell five times this summer and this was the hardest trip. If it hadn't been for the grit and strength of these boys we should have had a much more difficult time. It took us actually one hour and a half to go down the steepest three hundred feet on the west ridge, which I usually do in a quarter of an hour."

The two youths climbed Cavell the day after they arrived at Jasper Park Lodge from a seventeen day saddle trip across the Columbia ice field with Jack Brewster, the well known guide. With them on this trip were Willard's father, who went up Pyramid mountain when the others were climbing Cavell, his brother Malcolm, and Dudley Onderdonk, another youth. Boal is a senior at Harvard and Willard a sophomore. The lateness of the season for climbing prevented three other adventurers from getting to the top of Mount Robson last week. They were within 2,000 feet from the summit when snow and ice forced them back.

FORGOT HER ACCOUNT.

NASHUA, N.H., August 28. — Twenty years ago, Mrs. Emily F. Barnes made a deposit in the Bristol County Savings Bank—and then forgot about it. The bank advertised, as required by law, and a daughter of Mrs. Barnes, now dead, appeared to claim the money. It had grown to $2,303.

Some people have all the luck. Rosie Dolly, one of the two "Dolly Sisters" of stage fame broke the bank at Monte Carlo the other day. She won $20,000 in less than two hours. Her father had to find a bag in which he stacked the piles of bank notes his daughter had won.

THREE BODIES FOUND IN CITY

Men Believed Victims of Sacramento Man Who Ran Amuck.

ONE IDENTIFIED.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 28. —(Canadian Press) — The bodies of three men, two of them unidentified were found in widely separated parts of Sacramento late last night. The unidentified men were believed to be victims of Percy Burns, who ran Amuck, shot and killed Charles E. Curtin, his brother-in-law, and shot and probably fatally wounded Clarence Muncy.

TORONTO YOUTH DROWNS IN NORTH

Douglas Gibson Loses Life Shooting Rapids—Boy Drowns in Pond.

TORONTO Aug. 28. — Douglas Gibson, 20, son of John W. and Mrs Gibson, of 590 Indian Road, was drowned yesterday morning in the French River. Only meagre details of the accident were available in Toronto last night. Mr. Gibson, who was holidaying at Bala, left immediately for the scene of the tragedy. So far as is known the body has not been found.

Gibson was on a canoe trip up the French River with a party of frinds from Philadelphia and Toronto. He lost his life in attempting to shoot rapds.

Definite location of the tragedy has not yet been received, but it is believed he perished in the Five-Mile rapids, some distance above French River Station. These rapids have taken a heavy toll. Apparently easy to shoot they are very treacherous.

Swimmer Drowns

MIMICO, Aug. 28. — Swimming with six or seven companions in the shale hole of the deserted brickyards here, Ralph Scleanimanio, 17 years old, 291 Manning Avenue, Toronto, lost his life yesterday evening when he failed in an attempt to cross the pond, which is about 250 yards wide at that point. The boys entered the water about 8:45, and soon after entering, Ralph decided to swim across. He was making good time when, about half way over, he shouted to his companions, and disappeared.

Immediately efforts were made by his companions to reach him, and word sent in to the New Toronto police, Chief F. H. Herman and Constable Doyle responding. At 11:30 p.m. the body was recovered in 40 feet of water.

Attributed To Cramps

The drowning is believed to have been caused by cramps, Scleanimanio having had a late supper at his home, and proceeded directly to the swimming hole.

General Adolphus W. Greely, U. S.A., retired, distinguished soldier, Arctic explorer and scientist, who has just entered upon his eighty-fifth year, was the first volunteer private soldier in the civil war to reach the rank of brigadier-general.

Kirkwood Tells of Trials

Land of Distress, Says David Kirkwood—Decries Easy Optimistic View.

LABOR NOT DECADENT.

Working People of Britain Still Ready To Work—Canada Should Absorb Many.

(By William Edgar)

MONTREAL, Aug. 29.—(Exclusive to The Examiner).—"I have come from a land of distress, where many people are still battling against great hardship, to a land of affluence" was the comparison drawn between Great Britain and Canada by David Kirkwood M.P., for Dumbarton Burghs, Scotland, in an interview with The Examiner, in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, before the departure of the group of members of the Empire Parliamentary Association to Ottawa where they fulfil a number of engagements today and tomorrow. Mr. Kirkwood depreciates any easy, optimistic attitude toward the unemployment problem in Britain.

"There are hundreds of thousands of workers who cannot hope to be absorbed in the industries of the country," he stated.

Mr. Kirkwood obviously would like to see Canada taking as many as possible of Britain's surplus population. In his own constituency, which includes the shipbuilding towns of Dumbarton and Clydebank, he said, trade had recently revived considerably, but there were still many who had to look to newer lands for a fair opportunity of achieving prosperity and happiness. "The finest raw material in world for nation-building" was Mr. Kirkwood's eulogy of his fellow-countrymen.

Canada Must Expand

He was tremendously impressed by Canada and its potentiability. "The country is bound to expand. I can see that although I have just touched the fringes of the land." Montreal with its great harbour and docks a thousand miles inland from the open sea captivated the Scottish legislator. Like most of the visiting M.P.'s Mr. Kirkwood was athirst for information. He inquired eagerly concerning the employment situation here, and on being told that seasonal unemployment was one of Canada's problems, expressed the opinion that Canada's difficulty was less than that facing Britain.

Britain Not Decadent

He emphatically repudiated any suggestion that the British worker was decadent, preferring unemployment insurance (miscalled the 'dole') to daily labor. Hard times had imposed a severe test on the morale of the people, but they were yet sound and bravely facing adversity. While realizing that interchange of ideas with other legislators was invaluable, he felt that he wanted to acquire greater familiarity with the Canadian working man and his conditions of labor. As a member of the Labor Party he was chiefly interested in the lot of the man who worked for a daily wage.

Mr. Kirkwood, who is one of the most colorful personalities in the British House of Commons, first come into prominence as a result of a clash with Mr. Lloyd George during the negotiations between the government and the great trade unions, with the object of settling the conditions for dilution of labor during the

the great Welshmen, Mr. Kirkwood, by appealing towards the right of the Minister of have free speech, obtained a hearing for Mr. Lloyd George at a meeting of angry shipyard and engineering workers. But at the same time, he fought Mr. Lloyd George's proposals, and one of the domestic sensations of the war followed when, Mr. Kirkwood, along with a number of others, prominent in Labor circles was deported from Clydeside, on the ground of alleged interference with output of munitions.

After being held for some time, the men were released and Mr. Kirkwood, engaged in munition work at the Beardmore plant, and in charge of a number of men earned commendation for the increase in production, that became manifest after his arrival. At the 1918 election, Mr. Kirkwood was nominated by the Independent Labor Party as candidate for Dumbarton Burghs, but was defeated after a contest in which, for a long time, he seemed to be fighting a winning battle. Mr. Kirkwood, however, "nursed" the constituency in succeeding years, and in the election of 1921, he along with many other Labor men, who have since become prominent, was returned to Westminster, to a Parliament in which for the first time, the Labor Party was

ETHEL HERTLE FIRST TO FINISH IN WOMEN'S PART OF BIG SWIM

THREE MINUTE LEAD.

Miss Gatterdam, of Seattle, Finishes Second—Winner's Time 5.35.

TORONTO, Aug. 29 (Canadian Press).—Ethel Hertle, 20-year-old New York, aquatic star, this afternoon won the ten mile Wrigley marathon swim at the Canadian National Exhibition, emblematic of the women's long distance championship of the world, and $10,000 prize money.

Miss Hertle established an early lead, and although challenged by Miss Gatterdam, of Seattle, Washington, during the third lap, was never headed, and completed the course about 150 yards in front of the Pacific Coast swimmer, who won the second prize money of $3,000.

Miss Hertle's time for the race, which was about five-eights of a mile more than ten miles, including a short stretch to the finishing point, was five hours thirty-five minutes. Miss Gatterdam's time was five hours thirty-eight minutes.

At three p.m., with two miles to go, the standing was: Ethel Hertle, first; one hundred yards back, Olive Gatterdam, second; half mile back, Ruth Tower, third; Gertrude Ederle, fourth; Jane Thoms, fifth. Helen Galand, the leading Canadian, was eighth.

Hertle Leads at Half Way.

Using a relentless crawl stroke, which shot her through the water at startling speed, Ethel Hertle, of New York City, led the swimmers with a slight margin of a few yards over the speedy Olive Gatterdam of Seattle, after the five mile distance, half the course, had been covered by early afternoon.

After Miss Hertle and Miss Gatterdam came Ruth Tower of Denver, Colorado, and shortly back of her in fourth and fifth places were May Elwell and Gertrude Ederle of New York. Jane Thoms, of Terre Haute, was sixth at this stage.

The leading Canadian was Helen Galand, of Ottawa, who was about a mile behind the leaders at the half way mark. A bunch of Canadians were swimming together not far back of Miss Galand. Mlle. Oade Corson and Millie Hudson, star entrants, were about a mile behind the leaders at this point.

Indicative of the quality of the field was the fact that only three or four had dropped out of the 52 entrants by early afternoon, these including Marie Majander of Finland, Jane Howell of Wisconsin, and May Tyrell of Springfield, Mass.

Miss Hertle's time for the five miles was two hours, seventeen minutes and thirteen seconds.

Increases Lead.

Miss Hertle increased her lead to 100 yards later on. Mrs. Della Sullivan was forced out by cramps after covering two and a half miles.

The New York girl leading the field received an ovation as she crawled along the shore line, but the greatest cheers were reserved for "Trudy" Ederle. Miss Gatterdam, the second placer, used a peculiar flutter stroke which shot up streams of water to mark her progress. Miss Gatterdam had a lead of about three quarters of a mile on Ederle and Elwell.

Thousands Watch Start.

Prince Ascends Big Wireless Mast

RUGBY, Eng., Aug. 29 (Canadian Press). — The Prince of Wales to-day ascended the tallest wireless mast in the world at Rugby's big station, arriving unannounced in the course of a motor tour and saying he wanted "to have a look around."

A visit to the telegraph wireless room, where messages were being sent to America, proved he had a working knowledge of the Morse code, apparently being able to read ordinary messages. He went up the mast in an electric elevator, and said on returning he would not like to be up at the top in dirty weather.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 29.— (Canadian Press.) — Divergent views of bank mergers were expressed by Sir Herbert Holt, president of the Royal Bank, and Sir Charles Gordon, president of the Bank of Montreal. In an interview last night Sir Herbert said it was in the public interest to have larger rather than smaller banks, while Sir Charles intimated he was not in favor of mergers, though he declined to let any definite statement be quoted.

WILL ATTEND LEAGUE COUNCIL IN SEPTEMBER

Guest of the Municipality of Paris at City Banquet.

CEREMONIOUS AFFAIR.

Cabinet Ministers Together With Envoys Attend Luncheon.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—(By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)—Premier W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada brought his stay in Paris as a guest of the French government to a close yesterday by attending the reception for signatories of the anti-war pact given by the municipality of Paris in the city hall and attended by Premier Raymond Poincare and M. Becq de Fouquieres, Foreign Office master of ceremonies. The Canadian premier left Paris for Geneva at 10 p.m., and will arrive in Geneva about 6.35 to-day. He is going to attend the September sessions of the League of Nations.

The reception yesterday afternoon was a ceremonious affair. Premier King went in company with Senator Raoul Dandurand and Hon. Phillippe Roy, Canadian high commissioner in Paris. M. Some, the prefect; Premier Poincare and M. de Fouquieres all greeted the Canadian Prime Minister warmly and he was led by the French premier to another group composed of Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, M. Leygues, the marine minister, M. LeMarchand, president of the council and M. Chiappe, prefect of police, who welcomed him.

Before ascending the grand staircase to the Salon des Arcades in which the formal reception took place, Premier King chatted with Myron T. Herrick, United States' ambassador, and Premier William T. Cosgrave of the Irish Free State. Addresses by M. LeMarchand and M. Benju, prefect of the Seine district, were well received by the signers of the pact assembled in the Salon, where Premier King sat next to Lord Cushendun, British acting foreign secretary.

Following the ceremony Premier King, in company with his fellow signers, passed to the adjoining room to affix his signature in the city's Golden Book.

Visit Brought To Close

PARIS, Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press.)—The President's luncheon for the signers of the outlawry of war treaty yesterday brought to a close the social events given in honor of the visiting statesmen.

The signers, except Foreign Minister Stresemann, of Germany, who departed for Baden Baden at noon and was represented by Ambassador Von Hoesch, drove down to Rambouillet in automobiles along a highway closely patrolled by gendarmes.

Becq de Fouquieres, chief of the presidential protocol, received the guests in the court yard of the chateau and introduced them into the Marie Antoinette salon where President Doumergue was waiting to greet them. The luncheon was held in the beautiful Rambouillet dining room, hung with a series of priceless Gobelis tapestries depicting Louis XIV in hunting scenes.

All members of the ministry present in Paris attended the luncheon together with the diplomatic representatives of the signatory countries. The table was decorated with simple field flowers instead of exotic blossoms in order to accentuate the intimtae character of the event.

After the toasts, President Doumergue led his guests back to the salon for coffee and conversation and later escorted them through the beautiful gardens and stately park of the chateau.

The City of Paris held its great reception for the statesmen yesterday afternoon, with the City Hall decorated with flags and Republican guards in full uniform presenting arms.

Police precautions, although discreet, continue rigorous despite the absence of any disagreeable incident. A commissary of police is continually on duty at the embassy, which is guarded night and day by ten policemen posted in its immediate neighborhood.

GENEVA, Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Mackenzie King, with Prof. O. D. Skelton, under secretary for external affairs, arrived here to-day from Paris to attend the League of Nations sessions.

FINAL CHECK-UP OF FAIR DETAILS MADE BY BOARD

Admission Price Remains the Same But Grand Stand Fee Is Raised.

NEW BUILDINGS PRAISED.

Manufacturers Asked To Have Booths Ready Early—Judge Entries Large.

Perhaps no finer indication of the high calibre of the 1928 Peterborough Industrial Exhibition could be found than the meeting of the Exhibition Board, held last evening at the secretary's office, when all save one or two of the fifty or more directors were on hand for a final checking up of details, under the chairmanship of President Roland Denne. The meeting, held just outside the office owing to the warmth of the evening and the large number in attendance, provided opportunity for discussion of concessions, admission fees, program events and numerous other details. Relative to the price of admission, the following arrangements were made:

Price of admission to grounds.—For adults, 35 cents; for children, 15 cents. Admission to grand stand—Adults, 50 cents; children, 25 cents. save that on Tuesday, the children will only be required to pay an admission fee of 10 cents to the grounds and 10 cents to the grand stand. Cars will be charged the same as last year. All of the above prices will pertain both afternoon and evening.

The strip tickets which were on sale uptown until the end of last week will have a value at the entrance of 35 cents each and 25 cents at the grand stand. In other words, two strip tickets will be taken to represent the 50 cent admission to the grand stand, while one will be sufficient to secure admission to the grounds.

Satisfactory New Buildings

From many directors at the meeting last night was heard much favorable comment on the nature and progress of the new buildings to the south and east sides of the Exhibition Grounds, a detailed description of which is a story in itself. Previous to the meeting the buildings were inspected and it was difficult indeed to find any short-comings in the layout and equipment of them. One thing was stressed—that those exhibitors intending to use the Manufacturers' building should have their booths in place as early as possible, as it is highly desirable that everything be in place for Opening Day. At present there is some minor cleaning and fixing up to be done, but this will be disposed of in the next day or so.

Judges Appointed

A communication was read by the secretary, which, together with verbal reports from several of the directors, showed that the judges for the various phases of exhibits had already been arranged for.

Then, too, there was the question of officials' badges or car windshield stickers representing the same authority but it was made known that this year, the system of passes will do away with that necessity.

A discussion of methods whereby the space immediately southwest of the main entrance may be kept clear of refreshment booths in order to provide a sort of meeting ground also took place.

Dog Show Uptown

The Peterborough Kennel Association submitted a request for the privilege of using benching facilities during a Dog Show, which will probably be held in Brock Street Rink some time in October. From this show experience will indicate the wisdom of holding such a show in connection with the "Ex." in future years. The request was granted.

To provide opportunity for a final "once over" of the whole situation, it was decided to hold a meeting at seven o'clock on the first evening of the Exhibition.

He was driving his auto on Victoria avenue, and did not notice the approach of a C.N.R. shunter. It crashed into the auto, crushed it between the wheels and reduced it to matchwood. Mr. Hammond jumped from the car in the nick of time and escaped without a scratch.

LOVAT REGRETS SMALL NUMBER OF BRITISH COMING TO CANADA

Did Not Mean To Attack Canada For Not Absorbing More.

RESPECTS FOREIGNERS.

Has Sympathy For Government Efforts—Fears Effect of Foreign Colonies.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 29 (Special to The Examiner).—Before leaving Winnipeg for the West last night Lord Lovat declared: "If I attacked Canada for not absorbing more British settlers, then I conveyed the wrong meaning. What I intended to convey was my sense of regret that a larger proportion of the settlers coming to Canada are not of British birth. I have every respect and admiration for the foreigner who comes to your country and, in the face of difficulties which, to the average Britisher would seem unsurmountable, British would seem unsurmountable, makes good. But there are too many of these foreigners. Since I have been in Winnipeg I have learned that there are districts in the Western country where the British flag is not flown and where English is not the language of the majority of the people. This is a serious mistake.

"Canada will have a real problem to face if this sort of thing continues. I have every sympathy with any effort the Canadian Government can make to people the Canadian West with Britishers; but I do not see how they can interfere when the natural flow of immigration is from Europe rather than from the British Isles. I suppose the quota law in the United States has much to do with it, and if so I can't see any immediate remedy. But to me it seems too bad that we can't get a larger proportion of British people on your splendid farms. Any criticism I made was, I can assure you, entirely along this line. I did not wish to attack Canada in any way for I am sure you are all doing the best you can."

Meets Old Comrade

Lord Lovat will spend several days visiting in Saskatoon and vicinity. While in Winnipeg he was the guest of Lieut.-Governor Burrows. He visited the hospitals and in Deer Lodge Hospital met an old comrade of the South African War, Fred Robinson. Robinson was a member of the Lovat Scouts in the South African War. He also went overseas in the Great War and was sorely wounded, from the effects of which he has not yet recovered.

"Eat Our Apples" "We'll Give Jobs"

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, Aug. 29.—Eat our apples and we'll give jobs to your unemployed, is the message that New Zealand business interests have sent to Great Britain. The message was taken to England personally by J. W. Hardley, who, in a recent speech at Leicester, declared that if Britain consumed more New Zealand apples, she would be able to send more boys to the Dominion to grow apples.

FIRE DESTROYS FARM BUILDINGS

HOUSE IS SAVED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 29. — One of the finest clusters of farm buildings in Northumberland County was destroyed by fire this afternoon, when the barn, horse stable, pig pen, dairy, sugar house, and two silos on the farm of Miss Violet Durran, five miles west of Campbellford, were burned to the ground. A threshing engine owned by Miss Durran and the season's crop of wheat and hay of the 200-acre farm also fell prey to the flames. No stock was lost. Substantial insurance policies are carried.

The fire broke out in the engine house, a brick structure to the west of the other buildings, where the farm's gasoline power plant is located. Crawford Ibey was in the building at the time, but he is unable to say what started the fire, which seemed to burst out suddenly. A west wind quickly carried the flames to the barn and other buildings, and in spite of the efforts of the Campbellford and the Warkworth Fire Brigades and some two hundred neighbors, nothing could be saved.

When it was seen that the farm buildings were doomed, efforts were centred on saving the house, which is east of the barn, the roof and the walls being kept well dampened. At the same time close watch was kept on the engine house, the source of the blaze, as it contained a hundred gallon tank of gasoline, which it was feared would explode at any minute.

Pact Cuts Number of Subs

Opinion of French Circles Regarding Provisional Naval Circles.

DENY REPORTS.

Pact Does Not Contain Any Secret Clauses For Associated Fleets.

GENEVA, Aug. 29 (Canadian Press) —The essence of the provisional naval agreement between France and Great Britain, is in the opinion of French circles, expressed to the Associated Press yesterday, that an attempt should be made to reach an international agreement limiting the construction of large cruisers and large submarines, but that for the moment limitation of smaller units should not be attempted.

In thus summarizing the accord, French circles denied categorically that the agreement contains any secret clauses and they joined British quarters in characterizing as untrue reports that it provides for associated British and French fleets.

Great Britain and France still await replies from the United States, Italy and Japan before publishing the text and that Loudon, Netherland's minister to France and president of the preparatory disarmament commission, is awaiting the results of correspondence between the five naval powers involved before deciding upon the date of the next meeting of the commission.

Limitation of Fighting Machines

The accord is described here as an effort to achieve something possible and practical but continuing what is regarded as the underlying idea of the Washington naval conference, the limitation of powerful and offensive naval fighting machines.

In British quarters it was emphasized that there is nothing final in the accord with France. It was explained that the agreement was placed before the other naval powers in the hope that it would be accepted as the basis of a discussion by the disarmament commission and, assuming that it is eventually accepted by the commission, can only go forward as a recommendation for the consideration of a later international conference.

Under the Franco-British tentative accord only cruisers of 8,500 tons and more, and submarines over 600 tons would be subject to limitation.

In announcing yesterday refusal to collaborate with the present efforts of the league to secure control of the manufacture of arms, the Soviet government telegraphed that the League had done nothing toward the solution of the problem of real, if only partial disarmament.

Insisting that urgent steps should be taken to obtain definite results and avoid the risk of future wars, Maxim Litvinoff, Russian vice commissioner for foreign affairs, wired the secretary of the League, Sir Eric Drummond, that an attempt to supervise the production of armaments is merely calculated to mislead public opinion by holding false hopes of real disarmament.

ALTERATIONS TO COST $6,000

Normal School Roof and Brick Works Being Repaired.

THE WEEK'S BUILDING.

Representing an expenditure of approximately $6,000, one permit issued this week at the City Engineer's office to Thomas Ephgrave, contractor, provides for alterations to the roof and repairing of brick work at the Normal School, to be completed by September 15, 1928. Felt and gravel will be the materials used.

Mr. Ephgrave has also applied for and received permission to build a canopy for a gasoline pump at the corner of Hunter and Water Streets, the estimated cost being $200.00. September 5 is the date set for completion. The third permit issued to the same contractor provides for the building of a porch at 480 Charlotte Street at a cost of $350.00.

Two other permits have also been issued during this week, one being for a garage, to be built by George Gauld at 658 Aylmer Street, and the other for the re-shingling of a house at 133 Aylmer Street, J. W. Kelly being the owner.

Dr. Cornelius Lely, who has come to America to lecture at several of the big technical schools, is a distinguished Dutch engineer who first conceived the plan to drain the Zuider Zee and reclaim a new and vast province from the sea for Holland. It was in 1886 that he was commissioned to study the problem, but work was not started until 1918.

Frosts Felt in the Prairie Provinces

HARVEST WORK IS NOT HELD UP BY WEATHER

No Estimate Yet Given of the Damage Done By Frosts.

LABOR PLENTIFUL.

Work of Cutting Wheat Crop Going Forward Rapidly.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press). —Though light frosts have occurred in some sections of the Prairie Provinces nearly every night during the past week and light rains have fallen at some points, harvesting has not been held up in any way, according to a report received here yesterday. Light rains fell in some sections of Southern Alberta and Southern Manitoba Monday, but yesterday the weather was reported clear, with harvesting conditions ideal throughout the Canadian West.

The work of cutting the crop is going forward rapidly. The frequent frosts have been comparatively light, and no estimate of damage can be made until after threshing has been completed. It is believed that the grades of the later grain have been lowered somewhat.

No Damage to Crops

EDMONTON, Alta., Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press). —Although the thermometer dropped below the freezing point on Monday night no damage to crops resulted, and harvesting is in full swing. Peace River reports cutting practically completed, and threshing under way at some points. Cutting is over 20 per cent. complete in the Wainwright, Hardisty, Irma and Vermilion districts, while even better progress has been made at Ryley, Holden, Viking and Bruce. Continued cool, bright weather, and an abundance of rain will see cutting through the province near completion at the end of the month.

Woman Slayer Is Given Her Freedom; Jury Thought Husband Merited His Fate

GLASGOW, Aug. 29.—Indidents almost unprecented in British court occurred here to-day when Christina Baillee, aged 28 years was acquitted of a charge of culpable homicide in connection with the death of her husband. The jury included several women, besides the forewoman, and these wept unrestrainedly with many women in the court as they rendered the verdict.

Th accused, leaving court, was carried shoulder high. She had testified that her husband was wild when intoxicated and that he had come home drunk. He demanded a meal when she had no food in the house for her four children. He threatened her and broke a chair, whereupon she struck him with a knife. He died on the way to the hospital.

Mother Of Actors Dies In Hospital

GLENDALE, Cal., August 29 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Hannah Chaplin, mother of Charles and Syd Chaplin, film comedians, died at a hospital here yesterday. She had been ill more than a month from an internal disorder. Charles was at the bedside, having expected the end throughout the night.

Born in London 65 years ago, Mrs. Chaplin early began a stage career which reached its height when she was starred in a number of Gilbert & Sullivan's light operas. She was a well-known actress in Britain up to and including the period of the World War.

Tragedy came into her life when she developed a mental derangement after an air raid upon London by German Zeppelins.

Fireman Drowned When Tug Rammed

NEW YORK, August 29 (Canadian Press). — One man was drowned yesterday in the sinking of a tug by the Providence Line passenger steamer Chester W. Chapin, in Hell Gate, off Ditmar's Cove, Astoria.

He was Antonio Recuso, an Argentine fireman on the tug. The seven other members of the tug's crew were saved by a motor launch.

The steamer, inbound from Providence, with 250 passengers, struck the tug Volunteer amidships, cutting it almost in half. The boat sank in a few minutes. In the confusion the Chester W. Chapin drifted on to a reef. A fifteen-foot hole was torn in the vessel's starboard side above the water line.

ROAD GANG BUSY AROUND WARSAW

Village Streets Are Being Repaired—Grain Badly Lodged.

(Examiner Correspondence).

WARSAW, August 29.—There is a large road gang busy at present. The stone crusher is at the gravel pit, and besides the village streets, the road up past Watt's Hill is staked.

Grain Lodged.

The farmers are hoping for dry weather this week, to get the oats and barley in. While many are finished summer harvest there is still a great deal of grain out. The storms of last week delayed cutting and much grain was very badly lodged. Some had to be cut by running the binder one way; some had to be mowed while some is down so that only a scythe could get at it, and even that failed in places. The grain generally is of a splendid quality.

There seems to be a good crop of yellow transparent apples, and of Duchess, but later apples are not so plentiful.

Missionary Service.

On Sunday evening, September 2, Rev. Mr. Moger will preach in the United Church in Warsaw, and Rev. H. B. Herrington will preach in the Westwood United Church.

There was a very interesting missionary service at Bethel on Sunday morning. Mrs. William Forsythe gave a talk on "The Challenge of Missions to the Sunday schools." She insisted that one or two missionary lessons a year did little good. The lessons must be often. A little at a time but often would be remembered, if the talk be interesting. Her talk was full of helpful points.

Miss Alma McCracken read a letter from Miss Staples, a missionary in Japan.

Miss Margaret Atkinson sang "Beautiful Flowers," Lucile Herrington and Murietta Jory sang "We are Little Gleaners." Velma Payne and Irene Hamblin sang "I Gave My Life for Thee," accompanied on the mandolin.

Miss Ruth Stark read "What a Child's Penny did in Saving Souls."

Walter Payne and Ralph Dunford took up the offering, while all sang, "Hear the Pennies Dropping."

FLIERS LISTED AS MISSING

Boss of Curtiss Flying Service and Companion Disappear From Skies.

ON WAY TO NEW YORK.

CURTISS FIELD, N.Y., Aug. 29 (Canadian Press).—M. Merrill, diminutive boss of the Curtiss flying service, has been quick in the past to offer sympathy and aid when other fliers disappeared, was himself missing yesterday.

He and Edwin Ronne, manager of the Buffalo airport, left the upstate city at four o'clock Monday afternoon to fly an Orange Curtis Falcon belonging to Col. Charles A. Lindberg, to New York, but they failed to arrive.

A plane passed high and fast over Haskinville at 4.30. A plane appeared 300 feet above Ithaca after dusk, circling as though to land, and then disappearing in the murk. A plane was heard roaring over Curtiss Field, clouded in heavy mist, and onward toward the sea late at night, but whether any of these planes was the one in which Merrill and Ronne rode the skies could not be determined.

MILLBROOK GIRL FRACTURES WRIST

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, August 29. — Bryer Edmunds, the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Ross Edmunds, fell from a swing yesterday and fractured her left arm at the wrist.

She was with a number of other little girls at the home of a playmate, Mary Nattress, and when the accident occurred, threw out her arm to break the fall, with the result mentioned. The children summoned aid and she was taken to Dr. H. A. Turner for the necessary medical attention.

Bryer is a popular little girl, clever with her music, and there is a general sympathy with both herself and her parents, because of the unfortunate happening.

A simple type of steel house frame was erected recently in three hours. Standard-sized bolts were used to "button" together steel sills, studs, plates and rafters.

Baby Elephant To Be Christened

An unique ceremony will be performed at Seaforth, Ont., on August 31st, when a baby elephant owned by Barnett Bros., Motorized Circus, will be christened by Mayor Golding of that town. A bottle of Seaforth Creamery cream will be used for the ceremony.

Elephants are scarce in Canada, and this is the first time a baby elephant has been christened here. It is the second time that an elephant has come to Canada to stay.

People have become so used to associating elephants with immense size, that it is amusing to hear the many exclamations of surprise when the baby is led forth.

Barnett Bros., is the first all Canadian circus, and is fast becoming a national institution. It originated in New Glasgow, N.S., and plays Canadian territory exclusively. The show will establish Canadian winter quarters in Ontario.

Smith Preparing For His Campaign

NEW YORK, August 29 (Canadian Press). — As he shapes up plans for his presidential campaign stumping, Governor Smith is keeping in mind a lesson he believes many a candidate for public office in the past has learned to his sorrow—it's unwise to disappoint crowds.

And it is this conviction, coupled with a desire to cover as much ground as possible without dissipating his strength and voice, that is making it difficult for the Democratic nominee to determine just where he should go and how many speeches he should deliver.

August is almost gone, and his plans are still in the making. He disclosed to newspaper men yesterday that his managers were preparing three tentative itineraries, and he said that until he could size them up it would be impossible even to announce where he will strike first. He believes, however, that something definite can be given the public by the end of next week.

Possibly the loneliest Englishwoman in the world is Miss Rachel Wingate, who is the only Englishwoman in Chinese Turkestan, cut off from the rest of the world by mountain passes and a vast desert. Miss Wingate left England four years ago, and is attached to a Swedish mission at Kashgar, a city farther from the ocean than any other in the world

ORGAN RECITAL MUCH ENJOYED

Former Organist of Campbellford Church Gives Short Program.

POPULAR NUMBERS.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 29.—After the evening hour of worship on Sunday night, John L. Nicol, organist of the Presbyterian Church in Galt, gave a short organ recital, Mr. Nicol has been supplying as organist here for the last two Sundays while he is on his holidays at Trent River. He was formerly organist of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Curch here, coming to Campbellford directly from Scotland. The recital was by popular request and the two numbers which Mr. Nicol played were both old favorites of the congregation here. His first number was the overture, William Tell by Rosini. The second number, was an interpretation of a church service interrupted by a storm. This number was among the first to win favor when Mr. Nicol was organist here. Between the organ numbers, Miss Margaret Dickson sang "Sundown" (Carlisle).

A large congregation was present at both morning and evening services. The criticism of the organ recital by the members of the congregation has been favourable in the extreme.

HOLD-UP MAN USES BICYCLE AND GETS AWAY WITH IT

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Truly, the fashions change.

Yesterday the bandit fled the scene of his crime on a bicycle!

Until a tall Negro of unknown name established the precedent motor cars were the vogue.

Morris Sondon manager of the United cigar store at No. 799 Southern boulevard, The Bronx, looked up yesterday into the barrel of a revolver in the hands of the mystery bandit.

Then he handed him $81 of the $159 in the safe, short-changing him out of the balance, and similarly taking advantage of his visitor's mathematical inadequacy by retaining $5 of the $17 in the till.

Then the bandit ambled toward the door and made his escape on his bicycle.

Four taxicabs two minutes later could find no trace of him.

KELLER ESTATE IS FINE RESORT

F. S. Keller Has Made Homestead Charming Place For Tourists.

CLEANLINESS FEATURE.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 29.—Just a casual tour through the fifty acres which comprise the Keller Estate at Healey Falls and incidentally the resort known as "Rest A While," reveals a multitude of things which are not generally to be expected at such places. The lawns and gardens are in immaculate condition. A staff of men is constantly at work keeping them so. The main building and the cottages, seven in number, comprise the picture which is most pleasing to the eye. As the guest of the owner and manager an Examiner representative was shown over the entire estate and was most favorable impressed with everything. One thing that stands out prominently and which one can not help but notice is the cleanliness of every inch of the entire section. The resort was formerly the estate of the late Rod Keller, father of the present owner and for more than twenty-five years has been a favorite vacation spot for a few American tourists. During the last seven years the son, F. S. Keller has worked wonders with the old homestead and now is the proud owner of a first class tourist resort.

As far as possible the guests are accommodated in the home, which has been renovated and remodelled inside to suit the requirements. The overflow finds ample accommodation in the cottages. Some of these are equipped for housekeeping while others are merely sleeping quarters. There is garage space in rear of the house for ten cars and extra parking space is available where cars may be given shelter from the weather.

Home Cooking

The meals are all home cooking and Mrs. Keller personally supervises this detail. There has still to be a complaint laid regarding the fare either in quality or quantity. She also makes it her duty to see that every room in the building is thoroughly cleaned every day. Even the lawns are kept well trimmed. Each morning the garbage man, after he has collected and disposed of the refuse from each of the buildings, spends a few hours on the lawns, picking up stray bits of paper or a cigarette butt that may have been dropped by one of the guests.

The laundry is situated near the river and is a complete unit in itself. The fish are all cleaned at one place and this spot is specially equipped for the purpose. It was noticed that there were no flies there as is usually the case and that none of the cleanings had been left lying about. The manager explained that the refuse was buried and the place thoroughly scrubbed and cleaned twice daily. Fly poison was scattered about at frequent intervals in order to free the place of this pest.

The shore line is neatly finished off in white stone, which makes a pleasing contrast with the well trimmed Elm trees and the green and white buildings spaced in an orderly fashion on the green lawns. The boat houses along the shore house thirty boats, twelve of them are equipped with motors. A staff of guides is constantly on hand for the benefit of the guests. It is even possible for them to purchase tackle and other sundries without leaving the grounds.

Last Sunday there were sixty guests to sit at table for dinner. This is one of the events of the week, and many of the local campers and citizens take advantage of the fact that chicken is on the menu for this meal. Doctors are not required to perscribe tonics to whet the appetite since the rough roads which must be traversed in order to reach "Rest A While" not only give the traveller the impression that he has arrived in the back country, but give him a good shaking up so that he is ready to do justice to whatever the cook has prepared. While their cars are being filled at the filling station on the grounds, they are being filled at the tables in the dining room which seats sixty.

Fishing is the main attraction to tourists in these parts and it is no exception to see more than one of the guests arrive back at the wharf at night with all the fish that the law allows. The manager claims that the cost to the average visitor from the United States is one dollar a pound of fish taken from the river, and some of them more than that.

Guests Return Often.

While many of the guests are first timers, some of them have been spending their vacation at the same place for as many as twenty-five years. A doctor and a business man from Cleveland, Ohio, even keep a perpetual cribbage score which is at present three years of age. Their friends say that the game is like some forms of insurance, one must die to win. These two men thoroughly enjoy a day on the water and an evening at crib.

Among the guests who have been coming to Rest-a-While for a number of years are Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Gunari, who have been coming for a month each summer for twenty-five years. Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Webber, have been guests for twenty-three years for a month each summer. Other guests of long standing are W. K. Fleck of Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Warley, Akron, Ohio. Mr. Castle, of Buffalo, was not content with one trip this season and is now at the camp for his second session. All the guests are not Americans, although people from across the line are in the majority. Toronto and Winnipeg also contribute their quota as well as other Canadian centres.

It is a fair and safe guess that many of the residents of the district have not yet realized how modern and comfortable this resort has been made. A few of the citizens of the town have formed the habit of taking their Sunday evening meal there in preference to more distant points. Many pay it a visit during the week. Every one is welcome. But there is no rowdyism tolerated. Everything is quiet and well ordered and the whole forms an ideal spot for a real restful vacation. There is a picnic ground slightly removed from the buildings where picinc parties are given the use of the grounds and a shed kitchen, partially screened and equipped with a stove and reservoir for hot water.

All the details considered, much credit is due the Kellers for having created such an up-to-date resort.

DROWNED YOUTH WAS WELL LIKED

John Smith Very Popular With All Who Knew Him—Large Funeral.

MOUNT PLEASANT, August 29. — The death of John Smith, which occurred on Sunday morning by drowning in Best's Mill Pond, has cast a gloom over the village and surrounding community which will never be forgotten in the hearts of many When the sad news was announced on Sunday that John Smith was drowned, a profound depression settled on Mount Pleasant.

Frank, kindly, and always cheerful, he radiated gladness and sunshine wherever he went, but Fate has decreed otherwise, and John, the lovable, the kind, at the age of seventeen, has passed out of earthly ken. He was particularly well known to the younger generation having attended Public School in Mount Pleasant.

The late John Smith was a ward of the Barnardo Home, Toronto, and had been employed at the home of Robert Ruth for the past three weeks. He also lived with Mr. Ruth some years ago while attending school. Letters found in his pockets revealed the fact that his mother and a sister Lucy reside in England, to whom the sad news was cabled on Sunday, and to whom is extended heartfelt sympathy in this their darkest hour of bereavement.

The funeral was held on Monday afternoon from W. J. E. Gillott's undertaking rooms in Millbrook, and was largely attended. Rev. John Riddell, of Grace Presbyterian Church, Millbrook, conducted the services.

The pall-bearers, who bore the remains to their last resting-place, were all boys who were with him on Sunday—Fred and Roy Hootan, Harry McArthur, Harvey Downer, William Kesle, and William Harris. Interment was made in St. John's Cemetery, Ida.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, giving tangible expression of sympathy on the part of kind friends, and included a large and beautiful wreath from his boy friends at Mount Pleasant.

At 32 years of age, the Rev. Earl E. Harper, who recently has been inaugurated as president of Evansville (Indiana) College, is one of the two youngest college presidents in the United States.

CHILD KILLED DURING STORM

Loses Life When Home is Struck By Bolt of Lightning.

AT SUDBURY.

SUDBURY, Ont., August 29 (Canadian Press). — One fatality is reported from the severe electrical storm which swept Sudbury district during the early hours of the morning. Dorothy Darrow, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Darrow, of Rochester, N.Y., was instantly killed by a bolt of lightning which struck her parents' cottage on an island in Lake Penage, nine miles south of Whitefish, where the family had spent the summer since July 1st.

The other members of the family were awakened by the crash of the bolt which, striking a tree within a few feet of the cottage, jumped through a window into the room where the child was sleeping.

Vain efforts were made to revive the child. Yesterday afternoon the body was brought to Sudbury, and is being sent on to Rochester. Mrs. Darrow returned home about a week ago, and at that time wished to take Dorothy with her. The little girl, however, wanted to stay at the cottage with her father until the end of her holiday. The other members of the household escaped injury though several windows were broken by the shock.

SERVICE AT CHEMONG.

CHEMONG, August 29.—The last of the series of open air meetings being held at Chemong Park Pavilion, was held on Sunday evening, Rev. J. O. Totten of Bridgenorth United Church was the speaker.

He took his text from Matt. 8, 9: 21: "This passage sets forth the different attitudes men take up towards Christ, and the different motives they have in following Him.

The first man mentioned here professed to be willing to follow Him, but was not prepared to endure the hardships and privations that were involved in following Christ, so Jesus said unto him: "Foxes have holes, birds of the air have nests, but the son of man hath nowhere to lay his head."

This man was seemingly very eager to follow Him, Jesus had to apply the curb to him, and restrain him somewhat, and this is the way in which he took to do it, pointing out the hardships, difficulties and privations he would have to endure if he became His follower.

The second man professed his willingness to follow Jesus, but was somewhat slow, and needed the spur. He said: "I will follow Thee, but suffer me first to bury my father," which according to Eastern usage meant that his father was an old man, and he wanted to remain with him as long as he lived, but after his father was dead and buried he would follow Jesus.

The third man mentioned said he would follow him, but "first let me go to bid farewell to my friends and kinsmen." This man was willing to follow Jesus but didn't want to make a complete break with the old life. Some people want to hold on to both worlds but it cannot be done for "you cannot serve God and mammon.' Mr. Totten called upon all present to make the decisive choice.

Mrs. G. F. Liddle of George street United church, sang two beautiful solos, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say", and "Saviour Breathe an Evening Blessing." Her singing was very impressive. Mr. Liddle accompanied her on the piano. Miss Mabel Paul played for the congregational singing.

Rev. W. S. Edgar of Gilmour Memorial church acted as chairman and announced that this meeting closed the series for this summer, and expressed his thanks to all those who contributed to the success of the meetings, especially mentioning Harry G. Forler, the proprietor of the pavilion, for the use of his beautiful place.

Rev. J. O. Totten pronounced the benediction.

CIVIC BEAUTY.

"Encouraging beauty in a community always fosters a higher type of citizenship", says Dr. Frank E. Bennett of St. Thomas, an authority on flowers and parks. "One might go even further and say that from a business standpoint alone, the planting of trees, plants, shrubbery and flowers is an endeavour every far-seeing city should make."

Peterborough presents many evidences of beauty resulting from individual and collective effort, but there is still much room for improvement. The city council aims at civic neatness as shown in clean streets, but that is about the limit of its interest, except of course the care of several parks.

Citizens skimp the Horticultural Society. They support it, but keep it as a poor relation. Narrow curb strips of earth bore weeds this summer where flowers bloomed last year. We do very well, on the whole, but we are not enthusiastic about it.

ARE EMOTIONS UNDERSTOOD?

The unfortunate youth in Woodstock, who sought suicide because he could not immediately marry the girl for whose death he is now held responsible, affords a striking example of emotional immaturity.

Physically he is an adult, weighing about 180 pounds, according to newspaper reports, big strong, athletic. He was earning a fairly high wage, he is an only son of fond parents; he had an automobile; he loved and was loved. Yet with all this he "was fed up" and decided to end it. Most parents know that children when denied some trifle they desire, cloudily threaten to run away. That is the outlet of a childish, an infantile emotion. It is the emotion of anger, malevolence, revenge.

When does the emotional education of man end, if ever? A boy is sent to school to acquire an intellectual, a logical education. Who looks to his emotional education? His parents, for the most part, if they understand the factors and influences that enter into the emotional life of a child. How many parents have that understanding or knowledge? You can answer that yourself. Our estimate, and it can only be a rough estimate, runs so low that it might seem to be a libel on parenthood.

Nevertheless, there is a school of psychology which affirms that personality is fixed and determined while the person is an infant. There is something to be said for one of their assertions that fears, angers, prides, deceits, loves, meanness and almost the entire range of emotions are given their lifelong direction during babyhood. If that were true, then it would follow that emotional education not only begins in the home, but is largely confined to it. The child when starting off to school is a graduate of it.

The world is full of adults who have never grown up emotionally. They might be described as babies who happen to be six feet tall. A sample or two of them are: the dyed-in-the-wool political partisan; the man of various conceits and arrogance either as to his money, his personal appearance, his family, his position, or what has he; the married man who dallies in the smiles of other women; the man who "flies off the handle"; the man who "falls for flattery", and so on, and so on. Among doctors, lawyers, clergymen, editors, etc., there are all too few exceptions to the general run of the emotionally immature.

And, as, we all know, our minds are more emotional than rational (hence all the frictions in the world hampering its progress, therefore the training of emotions, so to speak, should some day demand the attention of those who lay out our educational courses.

If mothers were not less motherly, but more intelligently maternal! If they realized that they were implanting or developing the emotions such as fears, angers, conceits, loves, and so on, they would surely be more concerned about their child's pre-school years than they are later when he is adjusting himself to the shocks of adolescence and still later when he grapples with the larger problems of adulthood.

If the psychologists are right, the defense of the Woodstock youth might be found in his pre-school life.

ALAS POOR MAC!

With the holiday season soon to close and the tail end of the dog days already upon us, we must express certain misgivings about the eventual fortune of a well known gentleman named McDougal, in his unfaltering attentions and unselfish loyalty to a certain young lady of fickle affections whom you will recognize as Tillie Jones.

We simply give voice to the doubts of many of our subscribers, who secretly believe that Mac hasn't a chance with Mother Jones' difficult, warm-hearted, but sometimes giddy daughter. Here is a whole summer almost gone with is ukulele nights and its bathing-suited days, and Mac is still hoping on but without any signs of progress. Occasionally Tilly flings him a crumb of affection, but Mac is manifestly handicapped in a game that demands so much appearances. The obstacles he throws in the way of suitors are futile; apparently his feelings are to be sacrificed day after day to Tillie's amorous quest. Perhaps most of us expect that when her knight comes riding, if indeed he ever does, he won't be a decent little fellow yclept McDougal. But the continuing uncertainty is a frequent exasperation to those who follow their adventures in the Simpkin's office and out of it.

MORRIS ACKERMAN'S WORK.

Morris Ackerman, writer of the outdoors, is now managing director of the Kelomowi Club, located in the Gatineau River district north of Ottawa. It is an exclusive club of American millionaires, who are establishing hunting and fishing camps in that district. Women are becoming as enthusiastic nimrods as the men, and in some instances excel them.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Ackerman prospers in any enterprise he undertakes in Canada. His writings and his annually published guide were very effective reinforcements in the propaganda popularizing Canadian summer resorts among United States tourists.

CANADA FLOURISHES.

"Merchants are stated to be preparing with confidence for the coming months". The Monetary Times of Toronto reports, "orders are being placed in a most encouraging way, while the advices received by wholesalers from travelling salesmen now on the road confirm the inference that sentiment among merchants throughout the country is most optimistic."

New building and industrial records and a half billion bushel crop of grain in the west comprise the foundation of Canada's current cheerfulness. Pig iron production for seven months of this year was 24 per cent. more than that of the corresponding period in 1927.

The value of the building authorized in July at 63 cities in Canada was greater than that in June by 14.4 per cent. and than that in July last year by 58.2 per cent. The total for the month of July was the largest on record. Employment conditions at all important centres indicate the same trend of conditions, while as regards the external trade of the Dominion the report for the month of July shows Canada to have exported goods to the extent of $125,530,791 during the month as compared with $107,121,091 in June and $79,395,041 in July last year while the imports for the month amounted to $103,403,649 compared with $110,703,773 in June and $90,598,447 in July, 1927. For the first four months of the fiscal years the exports totalled $409,648,521 and the imports $406,180,130 which indicates a favorable balance of trade especially as the above export figures do not include the exports of foreign products. For the corresponding four months of the previous fiscal year the exports totalled $371,194,049 and the imports $360,326,900.

A DIVISIVE QUESTION.

Isn't it strange how prohibition discloses the essential natures of men. As an attachment or an aversion it is far stronger than political loyalty. The convinced "dry" knows no party, and the man who resents the measure as intrinsically ineffectual or even remedial, or on the other hand as an undue interference with an inalienable right, such a man is likely to desert his party if it advocates prohibition.

Henry Ford is so ardent a prohibitionist that he declares he would have to shut up his plants if the Volstead law were to be changed. He is an uncompromising dry. Ordinarily his statement would confound legions of men who are not multimillionaire manufacturers. But Mr. Ford's opinion is challenged by the action of a "wet", the former chairman of the finance committee of the world's largest automobile corporation, and associated with him as another "wet" is the chairman of the board of that corporation, Raskob and DuPont respectively.

The motor industry is a house divided on the question of prohibition.

THE NEW C.N.R. DIRECTOR.

Hance J. Logan, who has been appointed to succeed the late Matthew Lodge on the board of the Canadian National Railways, has exceptional qualifications for such a post, which carries with it the right to represent the Maritime Provinces in the deliberations of the board.

Since his withdrawal from active politics, when he occupied the seat for Cumberland in the House of Commons, Mr. Logan has served the Maritimes in a number of important directions but in none of greater importance than in the part which he took in carrying out the preliminary negotiations looking to a trade agreement with the British West Indies. While that agreement is benefitting the entire Dominion, it is benefitting the Maritimes most particularly, and for that reason, as well as for many others, Mr. Logan's appointment to the board of the National Railways is a fitting recognition of his long and devoted service to the cause of the Maritimes.

The new director of the National lines is thoroughly conversant with the territory which he is to represent, is aware of its needs and its opportunties and is earnestly devoted to the advancement of its interests. It is doubtful if a better man could be found to serve the Maritimes in this important capacity.—Brockville Recorder.

PICKING UP PASSENGERS.

Circumstantial evidence is not always reliable. Offhand it must be admitted that to pass a weary pedestrian with a nice car, in cold blood, without asking him or her to hop in and have a lift, is hard-hearted. A real fellow always shuts his eyes and turns his back when going by a man or woman walking. It is, however, not so cold-blooded as it appears. In the first place, so far as men are concerned, not a few kind-hearted auto driyers and owners have got a thumping on the head or behind the ear from one of these innocent passengers, and when they came to, found their cash absent while the lumps on their anatomy were present.

One day, just east of Prescott, a gentleman with red blood in his veins took one of these innocent-looking pedestrians into his car, and as the man was driving himself, he had the passenger sit with him. No thumping took place, but when the owner of the car went to pay his hotel bill at the Chateau he discovered that his money had gone with his new-found friend.

There is a reason, too, for not helping out even the best-looking lady on the road. The law in Ontario seems to be a joke regarding the liability of automobile owners. For example, if your chauffeur makes a nut of himself, the owner of the car is responsible, no matter whether the latter was in the car or not. The law holds that the owner of a car hasn't any business to have a fool chauffeur; and, anyway, little if anything could be collected from some of the chauffeurs, and somebody must be liable; so the owner is the goat. But there is a silly section in the Act somewhere, which provides that if John Smith asked his neighbor, Bill Brown, to go for a ride, and the latter complies, Smith is responsible if his friend gets hurt in any accident that may take place. Few there be who would be such mean cusses as to take advantage of this provision in the law, but several cases are on record of this being done.

These are the reasons, and they're good ones, why men, who otherwise would gladly give pedestrians a lift, cannot afford to do so, although it hurts their feelings every time they pass on the road a person who, under other conditions, they would be glad to assist.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

THE PEOPLE RULE.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: It is very interesting to have your "Spectators" and the like telling how jealous and stupid the "people" are. We all know that. It always was so, and because it is the 'people" who have the say at the polls, politics has become a joke and a foolish thing. If the people had the choosing of the managers of our railways, wouldn't they be fine. Sir H. Thornton himself, one of the "people," wouldn't stand for the "people" interfering at all. The truth is we "people" are not fit to manage the business of the nation, or to choose those who do. But so long as we do we will prefer candidates like ourselves who are not much good, and not too big for their boots. You are right about Peterborough. We have exceptionally good members here. Mr. Bradburn and Mr. Peck are full of pep and have got a lot of things for Peterborough, and in Parliament they do their share of the great work of the nation.

SPECTATOR 2.

The Question Box

Q. 1: Do all taxpayers have the right to vote for Collegiate Institute trustees?

2: Do all taxpayers have a right in the government of the Isolation hospital?

A. 1: The Collegiate Institute is administered by the Board of Education, which is elected by the Protestant ratepayers. The Separate School Board is supposed to appoint a representative to act on Collegiate matters, but of late years has not done so.

2. The Isolation Hospital is administered by the Board of Health, which is appointed by the City Council, which is elected by all ratepayers.

A Thought

DON'T HESITATE.

Whatever you do, don't hesitate. Hesitation is tragic. Hamlet, one of the greatest of all tragedies, is the story of a hesitating soul. In the palace of Fontainebleau there is a pathetic sight—a table full of tiny holes, at which Napoleon sat, jabbing his knife, hesitating to abdicate.

You may make a mistake—in all probability you will—but never mind if you do, make it. Remember Abraham Lincoln's famous remark: "The man who never made a mistake never made anything."

The prizes in the school of life go to those who can act, can make a decision quietly and without hesitation, and then calmly await the result.

How often during the war we heard it said, "Oh, yes! his work is all right, but he has no initiative, and he will never make a decision." In short, he had the courage of other people's opinions, but none of his own. Dawdling becomes a habit, until one may get into a state where responsibility for immediate action brings on chills and fever.

Think twice is an excellent maxim, if taken literally, but don't think more than twice. Balance the probabilities as best you can, make your decision as honestly as you can. "Be thou strong and very courageous" and from then on in the dear familiar words of Amiel, "the rest is God's affair."

GOD'S MINUTE.

For the Lord God is a sun and shield; the Lord will give grace glory ;no good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly.—Psalm 98: 11.

Lord, we thank Thee for the blessings of the day that is gone. We were guarded and guided at every step, and not a single good thing was withheld from us. We pray Thy forgiving mercy as we begin the duties and face the dangers of this new day. Cleanse us in Thy Blood; comfort us with Thy presence; strengthen us with Thy power, and help us like little children to put our hand in Thine and be led by Thee all the day through.

Deepen the gratitude of our hearts, and help us to lean upon Thy bosom as John leaned upon the bosom of his Lord.

May we be busy to-day that we may be blessed of Thee, and become a blessing to others. We pray for all the world, every man and woman, but especially for those near and dear to us by the ties of nature. Bless our family, and make it so happy and pure that the angels, our guardian spirits, may find within its walls an atmosphere akin to that of heaven. Amen.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, August 29. — A firm and steady market was in effect yesterday at the Union Stock Yards, due in part to the light receipts. There was a fair clean-up on Monday, only a few of the poorer cattle being left over. This is considered good in view of Monday's abnormal receipts. These, however, failed to make any impression on yesterday's market.

Cattle held steady on a small supply. Butcher steers were scarce and good cows brought from $7.75 to $8.50, with a few at $9.00. Stockers and feeders were steady. Calves remained firm at $15.00 to $16.00 for choice animals.

Hogs were unsettled, $14.50 being bid and $14.75 asked early in the morning, but later the price dropped to $14.50 and remained firm.

Lambs were the only active feature, the price being 50 cents higher. Sheep were steady.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIIPEG, Man., Aug. 29 (Canadian Press).—A sharp upturn at Chicago was reflected in the closing hour of the local grain market yesterday and prices climbed 3⅛c from the low points of the early part of the session to 1⅛c above the previous close. Prominent short interests were said to be covering in Chicago on the strength of corn and local traders followed suit, resulting in the rise of prices. The market finished the day ⅝ to ¾c higher.

In the early part of the market weak Liverpool cables, a better weather map for Western Canada, and the lack of foreign demand for the new crop forced prices down 2c but the Chicago reports resulted in some lively trading and the market went higher.

Foreign importers are ignoring the new wheat and apparently are awaiting the outcome of the Canadian harvest.

Weather conditions in Western Canada are now generally clear although cool in many parts.

Barley scored fractional gains on the coast grain section, the October future climbing over 67c per bushel. This grain is in good demand. Rye displayed a little weakness at first, but finished the day strong. Reports of frosts affected oats, which climbed to higher levels. It is beleived that the frost damage will show up very clearly in this grain. Flax sold at a range of 2c.

WINNIPEG CATTLE

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 29 (Canadian Press).—960 cattle and calves. Trading was fairly active on yesterday's cattle market and a fair demand was in evidence for all classes. Feeder steers sold from $9.50 to $10; light stocker steers, $8.50 to $9.25; decent killing cows realized as high as $8, with the bulk at $7 to $7.50. Good butcher heifers sold from $8.75 to $9.50, and killing steers as high as $10.50.

Hogs, 240. Selects, $13.25; thick smooths, $12.75.

Sheep and lambs, 50. Good killing lambs, $12.50; sheep, $3.00 to $7.00.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 29 (Canadian Press).—The foreign trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was again of a limited character, there being little or no demand from any source.

Owing to the further strength in the Winnipeg market for wheat and oats local car lot cash prices were marked up another cent per bushel. Manitoba No. 5 wheat was quoted at $1.11; tough No. 6 wheat at $1.03, and feed wheat at 99c per bushel.

The inquiry from English importers for Spring wheat flour was fair but the domestic trade was quiet and prices were unchanged. The trade in new crop winter wheat flour was also inactive.

The millfeed market was active with a firm undertone. A small trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats and prices were firm.

A fairly active business was done in all grades of eggs, and prices were firmly maintained. The receipts were 908 cases.

The condition of the market for imported beans was unchanged, the undertone being firm with a small trade passing. Small lots of choice white, hand-picked beans sold at $4.10 to $4.20 per bushel, ex-sttore, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $3.90 to $4 per bushel, ex-track.

The undertone to the market for butter continued strong and a further rise of ¼c per lb was established. The receipts were 369 packages.

The local and export trade in cheese was quiet but values were well maintained. The receipts were 7,869 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29 (Canadian Press).—Corn led wheat in an impressive advance on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday, and prices of all grains soared rapidly upward at the session's close. The rise in wheat came after a sluggish start in which many local traders, influenced by soft foreign markets, were on the selling side.

The swift turn in the trend of wheat prices was not accounted for by news development. The market had started downward at the opening and all deliveries of wheat were more than a cent below Monday's close in desultory early selling. Corn, meanwhile, was on the upgrade and before noon the wheat pit began to assume a sold-out aspect and shorts began to buy. The slow start was soon overcome and during the final hour, commission house buying set in on the largest scale in some time.

September corn, again the leader, moved up four cents from the day's low, and 300,0000 bushels were bought from the country on the advance, 82,000 bushels being of the old crop. Less optimistic crop comments emanated from Nebraska, one private observer telling of heavy local damage to corn by drought and heat. Most of the corn belt was promised showers for to-morrow, with warmer weather in the West.

Some indications of frost came from parts of the Canadian Prairies overnight, but no reports of damage to wheat followed, and the fear of a delayed harvest due to rain was allayed as the skies cleared over most of the northwest provinces. On this side of the border showers were forecast. Flatness of export demand was a factor in the early weakness of the market. European weather was unsettled and some delay to harvest was incurred. Wheat closed firm, 1⅛ to 1¾c higher, September 1.12⅛ to ⅜; December $1.17⅜ to 118; March 1.12¼ to ⅜, and May $1.25⅛ to ¼. Corn closed strong, 2⅛ to 4c up, with September 97⅛ to ¼; December 76⅛ to ¼; March 78⅝ to ¾, and May 80¾.

Light offerings of oats were absorbed by a general demand from commission houses and shipments from Chicago were heavy, 1,115,000 bushels eastbound being posted. The close was firm at ⅞ to 1⅛c advance, September featuring with a close at 39⅜; December 41¼ to ⅝; March 43½, and May 44⅝ to 45.

Provisions ruled irregular, September lard selling steady while deferred futures were firmer; lard closed 2 to 10c higher; ribs 5c lower to 15c up, and bellies unchanged to 2c down.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, August 29. — There was a very firm undertone on the local produce market yesterday. While no alterations in quotations were announced at the close of the market session a number of sales were reported at the top prices quoted. Butter and eggs were particularly strong.

At Chicago — Butter prices remained unchanged on all scores with the market tone steady. Trading was generally slow in most quarters, however. Medium and under grades were steady and quiet. Most buyers were unwilling to purchase beyond immediate requirements. The centralized car market was steady and quiet, with premiums difficult to obtain.

Canadian egg markets continue firm with all fresh supplies moving readily. The local egg situation is steady with imported supplies from the United States tending to keep local prices from advancing. A sale of shipment of Ontario eggs is reported at: Extras, 42c; firsts, 39c: seconds, 32c, delivered, cases returned. Dealers are quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs delivered, cases returned: Extras, 39c to 40c; firsts, 37c to 38c; seconds, 28c to 29c. Prices to retailers are: Extras, 45c to 46c; firsts, 42c to 43c; seconds, 33c to 34c.

"MY WHIPPET FOUR MADE 10 MILES IN 10 MINUTES"

says an Owner (name on request)

"ON a measured stretch," said this owner, "my Whippet Four maintained a speed of 60 miles an hour for 10 minutes. In other words, it made 10 miles in 10 minutes flat over a recognized distance, and against the stop watch.

"I have no doubt that, given the proper roads and the desire to keep it up, I could have maintained this speed indefinitely, as the engine showed no signs of overheating after this spurt. At this speed she seemed to take on a new lease of life and just settled down to a steady smooth purr. As for holding the road, the low-swung body simply hugged the earth's surface."

But, considering the quality features of the Whippet, its remarkably powerful engine—low gravity centre—proven economy—big 4-wheel brakes—and its ability to withstand terrific punishment, such feats of performance are to be expected rather than wondered at.

In the Whippet Four and the new Whippet Six you will find a combination of quality features that will readily convince you of their incomparable value. Inspect them today — arrange for a demonstration.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

HAVE YOU EVER BEEN in the home of a good housewife and studied all her labor-saving devices?

• • • • • • •

One of these which I have noticed is the convenient pot holder hanging on a nail, somewhere near the stove, where it is easily reached when needed.

• • • • • • •

Some housewives snatch up a dish towel in their hurry. This they fold and use to protect their hands from hot pots and pans. But if one uses a towel for this purpose, it must be washed before it can again be used for drying dishes.

• • • • • • •

An ideal pot holder is one which is fairly large and pliable. It is very hard to hold on to a hot dish when the pot holder is stiff. Some-"holders" are made with an oilcloth covering, but this does not seem to be a good material because it is so slippery.

• • • • • • •

An excellent pot holder is one made with an interlining of flannel with a brass ring in one corner to hang it up with. The advantage in having one like this is that it may be washed——having no asbestos or paper in it.

• • • • • • •

It is a simple matter to make these and other cloths used around the fire, fireproof.

• • • • • • •

Dissolve two ounces of alum in three or four quarts of water and soak them in it. Then wring out slightly and let them dry.

• • • • • • •

Brooms and household brushes are not injured by washing as is generally believed by many people. If washed and rubbed with soap they do tend to soften, but washed in the following way, there can be no harm done. Shake or wipe out all free dust. Then prepare a solution of boiling hot water with soda and ammonia. To one pail of hot water use a tablespoon of soda and a teaspoon of ammonia. After dipping the brushes and brooms in this a number of times, quickly rinse in cold water and let them dry as quickly as possible.

• • • • • • •

Wine stains can be removed by holding the stained portion of the cloth in boiling water. Mildew stains wil disappear quickly if soaked in sour milk.

• • • • • • •

A wise plan to adopt before starting to take up your plants and flowers to bring them indoors for winter, is to dig the fingernails into a cake of soap so that these will have protection from the grime which otherwise would get in the nails.

• • • • • • •

Everyone knows that peroxide of hydrogen and tincture of iodine should be kept away from the light, but it is not generally known that many perfumes are apt to lose in strength as well as in color if the sun is allowed to shine upon them.

• • • • • • •

Many working girls in Peterborough cannot afford an expensive string of pearls, and those who cannot will welcome the following suggestion to clean artificial pearls and keep them looking their best.

• • • • • • •

Sprinkle a sheet of white cotton wool with powdered magnesia and lay the string of pearls upon it. Fold the wool over the string of pearls and leave for a while, then roll them gently between the layers of cotton wool. Remove and brush with a soft camel hair brush.

• • • • • • •

If, after you return from your vacation, you find your white shoes have become too dirty to be cleaned, they can be changed to a nice brown by rubbing them over with a mixture of 20 drops sagron and 2 table spoons olive oil. Two applications are necessary for proper color.

• • • • • • •

Paste a large manilla envelope in the back of the cookbook for holding untried or favorite recipes. A small card file index is also convenient and inexpensive for this purpose; paste recipies on the cards.

• • • • • • •

During this time of the year housewives find that many chair rungs have become loosened. To remedy this, slightly split the end of the rung and insert the end of a thin wooden wedge and press rung in place. The harder it is pressed, the more it will tighten.

• • • • • • •

Lemons have been found to be very useful in many different way, besides beings used for cool, refreshing, summer drinks. Here are a few suggestions for using lemon juice.

• • • • • • •

In boiling fish, add lemon juice to the water. This helps to keep it whole and thus preserves the flavor and nutriment. Incidentally a few drops of lemon juice in the water in which old potatoes are cooking will keep them from discoloring, or a few drops in the food chopper before grinding sticky fruits, such as figs, raisins, or dates, will make the grinder easier to clean and keep the food from sticking in the utensil.

SINGER MEETS EX-PREMIER

Barbara Austen, the Canadian prima donna, who in private life is known as Miss Gladys Jones, was recently the guest of Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, Britain's wartime premier, at his home in Churt, Surrey. The visit was a sequel to a previous meeting in Canada when Miss Jones sang with Dame Clara Butt at a gathering where Lloyd George was the speaker.

HER SPLENDID KNIGHT.

By Clarissa Mackie.

Patricia Lawrence stood in the Paris hotel window and watched the crowds passing to and fro on the splendid avenue. They were gathering for the Legion Convention and that explained Patricia's own coming. Had she not driven an ambulance when she was seventeen? Had she not run away from home to do it?

Schoolday memories came and went in her mind — boarding school days —college. It was at college that she had decided to help win the war. So she had gone to Paris. It was there that she had met Peter Cook—not badly wounded, merely bruised and stunned and dismissed after a week or two in hospital. And it was during this period that love and romance came and thrilled her to the core. Out of the wrack of battlefields came love and for a week or two Peter Cook and Patricia Lawrence lived with it, promising faithfully to wait until the war was over.

And then came annihilation for Patricia. A stray shell had bursted near by and she had been stunned. While she was in hospital the war ended, and, by the time Patricia was convalescent, her father had arrived and carried her off. From that day to this she had never seen her Peter Cook, and she believed that he must be among the unknown dead.

Now she stood in the hotel window and looked at the gathering of the Legion. She wanted to be down there among them. Perhaps she might see Peter Cook!

"Oh, Peter — Peter—" she whispered softly, and sadly wondered if he could be alive and had forgotten her!

After that, wearing her uniform, she went down into the crowd and once or twice met someone that remembered her. They talked together of the war and of the great gathering.

Patricia was walking alone when she suddenly saw him — Peter — her knight errant. He was as tall and straight as ever, but he walked with a decided limp and one arm was very stiff — she was glad it was the left arm!

Somehow, it was as if the stage was set for a play. She and Peter seemed to be alone in the avenue—and Peter Cook was looking white and anxious. The way his face reddened and seemed so glad, told her that he had been looking for her—and now he had found her — they had found each other.

Their hands clasped and they called each other "Miss Lawrence" and "Captain Cook." After a while they went into a small shop for a cup of coffee and now, for the first time, they asked questions.

"I could not get in touch with you at first," he said gravely.

She told him of her stay in the hospital. "I tried to find you, too," she said softly, "and I have always thought that you must have been killed. I am glad to see you."

"Thank you," he said simply. "I would have found you somewhere if I had been free—I always meant to make a search of the whole world until I found you—and then, when I reached home, in the States, I found that my father was on his deathbed, and that he had lost every penny through some speculation or other. I had a mother and a young sister just entering high school. What could I do expecting to care for them? I had to find a place to work—my father's friends helped me to that—we had to sell the home in Conecticut—go to a new place—and begin over again. My sister is a senior in college now. Will be married as soon as she graduates. Mother is well and happy—and I — ah, Patricia, how can I ever forget you?"

"Must you?" asked Patricia softly.

"You are the daughter of a rich man—I could not ask you to come down to our simple plane of living."

"Not even to make me happy?" she faltered.

"Not just yet, dear. A little while and I will come to New York and see your father. And now, tell me more about yourself."

They met once more after that and then there were friends that Patricia must visit in England, a trip to Scotland, and then home again, fearful that Peter Cook might come to see her during her absence.

"My dear Patsy," smiled her mother, "I canot think of any such young man—Peter Cook? Bowes will give you the cards and perhaps you may find him. Who was he, Patsy?"

"My knight errant, mother, gone astray with my happiness in his hands!"

"You are sure of his love, Patsy?"

Patricia laughed proudly.

"So sure, mother, that I will wait for him—always."

After that, Patricia Lawrence waited until the year waned and a new year came, white with snow. Perhaps her eyes were a little sadder, her lips more tremulous, when something happened.

Bowes brought a card on his silver salver.

"Peter!" she whispered, and she nodded to Bowes. In an instant he was there, coming with the rush of a happy lover.

"Oh, Patsy," he said, tremulously. "My great uncle in Australia sent for me and I went—he was dying—and he has left us everything — he was a very rich man. Now, I can take care of you and mother, too!"

So Patsy Lawrence's knight errant came home at last—and we rather suspect that they will live happily ever after.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

(By Mary Marshall)

Tabs of the sort shown in the sketch for to-day are used on a number of the frocks for autumn. They are in fact, one of the new trimmings and yet not at all difficult to make. If the material is thin—like silk crepe or georgette—both sides of the tabs are of the same material. With heavier materials they are sometimes lined with a thinner fabric in matching color.

Tabs are use profusely in ornamenting this late summer frock of gray-blue crepe de chine. The hat is of natural color straw with tabs of the gray-blue crepe de chine.

I saw a charming new bright, dark blue georgette frock the other day trimmed with matching transparent velvet. Tabs about nine inches deep edged the skirt that was of irregular length and quite full, giving a flower petal effect about the hem. These tabs were of the transparent velvet lined with the matching georgette.

Raveling gives the trimming touch on some of the new frocks for autumn. A street frock of brown homespun had a skirt with raveled lower edge and lines of raveling appeared on the bodice as well. The raveling was less than an inch in width. Ribbons used on the new hats are frequently ravelled at the ends also.

Warm, slightly reddish browns suggesting chestnut, or as the French would call it "marron," appear frequently in the new street things for autumn. These tones are decidedly browner than the henna or chow shades we have had and yet anyone with a trained eye can see that there is a reddish cast about them. Acajou —that is mahogany—is the name given to a reddish brown. It is the tone of brownish old mahogany, remember.

Blue is not usually so popular in autumn and winter as it is in the spring and summer, because of its coolness. But fashionable women do not seem to have tired of it and there is something bright if not precisely warm about some of the new blues. Navy-blue ensembles sometimes show a combination with reddish brown or mahogany accessories that is anything but cold in effect.

Davy Jones is the name given to a bright blue very nearly as bright as royal blue.

LYRICS OF LIFE

HANDY TOOLS

The man who makes the saws that buzz,
The tools you purchase at a store,
Knows just exactly what they're for,
Or anyway he thinks he does.
If such a fellow realized
The things that people often do
With things he never meant them to
He'd be a little bit surprised.

We use a wire to pick a lock,
We solder saucepans with a nail,
We put a handle on a pail
With some old mainspring of a clock.
The driver that was meant for screws
Was meant for that without a doubt,
But when a shoenail will stick out
Then that's the very thing to use.

We open bottles with a spike,
We make a hinge of garden-hose,
We use his tools for things he knows,
And any other thing we like.
The things you purchase at a store
Won't always do what makers claim;
They're just the thing, though, just the same
For things they're not intended for.

An Atlantic liner was recently fumigated at a cost of $5,500, and seven rates were caught at a cost of about $800 a rat.

A Tip or Two

FRUIT PUDDING.

Fresh fruits and berries should be used liberally in the summer. Any left-over cake can serve as a base for a pudding. Cover with fresh fruit and serve with soft custard or whipped cream, sweetened and flavored to taste.

When cleaning gloves or clothes with petrol or benzine, dip the hands in a solution of alum and water to prevent the cleaning fluid from cracking or drying them.

Round face cloths are more practical than the square variety, as they have no corners to hold the water and prevent rapid drying.

If you do not ppsess a tiled-top table in your scullery, fix a strip of blue or black and white linoleum, which is very clean looking and strong.

REMEMBER THE LIDS.

Don't forget to wash the lids along with the saucepans. Flavors and odors will cling to them and are apt to spoil the next dish over which they are used.

DRY SALT.

Keep the kitchen salt cellar close to the stove during the summer months. Then you are certain it will shake freely no matter how damp the weather is.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally is in love.

POPPY, Sally's room-mate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

Akers says he is through with Sally, and the doctors say she can never walk again. Sanderson assumes her care and plans to get a cottage in the country for her and Mrs. Kiff.

XIII—THE NOTE.

Sally was so young! How could one be crippled for life when one was so young? God could never be so cruel. Sally had never thought of the name of God, except as a swear-word, but it came to her lips now more like a prayer. She did not know if He existed, but in her extremes she was willing to believe anything, to try any source that might help her.

"Oh, God; oh, God!" she said over and over again in a trembling whisper, her eyes closed, and every nerve of her body strained in her supreme effort to raise herself.

Someone opened the door.

"Whatever are you trying to do?" the cool, practical voice of the nurse demanded. She crossed the room swiftly and, with firm, capable hands, made Sally lie down again.

For a moment Sally fought with all the poor little remnants of her strength.

"Leave me alone! I want to get up. I know I can if you leave me alone. I won't lie here any more. Let me get up!" But her defiance was short-lived, and ended in a passion of weeping that left her weak and prostrate.

"You're a naughty, foolish little girl," the nurse reprimanded her. "You may have done yourself untold harm. Whatever madness possessed you?"

Sally did not know, and whatever madness it had been, it had gone now. She was beaten—beaten to the ground. She had no more hope; she did not believe in will-power, or God, or that there was anyone in Heaven or earth who would help her except perhaps Philip Sanderson. She did not want him, but he was the last rock to which she clung. Later in the day, when she was calmer and had slept a little, she asked for paper and pencil and wrote him a note in her weak, ill-formed writing.

"Dear Phillip,—Please come and see me.—Sally."

She spelled "Philip" with two "l's," as she spelled her own name.

"I suppose if I'd got any sense I'd send my love," she thought, when she had sealed it into its envelope. "But I don't love him, and I don't want him to love me. I only want him to keep me from being alone all the rest of my hateful life."

Philip Sanderson came early the following day. Sally recognized his step along the bare passage long before it reached her door, but she lay very still with closed eyes, and did not move until she knew he was standing beside her bed. Then suddenly she looked up at him.

"I didn't think you'd come," she said tremulously.

"You knew I should come," Sanderson answered.

"Well, sit down." Already she was feeling irritable with him; already she was asking herself desperately why it could not have been Josh Akers who was willing and ready to stand by her. What a difference it would have made to everything! A cottage in the country with Josh! To know that it was his money paying for her, his love caring for her!

"Sit down," she said again sharply. "You're so tall—you give me the shudders."

Sanderson dragged up the only chair in the room and sat down.

"You know what they've done to me?" Sally said in a hard little voice.

"I know what I've done to you," he answered harshly.

She winced at that, the ready tears brimming to her eyes.

"I'll never be able to dance again," she whispered.

His face twitched as if with pain.

"That's what they say here," he said gently—so gently that she hardly recognized his voice. "But there are other doctors in the world, Sally, and when you are stronger and better able to bear things——"

She cut in sharply.

"I'm not going to be mauled about any more. They've hurt me enough. I'll just have to put up with it.

She bit her lip till it bled, to keep back suffocating sobs that choked her, but in the end they came—terrible, heartbroken sobs that seemed to rend her frail body.

"Sally—oh, for God's sake!" Sanderson sought in agony for words that would comfort her, but his own heart was nearly breaking. He just took her hand in both his, and held it hard, touching it once with his lips as if it were something most precious.

When she was quieter, and lay with closed eyes, little sobbing breaths shaking her now and then, he found his voice hoarsely.

"Don't quarrel with me, Sally. Let me stay with you always. My life is yours, and everything I have. I need not tell you—you must know. I'll get a place in the country, if you like—or London—but I think the country would be best. There'll be a garden, and you can have a pony-trap, or a little car. I'll fill the place with flowers—you love flowers—and you can have any friends you want. I'll do anything—you've only got to say what you want. You're fond of flowers and sunshine; you'll get to love the country. Oh, my dear, I'm such a clumsy fool, I can't say half what's in my heart—half what I want to do for you. Just believe in me, Sally, that's all. I'll stand by you. I'll never fail you. Sally, say you believe me!"

Her face was turned away from him; hardly less white it was than the pillow on which she lay.

"You're just—sorry for me," she whispered. Even in her weakness and distress, her vanity wanted to hear him say that he loved her, even though she cared nothing for him, and even though the touch of his hand and the tenderness of his lips had given her no pleasure.

"You're just sorry for me—just paying your liabilities," she said again.

And then, almost for the first time in his queer life, eloquence came to Philip Sanderson.

"I love you with all my heart and soul," he said. "I'd give my life to undo what I have done to you, Sally."

She would have been less than human not to have recognized the deep sincerity of his voice, not to have responded to it a little. She looked at him, and smiled through her tears.

"You'll get to hate me when you find out how horrid I can be," she said.

"I found that out long ago," he whispered whimsically.

She was not sure whether she ought to be offended, but there was an expression in Sanderson's eyes that took any sting from his words.

"How much longer must I stay here?" she asked instead.

"I don't know. I'll see the doctor." She clung to his hand.

"Take me away soon, Philip."

"You shall not stay a moment longer than is absolutely necessary," he promised.

He was almost happy when, after seeing the doctor, he went away. He told himself that perhaps, after all, out of this tragedy he might yet find some happiness. He walked bare-headed through the streets, letting the cool air blow upon his forehead.

At any rate, Sally belonged to him now, and not to Akers or any other man. She was entirely dependent on him; she would owe everything to him, and he found great happiness in the knowledge.

At the back of his mind he knew that Sally had only made the best bargain with him she could make in the circumstances; perhaps he fully realized that it was only of herself she had thought all the time, and never once of him. But he was more than content.

When he got back to his flat he wrote a note to Mrs. Kiff and left it for her to find when she came in the morning.

"I have gone to look for that cottage in the country, so make up your mind to come along soon and find the chickens and the cabbage-patch."

Then he brushed Sometimes, rubbed up the dog's red, white and blue collar, packed a handbag, and looked up a train into Surrey.

"I shall love you the sa-ame for ev-er!
I shall love you the sa-ame for ev-er—"

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, AUGUST 30.

"The stars incline, but do not compel"

(Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as an unfavorable day for a malefic aspect is strongly dominant.

There is a sinister sign for all who speculate in oil and again there is hint of serious difficulties attending new enterprises.

Discoveries or resources of mineral and oil in fields not previously explored are prognosticated.

This is a rule under which deception and indirection are supposed to be encouraged by the stars. It is well to be on the lookout for double-dealing, although as a general thing a suspicious attitude should be avoided.

It is not a lucky day for beginning voyages for delays are forecast. There may be serious storms at sea.

Water cures again will be much exploited and the health will be a subject of too much discussion, the seers declare.

While this planetary government prevails, both men and women may be exceedingly sensitive to impressions. They may imagine insults or slights where none has been intended.

Astrologers stress the importance of maintaing a positive attitude of mind and avoiding destructive or discouraging thoughts.

The autumn quarter will bring the Earth into its major conjunction with Uranus and this will increase the desire for personal liberty and freedom, astrologers announce.

Mars will be in an elevated position that inspires European war lords to exert their power, astrologers predict.

Banks will continue subject to the best planetary direction which will aid enterprise, if the stars are rightly interpreted.

Women are to rise to important positions in the financial world, the seers predict, and they will become great economists, the planets seem to indicate.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the forecast of a happy, prosperous year. Certain subjects of this sign of Virgo may become prominent in the government service, it is foretold.

Children born on this day probably will be inclined to be dreamers. These Virgo boys and girls often are exceedingly romantic. Many have psychic gifts. Poets and dramatists belong to this Earth sign.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Sunday's Bedtime Story

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"What's the matter with Gup's tail?" asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy of Uncle Wiggily one day as the rabbit gentleman was starting to hop away from his bungalow to go adventuring.

"Gup's tail?" exclaimed Mr. Longears. "Why, I didn't know anything was the matter with it," and Uncle Wiggily tried to remember when he had last seen the old horse.

"Take a look at his tail the next time you meet Gup," said the muskrat lady housekeeper, "and then see if you don't think it is getting very thin. Why, it used to be plump and as full of hair as a new dusting brush. But now it is all straggily and it looks as if he had worn his tail out swatting flies."

Uncle Wiggily followed the old horse.

"Maybe he has," said Uncle Wiggily. "I'll take a look."

He did not have to wait long. That very day, while hopping around looking for adventures, Uncle Wiggily saw old Gup trotting along the road. The horse seemed happy enough and his feet went ploppity plip plop as they had always done.

"But I didn't get a good look at his tail," said the rabbit gentleman. "I'll hop along after him and see what Nurse Jane means."

No sooner had Uncle Wiggily hopped softly down the road after Gup than Mr. Longears saw, indeed, that Gup's tail was a sad sight. There were only about half the number of long, shiny, black hairs that had been in it when Uncle Wiggily last saw his friend.

"Gup can't be getting old," thought Mr. Longears. "He is much younger than Old Toad, but then, of course, Old Toad has no tail for hair to fall out of. I wonder if Gup is worrying about something? That might make his tail look sick. I'll follow him."

Taking care that his paws made no sound on the road Uncle Wiggily followed Gup, the kind old horse, and pretty soon he saw the big animal stop near a barbed wire fence. In case you don't know what barbed wire fence is, I'll tell you. It is made of wire and has sharp barbs, or stickery points, all over it that catch in your clothes when you try to crawl through.

"Ha! I think I know what has happened!" said Uncle Wiggily as he saw Gup stop near the barbed wire fence. "This horse has been letting his tail become caught on the barbs and the sharp stickers have pulled the hairs out of his tail. But I should think Gup would have better sense than that. I must speak to him about it."

Uncle Wiggily, who had hidden under a big burdock weed to watch Gup was now about to hop on when he happened to hear a voice speaking. It was the voice of a cowbird one of the most selfish birds in the world. For cowbirds lay their eggs in the nest of robins and let the mother robin hatch out not only her own brood but the little cowbirds also. And when the little cowbirds grow big enough they push the robins, who have a right to be there, right out of the nest. And sme mother robins are so foolish that they think the ugly cowbirds are their own and feed them worms.

So when Uncle Wiggily heard the Cowbird speaking to Gup, right away the rabbit gentleman knew that something was wrong:

"Well, here you are again, Gup!" said the Cowbird.

"Yes, here I am," said the old horse

"And have you more hairs for me?" chirped the Cowbird.

"Well, my hairs are getting rather scarce," neighed Gup. "But if you say you must have them, why, I suppose I'll have to give them to you."

"Yes, that's what you will," said the Cowbird. "I want more tail hairs."

"Goodness me! What's this?" thought Uncle Wiggily "Has old Gup been letting the Cowbird pull hairs from his tail? That must be it! What a selfish bird to make poor Gup lose half his tail! I must put a stop to this! Gup should not be so kind-hearted but silly."

The rabit gentleman was just going to hop out from beneath the burdock weed when he saw something that made him want to stand on his head in surprise.

What it was you shall soon hear. For if the furnace wil let the cellar stairs come up out of the dark and play in the backyard sunshine for a little while, I'l tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Bunty's cushion.

Progress is being made on the Pontypool and Bobcaygeon railroad, though scarcity of men and teams has provided worry for those in charge of the work. The camp of Irishmen who have been at Birch Point have moved to the point east of Humphries. There are in this camp, about thirty good natured hard workers. The camp is called Camp Bob, while the other camps are designated by numbers. The next is at Hickson's line where about forty Italians are at work. At this point, a good piece of grading is being done, the work being favorable to the use of wheelbarrows. Another camp is situated at the Scotch line where about fifty Italians are staying. It is near Eureka Point, while on the south side of Emily creek, yet another gang of Italians, fifty or more in number, are encamped. At Agnew's, south of Dunsford is the last gang on the list.

The 57th regiment band played its last program of the summer season in Victoria Park last night.

In the last day's shooting at Long Branch, riflemen from the Peterborough 57th regiment won numerous prizes. Among those who represented the local regiment were Color Sergeant W. H. Moore, Corporal Gibson and Private Ritchie.

Bonner-Worth Mills officials announce new profit sharing plan whereby employees working with the mills for a period from September 1 to December 31 will receive a bonus equal to ten per cent of their earnings. This is in addition to the substantial war bonus that has been given for some time.

Alderman Dobbin returns from the first session of the Fire Chiefs' Convention, with the suggestion that the "platoon system" be introduced into the city's fire department. It has also been approved by Fire Chief Grange and his men. By the new plan, the force would be divided into two sections, each section to do twelve-hour duty. The matter was deferred as a suggestion to be handed on to the 1919 council.

Cards Add To Lead in National League Race

Rochester Leading Leafs By Half a Game

DEFEAT CUBS IN SECOND

Cardinals Add To Lead in National League Pennant Race.

WIN 6-0 DECISION.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Clarence Mitchell, the southpaw spitballer, was in fine form yesterday and the St. Louis Cardinals added to their lead in the National League pennant race, defeating the Chicago Cubs in the second of the three game series, 6 to 0 at Chicago.

Mitchell held the Cubs to seven hits, only two of which were bunched in one inning. In three innings he set the home team down in one, two, three order and in four others only four batters faced him.

Orsatti led the Card attack with a perfect day at bat, which included a double, three singles and a base on balls. With the exception of Orsatti's four hits, the League leaders got to Pat Malone and Percy Jones, for only six hits.

The pennant chances of the Giants received another rude shock when the Boston Braves marched into the Polo Grounds and made off with both ends of a double header by 3 to 2 and 7 to 5. This double reverse ran the Giant losing streak to eight in the last nine games, and dropped the Clan McGraw to a point five and one half games below the Cardinals.

The Giants last night held a virtual tie in games with the Cubs, who have won four more and lost four more than the Clan McGraw. The Bruins are only half a game, or two points ahead of the Reds and the Pirates, who are tied for fourth.

The powerful bat of Rogers Hornsby may be blamed by the Giants for their double disaster. The Boston manager and former Giant second baseman hit three doubles and three singles in the two games. He drove home two runs in the opener and scored the third. His blows were equally effective in the second clash.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, National league champions, pulled up to a tie with Cincinnati for fourth place by taking a double header from Philadelphia.

While the Reds were idle, the Pirates won the first game 9 to 2 and the second 16 to 7.

Hill was master of the first game allowing only four hits. Sweetland and Miller were touched for 15 hits but three double plays held down the score.

In the second game, the Buccaneers hammered four Quaker hurlers for 21 hits, Lloyd Waner, getting four of them. Grimes, who started for the Pirates was driven to cover in the second inning and Dawson finished, receiving credit for the win.

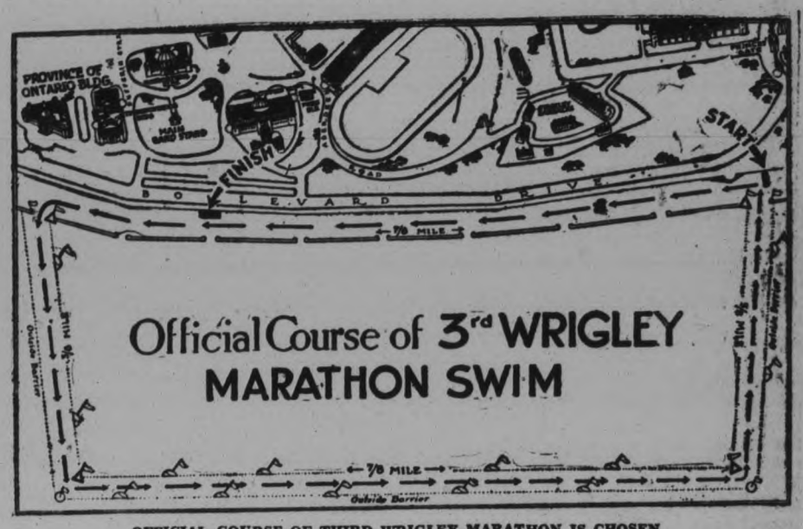
LEAFS ARE DOWN IN THIRD PLACE

Toss Game Away To Reading, Which Now Leads in Race.

TORONTO, August 29. — If ever a game was tossed away it was that one that the Leafs presented to the hustling Reading Keystones at the local Stadium yesterday afternoon. The visitors, who now lead the league alone, won in the tenth inning, the final score being 5 to 4, but had the O'Haramen not been overly generous in the second and third innings, the game would never have gone beyond the regulation nine innings. Thus for the first time since the early days of the race the Leafs are in third position.

The game was delayed until a threatening storm swept past the grounds, but it was extremely dark for baseball when the umpires started the teams on their way at twelve minutes to four. These conditions existed until the fifth inning, when the sun came out and shone brightly —for the Keys, not for the Leafs.

COURSE ARRANGED FOR THIRD WRIGLEY MARATHON



OFFICIAL COURSE OF THIRD WRIGLEY MARATHON IS CHOSEN

The official course of the 3rd Wrigley Marathon swim has now been definitely plotted out, according to announcements made by Exhibition officials. The course is shown in the ABOVE plan. It will be observed that the swimmers commence at the same point as last year; swim 7-8 of a mile along the waterfront inside of the breakwater then turn and swim three-eighths of a mile out into the lake; proceeding parallel to the breakwater seven-eighths of a mile and then swimming back the three-eighths of a mile to the starting point. The course, which is an oblong, thus covers 2½ miles. On the day of the women's swim the course will be covered four times to make up the ten mile marathon. In addition to that the swimmers go an additional 3-4 of a mile past the starting point to the finish, in front and a little past the Manufacturers' building. On the day of the men's race, the course will be gone around six times, in order to make up the fifteen miles. The hospital arrangements are the same as last year. On both days the hospital will be located at the National Yacht Club.

Some of the electrically-controlled pari mutuel betting machines, such as are used at the race tracks in Australia, cost as much as $150,000 each.

A young English billiard professional, playing in Birmingham recently, established a record in snooker pool which never can be betterd while the rules of the game remain as they are to-day. He scored the full "possible" 147 points, something that never had been done before. This means that he "potted" the black ball (scoring seven) until each of the 15 red balls was down, and then took the rest of the colors in their prescribed order.

Tommy Loughran Out For Honors

PHILADELPHIA, August 29 (Canadian Press). — Tommy Loughran, world's light heavyweight champion, will start his campaign for the heavyweight title, recently relinquished by Gene Tunney, on October 1 or 3, when he will meet Jack Gross, of Salem, N.J., in a ten-round bout at the local National League baseball park.

Articles for the match were signed yesterday by Joe Smith, manager of Loughran, in the office of Frank Wiener, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission.

BALL PLAY-OFFS FOR THIS WEEK

East Peterborough League Winners Meet Napanee This Afternoon.

CHATHAM, August 29. — W. C. Lamarsh, vice-president of the O.B.A.A., yesterday announced forthcoming play-offs. The Walkerville Chicks, defeated on Saturday by Guelph, will go to the latter place on Wednesday for the return game in the senior series. If a third game is necessary it will be at Galt on Labor Day. Meanwhile Strathroy is waiting to meet the winner.

The Oskies of Hamilton defeated Niagara Falls on Saturday at St. Catharines and the teams play again on Wednesday in Hamilton. Belleville, winners of the Central Ontario League, are awaiting the winners of the T.A.B.A., now playing interleague finals. In the Intermediate division Chatham, defeated on Saturday by Leamington, go to the latter place on Wednesday for the second game. Stouffville, victors over the T.A.B.A. champions in straight games, will meet Penetang, Simcoe County champions, on Wednesday.

Peterborough, of the East Peterborough League, who eliminated Cobourg, of Oshawa District, on Saturday, now meet Napanee, winners of the Lennox-Addington League. Oakville, champions of the H.A.B.A., have not yet declared their winners, while Stratford, of the Intercounty, winners over the Central League, are waiting word as to whom the team will meet. The nickel belt champions have a bye to the finals.

In the junior series, Merritton, of Niagara District, winners over the H.A.B.A., tied up its series with Preston of the Intercounty, winners over London. These teams will play the third game in Hamilton on Wednesday. The Walkerville Chicks will play the winners.

FIRST PLAY-OFF ON FRIDAY NIGHT

De Laval and Northenders Meet in Softball Final Series.

CALLED FOR 5.45.

Friday evening at Confederation Square will see the first game of the play offs for the championship of the City Softball League between De Laval and Harrison's Northenders. This series should prove a great struggle as both teams are very evenly matched, there being very little difference in the merits of any of the players in the different departments.

De Laval went through the entire schedule with only one loss while Harrisons suffered three, two of these coming at the hands of the De Laval crew. But the Northenders have strengthened considerably since then, acquiring Calladine, the heavy hitting first sacker, Dobson, whose work behind the bat is of A-1 quality and Bob Ross at second, who is a mountain of strength to the Northenders.

Carruthers will likely draw the pitching assignment for the Separator crew and Dundas should work for Harrisons. Both are good pitchers and should give a good account of themselves in the big series.

The game is called for 5.45 p.m. sharp and will in all probability draw a large crowd.

ATHLETICS GAIN ON THE LEADERS

TIGERS WIN 8-4.

NEW YORK August 29 (Canadian Press). — The Athletics climbed back to within three games of the idle Yankees yesterday afternoon by taking two games from the White Sox by scores of 1 to 0 and 4 to 3. The second battle extended into the eleventh inning before Bing Miller singled to score Mule Hass from third with the winning run. In the first, Thomas held the Mackmen to three hits, but one was Max Bishop's fifth home run of the season, hit over the right field fence with two out in the third. Grove so scattered the eight Chicago hits that he was in difficulty only in the last two rounds.

In the second game the Macks to win had to overcome a lead of three runs carved out by the White Sox in the first inning off Jack Quinn. The defenders got to Grady Atkins for a pair in the sixth and for one more in the seventh to even the count. Eddie Rommel entered the box after Ty Cobb batted for Quinn in the sixth, and held the visitors to two hits over the rest of the route. The home team pulled out the decision in the eleventh on a single by Hass, Cochrane's sacrifice, an intentional pass to Simmons, a force play on Simmons at second, and Miller's single.

A vicious assault on Walter Miller in the third inning in which ten batsmen faced him and six runs were scored, enabled Detroit to defeat Cleveland in the first game of the series 8 to 4. The feature of the attack on Miller was Bob Fothergill's home run over the score board, with Red Hargrave and Harry Heilmann on.

Sam Gray's double in the eleventh inning drove in the run which broke a 6 to 6 tie and stated a two-run rally which gave St. Louis an 8 to 6 victory over the Red Sox here yesterday.

Boston had a ve-run lead at the end of the fifth inning, but Ruffing weakened in the sixth and had similar lapses in the eighth and eleventh.

RED WINGS WIN DOUBLE

Occupy Second Place in International League Pennant Race.

DEFEAT NEWARK BEARS.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press.)— Rochester's Red Wings went on a hitting rampage behind the excellent hurling of Vic Keen and Willard Ford here yesterday, sending the Newark Bears down to two defeats. Keen won the first fray 9 to 4, while Ford, recently obtained from Nagerstown of the Blue Ridge League, won 7 to 0, as he held the expensive Bear outfit to one hit, a safe blow to centre in the fifth by Uzmann. He walked two men and showed plenty of stuff over the entire route of seven innings.

The double win gives Rochester second place in this revolving baseball wheel of the International League, half a game behind the Reading Keys. The margin over the Toronto Leafs is just a half game but Rochester has lost fewer contests than any club in the circuit. Rochester will meet the Bears in another double bill to-day.

Bisons Lose 6-1.

BUFFALO, Aug. 29.— (Canadian Press.)—The Buffalo Bisons suffered a costly loss to the Baltimore Orioles here yesterday by a score of 6 to 1, the defeat causing them to slump to fourth place. The Orioles larruped Mangum for eighteen hits, but were unable to score for seven innings despite the fact they cracked 11 safeties in this period. Onslow and Barton hit homers in the eighth and ninth innings rallies. Marvellous defensive work by Thomas and Kelly held Mangum up in the early frames. Manager Dunn of the Orioles received notification of a five day suspension yesterday as a result of his fracas with Umpire Myers Monday. Manager Climer of the Bisons also was suspended for the day because of a run in with Umpire Fyfe on Sunday.

Take Second Straight.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press.)—The Royals took their second straight victory from Jersey City here yesterday afternoon, Doc Dunagan pitching the locals to a 3-1 triumph. Dunagan turned in his best performance of the year, setting the Cats down with two hits, both of which came in the second inning to account for the visitors' only run, Sonny Morne kept pace with Dunagan in a tight twirlers' battle until the eighth when he weakened to permit two singles and issue four bases on balls which the Royals manufactured into three runs. After the second inning, only two Cats got as far as second base on Dunagan. Chet Nichols, the Royals' new twirler, reported to the club yesterday.

PEACE DISTRICT GROWS RAPIDLY

H. P. Kennedy Sees Evidence of Great Prosperity Through West.

MANY NEW SETTLERS.

H. P. Kennedy, a former Peterborough man, now in Toronto as one of the largest live stock commission agents in Canada, has just returned from a six weeks' trip through Western Canada, where he visited the great Peace River country as well as all the other districts west of Winnipeg.

Mr. Kennedy writes to The Examiner and states: "The evidence of prosperity is everywhere and possibly if there are no setbacks Western Canada will harvest the greatest crop on record. I was more than pleased with the development in the Peace River district, which is of a permanent nature, and also with the community spirit that existed there. The class of settlers who are there are going to be a happy and contented people. The head agent of the Colonization Department stated that 2,500 families had taken homesteads in the Peace River country this season since the end of March.

"A great many United States' people and people from the Eastern Provinces and the northern part of Europe comprise these settlers There had been two trains a week since the end of March going north from Edmonton with settlers' effects, and each train has averaged (according to information given by the settlers) at elast a quarter of a million dollars in equipment, machinery, live stock, etc.

"The live stock situation at present is most satisfactory to the Canadian producer, prices being paid for live stock averaging from 2½c. to 3c. a pound more than the ruling prices of a year ago."

An enclosed clipping from an Edmonton paper tells of an interesting development in connection with Edmonton stock yards, of which Mr. Kennedy is president.

A lane or runway almost a half mile long leads from the Swift plant via a subway direct to the stock yards, and it is fenced closely with plank and hog wire for a height of six feet. It is twelve feet in width. The new subway is of concrete and was built by the Canadian National construction crew at a cost to the Swift and Edmonton stock yards of $12,000. It is the means of a speedy and direct transfer to the plant of Swift company This subway is valuable in the saving of time and is especially concerned with the reduction of bruising, which has been of vital interest to shippers

COUPLE FOUND AT WOODSTOCK

MISSING 19 DAYS.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press).—J. H. Lachance and Pat Taylor were detained by police here to-day. Taylor, a Cobourg boy, left his home town in company with Lachance two weeks ago and the couple had been sought throughout the province.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Aug. 29. (Canadian Press).—No word of the arrival here of Pat Taylor, missing Cobourg youth, who with his alleged abductor, J. H. Lachance, was reported on his way to Niagara Falls, has been heard. Inquiries at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. White, whose name is said to have been mentioned by Taylor in a letter to his mother, revealed the fact that he had not yet arrived.

Both Mr. and Mrs. White said they knew nothing of the boy and were surprised their name had been mentioned. They knew no one in Cobourg, they said.

Police of Cobourg have been searching for Taylor for some days. He left his home with Lachance, who stated he would give the boy a job on surveying work. The pair were traced to Brantford, where unmailed letters written by the boy to his mother were found in a rooming hourse. Yesterday Mrs. Taylor stated she received a letter from her son to the effect that he was going to Niagara Falls.

CLEVELAND VISITOR WANTS TO RETURN

August, 1929, Long Way Off He Laments in Letter of Thanks.

The following interesting letter has been received by the Chamber of Commerce, from an official of the Bethlehem Steel Company, Cleveland, Ohio, who visited the Kawartha Lakes, making a trip to the Temagami District, where he reports fishing as being very, very poor. The fact that he speaks highly of this section of the Lakeland District, augers well for the Kawarthas, in Cleveland, Ohio.

"You aided materially in making my vacation a pleasant one in Canada, and both Mrs. MacGregor and myself want to take this occasion to express our appreciation. We certainly are indebted to your offer which made it possible for us to get ready cash in case it was needed.

"After leaving you, we spent a couple of days at the Trent River, and then motored over to Battersea and spent about four days over there. All in all, we saw a good deal of Ontario when you consider that we were in your country for a period of two weeks. The only thing that we regret that the time was short, and that August, 1929, is so far away.

"Thanking you again for the courtesies you extended to us, I remain

Yours very truly.

B. C. MacGREGOR, Structural and Plate Sales Mgr., Bethlehem Steel Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

CAPITOL THEATRE PAINTING FINISHED

Walls and Ceilings Have Been Redecorated By Corporation's Staff.

The painting and renovation of the Capitol Theatre have been completed. The walls, ceiling and woodwork have all been refinished, while the front of the theatre also has taken on a new appearance. The men at the theatre are at present engaged in cleaning up the whole interior and when the theatre opens on Labor Day it will present a changed appearance.

The work was done by the staff of the Paramount Theatres. This corporation has its own staff of workmen and painters who look after the chain of theatres with which they are connected. The painters re-decorated the Capitol Theatre in Kingston and are on their way west now to Toronto theatres and then to the Guelph house, where they will continue their scheme of renovation.

TO GOLF WITH PRINCE.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Gene Tunney began his series of bouts with the heavy weights of literature to-day by a luncheon with Hugh Walpole, the novelist, at his London home. None of Tunney's friends went along. It is hoped to arrange a golf match between Tunney and the Prince of Wales, with the Prince expected to win as Tunney's average score is some strokes higher than that of His Royal Highness.

the championship of the world for women. Scores of thousands of spectators were massed along the waterfront as J. Allan Ross, official starter, gave the signal which started the women on the ten-mile grind for prizes totalling $15,000.

Conditions were ideal for the event, the brilliant sunshine being tempered by a slight westerly breeze, which made little more than a ripple on the course. The water was about sixty degrees and promised to get warmer.

Gertrude Ederle, Ethel Hertle and Mlle. Gade Corson, conquerors of the English Channel, and Millie Hudson of Britain were among the feminine stars who splashed in from improvised dock.

The course was a rectangle, two and a half miles around. The first five finishers start in the men's swim next week over a fifteen mile course.

Ethel Hertle Leads

Ethel Hertle of New York went into a slight lead along the first leg, being five yards in front of Ruth Tower, Denver, at the end of the first seven-eights of a mile, with Gertrude Ederle in third place another twenty yards back. Others were close up.

At the end of the first mile Ethel Hertle led Olive Gatternam of Seattle by a few yards, while Gertrude Ederle and Jane Thoms, Terre Haute, were tied for third, and Anna Beniot, Springfield, Mass., was fifth.

As the first hour passed with the swimmers completing something over two miles, Ethel Hertle was swimming strongly in the lead with Olive Gatterdam second. Gertrude Ederle, swimming easily, dropped back and Ruth Tower came up near the front.

on British immigration: "He had a very different attitude when he was here," said Mr. Forke, who believes Lord Lovat must have picked up some misinformation about Labor conditions.

"I found no trouble at all among the British harvesters," Mr. Forke told The Examiner to-day. "There will be work for all of them, lots of work, and many will be able to get employment after threshing. Lord Lovat told me arrangements had been made to take care of those who did not."

"You saw some of these harvesters"?

"Yes, many of them, and they are likely looking chaps. I went into Pipestone, Man., and hired four for my own farm."

"How did they like it?"

"They are a little green but that was to be expected and they will get over that. They are willing, and that is the main thing."

He said the prevailing rate was $4.00 for harvesting and $5.00 for threshing. As to complaints from the men or from farmers who hired them, there had been practically none, Mr. Forke said.

A GREAT GOLD PRODUCING AREA.

Gold was first discovered in the Porcupine area of Ontario in 1909 and in the following year the production amounted to approximately $36,000 in value. From this modest beginning production values gradually increased to the record of approximately $25,000,000 in 1925. Since 1925 there has been a perceptible decrease in the total output values notwithstanding a fairly steady increase in the quantities of ore milled, but intense development work and additional plant construction and mill equipment at present under way or contemplated is expected to bring production for 1928 back to the $25,000,000-mark.

Impressions of a Boat Trip Up Lake Huron

The uninteresting train trip to Toronto, probably uninteresting because so often repeated and having a so early start—wandering around downtown Toronto to pass the two or three hours — the inevitable walk through Eaton's—the thrill of finding the hat I just bought in a Peterborough store right up to the minute with the best Toronto style—there it is, "Beige and brown are favored as a late summer combination—That terrible Union station again, where one needs a guide and has to walk a big part of the way to one's destination before baording a train—the most confusing and unhandy station in Canada and only beaten by that dirty Chicago terminal where one must walk a quarter of a mile to get one's luggage—the crowd rushing to get seats on the shady side of the coach—the man who tells all and sundry his poor opinion of the farming district through which the train passes—miles of little trees, just a couple of feet tall, showing some big reforestation project well under way—threshing machines busy—a peaceful sleep—the obliging steamer purser with his youthful assistant, who put little red tags on our luggage—Port McNicoll's elevators in sight—the bay—the steamer— that delightful thrill in anticipation of a sail—the request to leave our luggage in the car to be carried aboard after us—a glance at the wonderful garden on the dock, with its splendidly-conceived and well-executed landscape gardening—the gang-plank—a dash to our cabins just to see what they are like—two berths, a coach, lights that can be turned on from the door or from the bed, other little lights at the pillows, a wash basin that has a lid that makes a table, a rack with ice water and glasses, a large mirror, coat hangers, hat nets, watch pouches ,and, more ominous, a handle above the upper berth to hold on to in case of rough weather, and life preservers which a notice on the wall advises all passengers to learn to use—a rush up the companionway to the saloon deck to see the late arrivals embark—then up to the boat deck for a view of the port—the blue peter at the forward mast head — the boat train backs away — two raucous blasts of the steamer's horn ropes loosened—a peek into the engine room where engines are being tuned up— another horn blast—Blue Peter flutters down and is rolled, ropes are cast off, the screw revolves—we are off.

A trip to the stern to examine the big steering wheel, the binnacle, the signal system—the flag of the Canadian Mercantile Marine flapping from its short pole astern—the red and white squared house flag of the C.P.R. fluttering from the fore mast head— seats with ropes along the sides to form life saving rafts in case of wreck— stenciled on their ends "Hold on to the ropes" which no one would have time to read in the water—a glimpse of the galley with its busy cooks — searching the shore through binoculars—gulls flying behind the ship—one, with more sense, stealing a ride on the top of the mast—a deck hand casting the log—a long streamer flying behind to indicate the wind direction — first call to dinner— dressing — wondering whether the other women will wear hats—we don't and half of them do, a happy go-as-you-please—a wonderful dinner, with olives, cheese fingers, consomme, lake fish, fruit salad, boiled ham, corn potato, carrots, marmalade pudding ice cream, cheese, crackers, and coffee—the best coffee we have ever had served—hotel or restaurant — a woman who loudly proclaims it is "six bells and a half" and fondly imagines she is being properly nautical—the sun set, in a glow of red that augurs well for to-morrow—gossiping in the sheltered verandah cafe on deck — eager sightseers on the bow watching for anything that might come along.

It must have been something of a disappointment to the Clydeside M.P. to find that his political bete-noir, Lloyd George, was no longer on the government bench when the Labor party reached the position of being numerically the second in the House. As Mr. Kirkwood expressed it, in his maiden speech, he had been waiting for years for the opportunity to withstand Mr. Lloyd George (the r-r-right honor-r-able member-r for Carnar-r-r-von," as in his rich Scottish voice, he, to the great delight of the London journalists, described the former Prime Minister) on the floor of the House of Commons.

Commenting on Mr. Kirkwood's first speech, an eminent London Parliamentary correspondent declared that only Sir James Barrie, the famous novelist, could have done justice in writing to his countryman's charming accent.

Belong to Ginger Group

Mr. Kirkwood belongs to the "Ginger Group"—the left wing—of the Labor Party, and has little faith in the efforts being made by Lord Mond and certain trade unionists to put British industry on its feet. He thinks the interests of the workers will not be adequately safeguarded in the negotiations.

Along with the other visitors, Mr. Kirkwood attended the civic banquet given by Montreal to the delegates and listened to members of other British nations explain their difficulties and outline the work of recent years.

Mr. Kirkwood is a perfervid Scot. He does not believe in taking orders or advice from Communists or from Moscow. "My country first, God bless it," he said on one occasion. "We don't need any instructions from Russia or anywhere else."

VIVID NATURALNESS IN CHARLIE MURRAY FILM

First National Player Has Human and Appealing Role in "The Head Man," New Screen Comedy.

Charlie Murray is in town!

For years—even before the genial genius of stage, screen and vaudeville comedy made his debut in split-reel "mirthquakes" of the silversheet, that announcement has had special meaning. To adults, children, folks of all ages and both sexes, it was the equivalent of saying "The circus is here!"

In "The Head Man," at the Regent Theatre, however, there is a new and even more appealing Charlie Murray. The picture, First National's elaborate production of the delightfully whimsical novel by Harry Leon Wilson, "The Boss of Little Arcady," is by far the best in which the famous comedian has ever appeared.

While it is brimful of every sort of fun, from burlesque to whimsy, it is also a logical, cleverly-evolved and very human picture. Things happen as they od in life, not with that inconsequential haphazardness of farce comedy. And Murray, in the featured, title role, gets his first chance at pathos, drama and realistic character portrayal.

Senorita Lia Encalada Fleury is the first woman to pass the final examinations at the University of Buenos Aires for the degree of agricultural engineer, a title which is of great importance in an agricultural country such as Argentina.

FAIR ACROBAT FALLS 60 FEET

C.N.E. Grandstand Crowd Horrified As Aerialists Pole Breaks.

SLIGHTLY INJURED.

TORONTO, August 29. — Breaking his fall on a guy wire, D'Lonra, an aerialist, playing in front of the Exhibition Grand Stand, had a miraculous escape from death last night when the 65-foot pole on which he performs suddenly snapped near the top.

Though he fell 48 feet from the guy wire and landed unconscious in a heap on the wooden platform below, he was found upon removal to the Exhibition Emergency Hospital to have sustained no more serious injury than a painful chest contusion. He was later removed to the General Hospital. He is 48 years of age, but, undaunted by his fall he expects with luck to fulfil an engagement the week after next at the Western Fair at London.

More than 20,000 spectators were in the stand at the time. D'Lonra, who is one of the headliners of the bill, had just finished his difficult concluding trick—a head-stand atop the swaying hickory pole—and had begun his long slide to the ground when the wood cracked and broke.

Women shrieked as he suddenly hurtled headfirst downwards. But the man had not fallen more than 12 feet when the crowd saw his body stop abruptly in mid-air. He had struck the guy-wire which the audience could not see. Spectators, gasping, leaped to their feet as they saw him flipped backwards and down head over heels to the ground. He landed in a heap about 20 feet from the base of the pole.

His wife and two daughters, who as the Marlette Trio, do a balancing act, had just finished their performance at the opposite end of the arena and were watching him conclude his act. Horror-stricken, they stood rooted in their tracks as he suddenly toppled downward.

MUSIC NOTES

To true lovers of good music it is a matter of great gratification to note the greatly increased importance in the place now, accorded to music, all over Canada when civic or national events are taking place. Even the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has succumbed to the lure of good music to attract its guests to Ottawa, Montreal and Banff. At the opening of the palatial Royal York Hotel in Toronto next May, undoubtedly, music will be featured in a special way.

At the great Canadian National Exhibition, of which Canadians have just reason to be so proud, music is one of its greatest attractions. We hope music will be given a fitting par in the unveiling of Peterborough's War Memorial.

Music is not an expensive luxury it is a very real and helpful national asset, for no nation or people can afford to disregard it. We recall how that great soldier, Lord Kitchener, tried to dispense with the aid of music in the turning of his tremendous new army of civilians into stalwart soldiers. After three months he found the task too difficult and called in the aid of the bands once more to hasten the end he had in view.

For it is true "A merry heart goes all the way, a sad one tires in a mile'o," and a singing and music loving people is a happy people.

Shakespeare said: "The man that hath no music in himself is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The great Stratford bard could be sweeping on occasions and though we are not prepared to accept this statement wholesale, yet there is a large measure of truth contained in it.

Music is gaining ground everywhere. it might even prove a wise expenditure on the part of our city fathers to install a gramaphone in the Council Chamber so that on any occasion when argument waxes too hot, the plaintive strains of "Peace, Perfect Peace" or "The End of a Perfect Day" would remind our city fathers to love one another. We have it on best of authority that "Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast."

There is no doubt whatever that the Music Festivals which have and are being held all over Canada are arousing an interest in music on the part of many never before interested, and is proving most helpful in its upward trend.

It is greatly to the credit of the Kiwanis Club that it has sponsored the festival idea in this city, and we hope it will have the satisfaction of seeing the musical effort of last year grow into a strong annual event. The greater and wider interest being evinced and the many enquiries constantly coming in certainly point to that.

It is greatly to be hoped that many will enter Classes 11-12-13-14-15-16. We would like to see every choir, church and school, not only in the city but in the surrounding districts, enter in at least one of these classes. In every festival, the writer has attended, both in Europe and Canada, these classes have proved among the most interesting and delightful competitions of the whole festival. We therefore say unto ye choir directors, teachers and singers, "Arise ye, in your might," and may great good come from your competing. Every one of the tests in these classes are beautiful, well worth while, and deserving of earnest study. We would rejoice if every school enter a choir in class 12, and make it a real competition as in numberless other cities. The 30 or less than 30 singers may be chosen from any class or classes in the school.

The orchestral and band departments are a new feature this year, and should prove of great interest, not only to those competing but to the audience.

We would like to have seen included a contest for a "male chorus," also for a "ladies chorus", but owing to the large expense incurred in bringing such ac horus from other cities doubtless those responsible were afraid the entries might not justify their doing so.

Our two excellent organizations "The Male Voice Choir" and "The Madrigal Singers" cannot therefore take a part in the competition.

Will competitors please bear in mind, that all test pieces can be secured from Heintzman and Co., Hunter street, Peterborough, thus saving loss of time. Any further information can be obtained from Dr. Craig, 146 Hunter street west, Peterborough. Test pieces can also be secured from J. M. Greene Music Co., 185 Charlotte street.

No entry accepted after 1st of October.

The music critic of "The Globe", who is keenly interested in Music Festivals, called attention to the Peterborough Festival in a recent issue. He mentioned the forty different classes and commends the creditable standard of British flavour in its test pieces, and the Syllabus which he said was "Compendious and complete." He also referred to "The Madrigal Singers" of Peterborough, who have been engaged by Toronto Station CKGW, commonly known as the "Cheerio" Station, to broadcast from 7 to 8, standard time, on the evening of the 29th. They are also singing at the directors luncheons in the Art Building, and at several stands in the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition on Music Day, 30th August.

Canada has the largest inland port in Montreal.

The Great Adventure

THIS year, again, five hundred Peterborough youngsters will stride gallantly forth to meet and conquer the threatening ogre of living expenses.

Without experience, with few set preferences in merchandise—and with enthusiasm as their only ally—they will demand from the merchants of Peterborough the inevitable requisites of home-making.

Two hundred and fifty boys will set off for two hundred and fifty jobs with high purpose and renewed determination.

Two hundred and fifty girls, wondering a little, will plan two hundred and fifty homes . . . . and seven hundred and fifty meals a day.

Together, they will excitedly ponder the spending of thousands of dollars.

What kitchen utensils? What furniture? Which curtains? The selection of a rug becomes a problem of infinite dimensions. The buying of a vacuum cleaner is a great adventure! Silverware. Linen. China. Glassware. New food products to meet their divergent tastes . . . . which they stoutly maintain are exactly alike!

Young hopefuls. More alert than any generation the world has ever produced. A generation of readers, trained to recognize advertising as a source of information and a guide to values.

They want two hundred and fifty talking machines . . . . pianos . . . . radios . . . . cars. Some will be able to buy them now. The rest will choose them now.

During this year, the first of wedded life, advertising will give them established preferences in merchandise and in places where they buy it. Familiar store names will spring to their lips . . . . laying the foundation for the buying habits of a lifetime. Next year they will be added to those other thousands who patronize advertising stores as a matter of course.

And The Peterborough Examiner, supreme in its field, is the only medium by which Peterborough merchants can reach these young people just starting The Great Adventure.

RUSSIA REFUSES TO HELP LEAGUE

Cannot Join in Efforts to Obtain Control of Arms Manufacture.

DRAFT FORWARDED.

GENEVA, Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press).—Russia has refused to collaborate with the present efforts of the League of Nations to obtain control of the manufacture of arms. Maxim Litfinof of the Soviet Government, telegraphed this decision to the League to-day, pointing out his government's contention that the League has done nothing toward solution of the problem of real disarmament meanwhile the League's draft provision for control of armaments, with reservations attached is being sent forward to the council of the League, which with the assembly will decide whether it is wise to convoke an International disarmament conference.

Continued difficulties in framing the text of the convention for the control of the private manufacture of arms prompted Count Von Bernstorff, of Germany, president of the commission engaged in the work, to voice his doubts to-day as to the wisdom of convoking an international conference. It will be up to the council of the league, however, to decide whether the time is ripe for such a meeting.

CITIES DIFFER OVER GUNMEN

"DIFFERENCE" CITED.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 (Canadian Press). — Gunmen and bootleggers' wars figure in a difference of opinion as to Chicago and New York. The New York World printed a cartoon lampooning the offer by Chicago of a prize for the best poster advertising the 1933 world fair in Chicago. The cartoon depicted a gunman with a smoking revolver and the British Empire exhibit in flames, with a flagpole carrying a flag bearing the words, "Hundred per cent American, Thompson Hall."

The Chicago Daily News asked The World if this represented the general New York opinion, and The World said it was the opinion of the cartoonist, a former Chicago man. Now the battle is on with Reuben Donnelly, president of a Chicago printing corporation, saying the only difference between gangsters in New York and in Chicago is that in Chicago "We ostracise them, while in New York they make them club members."

In Russia there is a "language island," where about a million and a half German-speaking people form a community founded in the first place by Catherine the Great.

MOSQUITOES SUCCESSFULLY REPULSED

Just a Few Strokes of Sprayer With FLY-TOX and Humming Pests Are Silenced Forever.

Mosquitoes are not only tormenting pests but actually carry germs of dread disease. They pierce the skin and inject a poisonous fluid in the blood stream. Burning welts raise on the skin and many cases of blood poisoning result from scratching these "bites."

No matter where mosquitoes are—in bedrooms, living-rooms, cottages, on porches, or in tents—FLY-TOX will get them.

The fine mist-like FLY-TOX spray saturates the air like a fog. Not a mosquito can escape. They drop instantly. FLY-TOX is stainless — fragrant — harmless to people — guaranteed.

Don't suffer another minute's torment from mosquitoes. Rest undisturbed at night. Use FLY-TOX freely. It was developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. Sold everywhere.

Nickel Climbs Higher As Buying Increases

TORONTO, August 29 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel, which startled stock exchange traders yesterday with a climb of nine dollars, continued in sharp demand to-day and reached a new record high of $114 7-8. It eased below this mark later, however. Buying pressure from New York is credited as the reason for the advance. Canadian investors also were not slow to follow the lead.

Grain Prices Decline At Market Opening

CHICAGO, Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press.)— The grain market reacted at the opening to-day from its rapid climb of yesterday and prices of wheat slipped down 5-8c. Poor response in Liverpool to the upturn here was a factor in the weakness, but short covering in the early trading soon brought wheat back close to yesteray's final quotations. Deferred futures of corn were heavy, reflecting favorable weather conditions, starting 3-8c. to 3-4c. lower, while Septembers opened unchanged to 3-8c. up. Oats and provisions were down a little.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 111 7-8, December 117 5-8. Corn, September 97 3-8, December 75 1-2. Oats, September 38 7-8c., December 41 1-4.

RITCHIE.

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—The reports from Kirkland Lake state this company are now completing theier diamond drilling campaign and preparations are being made to sink a three compartment shaft to a depth of 1,500 feet. The fifth drill hole is now being put down, and it is expected will cut ther main vein at a vertical depht of 450 feet. Four holes have been put down to date and the first cut the vein at a depth of 600 feet and the second at 460 feet. From present knowledge it appears that Nos. 1 and 2 veins will join at depth. The ground was badly broken up where cut by the No. 3 and No. 4 holes, and as a result most of the core was lost.

It is stated that sufficient encouragement has been met with so far to start shaft sinknig above mentioned. Values on the surface run from $2 to $30 a ton, and good asasys were also encountered at depth.

MURPHY.

A special shareholders' meeting of Murphy Mines, Limited, which adjoins Ritchie in the Eastern Kirkaind area, was held yesterady for the purpose of rat ifying two by-laws. The by-laws which were for the purpose of increasing the capitalization of the compani and sanctioning the purchase of additional ground were both ratified. The capitalization was increased from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 shares. It was also decided to pay 600,000 shares of stock for the three adjoining Marguerat claims, on which a very interesting find was recently made. It is thought that the extension of the Ritchie vein was recently opened up on the Marguerat holdings. It showed a width of 40 feet and assayed from $3 to $106. Free gold was in evidence across the vein.

SUDBURY BASIN.

Rumors involving the acquisition of additional ground were again heard regarding Sudbury Basin Mine. It is understood the ground involved is the Falconbridge Mines, Limited, in Falconbridge Township, which is owned by the E. J. Longyear Manufacturing Company. This is a nickel proposition, and was extensively diamon drilled during 1926 when a large body of nickel-copper ore was disclosed. Should the ground be secured by Sudbury Basin, it is expected that a subsidiary company may be formed and valuable rights will undoubtedly go to Sudbury Basin shareholders.

CROWN RESERVE.

The exploratory crosscut at the 1,175-fot level of Crown is going forward at a rapid rate. This is being driven towards the north, and the south crosscut of the No. 1 and 2 veins is also making good progress. Although the No. 2 vein was cut at the 675 and 800 foot horizons, considerable improvement was reported at the 925. At this latter level the vein showed a width of 30 feet, 11 feet of which is officially stated to show a distinct and favorable change. Fifty-five men are employed, three shifts are being worked and four machines are operating at the 925, 1050 and 1175 foot levels. It is expected that within a period of less than two months the No. 1 vein will have been itnersected on all of these levels. About 1,350 feet of lateral work is being achieved each month.

ABANA.

We have reliable news this morning that water is entering the 300 foot level of thits property through a slip, and has caused indefinite suspension of underground operations. The report further states that no attempt is being made to dewater the workings at the present time, and it is not anticipated anything will be done until their new compressor is installed, probably one month from now. The water is now reported to be up to the 200 foot level.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 29.—It is reported that a new strike has been made on surface at the Murphy Mines property in eastern Kirkland Lake. The scene of the discovery is said to be some distance from the shaft site. It is known that a rich surface discovery was made on the Margaret claims, recently taken over by the Murphy, but it is believed that to-days report indicates an entirely new zone of enrichment. The break is said to be 50 feet wide and containing high grade ore. A special general meeting of the shareholders of this company is being held in Toronto today and is now in session. This is for the purpose of approving the action of directors in taking over the Margaret claims and for approving the by-law providing for an increase in capital from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 shares.

Those familiar with the eastern section of the Kirkland Lake camp state that the Ritchie break runs east to the edge of the Murphy property, crossing the line a bit but not enough to hold at depth, and then veers back into Margaret claims. By acquiring this ground, it is said, Murphy takes over a good length of the Ritchie break which otherwise would be lost at comparitively shallow depth. It is rumored that a new shaft will be required to develop this zone as the distance from the present shaft to the recent find is considerable.

It is reported that the mill at the Tough Oakes was started up today for the purpose of treating high grade ore recently encountered at the 400 and 1,000-foot levels. This is where the road keeping department of the town of Kirkland Lake loses a good source of supply of crushed rock for their big paving programme. It is suspected, however, that T. O. B. shareholders won't care what happens to Kirkland Lake if the "Tough Old Bird" can again resume milling.

A despatch from Kirkland Lake states that Macassa are making arrangements to sink a shaft to a depth of 1,000 feet on the Kirkland Lake gold break. The despatch states that many holes of 600 and 1,600 feet have been drilled through this break at the Kirkland Lake boundary. Values are reported to average $8 over a 7-foot width.

Aconda Mines is about the only company that is continuing exploration in the Kamiskotia copper field. Reports persist that Hollinger will be back in the near future but this cannot be confirmed. It is the opinion in Toronto that they will only aggregate 3½% copper in this property. Hollinger has just one more payment to make to George Jamieson to assume ownership, and it is thought that this will be made as Holly has already spent $50,000 here and may want to make or break it.

A despatch from Rouyn states that Noranda have struck a new ore body assaying 24% copper at about 3,000 feet from their present shaft.

Further news on Malartic is continued in a report received from Amos this morning stating that the raise on the 125-foot level is in good ore all the way to its present distance of 120 feet. The raise is set on an incline. The report continues that two additional diamond drilling machines have been ordered.

A repor; from Sudbury reads "The Longyear property, recently acquired by the Sudbury Basin Mines, will be drilled to determine values under the 580-foot level. The aggregate value of the ore runs about 3 per cent. An engineer has recently examined this property with regard to sinking a shaft." The street immediately manufactured a subsidiary company to operate this ground and had it that valuable rights were to be given shareholders. However, the Financial News Bureau can state authoritatively that it is not Sudbury Basin that is after the enterprise. Maybe people connected with the enterprise but not Sudbury Basin. Further news will be forthcoming shortly.

Kirkland Lake comes into the picture with a report that the South vein on the 1,375-foot level of the Sylvanite is opening up well, now being drifted on for several feet with values holding good at around $20 per ton.

The news from the central Manitoba field is to the effect that San Antonio are in $28 ore across a 20-foot width in a crosscut on the 600-foot level and that Ore Grande have picked up a nice looking new vein on surface.

The shaft at the Treadwell Yukon is now reported at 200 feet and making good progress. Drifting and crosscutting is also said to be going on at the 500-foot level.

Thayer Lindsley, director and consulting geologist for the Sherritt Gordon Mines, and prominent in order mining ventures of the Lindsley interests, is now in Winnipeg. He will leave shortly to visit the Sherritt Gordon and the Herb Lake district where the Lindsley interests have recently acquired mineral property. One diamond drill is already reported at work on the Rice Island property recently purchased by the company from Miss Kathleen Rice, Manitoba woman prospector and Dick Woosey, Mr. Lindsley stated. He will look over the work there when he is in the north, and if results are encouraging another drill will most likely be employed. Mr. Lindsley is expected to be back soon when further details of the recent Herb Lake deals with which he is associated will be made known.

A meeting of shareholders of the Northland Gold Mines will be held at the mine to-day for the purpose of ratifying an increase in the capitalization of the company.

Good Showings at Notre Dame Mines

A report submitted by Engineer Ed. Bregent on the properties of Notre Dame Mines, Ltd., shows that work done on the Rouyn Lake, Joannes and Montbray groups gives good indications of promising mineralization, encouraging enough to justify further development. No work has so far been done on the Dufresnoy claims of the company. The Joannes and Montbray groups hold out the best prospects according to the report which reads in part as follows:

Rouyn Lake Group — Prospection started during the summer of 1925. In the fall of the same year a find of copper iron zinc sulphides, carrying gold and silver, was made near the falls, located in the centre of the property. The northern section of this property has been only slightly explored. More surface work may uncover interesting quarts veins.

Joannes Group—On claims 5696 and 5701, Chalcopyrite, galena and zinc blende have been found in several sheared zones and also two quartz-calcite fissure veins, designated as No. 1 and No. 2. Vein No. 1 contains a good percentage of chalcopyrite for a distance of 200 feet and its maximum width is two feet; the walls are impregnated with the same mineralization.

This property was surveyed and cross-sectioned in preparation for the dip needle and electrical survey that followed. Considerable stripping and sinking of 50 test pits in the uncovered red zones carrying copper sulphides. This work is being actively continued.

Montbray Group—Prospecting work started on August 1, 1928, and already five parallel veins bearing a north-south strike have been discovered on a knoll close to the river, varying in width from 3 inches to 2 feet. Two of these veins contain copper sulphide, gold and silver. Four test pits have been sunk on these. The width of these veins apparently increases with depth.

The development work actually consists of stripping and trenching of bedrock in the immediate vicinity of uncovered veins as this section of the property may reveal ore deposits in depths.

The Continental Diamond Drilling Company has already started drill work on the Joannes property, and the expectations are that the splendid surface showings will be continued in depth.

Crosscut on Three Lower Levels Tough-Oakes

The annual meeting of shareholders of the Tough-Oakes-Burnside held in Kirkland Lake on Saturday was a routine affair and the attendance was small, says a message over A. E. Moysey Co. wire. Mr Burt, the chairman, representing the Kirkland Lake proprietary interests went over the work done by the company since the last meeting and the work proposed to be done now was outlined and as soon as station work on the lowest level is completed which should be in about a week's time actual development will be immediately commenced, crosscutting north, and south on the three lowest levels. 1,575, 1,735 and 1870. No less than eleven vein intersections including the north and south main break will be tested by this work. Another interesting feature brought but was the pronounced displacement on the dyke to the east at the 1575 foot level, thus indicating a much greater distance on the strike of the veins in the western section of the property. It was suggested at the meeting that ore would be milled on a small scale very shortly, in conjunction with the tailing treatment and that later if justified the tonnage would be increased by ore from development operations. The officers and auditors were re-elected.

Abana Considered Ready for Spur Line

Montreal—Owing to important new finds made within the past month, at around 1,000-foot depth in diamond drilling along the wide dyke and said to have boosted ore reserves up to around $30,000,000, the Canadian National Railways is giving consideration to erecting a spur line into the Abana property in Desmeloises township, Quebec. Half a dozen smaller properties would be served by such a railway line.

Norman Fisher, mining engineer of the C.N.R., together with C. S. Crowski, Chief Engineer of construction, are going into the property from here this week. Cyril Y. Toung, superintendent of development, is known to have planned a trip into the Abana with Charles Spearman, consulting engineer of the property, but Mr. Spearman, who has been in ill health for some time, will hardly be ready to make the trip for three or four weeks yet."

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear Grannie, Mrs. M. Parnell, who entered into rest, August 29, 1927:
When evening shades have fallen,
And we are all alone,
Into our hearts there comes a longing,
If you only could come home.
What would we give to clasp your hand,
Your happy face to see,
To hear your voice and see your smiles,
That meant so much to us.
You always had a cheerful smile—
Your smiles we see them yet—
Your tender love for every one,
We never shall forget.

BRITISH HELPED SAYS MINISTER

Immigrants Willing To Go On Land Practically Subsidized, Forke Declares.

ANSWERS LOVAT.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 29 (Canadian Press).—Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, who returned from the West to-day, commented briefly on certain remarks attributed to Lord Lovat, head of the Empire Settlement Board, at Winnipeg. "If British immigrants won't come to Canada, we can't help it," he said. The British immigrant able and willing to go on the land was practically subsidized to come to Canada, he pointed out, and this was not the case with the "subservient peoples" referred to by Lord Lovat, who had complained that British people did not understand why fifty-one thousand non-preferred immigrants should come to Canada annually against fifty thousand from the British Isles.

A 100-ton mill is to be installed and will probably be completed around November 1st. Kootenay Florence in 500 Feet of Ore

A report from Vancouver to the Financial News Bureau states that the Kootenay Florence is now in over 50 feet of ore in a crosscut from the main tunnel. They are also crosscutting at a point 500 feet further away. The Yankee Girl Mine is also stated to be developing nicely.

Grant Mahood Arranges Further Holdings for Alexandria

The following wire was received from Grant Mahood—"Have succeeded in acquiring controlling interest in famous Cronin Mine, Babine Bonanza. Development to date has proven over fifty thousand tons ore averaging thirty dollars to the ton. Mr. Davey leaving immediately to take charge of operations planning immediate installation of mill. Cronin mine has been examined and reported on by leading mining authorities who predict that this mine will prove to be one of the leading producers of the continent."

It is interesting to note that this mine was producing at the time of the death of Mr. Cronin but has since been tied up in his estate. The property has practically full equipment on it now.

Eldorado Gets Visible Gold on 500 Foot Level

Lateral work on the Eldorado is proceeding on three levels with all six faces in a good grade of ore, the Financial News Bureau is informed officially. Work is centred at the 125, 250 and 500-foot horizons. To the east of the shaft a fault occurs which is giving the vein a decided dip. To the west, however, the vein is not faulted and the work on the three faces this side are almost directly underneath each other. Visible gold has been found on the 500-foot level to the east of the shaft and the workings are now in this rich stuff.

The Eldorado is a central Manitoba operation. Work commenced on the property about eight to ten months ago and since then rapid progress has been made in bringing the operation to its present stage of development. The company is backed by Winnipeg men of affairs.

New Mining Plant for Beardmore Mines

A new mining plant as been purchased by the Beardmore Gold Mines and soon will be installed on the property near Beardmore, Ontario. he plant is capable of operating to 500 feet and the new shaft will go to an initial depth 150 feet. Good ore is said to have been indicated at this point by diamond drilling.

At 150 feet, drifting both ways on the vein will be undertaken and considerable footage run up before the shaft is continued to greater depth. Interest attaches to the operation particularly because this is the first attempt at depth exploration in the Beardmore field.

Malartic In Demand But Loses Nine Points

TORONTO, August 29 (Canadian Press).—Malartic gold mines was in great demand at the forenoon session of the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. It opened strongly at 1.70, but finally sagged to 1.61, with a loss of nine points. Amulet was also unusually active, suffering a heavy loss of twenty at noon to-day.

Noranda experienced the heaviest gain of the morning, selling at 58.00, with an increase of sixty. Bidgood was up two at 68, Dome Mines up 15 at 8.45, Hollinger Consolidated up five at 8.55, Kirkland Lake up four at 1.54, Mining Corporation up ten at 3.30, Teck Hughes up two at 9.37, and Wright Hargreaves up seven at 3.42.

Lake Shore was off fifty at 23.50, Sherritt Gordon off six at 7.04, Sudbury Basin off ten at 7.55, and Tough Oakes off a half at 29. The western issues manifested little activity.

Are U.S. Bandits Arming in Canada?

MACHINE GUNS STOLEN FROM TORONTO RANGE

Police Believe Bank Bandits Used Arms in Robbery.

BIG HAUL MADE.

Ammunition Taken For Guns and Rifles May Be Missing Also.

TORONTO, Aug. 30.— (Canadian Press.)—Military and police authorities are investigating the theft of two Lewis guns, a thousand rounds of ammunition, and possibly a number of rifles from the storage bungalows at Long Branch rifle ranges. Chief Constable Draper, of the Toronto force, says he suspects the guns and ammunition have been stolen by bank bandits.

The guns are supposed to be of the type used in some of the recent banditry in the United States. Police centres of the United States and Canada have been informed.

TORONTO, Aug. 30 (Special to The Examiner).—The theft of two Lewis machine guns, about a thousand rounds of ammunition, and probably a number of rifles from the 48th Highlanders' bungalow at Long Branch Rifles Ranges on Tuesday night is revealed to-day.

Municipal, Provincial and Federal police are working on the case and many theories as to the motive of the crime have been advanced. Chief Constable Draper said to-day he has notified all the banks to keep a close watch and to keep in touch with the city police. He suspects that the guns have been stolen by bank bandits. "The first thing we think of in a case like this is the protection of the public against the criminals."

"We have not had time to make a thorough investigation but we expect there will developments this afternoon."

"General V. A. S. Williams of the Provincial Police said the matter had been reported to him by the Department of Militia and Defence. He immediately wired the information all over the province. He suggested the police had found finger prints at the scene of the robbery to provide a good working clue. At the Toronto headquarters of the R. C.M.P. it was learned the Federal Police have had the matter under investigation since yesterday morning and that whereas nothing definite had yet been discovered there were certain facts in the possession of the police which id them to think an arrest would be made in the next day or so.

EXPLOSION KILLS POLISH LABORERS

Two Men Die When Dynamite Explodes at Shawinigan Falls.

THREE RIVERS, Que., Aug. 30 (Canadian Press)—Two Polish laborers were killed and another was seriously injured by a blast of dynamite while working at the construction of a tunnel at Shawinigan Falls, near here, yesterday.

One of the men killed was John Kosseck, address unknown, while the second victim, as well as the injured man's name, was not known.

The horses that run fastest are those that can see best. Tests made with special instruments and powerful lights in an attempt to increase the speed of race-horses have shown that one horse out of every ten suffers from defective light.

Cat Drowns In Beer; 56,000 Pints Wasted

LONDON, Aug. 30.—One of the real tragedies of London's heat wave was revealed with the tidings that a cat had wasted 56,000 pints of England's best beer.

The disaster occurred at Aston, Birmingham, where a stray cat investigating the cooling contents of a vat, tumbled in and was drowned.

Representatives of the internal revenue office were summoned and the 56,000 pints of beer on which tax already had been paid were drained off as waste at an estimated loss of $5,000.

DOPE HUNTERS CAN'T EXPLAIN OWN SUPPLY

Narcotic Squad of New York Raided and Caught With Goods.

TEN INVOLVED.

Blame Some Comrades For Placing Opium in Their Lockers.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Ten policemen, all former detectives in the narcotic bureau, told Deputy Commissioner Mudoon yesterday that they could not understand how opium got into their lockers. They were charged with violating departmental rules that require all drugs and drug-taking equipment to be turned over to the property clerk.

All of them had been first, second and third-grade detective specialists for years in the detection of drugs and owners and users of narcotics. Yet several asserted that they were unable to detect opium in their own lockers. Others explained that they had never used their lockers and really did not know they had been assigned to them.

Blame Other Fellows.

Others suggested that some other fellows might have put the drugs there. One ex-detective said he saw the opium when he looked in his locker but did not bother to remove it because some one else had put it there. One defended himself on the plea that he was taking care of the drug for a Federal narcotic agent.

Deputy Police Commissioner Valentine, in a personal raid, found $150 worth of opium in the lockers, with a hypodermic needle and a bottle containing a fifth of a gallon and resembling generally the glass container used for whisky. This mysterious bottle, the deputy said, contained a mber-colored liquid. None of the ten ex-detectives identified the contents. If Deputy Valentine entertained amber-couored liquid. None ture of the liquid, he did not divulge it at the trial. Decision was reserved on the charges.

Majority Demoted.

The accused men are Henry Addy, John Berry, William Czech, William Daniels, Charles Graham, Percival Harmon, William Hyde, John Murphy, John Reilly and Bernard Siedel. Most of them have been demoted, shifted from plain clothes to uniforms and are now massaging the pavement in various precincts as "harness bulls."

Eight other members of the squad are to be shifted soon in a general bureau cleaning. Police Commissioner Warren is understood to believe that sufficient evidence of laxity—using a mild term—has been found against enough of the members to justify rebuilding the entire narcotic force. This is to be effected by transfers.

DIAMOND HONEYMOON COUPLE TRAVEL WITH CAR AND TRAILER

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Langlois Active and Jolly.

CAMP AT FAIR GROUNDS.

Mr. Langlois, Though 78 Years Old and One-Armed, Will Drive Car To Florida.

Celebrating their diamond wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Langlois, 78 years of age, of Burlington, Ontario, are touring the country in a sedan car and a trailer equipped with all the comforts of home. Mr. Langlois says that they are not touring but camping out which is the truth of the story.

Everything is in the trailer that can be desired, as Mr. and Mrs. Langlois showed The Examiner. It is a bed room by night and a dining room and kitchen by day. The bed is a folding type that disappears in the day time and its place is taken by a folding table. The mattress is sewn to the springs and Mrs. Langlois says that it holds the bed down at night and they hold the mattress down. Wardrobes, compact kitchen stove and equipment and cupboards here and there make it a complete outfit.

A hand on the left side of the trailer indicates the direction the party wish to turn and as Mr. Langlois explains it it is his wife's duty to work this ingenuous piece of apparatus from inside the car at the front where the control is situated.

The car is of sedan type and Mrs. Langlois says that her husband tells everyone that he gave her the car but that he never finishes the story by telling that when he made the presentation he asked her to sign a check.

The bungalow on wheels is covered with all kinds of slogans, Mr. Langlois being quite a sloganeer. He is the originator of the advice and facts that adorn the sides of the trailer, such as: "Never slap your wife, kick her"; "How to be happy though married, be pals." These two contradictory advices are for fun. Mr. and Mrs. Langlois are real pals after sixty years of married life. According to their car "Sixty years ago the parson said, with this ring I do thee wed, let no one put you asunder, that is my advice to you by thunder."

Their diamond anniversary was held in Toronto on the 28th of June when they broke up their camping trip long enough to return to a celebration held for them. It is very rare for anyone to be able to celebrate this but rarer still for a couple to be in such splendid spirits and health as these two are. Mr. Langlois' sister is the only person alive today who attended their wedding, but she was too feeble to be present at their diamond celebration.

Full of humor, with a striking and pleasing personality, Mr. Langlois told how he built the trailer. Although seventy-eight years of age and with only one arm, having lost the other 25 years ago while putting on a belt, on the day of his wedding anniversary, he built the frame work and covered the trailer with a tent that they have used for a number of years on their previous trips. He also drives the car and his wife says that he will not let her drive, and speaks of a trip to Florida as if he was taking a jaunt out into the country for a few miles.

For a number of years he was on the circulation department of the Globe in Toronto. He now writes for the Burlington Gazette. For six years

FRENCH SEE UNITED STATES LINKED TO EUROPEAN POWERS

Deem This To Be Practical Diplomatic Effect of Briand-Kellogg Treaty.

POWERS PUT IN TWO CAMPS.

War Victors Want the Present Political Boundaries To Stand.

PARIS, August 30. — Now that the Pact of Paris has been signed by fifteen nations and that other nations are receiving invitations to-day to adhere, one may examine the possibilities of practical diplomatic effect of the treaty for renunciation of war. For whether as a result of the Pact of Paris international diplomacy will be on a higher moral plane, it remains true that everyday diplomacy is more or less practical business, and especially so in Europe.

That being so, it may be asked, what will be the practical diplomatic effect of the Briand-Kellogg treaty.

Now it stands to reason that a treaty aimed at preventing all future wars constitutes in effect joint intimidation directed against those who would disturb the political status quo. This is true because the only known way for changing the political status quo is by war. Prevent wars and you tend to prevent chances in the political status quo. The same thing that is sought directly in Article 10 of the League of Nations covenant comes indirectly from successful operation of the Pact of Paris.

Nations Divided Into Two Classes.

With respect to the principal nations of the world they may be said to be divided into two parts — those victorious in the World War who wish to preserve the status quo and those unsuccessful in the World War who would change the status quo. In the former class we find England and France, and in the latter class Germany, Hungary, and Bulgaria. To the first class we may add Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia, and to the second class Austria, and for special reasons Italy.

Class I wishes things to stay as they are so far as political boundaries go, while the second class would for various reasons change the political boundaries. Idealists may hold that in historical evolution we may come to the day when a nation will consent to peaceable changes in its

Shake Hands All Round And "Forget It" When Hearing Of Assault Charge Ends

A touch of the evangelistic was provided in police court this morning when, at the conclusion of an assault case, the defendant, acknowledging his mistake, was directed to "go over and shake hands with them all," thus renewing the old spirit of neighborliness that had prevailed previous to the altercation that had terminated in the court room. The human heart is generous after all, and an old lady took the hand of the man who had invaded her home while intoxicated, obsessed with the idea of making her retract a lawyer's letter, and had pushed her violently about. Her husband, her son and another member of the family also displayed the "let's-forget-it" spirit, and all left the court room, but not before a fine of $10.00 and costs had been imposed upon the defendant.

Vincent Eastwood, J.P., and Frank Adams, J.P., presided in the absence of Magistrate O. A. Langley.

MADRIGAL SINGERS DELIGHT RADIO AUDIENCE WITH SONGS

Musicians Pay Strict Attention To Baton While Before Microphone.

GOOD RADIO TONE.

Program Comes in From Station CKGW in Splendid Fashion.

WELL RENDERED.

(By Jeanette.)

"Listening in" to a radio concert is undoubtedly one of the favorite indoor pastimes of the age, but the one who is able to watch these unseen performers at work has a very fascianting time of it.

The Madrigal Singers, under direction of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, broadcasted on Wednesday evening from Station CKGW, the radio station owned and operated by Goodeerham and Worts, Limited, with offices and studios on the mezzanine floor of the King Edward Hotel, Toronto.

The Madrigal Singers gave a splendid programme of choral music under direction of their teacher, Mrs. Park. Their singing, the voume of which was carefully limited by the demands of radio transmission, which requires more of a smooth, soft delivery of compact tone than a very powerful or strong outburst of concerted music, was marked by clear, bell-like tone and crisp enunciation, with instant attack and release. To the listener in the studio, the impression came of a very fine programme of choral music, sweet and clear, going out on the air to advertise Peterborough in a happy way.

The selections were mainly of a light, joyous type, with plenty of rhythmic brightness and flowing melody to their vernal atmosphered tones. They included Del Riego's "Happy Song," Fletcher's "O May, Thou Art a Merry Time," Brahms' "Around the Gypsy Fire," Bridge's "Lullaby," Newton's "A Madrigal in May," two little bits of fantastical whimsy in "The Dairymaids" and O'Hara's "Two Little Stars," and a concluding numbers in Homer's "Banjo Song."

The singers paid special attention to their leader, keeping their gaze fixed on her baton, and answering every movement with a swift response that showed their interest in the varying demands of the program. Miss Gwen Donley provided a very satisfactory accompaniment.

The interest in such broadcasting efforts, when viewed from the inside and when one can watch "the wheels go 'round," is in the realization of the thousands and thousands of unseen listeners that form a vast and marvellous audience. Sitting in a lonely Hudson Bay Post at Fort Climo, Ungava Bay, the factor tunes in on CKGW and the music of the Madrigal Singers of Peterborough fills his chilly abode. Down at Auckland, New Zealand, in sub-tropical nights, the magic of the air brings music sung by twenty or more young women in far-away Ontario, to the dweller on that island of the Southern Seas. From over in Kincor, Clonmel, Ireland, in the County of Waterford, comes a letter of praise and appreciation of the programs sent out from this little corner of the busy hotel.

Letters on file at these offices bring records of good reception from Oswego, N.Y., where CKGW Station is known as "Old Reliable," from Massachusetts, from San Pedro and El Cajon, in California, from Havana and Bermuda and Barcelona, Cuba, from Reno, Nevade, from Jamaica and the Hawaiian Islands. A letter comes from a far-flung outpost of civilization, Grady Island, in the Labrador, sent by a husky dog team that takes from March 6th to May 23rd for its delivery. Another come from a Coast Guard on the Nortl

GETS NOVELTIES FOR EXHIBITION

Webber Turner Engages Bob Bailey's Comedy Band.

ARRANGES FOR GAMES.

Webber F. Turner, who has been in Toronto for the past two weeks, taking care of J. J. Turner & Sons' business at the Canadian National Exhibition, returned home yesterday. While there, he was on the lookout for novelties for Peterborough's Big Exhibition, to be held September 10 to 15, and reports having engaged Bob Bailey's Novelty and Comedy Band for two days during the Exhibition. Many new games now playing on the Toronto Midway with the Rubin and Cherry Shows will also come to Peterborough, including the Electric Penny Game, which is entirely new. Excellent racing events are promised, and the race horse committee has been practically assured of horses from as far east as St. John, New Brunswick.

Altogether it looks as though the Peterborough Exhibition will excel itself again this year.

FORMER PASTOR AT KNOX CHURCH

Rev. J. A. Wilson, B.A., of Paris, To Preach at Re-opening.

CHURCH RE-DECORATED.

The walls and ceilings of Knox Church have been painted, and look very rich in their two-tone effect. The woodwork of the gallery and walls has been nicely stained and varnished to harmonize with the pews and pulpit furnishings, and as the floors are to be covered with battleship linoleum Knox will be one of he best furnished churches in the city. The decoration work, which is being done by the T. Eaton Company, will be completed early in September, and it is expected that the re-opening services of the church will be held on Sunday, September 9 or 16. This should prove a most interesting event, as the minister who is to conduct the re-opening services is none other than Rev. J. W. Wilson, B.A., of Paris, Ont. Rev. Mr. Wilson will be remembered by many in this city, having ministered to the people of Knox in the early days when this church was a mission of St. Paul's and Mr. Wilson was then assistant to Rev. Dr. Torrance.

Father Buys Daughter At $1,200 Says Mother

CALDWELL, Kan., Aug. 30 C. G. Byers of the village of Argonia, near Caldwell, has been accused by his former wife, now Mrs. J. W. Lucas of Seattle, of "buying" his own daughter. The Byers separated in Seattle in 1923, and custody of the daughter, Claudine, now eight years old, was awarded the mother. Forced to work for a living, the mother placed her baby with a Seattle woman, Mrs. N. Stapleton, making arrangements to pay for its board and care. She did not keep her obligations, so recently the Stapletons wrote the father. He sent transportation for the child to Argonia, where she now is living with her father and stepmother The father has agreed to pay the $1,200 back board bill.

WOMAN SAVES SON; BETRAYS LIQUOR RING

Overhears Trio Threatening Life of Young Hijacker and Calls Police.

INTER-GANG WAR.

Worried About Her Son's 'Profession' Although He Had Lots of Money.

DENVER, Aug. 30.— Fearful for the safety of her son, whose "profession" had worried her for some time, a mother "squealed," with the result that five men are in jail, eighty-seven five-gallon kegs of whisky are in the possession of the police and all the members of an alleged bootlegging gang are still numbered among the living.

Death certainly would have been visited upon some one but for the prompt action of Mrs. Richard McGee. Two alleged hijackers and three alleged bootleggers most certainly would have fought it out to the end for the possession of the eighty-seven five-gallon kegs of moonshine whisky.

Richard McGee, 48, the woman's husband, is in jail. With him are Orville Kincade, 21, the woman's son by a former marriage; Nathan Zerobnick, Harry Mandell and Mike Winchell.

Old Farmhouse Raided.

All of the men were arrested and the liquor was confiscated at a lonely deserted farmhouse on the Golden road, about one and one-half miles west of Rock Rest.

The seizure of the whisky — 435 gallons in all—was the biggest haul made by members of the Denver police squad in many months.

Drama of the movie variety was enacted at the deserted farmhouse as the police confiscated the booze and made the "pinch."

According to the story told the police by Mrs. McGee, her son, Orville Kincade, left his home on a farm in Iowa a few months ago and came to Denver to live with her and her husband. For some weeks he sought work, but he was unable to find it. Then, according to the mother, he fell in with Zerobnick and his gang.

Ran Liquor For Gang.

The boy, the mother said, ran whisky for Zerobnick and the other men. Easy work for a while, it proved to be a tough job when the cops grabbed Kincade and he took the fall for the gang. He was convicted, the mother said, of violating the state prohibition law, but the gang, he thought, was behind him.

But one day the money that had been coming Kincade's way with pleasant regularity was missing. No

Quebec Is Swept By Gale

News Late Leaking Out Owing To Destruction of Communication Wires.

THREE DEATHS.

Greatest Havoc Wrought in the Farming Districts of Province.

Quebec, Que., Aug. 30.—(By the Canadian Press)—With communication being re-established with the towns and villages isolated by the severe electrical wind storms that swept the Province of Quebec Tuesday reports had been received tonight of three deaths and enormous property damage. Owing to the destruction of telephone and telegraph wires news of the storm did not reach this point until yesterday.

The greatest Havoc was wrought in the farming districts of the province. Many barns were struck by lightning and in the ensuing fire the complete contents, including cattle and feed, were destroyed. Roofs of residence were blown off by the high winds in many sections while in others trees were uprooted and telephone and telegraph poles were felled.

Children Killed

The storm which passed in eight minutes at St. Zenon, a village situated on the western shore of Riviere Noire, 75 miles directly north of Montreal, caused the deaths of three children, injury to four other persons and damage of $100,000 in that locality alone. The wind demolished four homes and twelve barns and played havoc with the crops.

The three victims were: Jerome Gouin, four-years-old; Annette, three-years-old, and Anatole, six months old. They were the children of Henri Gouin, a farmer of the district. The father and mother, who were injured, were at work in the fields and the three children were playing in the house when the storm struck the village. The wind lifted the house off its foundations and carried it across the fields 240 feet away where it landed and fell into splinters. Rescuers later found the bodies of the three children in the debris.

THREE MISSING FROM TOW BOAT

Twenty Other Members of the Crew Rescued When Boat Upsets.

IN OHIO RIVER.

ALIQUIPPA, Penn., Aug. 30 (Canadian Press)—Three persons are missing and are believed drowned, while twenty others, members of the crew of the towboat Aliquippa of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, are thought to have been rescued when the boat turned over in the Ohio River early to-day.

The accident occurred when a double crew was on the Aliquippa, and it was preparing to pick up a tow of ten barges loaded with steel. Without warning it turned keel upward. Quick work on the part of a ferry boat crew nearby is believed to have saved all but three members of the crew. No check up is possible as some of those who reached shore went home immediately, but a chambermaid and two deck hands were missing.

Zig-Zagging Once Too Often On Road Roller Skater Wrecks Motor Car

BRANTFORD, Aug. 30.—John Balaza, Elyria, Ohio, roller skater, whose boast is that he has zig-zagged across the continent, zig-zagged once too often yesterday afternoon, and completely wrecked an auto belonging to D. J. Raker, of Sunbury, Pa.

Rolling on his way through Ontario, the skater slipped in ahead of the car and forced the driver to take to the ditch to avoid a crash. The auto turned over, caught, fire and was completely destroyed.

Balaza was slightly injured but will be able to proceed on his zib zag course to-day. One of the passengers pinned under the auto was badly bruised.

Raker told Traffic Officer Archer that he took to the ditch to save the life of the roller skater, whose erratic course cost him his car, he claimed.

Guest Finds Wedding Ceremony Too Hot Plunges Into River And Loses His Life

BRANTFORD, Aug. 30.—Harold Cripps, 20, was drowned yesterday afternoon because he found a wedding ceremony uncomfortably hot

The moment the festivities were over, Cripps, who was one of the guests, rushed to the canal that feeds the Slingsby Mills and plunged in. As he paused a moment before taking the fatal dive, boys playing nearby warned him that the canal was deep and dangerous. Undeterred, the youth plunged.

A moment later cries for help were heard. The lads attempted to save him, but were too late. Firemen, under the leadership of Assistant Chief Kingswell, recovered the body and attempted resuscitation with a pulmotor. Dr. R. W. Knight pronounced life extinct.

Cripps was the son of James Cripps of Albert Street, had been visiting his sister, Mrs. James Smith, West Mill Street. He intended to leave in the morning for Barrie where he had secured employment.

LOCATE BODIES OF MISSING FLIERS

Airship Is Found In Bush

Search Pilot Locates Bodies of W. M. Merrill and Edwin Ronde.

BADLY BURNED.

Plane Turned Over in Attempt To Land—No One Injured.

CURTISS FIELD, N.Y., Aug. 30. —(Canadian Press).—In a telephone call last night to G. B. Grovener, vice-president of the Fairchild Aviation Corporation, E. Kelly, Fairchild pilot, reported he had discovered and identified the bodies of M. M. Merrill and Edwin Ronde, beside the charred wreckage of their plane in the wooded wilderness near Port Jervis, N.Y. Both bodies were badly burned, he said.

Kelly said he had sighted a wing of the plane as he flew over the spot from Ithaca, N.Y.

It was a long chance he reported, but he attempted a landing beside the wreck. Kelly's plane bogged down in a muddy area and turned over, spilling the pilot and his observer. Neither was injured.

The spot in which the wreck was discovered is almost virgin wilderness nearly impenetrable and although not far from Port Jervis, it is difficult to reach except from the air.

Kelly reported he and his observer searched the vicinity of the wreck and found the bodies not far from the plane.

SCHOOL ATHLETES COMPETE FRIDAY

Athletes Throughout Province Gather at Toronto For Annual Event.

TORONTO, Aug. 30.—The fourth annual track and field championships of the Ontario public, separate and high schools of the province will be held at Varsity Field beginning at 10 a.m. Friday and continuing throughout the day. This meet is the climax of the Spring district meets, held in the various parts of the province, from Fort William to Ottawa and from Windsor to North Bay. The winners at the nine district meets are brought to the finals here at the expense of the Ontario Athletic Commission, who also supply all the prizes for district and final meets. This year the commission has added a special gold medal for every boy who breaks any of the existing records, and it is the handsomest thing in medals seen in these parts.

Several of the members of the late Olympic team have been brought along through the efforts of the commission's coaches, and began their careers at these games. This year the list of contestants reaches the splendid total of over two hundres, hailing from as far west as Fort Frances. The program is a graded one, starting with events for the younger boys and working up to almost a full Olympic card for the seniors.

Athletes Arrive Today

The first contingent of competitors will arrive here this afternoon from the Western Ontario, Eastern Ontario, North Bay and Georgian Bay districts. The Fort William delegation will be here tomorrow morning.

These finalists are the survivors of some five thousand boys who competed in the school, district, and now the finals. Stars are among them and what they lack in age and strength is more than made up for in style.

For five years and more the commission has sent the best coaches in Canada from one end of the province to the other, taking the best of these boys in hand and teaching them the best, most modern, and most approved methods, and above all, drilling true sportsmanship into them.

This meet on Friday should be one of the best yet put on by the commission.

The out-of-town boys are being housed and fed at the University of Toronto.

M. M. Merrill, vetran manager of Curtiss Field, and Edward Ronne, manager of the Buffalo Municipal Field, left Buffalo at 4.10 p.m. Monday and vanished. They should have arrived at Curtiss Field within two and one-half hours.

STEAMSHIP FIRMS SUING COLLECTOR

Claim $150,000 For Alleged Improper Rejection of Immigrants.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 (Canadian Press).—Eleven steamship companies have filed suits totalling $150,000 against Philip Elting, collector of the Port of New York, as reparation for alleged improper rejection of immigrants. The companies contend they lost this much by the forced carriage of immigrants back to Europe, when the immigrants were qualified to remain in the States.

JERUSALEM TO END BEGGING AT FAMOUS WAILING WALL

JERUSALEM, Aug. 30 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency). — Begging in the Holy City will shortly be prohibited by the Palestine Government, it was stated to-day on good authority.

An ordinance to this effect will be promulgated in a few days.

This ordinance, when promulgated, will remove from the Wailing Wall the sight of many old beggars who are frequently associated in the minds of tourists with Jerusalem scenes. A meeting of the Council of the Jerusalem Jewish Community was called to outline a plan to provide maintenance for the poor who gained their daily bread by begging. It was stated that the group of beggars would number 1,000.

CHARRED WALLS MARK BARN SITE

Nothing Else Left of Buildings Estimated As Worth Around $10,000.

CROPS LOST TOO.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 30 — Piles of smouldering embers and the charred stone walls of two large barns are all that remain of the buildings that housed the implements, stock, and crops on the Violet Durran farm, five miles south of here. The fire broke out in the engine building, which contains the electric lighting plant and the milking machine, along with other machines. It was noticed shortly before one o'clock, and in spite of the efforts of all hands on the farm, a host of neighbors and friends, and fire fighters from both Campbellford and Warkworth, with their equipment, the damage will amount to many thousands of dollars. This is partially insured.

The fire is believed to have started in the engine house, where a garage mechanic from Campbellford was at work repairing the lighting system. Asked how it started, the mechanic was unable to say. The first thing he noticed, he said, the place was in flames. The blaze spread rapidly from this building to the large barn, horse barn, silos, piggery, sheep shed, drive house, and hen house. All were completely destroyed in spite of the heroic efforts of all present.

The barns were filled with seventy-five tons of hay and many loads of wheat waiting to be threshed. The threshing outfit was standing ready to go on with the work, and it, too, was demolished by the flames. It was part of the equipment of the farm.

When the Campbellford fire truck arrived, the barns were a seething mass of flame, sending flame bits high into the air, and making a blaze whose heat was so intense that it was impossible to approach. The silos, two in number, had already been demolished. Water was being dashed on the roof of the house in an effort to keep it cool and safe, and a desperate effort was being made to save the drive shed. This was of wooden construction, and the fire fighters were partially successful in their attempt. The barns were of frame, set on dressed stone foundations, with metal roofs. Little remains of them but the masonry. In front of them are two circular concrete pits which once supported the two De Laval silos. The front wheels and tongue of the separator of the threshing machine are all that is left of that. On the floor of the drive shed lies a distorted array of steel parts of the various farm implements which were housed there.

From the beginning, the task appeared hopeless. The power drive for the windmill was broken and men worked the pump in relays. Water from a nearby creek was also brought into play. The arrival of the fire trucks from Campbellford and Warkworth, with their hundreds of feet of hose, seemed only to add to the hopelessness of the case. Their supplies of chemicals were drawn heavily upon, and were responsible for saving something out of the holocaust. The wind was coming out of the west and blowing directly from the fire to the large brick residence a few yards from the blazing buildings. The steel roof of the house was heated to a dangerous degree, and water was continually thrown on it

Nitrogen Used In Canning of Peaches; Experts At First Commercial Trial

MAMMONTON, N.J., Aug. 30.—In the presence of members of the Franklin Institute, a committee of South Jersey citizens appointed by the Hammonton Chamber of Commerce, horticulturists, canning concern representatives and others, the first attempt to use nitrogen commercially in the preservation of peaches was made here today. The experiment was made on the fruit farm of William H. Parkhurst, on the White Horse pike.

Early Elberta peaches were gathered fresh off the trees in the Parkhurst orchards and placed in the electrically driven grading machine. Choice fruit, after being graded, was packed in a wax paper compartment in heavy tin cylinders, fifteen inches in diameter and two feet high. These were then soldered, but a little bulls-eye in the centre of the top of the can was left unsoldered. The containers were then placed in a steel cylinder and pumps drew all the oxygen from the containers through the bullseye.

Nitrogen was then forced into the cans through the same opening, and when the gauges recorded full capacity the containers were withdrawn and the bullseye, which automatically closed from within, was also sol dered. The containers were then marked by a member of the committee and placed in storage.

A month from now the first few containers will be opened by Thomas F. MacGregor and Robert J. Ragan, both of Philadelphia the men engaged the experiment here today. Members of the Franklin Institute will pass on the success of the experiment.

Similar experiments will soon be conducted with mushrooms, dressed poultry and flowers, and in the Spring with roses and asparagus.

Growers present said there would be no more gluts in the market if this process succeeded.

WARSAW BOYS' SHEEP CLUB MEMBERS SHOW FINE LAMBS

Judging Competition Features Exhibition Held at Warsaw Yesterday.

DEMONSTRATIONS GIVEN.

Similar Event Held at Indian River Tuesday—Department Officials Attend.

(By Staff Reporter.)

Often the criticism is launched that the modern youth has no inclination to "stick to the land," but anyone present at the Warsaw Boys' Sheep Club Fair, held on Wednesday afternoon, found ample contrary evidence. Not only were these young farmers keenly interested in crop conditions but an increasing interest in the raising of live stock is shown, largely through the efforts of the Department of Agriculture. At the fair on Wednesday, were some ten or twelve lads, all in charge of their own exhibits of lambs raised during the year, they having secured the parent sheep last Autumn and, assisted by the Department, bred and raised the stock on exhibit yesterday. Conducting the judging and competitions were two representatives of the Dominion Government, J. G. Lefebvre, sheep promoter and E. D. McGreer, of the Dominion Sheep and Swine department, assisted by J. B. Nelson, Department of Agriculture representative, Peterborough.

The Fair.

Shortly after one o'clock, the young farmers, some of them assisted in getting their stock to the fair, by older men, were busy placing their hurdles to provide enclosures in which to keep their lambs and by two o'clock or shortly after, all was in readiness for the opening of the afternoon program. It was divided into three sections, a judging competition, for the members of the club, judging of all the stock by the government men, and finally, a demonstration of blocking or trimming a sheep for show purposes.

Mr. McGreer, in opening the first phase of the program, gave the boys brief instructions in what to consider before judging and placing of the four animals selected—they must remember that weight, conformation and finish, should be considered. By weight, he meant that a market lamb should weigh between 80 and 90 pounds. Conformation meant shape, a rectangular build with stout, short legs, and deep chest, while finish or fleshing meant a generous proportioning over the back and legs.

Thereupon, the lads set about, lifting and inspecting the four to be placed, and in ten minutes' time, they had made their respective decisions. The results were announced later to be as follows: 1, Earl Harding, with 92 out of a possible 100 points; 2, Ted Rose, with 88 out of 100; 3, Tom

Miners Make Good Type of Citizen

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 30 (Canadian Press).—British Miners will make a fine type of citizen for Canada, Lord Lovat, British Under-Secretary of State for the Dominion stated in an interview here yesterday.

"They are only one generation removed from the land," he declared. "Most of the new mines are in rural areas and many of the miners are from rural districts."

"There is no wish on the part of Britain to send out unemployables. We went to send good average citizens of the type who built up the Dominion in the past."

Lord Lovat was entertained today at luncheon by members of the Saskatchewan government.

INSTITUTE DECIDES NOT TO ALTER LIST

Will Give Same Special Prizes As Last Year—Executive Meets.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, August 30.—The Madoc Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. William Parks on Friday, August 24th, with Mrs. Tumelty presiding.

Following the reading of minutes and correspondence which contained thanks for flowers and fruit during illness from two members, a letter was read from the department regarding the daily programs given in the Women's Institute ten every afternoon during Toronto Exhibition weeks and stressing the special feature of each day. Institute special prizes were discussed but were left as decided last year.

It was moved by Mrs. C. Whytock and Mrs. Moorcroft that the prize list be left as it is this year and members of the Institute be instructed to make notes of changes desirable and a committee meeting held soon after fair to discuss changes.

Exhibits for Belleville convention were then discussed but left for the district executive. Fair booth committees were discussed and it was decided to ask last year's committee to act again and any changes necessary to be made at next meeting which will be held one week earlier on September 21st to make all arrangements for fair days.

On motion a letter of sympathy and condolence was forwarded to Mrs. C. McCoy.

Memorial canvassers reported good success and it was decided that the committee were now in a position to order the monument chosen and Mrs. J. Whytock moved, seconded by Mrs. C. Whytock, that the chairman of the Memorial Committee be asked to call an early meeting for that purpose. This was carried.

Roll call showed a smaller attendance as the rain prevented many being present. The National Anthem and a social half-hour followed.

A special meeting of the North Hastings District Executive was held at Harold on Tuesday, August 28th. Plans, program and exhibit for the Belleville convention were discussed and special music was arranged for.

AYRSHIRES SOLD BY LOCAL MEN

Mann and Hume Herds Send Animals As Far As Quebec.

DEMAND INCREASING.

The following sales of Ayrshire cattle by owners in Peterborough and district are included in a list issued by Frank Napier, Huntingdon, Quebec, secretary of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association; three Ayrshire bulls sold by J. Gordon Mann and Son, Bridgenorth including a bull which was first in the junior calf class at Peterborough and Lindsay fairs last fall, a very promising animal, sold to J. T. Sullivan, Low Station, Quebec; a bull calf by the well-known Class AA sire, Robin Hood, of Springbank, and from an Honor Roll 2 year old heifer, purchased by H. Fyfe, Peterborough; a third from a ords and is now making a third. The cow which has two Honor Roll reclast was bought by W. Robinson, Peterborough.

Two splendid animals were also transferred from Humesbaugh, the farm of Alexander Hume and Son, Campbellford. Messrs. Hume sold to John Clemens of Marmora a fine October bull calf from their former herd sire, Burnside Sir Andry, and a military cross dam named Humeshaugh Dainty Kate, who has two R.O.P. records, one of which 3 years old is 11,275 lbs. milk, 437 lbs. fat. From Humebaugh there went to J. H. Warkworth and Son, Cedar Valley, Quebec, the bull calf, Humesbaugh Helen's Andry. He is also by Burnside Sir Andry and out of the Military Cross dam, Humesbaugh Lady Helen 3rd. This is considered a good calf from an old strain of producers and show winners.

The demand for Ayrshires of either sex is on the increase.

AFFIRMATIVES WIN LEAGUE DEBATE

Zion Church Society Guests of Rylstone Young People's Group.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Aug. 29.—(Examiner Correspondence). — "That the country offers greater opportunity for social enjoyment than the city" was the verdict in the debate at Rylstone on Tuesday evening when the league from Zion church were the guests of the Rylstone young people's group. Messrs Earl Fairman and Thomas Fry were the local debaters and upheld the affirmative and winning side. Mrs. P. M. Rutherford and Mr. S. G. Meiklejohn debated for Rylstone and presented a very strong case in favor of the enjoyments of city life. Judges were Mrs. Murray Meiklejohn, Mrs. Fred Barnum and Miss Jean Stewart.

The balance of the program was given by the visiting Zion society as follows: Chorus by the league choir, music by Misses Freda Petherick and Gladys Simpson, reading by Miss Gladys Petherick; duet Misses Evelyn Barnum and Laura Watson; solo, Mr. Fred Barnum; community singing led by Mr. Barnum.

Following the judge's decision on the debate, the Rylston League served refreshments and a most happy social hour was spent demonstrating in a practical way one of the enjoyments of social life in the country.

The district was visited by one of the worst electrical storms of the year on Tuesday afternoon accompanied by a very heavy rainfall. Several trees were struck, a cow was killed on the farm of Mr. J. Lain east of Stanwood, while a freak stunt of the lightning was the burning of a stock of oats on the farm of Mr. David Brunton. This storm means several more days delay in the finish of harvest here as everything would have been finished this week had dry weather lasted.

MARMORA VISITOR IS 90 YEARS OLD

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, August 30.—One of the most interesting visitors in Marmora at the present time is James Sweeney, native of Kemptville, who on August 29 celebrated his ninetieth birthday. Since his wife's death in May, 1911, this hardy veteran decided to give up housekeeping and to spend his time in visiting the homes of his seven surviving children one of whom is Mrs. J. E. Gehan of Marmora. The parents of Mr. Sweeney first saw the light in Ireland, his father being born in County Sligo and his mother being born in County Mayo. Their marriage took place in Eastern Canada. Mr. Sweeney who is possessed of a very clear memory recalls his father having told him of being called out by the militia to protect Prescott from the rebels who came across from Ogdensburg about the year 1838 and were finally quelled by regulars dispatched from Kingston. Mention was made of the futility of a small cannon brought by the regulars. Some of the rebels were hidden in an old windmill which is still to be seen there. The cannon was brought to play upon the windmill but so durable was the structure that the balls just glanced off into the St. Lawrence. As a boy, James Sweeny had about 2½ miles to cover to reach school. The schoolhouse he describes as being crowded. No less than 30 pupils attended from three adjoining farms and there were many others to swell the number. In that same settlement to-day there are hardly enough children to form a good class at school. Like his fath-

Of 25,000 calls for help, 25% were due to tire trouble of which more than half the total number were caused by running with tires either under-inflated or over-inflated

Such is the report compiled as the result of an analysis of the emergency road service records of one of the largest motor clubs on the continent.

Other tests have proven that every 10% drop from the correct inflation causes a 20% decrease from the maximum mileage of tires.

Incorrect inflation of tires is costing the motorists of Canada thousands of dollars every year. This money might so easily be saved.

YOU should drop in at a Dominion Tire Depot once a week and have an expert put the gauge on your valves. Then, if necessary, he will inflate your tires to the correct pressure He will also make a quick examination for cuts, bruises and other signs of trouble.

Twice a season let him remove the tires from the rims and make a thorough examination of your tires inside and out.

That's the way to get all the mileage that was built into your tires.

DOMINION TIRE DEPOTS

There are Dominion Tire Depots in practically every town in Ontario and Quebec. Their aim is to increase the span of life of every tire under their supervision.

A BETTER EXHIBITION.

So good is the program of this year's Peterborough Exhibition that the directors have fixed the grandstand admission price at fifty cents. Most of the directors are farmers, men who know the full value of a dollar and would not charge a cent more than their wares are worth. The Board has been improving the Exhibition these latter years and have won the confidence of the public. Some people might have been satisfied with just a twenty-five cent grandstand program, but they will be delighted to know that this year's attractions will be of a higher standard than ever. The prospects are exceedingly bright for a splendid Exhibition, and the directors deserve every assistance in their larger effort.

A RADIO PROTEST.

Radio fans have a new cause for complaint. We have all heard of our old friend "static," who is usually with us to some extent, but whom we have become reconciled to as a necessary evil.

Now a new disturbing element has made its appearance—television, or the transmission of pictures by means of electricity. Lately WGY, the Schnectady station, has been making experiments in that branch on its usual waveband. The result to listeners on ordinary receivers has been like an introduction to a boiler shop. Not only does the noise come in on that station's particular place on the dial, but it overlaps on each side to an astonishing degree. Television may have its place but it will have to be above or below the 200 to 500 metres used in ordinary broadcasting.

HOW DO THEY DO IT?

How do the winners of the Dollar Day prizes make their estimates? Are their figures just random shots or is their some fairly competent method to be followed? A lot of us would like to know. We have been aiming at the Dollar Day money for a long time, but we can't even get on the target to say nothing of shooting an inner or a bullseye. We have tried the random style for the most part, but is hasn't brought us a nickel. Occasionally we attempted heavy thinking in appraisal of the number of tickets but with equally unfortunate results. A wise man knows that he can't always win and he likewise realizes that fate may never favor him in those matters of chance, still after years of buying red and yellow tickets—well just once even if he has to split a place with some one.

WORDS AND THEIR MISUSE.

A visitor fresh from Harvard accented the second rather than the first syllable of the word contemplate. The Harvard hallmark sent us to the dictionary with recollections of our own pronunciation. In the Century we received better than the benefit of a doubt, for it approves of accenting either the first or second syllable.

No one need feel abashed about consulting a reliable dictionary. Most men are more careful about the choice of a tie, which they regard as a necessary adornment, than about the pronunciation and meaning of words which betray an ignorance that is simply intolerable in this age of many schools and colleges. But where ignorance is bliss, what signifies the mangling of a helpless word or the reckless misuse, if not abuse, of a word that has a ringing, important sound, and must mean something. Such a man would take the pains to learn the latest dance steps as a social requisite, but he has such a contempt for the beauty and the dignity of correct and good English that a dictionary would be the very last of his purchases. However, who needs a dictionary who can make a silly phrase like "it's the berries" do for a hundred shades of meaning? A Kipling may browse through a big dictionary, not for pompous, polysyllabic words, but for simple, potent ones and above all for correctness and the mental discipline of such a practice.

RURAL RELATIONS.

It has often been said that one of the finest fruits of our own Exhibition is the goodwill it has cultivated between the people of the country and the city. This understanding and respect has been largely due to the associations and the joint responsibility the work of the Exhibition has occasioned.

The City Council seems to be of late another factor in the elevation of relations between the city and the neighboring townships to a plane of harmony and pleasant co-operation. Bickering over boundary roads and their upkeep, over drains, market tolls and regulations, parking of automobiles and other questions affecting our township friends, especially collectively, should be diligently avoided by the City Council, both as a matter of policy and respect.

Rules must of course be observed and agreements carried out and properly settled, but in all these contacts we should avoid a spirit of pettiness. This year's council has made a gratifying contribution in that direction.

Sometimes one hears the insinuation that rural motorists are checked up by the police for minor infractions that would be overlooked if the offenders were of the city. We don't believe such an opinion is held in the country nor that there is any ground for it. Farmers have more intelligence than to believe the citizens would tolerate any such discrimination, or that the police, some of whom are from the country, would be guilty of it.

ANOTHER TIE OF PEACE.

The Kellog agreement may not be a hoop of steel binding nations together in perpetual peace, but it is another "scrap of paper", a pledge of pacific purposes and desires. In 1914 a certain scrap of paper suddenly became a symbol of moral consciousness of the world, and its violation by Germany aroused forces whose consequences will not soon be forgotten.

By this latest compact the signatory nations renounce war as an instrument of national policy. Perhaps its most vital feature is the adherence and commitment of the United States, who in 1919 refused to ratify the covenant of the League of Nations and has steadfastly avoided "entangling alliances." In a terse comment on the Kellogg pact, Arthur Brisbane in the New York American said a few days ago: "Europe thinks it means that the United States, in spite of itself, will be from now on tied up with the League of Nations. If it does mean that the Senate should defeat it."

But there is no material connexion between the two conventions. The co-operation of the United States is regarded as a substantial gain in international endeavor to prevent war. The Kellogg treaty outlaws war; the nations declare it abhorrent and first among them in this pronouncement is the United States.

The United States therefore could not consistently supply with foods, money and munitions an aggressor nation that violated the anti-war compact. The agreement under the League of Nations, the Locarno treaties of three years ago, the Washington naval conference and now the Kellogg agreement all appear to be complementary measures which should discourage the launching of war.

The United States remains unentangled but its signature to the pact it sponsored is surely a moral entanglement which should be a powerful deterrent to war. There may be alarms from time to time but there is a definite moulding of desire for and confidence in peace and a settling of the nations' wills to maintain it.

RISKY DARES AND WAGERS.

There is something about a dare which appeals to any person, whether young or old, who has red blood in his veins, and has the sporting instinct more or less developed. Such persons do not like to be dared or stumped to do anything. They don't stop to consider whether or not the undertaking is risky. They accept the challenge without counting the cost.

Many a life has been lost through taking up a dare. Only the other day an eleven-year-old boy was drowned near Welland because a younger companion dared him to swim the ship canal.

Parents should impress upon their children that they mustn't make or accept dares involving risk to life or limb, such as swimming a certain distance or climbing electric power poles. In meeting a challenge to athletic prowess, children are apt to be less cautious than they should be. They are determined to do it "or bust." Without knowing it, they overtax their strength and a fatality frequently results.

Akin to the dare is the heedless wager. As the result of a wager a young man was drowned a few nights ago in the Ottawa River. He bet a companion that he could swim the river, and completing a pact for him to follow, he leaped from the Chaudiere Bridge into the rapids below the falls, but disappeared after taking two or three strokes. Death accepted the challenge and won. The companion, who had consented to this foolish competition, soon recovered his senses, if he lost courage, and made no attempt to follow him or even to rescue him, beyond sounding an alarm. He was later detained by the authorities. If some sort of punishment were meted out to him it might have a tendency to curtail deadly wagers.

It takes two to complete a wager, and if the one proposing it is devoid of ordinary caution, the one to whom it is made should, where there is an element of danger involved, consider the proposal carefully before taking up the challenge. Of course, where two heedless persons are concerned in a wager, little can be hoped for. But the safety-first action of the compaion, after his friend disappeared in the waters of the Ottawa, showed that he was not quite so heedless as his acceptance of the challenge indicated.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, August 30. — Again yesterday the tone of the live stock market may be described as slow and steady according to dealers at the Union Stock Yards yesterday morning. Commission merchants are asking higher prices for good butchers, which fact has a tendency to make the market slow. On the whole there were but a few good cattle in the small receipts. Stores were steady at $7.25 to $9.50. The cow trade was active and stronger and a good clean-up is expected.

The traders are asking more for lambs, but the packers' bidding remains firm at $14.50. The lamb market is therefore unsettled. Sheep and calves are strong.

MONTREAAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 30 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for grain yesterday showed no improvement and business generally in all quarters was reported dull which would indicate that buyers were not disposed to operate at the present level of prices.

On account of the decline in wheat and oat futures at Winnipeg local cash prices for car lots weer reduced once cent per bushel. Sales of Manitoba No. 5 wheat were made at $1.10, Tough No. 6 wheat at $1.02, feed wheat at 98c, Argentine corn at $1.08 and American corn at $1.06 per bushel.

Prices for all grades of Spring and Winter wheat flour were firmly maintained under a moderate demand.

The millfeed market was active and steady. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and prices were unchanged.

The undertone to the egg market continued firm with a fair volume of business passing in all grades. The receipts were 7,050 cases.

The demand for imported beans was confined to small lots, but the tone of the market was steady and prices were unchanged. Sales of choice white hand-picked were made at $4.10 to $4.20 per bushel, ex-store,

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press).—Grain eased down at the end of an unsettled Board of Trade session yesterday, cessation of the heavy demand forcing wheat down to the bottom prices of the day, and below Monday's dull close, the gains of Tuesday's upward spurt were wiped out by profit-taking and weak cable reports, but corn fared slightly better, down somewhat from the previous close but still ahead of the finishing prices of last Monday.

Commission houses were on both sides of the market at the outset. The early news was disappointing. Liverpool declining to follow Chicago's lead in the advance. Diversion of Argntine wheat from the Continent to Liverpool was assigned as the reason for the relative easiness at that market, and export demand continued a weakening factor here. Weather in Canada was fair, but the Northwest States were unsettled as were European weather conditions; Jugo Slavia wheat crop indications were 39,000,000 bushels better than a year ago.

Throughout most of the day the fluctuations in wheat and corn were small, but the markets were unsteady, relatively small trades sending prices up and down the scale. Corn had a firm undertone but realising sales softened September. Favorable weather reports from the corn belt checked the buying of deferred months, but considerable damage was said to have been inflicted on Nebraska corn by recent hot and dry weather. In Kansas, too, some heat injury was reported regionally.

There was buying of wheat here for eastern and Winnipeg accounts, part of the latter being regarded as against sales at Winnipeg to Eastern buyers. Short covering helped to strengthen the Winnipeg trading. Wheat closed 1¼ to 1¾ cents lower, September 1.10⅜ to ⅞; December, 1.16½; March, 1.21, and May 1.23¾.

Oats was firmer at mid-session, but eased off later with the leading grains, and closed ⅛ to ⅛c lower, September 38⅝ to 39; December 40⅝; March 43¼.

Provisions were a bit easier with trade moderate, lard closing a shade to 2c lower; ribs unchanged to 2c up, and bellies down 12 to 15c.

The Question Box

Q.—Was there ever a colored Mayor in Peterborough. If so, why—and for how long?

A.—There was never a colored mayor in Peterborough. There is a rumor that one was elected some 60 years ago, but this man never officiated.

A Thought

YOUTH

It should be borne in mind that in old age it is too late to mend, that then you must inhabit what you have built. Old age has the foundation of its joy or its sorrow laid in youth. You are building at twenty. Are you building for seventy- Nay, every stone laid in the foundation takes hold of every stone in the wall up to the very eaves of the building; and every deed, right or wrong, that transpires in youth, reaches forward, and has a relation to all the afterpart of man's life.—Henry Ward Beeches.

PLEASANT TRIP AROUND LAKES

Rail and Boat Journey Enjoyed By Number of Passengers.

WEATHER PLEASING.

I was walking down George Street last Saturday morning, admiring the youth and beauty of our by no means "mean city" or as we colloquially term it in the Mother Country "giving the girls a treat" when I suddenly felt a hearty slap on the back, and turning round found my good old friend, Jerry Young the commander of the Stoney Lake fleet.

"What are you going to do on Wednesday?" said my genial old friend. "I want you to meet me at the Canadian National Railway Station at eight thirty."

"What's up old friend" said I.

"Well, I want you to come and make a special trip with me up the lakes."

I understood him to reply: "We shall go out by train—have a good time on the lakes—and come back by rail; it will be an easier trip than that to Lindsay by water and return by rail. We will leave an hour later and get back to the City in time for supper."

"Righto!" was my glad reply, "I'll be there."

I kept my word

Accordingly on Wednesday I duly found myself on the old Grand Trunk platform shortly before the hour specified, where I found several others evidently bent on the same errand.

In due time we all entrained on the Lakefield flyer and very shortly found ourselves at the Maritime Station at Lakefield where we speedily transferred ourselves and our impediment to the steamship Empress which was lying with all steam up, ready to speed us on our voyage of discovery.

Our Start

At nine or within a few minutes—we won't quarrel as to a few seconds—we were steaming along into a lake—I really don't know how to spell the Indian word and I have seen it spelt in various ways, but it sounds something like Katchawanookna; and as I can't find it in the Websters Dictionary (which I didn't expect to) I may be pardoned if I have made an error in my orthography.

The Weather

Now, I had looked carefully and anxiously out of my chamber window when I awoke early at about day-break, and lo! there were every signs of a lovely day, but a couple of hours later and in even less, the sky had clouded over and a fairly strong north westerly breeze was in evidence, so that at the moment of departure climatic conditions did not look by any means too favorable. But oh joy! in a very short time the glorious sun came shining out dispelling the heavy looking clouds, leaving only a few which threw a lovely shadow here and there on the landscape. It was the beginning of a perfect day, showing up the Three Sisters Islands in their beauty. We had passed the old gravel pit which supplied material for Burleigh Lock (higher up the Lakes.) This old pit turned out to have been in far earlier times an old Indian Cemetery.

We went through Henderson's Narrows on to Young's Point where we negotiated the new Lock and bridge, seeing the power house of the Canadian Cement Works at Lakefield, the generating machinery in which was burnt out a few days since by a flash of lightning. At the lock I came across "an old inhabitant" who claimed to have been an eye witness of the event. "The lightning bolt came down," said he, "and struck the water, then rebounded into the power house and set the inside on fire."

By this time the weather was just too lovely for words, we had steamed through Clear Lake and entered Stoney Lake. Kawartha Park just looked lovely and passing the "Devil's Elbow" entered "Hell's Gates" and came to Juniper Island and thence to MacCracken's Landing. Here the effect of light and shade was most extraordinary. There were many young damsels enjoying themselves, either on shore or swimming or paddling; the sun lightened their costumes 'till I felt like a modern Rip Van Winkle.

Many of you will remember how that worthy of ancient lore had a sleep for fifteen years and on waking up was flabbergasted to find that the world had altered. I felt as if I, too, had had a long sleep, for the damsels had all by some magician's wand, been turned into fairies, and as fairies I looked upon these and the other fair damsels—of which we saw many—for the rest of my journey, until in fact I eventually got ashore and into more posaic conditions.

Then On We Went

To Eagle Mount Island. I had seen these places on previous occasions, yet they all looked fresh and new.

In due course we arrived at Burleigh Falls at eleven thirty, where we moored to the landing stage, and proceeded to start on a good dinner for which we were perfectly ready. And, oh! Mrs. Bullock, you capable cook, did not we just enjoy the good things you put before us; I think we showed it not only by the thanks many of rendered to you, but by the way in which we stowed it away.

At twelve we loosed off and went on our way rejoicing, passing Fraser's beautiful place with its mansion fitted with baths, hot and cold water, and every modern convenience imaginable. Thence to Viamede and Mount Julian, where we made a call to replenish our stock of fuel, for our hungry boiler was consuming as fast as it could make steam.

At one o'clock we made Crowe's Landing, saw the Blue Mountain whence, I was told, one may see Lake Ontario on a clear day. Then we steamed across to Maplehurst, where I was greeted by one whom I had never expected to meet so far from my home town. And such a greeting always makes a most agreeable surprise. Of course, considering the advanced season,—we are on the threshold of September—many of the summer cottages and houses are closed. Again we went to juniper Island, where we stayed a few minutes, to enable the fairies we had on board to indulge in ice-cream and such like dainties as are always welcome to the fair sex. Thence to McCracken's Landing, where we landed some of Rip Van Winkle's fairies. Then we sighted coming towards us, the steamer Islinda, belonging to Commodore Young's fleet, with whom the customary courtesies were exchanged.

Then we passed the Rotary Camp where a number of boys seemed to be enjoying themselves hugely in a great canoe, and we shortly came up to a place where a number of girls—fairies shall I still say?—were swimming and having apparently a real good time of it. Mind you, the sun was shining gloriously and everything was just as one would have it.

Then we steamed to Young's Point and proceeded to Lakefield where a train was in readiness, which eventually landed our party in Peterborough shortly before five o'clock in good time to proceed to our various homes for supper.

A Word of Appreciation

And so indeed a most delightful, enjoyable trip—one thoroughly enjoyed by everyone partaking in it. There wasn't a hitch or a cross word to mar anything. Everybody was happy in which were no bickerings or petty jealousies.

And we were all so comfortable; the journey was not sufficiently long to make the seats grow too hard. Personally, Commodore Jerry Young, I thank you much for such a delightful outing.

And now I ought to give a word of praise to the officers and crew of The Empress, for they all added more or less to the general comfort. Firstly, they were the Commodore, who accompanied the trip from start to finish; Captain Harold Young, in command; Al Harris, the chief engineer; Mr. Godfrey, who as fireman, was the chief engineer's right-hand man; Harold Montgomery, most obliging deck-hand, and of course, Mrs. Bullock, the jolly cook. — Frank Russell.

WOMAN SAVES SON

more payments were made, and a large amount, considering what the youth had been getting, was due.

Kincade demanded a settlement, but obtained no satisfaction, and decided to work things out in his own way. With his stepfather, according to the mother's story, the youth hijacked the eighty-seven five-gallon kegs of whisky took it from its place of concealment in the mountains and hid it in the deserted farmhouse just off of the Golden road.

Guns Drawn at Parley.

One morning, according to the story, Zerobnick, accompanied by Harry Mandell and Mike Winchell, came to the McGee home and demanded the return of the whisky.

The three men talked at the point of guns, and finally McGee and Kincaid confessed that the liquor had been taken to the farmhouse. But the three men demanded that McGee and Kincade accompany them on the trip to the cache of the booze.

"You get in the car right now, or I'll blow your head off," Zerobnick is alleged to have said to Kincade.

Fearful that a tragedy would follow, Mrs. McGee ran out of the house and threw stones at the three men, demanding that they permit her son and her husband to remain at home, according to the story she told the police.

But the group drove away, and it was at that point that the woman phoned the police.

The officers came upon the men as they were removing the liquor.

MADRIGAL SINGERS DELIGHT RADIO

Atlantic Ocean and still another from the S. S. San Pablo, 2,200 miles out at sea. From Liverpool and Hertfordshire these letters are sent, telling of fine reception of the "Cheerio" Station's programs.

This station has at present Canada's most powerful transmitting radio apparatus. A similar station is now being erected in Winnipeg. It has 5,000 watts of power, a wave length of 312.3 meters, and crystal control, with twin towers 165 feet high at the transmitting station at G. & W. Park in Bowmanville. In Toronto, where the offices and studios house a staff of twenty-two people in the mechanical, office and studio sections, there is a very efficient clerical staff under direction of the genial manager, N. B. Maysmith, also a musical director, radio operators and continuity writers, all of whom have their separate offices. On the wall of Mr. Maysmith's office hangs a large map of the world, on which over two thousand black pins mark the location of as many receiving stations that probably listened in last night to the singing of Peterborough's Madrigal Singers.

There are two studios, a large and a small. In the former, a pleasant, very well lighted room, with tightly closed doors and open windows that occasionally allow the honk of a motor horn to penetrate into the room, is the microphone, a small contrivance something like a baking-powder can, which tops a metal standard. This is the point to which all sound is directed. The floors have a thick, soft carpet and the walls are contrived of a special sugar-cane fibre called "cellotex," which has outstanding qualities in the acoustic line. In a corner is a grand piano.

The mechanical apparatus in another room is the "control board," which is much like a telephone switch board in appearance. This sends the programs over the air from Toronto to Bowmanville by wire. There is a private connection also from the transmitting station to the Toronto central office and a large radio of the latest type which brings back over the air, the program which is in progress in the room next door. One can step from the studio where the singers are filling the air with music to the smaller room, where the radio brings it back in its aerial form.

An interesting portion of the watcher's entertainment last night was the play broadcasted by a quartette of actors who appeared to enter thoroughly into the spirit of their parts. Standing rigidly with eyes fixed on the script of the play, their carefully shaded voices conveying all the action of the drama to unseen listeners by varied and skilful manipulation of tone, they still found time to enact various small bits of pantomime in line with the action of the comedy which was entitled "If Morning Glory Wins."

Oddly enough, the watcher thought that they looked just like their voices. The "heavy" of the piece, Mr. Puttenham, was a man with iron-gray hair and a real actor's voice of cultured, rich intonations. The heroine, Sylvia Bennett, was a vivacious blonde; the hero, Archibald Huntley, was a dark, nice-looking young man, and the girl who did some excellent bits as the maid and also as the nasal-toned newsboy, was a brunette with a pale, interesting face and a boyish bob.

To simulate steps coming into the room, the heroine stamped her feet loudly once or twice, and a newspaper, rattled near the microphone, provided another bit of realistic atmosphere. The interest lay in the intent concentration of the quartette on the words in the book held in front of them and the manner in which their flexible voices answered every demand in a varying range of emotion.

STARCHY COMBINATIONS

When you use starches, only one kind should be used at a meal, and this starch should be combined only with the cooked and raw non-starchy vegetables. No fruits of any kind—not even tomatoes—should be used with this meal.

The reason for this is that starch digestion begins in the mouth as chewing mixes the saliva with the starch. If acids are used at the same time, the akalinity of the saliva is spoiled and cannot properly convert the starch into sugar.

If starch, tomatoes and meat are mixed and pass into the stomach, both the meat and tomatoes will stimulate the flow of the gastric juice, which has no digestive element in it that can in any way convert the starch. On the other hand, an excess of gastric juice only sours the starch and make it unfit for digestion in the intestines where the principal change of starch takes place.

The simple way then to use starch is to use only one starchy food at a time and to use it in combination with the different non-starchy vegetables, both in the cooked and raw forms. The folowing specimen meals will give you some idea of how starch may be used in proper combination with other foods:

1.—Wholewheat Muffins, cooked carrots and string beans.

2.—Baked potato cooked cucumbers, salad of grated carrots and lettuce.

3.—Boiled whole rice, cooked asparagus and carrots, raw spinach.

There are really no vegetables which do not contain a small amount of starch, but the following list contains less than five per cent; celery, spinach, string beans, asparagus, summer squash, cucumbers, egg plant, beet tops, turnip tops, lettuce, okra, chayotes, oyster plant, mallow, kale, zucchini, and even small beats, carrots, parsnips, and turnips. The larger and more mature beets, carrots, parsnips and turnips contain as much as eight to twelve per cent of starch, but may usually be taken as none-starchy vegetables.

I will briefly explain to you just how food is digested in the stomach, and also in the intestines.

The digestion of food begins in the mouth, but only one kind of food is really digested by the saliva. That one food is starch. Meats, greens, fruit and other foods (except starches), are NOT in any way digested in the mouth except that mastication breaks these foods up into smaller particles. The ptyalin, or digestive ferment in the saliva, acts upon the starch, and partially converts it into sugar.

When a mixture of meat, bread, and greens is taken into the stomach, the chemical action of the gastric juice changes the meat from protein into simpler forms so that it can be absorbed. The digestive juice of the stomach has no effect whatsoever upon the bread and greens except to make them sour because of the one-half of one per cent hydrochloric acid contained in the juice.

The digestion of starch does not take place in the stomach, as there is no part of the gastric juice which has the property to act upon the starch. As the food passes into the intestines, the bile, which is alkaline, is mixed with the combination of bread, meat and greens, and if this mixture is already too acid the bile is capable of converting it into a liquid alkaline, most of which can then be acted upon by the amylopsin, stepsin, trypsin, and intestinal renin. These ferments chemically digest the different food elements, and can handle almost any mixture if enough bile has been combined with it.

The chief difficulty seems to be in getting bad mixtures through the stomach and into the intestines without setting up a conflict between the digestive juices of the stomach and those of the intestines.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ... STARCHY COMBINATIONS— ...

Q. B.C. writes:—"At one time my pulse will register sixty, at another time eighty, for no apparent reason. Has this change in pulse any significance for a well man of sixty?"

A. Your pulse will be much lower when you are resting, and much faster after exercising. This is perfectly normal, but such a variation as you note should not occur while you are quiet. If so, it is because of a varying amount of gas pressure against your heart. This is due to improper food, eating too hastily, overeating, and gassy food combinations.

Q. Reader asks:— "Does buttermilk tend to produce acidosis on account of the lactic acid it contains?"

A. A buttermilk diet, or the use of buttermilk in place of a meal has a tendency to cure acidosis rather than to cause it. The lactic acid of the buttermilk has a beneficial effect upon the intestinal flora, or vegetable growths in the intestines.

Q. L.D.P. asks—"Will you kindly give me some information about yellow jaundice, its cause and cure, and how long it lasts if taken care of immediately?"

A. Jaundice may be caused by a serious disease of the liver, such as cancer or cirrhosis, but when it first appears it usually is caused by catarrhal inflamation of the bile ducts or by the bile being stopped through the obstruction caused by gall stones. The treatment which I would suggest would of course depend upon the cause found through an examination; but on general principles, a fruit fast would be effective in stimulating the flow of bile and removing the jaundice, at least, temporarily.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Today's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BUNTY'S CUSHION.

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Syndicate).

Uncle Wiggily was hiding under a burdock weed watching Gup, the horse, and the Cow Bird, who was perched on the barbed wire fence. I mean the bird was on the fence—not the horse. The rabbit gentleman was trying to find out what made Gup's tail so thin and the rabbit happened to hear some talk between Gup and the Cow Bird which very much surprised Mr. Longears.

"I want a lot of those black hairs from your tail to-day, Gup," chirped the Cow Bird.

"I'm afraid I haven't many hairs left," sadly neighed the horse. "You have taken so many of them."

"Oh, but with fall and winter coming on you don't need much of a tail now to swish flies," said the Cow Bird. "And remember, to pay you back, next summer I will perch on your back and scratch the itchy places with my claws."

"That is very kind of you, I am sure," said Gup. "Well, here goes for some more of my tail hairs." The horse spoke sadly.

"This is most mysterious," thought Uncle Wiggily, keeping himself hidden beneath the burdock weed. "Here this selfish Cow Bird has been pulling hairs out of Gup's tail—what for I don't know. And poor Gup is just kind enough to let it happen. I'll wait until I see this bird begin to pull hairs and then I'll tell Gup what a foolish horse he is."

But while Uncle Wiggily watched, instead of the Cow Bird pulling hairs from Gup's tail, the horse switched his tail over the wire fence. The barbed points tangled in the hairs and many long, shiny black strands were pulled from poor Gup's tail and hung on the barbs.

"Oh, that's a lot! Thanks!" chirped the Cow Bird.

He stuffed them inside.

This selfish creature fluttered to where the horse hairs dangled on the fence, and pulling them off in his beak, flew with them to a hollow stump, where he stuffed them inside. Uncle Wiggily thought it was time to do something. So, just as Gup was going to tangle his tail on the barbed wire fence again, the rabbit gentleman hopped out and cried:

"Whoa!"

Gup lowered his tail, and, looking at his friend, Mr. Longears, neighed:

"What's the matter?"

"Matter enough!" exclaimed the rabbit. "Why are you pulling all your tail hairs out for the Cow Bird?"

"Because I asked him to!" snapped the saucy Cow Bird, flying back. "Go on, Gup! Give me more hairs!"

"No!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Don't be so foolish, Gup! Why are you giving this Cow Bird all the hairs from your tail?"

"Well," whinnied the horse, sort of hanging his head, "this Cow Bird said he was very poor and that if I would give him a lot of tail hairs he could sell them to other birds to make nests with when the season opened next year. So I did. I've been switching my tail against this barbed wire fence every day, pulling out hairs, and the Cow Bird has been stuffing them in the hollow stump to save until next spring when he can make some money."

"Is this true?" asked Uncle Wiggily of the Cow Bird.

"Yes, it is!" chirped the selfish creature. "I've got to make a living some way!"

"Well, you aren't going to make it out of poor Gup's tail!" said Mr. Longears. "Fly away now!" So the Cow Bird flew away chattering and Uncle Wiggily said: "Poor Gup! Now your tail will grow out again!"

"But what is to be done about all my hairs that the Cow Bird stuffed into the hollow stump to sell to nest building birds next year?" neighed Gup. "You know birds love to line their nests with horse tail hairs and since there are so many autos, we horses are getting fewer and fewer."

"Yes," said Uncle Wiggily, "I know. But I will take these loose hairs from the hollow stump and make a soft cushion for Baby Bunty to sleep on this winter. In the spring Bunty can take the hairs out of her cushion and give them to the robins, wrens, and orioles for their nests."

So the rabbit gentleman made a bundle of kind Gup's tail hairs and started to hop away with them. But something happened before he reached his bungalow. You shall soon hear about it when, in case the cream jug doesn't try to puff itself up and look like a water pitcher, I tell you in the next story how Uncle Wiggily helped the poor little Squiggle Bug.

What Peterborough People Read in The Examiner.

August 30, was a Sunday in 1903. 10 years ago To-day, Friday, August 30, 1918.

An organization meeting of the Peterborough Canadian Club, was held in the offices of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, at which plans for the bringing in of new members and for a series of interesting addresses, were discussed.

At a meeting of the City Council, Alderman Edgar suggested a plan whereby citizens might pay their taxes in three instalments instead of two. The suggestion was referred to the Finance Committee for consideration.

A petition is being circulated about the city and will probably be presented to the City council at its meeting next Tuesday night. The petition is being signed by citizens who agree with its purpose to have the building of the new overhead bridge postponed until after the war owing to the abnormal cost of employment and materials.

The Salvation Army Honor roll was last evening unveiled by Brigadier Morehen, who also paid a warm tribute to Commandant and Mrs. McElhiney, who are retiring soon to leave Peterborough, and to Adjutant and Mrs. Buntin, who will succeed them.

The Planter of the Tree

By RUBY M. AYRES

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally is in love.

POPPY, Sally's room-mate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

Akers says he is through with Sally, and the doctors say she can never walk again. Sanderson assumes her care and plans to get a cottage in the country for her and Mrs. Kiff.

XIV.—THE COTTAGE IN THE COUNTRY.

Mrs. Kiff broke off discordantly on a high note, wiped the suds from her arms, and went to answer the sharp rat-tat on the cottage door. It was a bright April morning, one of those wonderfully fresh mornings when it is good to be alive, and there seems no discordant note in the music of the world.

A small apple-tree in the tiny front garden was laden with blossom, some petals of which had fallen to the grass below in a fairy shower; away in a tree a blackbird was singing to the sun till its throat seemed likely to burst, and there were rows of daffodils and narcissi in the long, narrow bed edged with white stones which stretched from the cottage to the green-painted gate.

A bicycle leaned drunkenly against the gate this morning, and a cheeky-looking telegraph-boy with his cap at the back of his head was lolling against the front door as Mrs. Kiff opened it with an energetic hand.

"Name of Lingfield," he said in a bored voice, offering the yellow envelope for acceptance.

Mrs. Kiff snatched it. She hated telegrams on principle; from her point of view they never brought anything but bad news, and for a moment her happiness in the glorious morning and in her new-found life was marred, and she held the envelope at arm's length, as if afraid it would bite her, as she carried it along the little passage to Sally's room.

Sally was still in bed, and although the room was tiny, in its own way it was a little palace, wherein Sally was an enthroned queen amongst her lace-trimmed pillows, her golden hair spread out around her like wings.

"A telegram," said Mrs. Kiff uncompromisingly. "But if you don't want to open it, I'll tell him to take it back."

Sally smiled. She and Mrs. Kiff had lived together now for two months, and had, after many sharp words and tussles of wills, at last begun to understand one another.

"I expect it's from Philip," she said, without much interest. "Give it to me, and don't be silly."

She opened the envelope and read the brief message:

"Can't come down till to-morrow. Sorry.—Philip."

Sally frowned.

"He's not coming till to-morrow," she said. "There's no answer."

Mrs. Kiff departed to dismiss the boy and returned.

"Now I suppose you're disappointed," she submitted sympathetically.

Sally shook her head.

"Not very, only you needn't have been in such a hurry to put up clean curtains, after all, need you?"

Mrs. Kiff sniffed.

"If I hadn't, he'd have come unexpected and found 'em dirty," she said defensively. "I know men. They always turn up when it's inconvenient."

"He'd never have noticed if they'd been as black as the grate," Sally said indifferently.

Mrs. Kiff opened her lips to argue, then closed them again with a snap. From the first she had been fond of Sally, although she entirely disapproved of her.

She thought Sally both selfish and ungrateful, and during the first few weeks after they came to the cottage she never lost an opportunity to rub in the fact that it was the will of God that Sally should have to lie on her back, and that the will of God was a thing to which all poor mortals had to bow the neck.

Lately she had not been quite so insistent on the point; lately she had sympathized more with the terrible monotony of being helpless; lately she had grown more than ordinarily fond of Sally—she had grown to love her.

"Though swear!"—so she told Sanderson in a shocked voice. "My word, where did a bit of thing like her pick up them awful words?"

"It doesn't mean anything more than if you or I said 'bother,'" Sanderson calmly assured her. "And if you don't take any notice, she'll soon leave off using them, you'll see."

So now Mrs. Kiff closed her mouth like a steel trap and went back to her washing, and a moment later her shrill, unlovely voice was once more rending the spring morning with the same refrain which the telegraph-boy had temporarily interrupted:

"I shall love you the sa-me for ev-er! I shall love you the sa-me for ev-er—"

Sally smiled and frowned as she listened. Mrs. Kiff had learned that song from a gramophone record which Philip had brought from town with a dozen others, and although at first Sally had liked it, she was growing weary of the sentimental refrain as interpreted by Mrs. Kiff's unlovely soprano:

"As long as my ha-hart—shall beat!"

Sally closer her eyes and turned her face against the cool linen of her pillow. To her restless, rebellious heart the last two months had been an eternity. Sometimes she thought it must have been in another lifetime that Philip had brought her down from town in the finest car he could hire, with a glorious bunch of crimson roses lying beside her, and the most wonderful downy cushions and softest rugs to enfold her, to this cottage.

"It's yours — your very own for life," he told her as he carried her in his arms from the car, pausing for a moment at the gate, and watching her with eager eyes to see what effect the little house had upon her.

Perhaps it was unfortunate that it had been a grey, gloomy day, unfortunate that the trees were dripping with recent rain, and that the sitting-room chimney had smoked while they were having tea, for at any rate Sally had seen nothing beautiful in the home which he had prepared for her with such care and thought, and the tears had run down her cheeks and her lips had trembled as he put her gently down on a wonderful invalid couch by the fire, just touching her hair with his lips as he said rather wistfully:

"I do hope you will be happy here."

Sally was a little ashamed to remember that she had answered ungraciously that she never expected to be happy anywhere again, for, after all, he had been wonderfully good to her. There were not many men in the world, so her bitter experience had told her, who would have been so generous and faithful.

The cottage was a tiny one—three bedrooms, one sitting-room and a good-sized kitchen at the back, with a long, low-roofed wash-house leading out of it into the garden.

Philip had had the whole place decorated and furnished to Sally's own taste, with the result that it was a rather curious mixture. For one thing, she had chosen satin-wood for her bedroom, and blue draperies to the bed, and the windows of a rich damask silk which was far too heavy for such a little room; and in the sitting-room there were too many pink cushions and pink lampshades, and there was a horrible humpty stool on the floor in front of the fireplace, covered in gold brocade with a green dragon sprawling all over it. Mrs. Kiff hated that green dragon, and always declared that some day it would come to life and spit fire at them.

"If you had a nice bird instead, now!" she would say every time she brushed it. "A nice bird with a long tail, or something 'uman!"

Sally invariably silenced her with the remark,

"It's my house. I shall have what I like. Besides, you haven't got any taste."

"If green dragons is taste, thank the Lord I 'aven't!" Mrs. Kiff declared piously.

Apart from such small details, Mrs. Kiff was entirely happy. She cleaned and scrubbed and polished from morning till night to her heart's content, thanking Heaven a hundred times a day that down in the country there were no smuts to dirty her curtains, and no fog to turn her brass and silver rust-red. She kept the cottage like a new pin, and she kept Sally like a little princess.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE GO PICNICKING.

Picnicking is fast becoming a national pastime. The automobile is aiding the movement materially. On Sundays and national holidays picnic grounds are at a great premium. It is one of the chief delights of many families to discover new and more secluded places suitable for a picnic

Obviously picnicking is attractive primarily because it brings us out of doors. In modern sedentary life, which coops a man in shop or office or factory or classroom, the picnic is a godsend. It challenges the primitive in us and we welcome with open arms the opportunity of getting back to nature.

Of course, if we had to go back to nature in the same literal sense as did our great ancestors we would not like it so well. We are too sophisticated for that. The picnic is ideal in that it affords relaxation without taxing our unaided resources. If we had to depend upon what food we could gather with our bare hands from an unfriendly environment it would cease to be a pastime.

Picnicking appeals to us because it is a pleasant illusion. It gives us the feeling of living a primitive life with none of the awful phases of such a life. It is a happy combination of the primitive and the modern.

After a nice long drive in the country among the very elements of earth and sky and air from which we derive our nourishment it is only logical that we should enjoy a good meal. So we take our well-stocked basket of sandwiches and fried chicken and potato salad or we broil our steak under some friendly shade along a brook with limpid waters. And what an appetite!

A picnic lunch has its attractions for the housewife in eliminating dish washing for one heavy meal at any rate.

Then there are free and friendly associations. Every one is in a happy frame of mind. No pessimist ever went on a picnic or remained one for long. All in all the picnic is a wholesome pastime and well deserves its growing popularity.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

Friday, August 31, 1928.

(McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Good and evil planetary aspects contend to-day, according to astrology, but the adverse stars are dominant.

This should be a favorable day for mercantile enterprises of every sort and especially for those who deal in machinery.

Many large orders that will be exported to other countries from the United States are indicated and the Orient will buy much, if the stars are wisely read.

This is not an auspicious day for seeking favors or patronage of any sort. Both men and women in places of the sun may be disobliging.

Those who go in search of employment should be careful, for the stars may thwart their efforts. It is well to postpone important quests.

Over-confidence may be manifested by those who solicit public approval, while this sway continues.

Managers of political campaigns or other uncertain enterprises should expect little co-operation while the stars are posited as they are to-day.

Under this direction of the stars women may be capricious and difficult to direct, whether it be a relative or an employer who makes the effort.

The rule is not a fortunate one for agriculture, and farmers may suffer from unfavorable weather conditions as well as from strange visitations of pests.

Engineers and others interested in big building enterprises may be retarded in their work under this rule, but they have the forecast of many large contracts in the autumn.

Immense structures will be erected in many cities and public buildings will multiply, it is foretold.

American architecture is but the outward symbol of the nation's outlook upon life, the seers point out, and it may represent a too sanguine view at this page in history, the seers point out.

Dressmakers, importers and all who cater to women's love of dress should benefit in the coming year which is to bring fashions that are costly.

While beauty is to be less artificial than it has been since the epoch of paint and powder, women are to wear the costliest costumes and to cultivate real charm, if the stars are rightly read.

Again intelligence and culture are to be in high repute that will influence persons in every walk of life. The spiritual and intellectual will have a little effec in subduing the material and physical expressions of life.

Persons whose birthdate it is should avoid accidents in the coming year which may bring many exciting experiences. These subjects of Virgo probably will reach crises in their lives if they are past thirty.

Children born on this day may be often hurt, if they take any changes. The sign presages fine talents and great possibilities of development in the arts and professions. Order and harmony are necessary to their health and well-being.

"Saves the Clothes and Hands"

Says Mrs. —— Weller St., Peterborough

"I've been using Rinso for several weeks now, and I wouldn't think of doing my housework without a package of it on hand. Doesn't it get clothes white? And so easily! It's wonderful in our water—why just soaking the wash in the safe Rinso suds overnight gets all the dirt out. There's no real rubbing to do and, of course, that saves the clothes—and hands! With Rinso, clothes don't need to be boiled—that saves on my gas bill, too. Rinso is also just as good for cleaning woodwork, tiles, sinks, etc. It's a real worksaver."

Mrs. ——, Weller Street, Peterborough.

Yes! You can get whiter clothes in less time with less work

DOESN'T that sound welcome to you women who know what hard wash day work means? And Rinso does exactly what we say. Millions of women have proved it. They're using Rinso each wash day. And they are feeling better—feeling happier. Rinso saves them hours of hard work, yet they have the whitest clothes that ever gladdened a woman's eyes.

Rinso makes such rich, soapy suds that clothes are actually soaked clean. A little rub here and there perhaps, where the things are badly soiled—but that's all. No boiling—no other bar soap, chips or powder needed. Rinso does the work alone—and does it better—in hard or soft water. White clothes kept whiter. Coloured things kept brighter. Save your strength, your time, your clothes ..... Use Rinso.

WARSAW SHEEP CLUB HOLDS FAIR

Davis, 84 points; 4, Clarence Tedford, 80 points; 5, Allan Moore, 75 points. The prizes were $5.00, $4.00, $3.00, $2.00 and $1.00.

Judging of Stock.

The second part of the afternoon's porgram provided keen competition for the stock on exhibition was of splendid calibre, according to the officials. Taken from their improved pens, or folds, the lambs were judged under several heads. An amusing incident occurred when one temperramental entrant (that is, the lamb) decided that "enough's enough" and slipping from the grasp of one of the offfcials, led he and several others a merry chase before being recaptured.

1 ($10.00)—Harold Hendron.
2 ($8.00)—Gordon Hendron.
3 ($6.00)—Allan Moore.
4 ($4|00)—George Moore.
5 ($2.00)—Irwine Hawthorne.

Best Ewe Lamb—
1 ($5.00)—Harold Hendron.

Best Pair Wether Lambs—
1 ($10.00)—Gordon Hendron.
2 ($8.00)—Clarence Tedford.
3 ($6.00)—Earl Harding.

Best Wether Lamb—
1 ($5.00)—Harold Hendron.

The prize for the best set of hurdles made by any member of the club, went to Harvey Clifford, his prize being $2.00. He had made a fine job and together with several other of the boys, received commendation for his efforts from the officials.

The trimming or blocking demonstration, as given by Mr. McGreer, was one of the features of the afternoon, and gave the boys a clear idea of how to prepare their lambs for showing. Picking one animal, Mr. McGreer carefully trimmed the wool on its back, chest and hind quarters so that a definite blocking effect was obtained. For this work, he suggested the procuring by the boys, a wool card, clippers, a brush and a pail of water. He stated that it would take from two to three hours to do a neat job of blocking and that the process would have to be repeated to some extent each day.

This demonstration concluded the afternoon's program. Expressions of satisfaction at its success were heard on all ides and to President Clarence Tedford and Secretary Tom Davis, was accorded the appreciation of the club.

Indian River Fair Good.

As was the case with the Warsaw Sheep Club Fair—so the Indian River Boys' Club Fair, held on Tuesday, proved very successful from the standpoint of number of entries, calibre of the stock, and interest shown in all competitions. This club, under the presidency of Roland Tedford, and with Alex Carlow as secretary, met at the farm of William Forsythe and with a smilar program to that of the Warsaw club, declared the following prize winners:

Best Pair of Breeding Ewe Lambs—
1—Roland Tedford.
2—Alex Carlow.
3—Stewart Tedford.
4—Maitland Forsythe.
5—Joseph Leahy.

(The prizes were of similar values to those given at the Warsaw fair).

Best Ewe Lamb—
1—Roland Tedford.

Best Pair Wether Lambs—

2—Maitland Forsythe.
3—Irwine Forsythe.

Rain at about two o'clock, delayed the start of the fair, but it did not recur again that afternoon and the fair went through to a successful conclusion.

CARS COLLIDE; NO HARM DONE

Coupe Turning Out From Curb Clashes With Passing Touring Car.

BOTH DRIVE AWAY.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, August 30.—Two cars came together yesterday afternoon on Tice Street, about 5.15. A coupe was nosing its way out from the crowd and collided with a touring car, turning it half round and skidding it several feet along the pavement. Both drivers were women. The coupe backed away a few feet, and since there was apparently no damage of any great extent, the party in the touring car drove on up the street. The coupe waited only a minute before following suit.

Asked about such matters, several drivers have expressed the opinion that a good many drivers do not realize the risk they incur. The incident yesterday afternoon had all the earmarks of inexperience in this matter on the part of one or both of the drivers.

to keep it from breaking out in flames.

On the west side of the building enclosure, and incidentally the windward side, a row of smaller buildings remain untouched by the flames. Among these is the oil house, where a hundred gallon gasoline tank, practically full, is housed. Grave fears were entertained while the fire was at its height, for the safety of these buildings. The others in the row were a sheet metal implement shed, a wood house, and a blacksmith shop.

The Durran farm has long been known as one of the leading farms in the district. It consists of two hundred acres, and is as thoroughly equipped as any person could desire. The house and all the outbuildings were electrically lighted by a private system. The threshing machine, which was destroyed, is also part of the equipment, and was engaged with the season's work yesterday. The buildings were all comparatively new and in good condition. Several years ago the late Mr. Durran began to specialize in the breeding of Holstein cattle. Since his death, the entire supervision of the farm has been carried on by his daughter, Miss Violet Durran.

Of the stock, there were only six calves in the buildings. These were got out, but not before they had been burned, some of them seriously. The latest reports are that they will either die or have to be destroyed. The other cattle, horses, sheep, etc., were all out in the pasture fields. A most conservative estimate places the loss in the neighborhood of ten thousand dollars, probably more. Insurance will cover a large portion of this amount.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, August 30. — Steadiness featured trading on the local wholesale produce market yesterday. Butter prices remained seady.

At Chicago butter ruled steady to firm at unchanged prices. Trading was spotted with a fair volume of business in a few quarters, but on the whole trading was quiet. Medium and undergrades were steady. Centralized car market was fully steady, with trading fairly good, especially 89 score cars.

No new developments of importance are reported from Canadian egg markets, the situation remaining generally firm, especially on extras.

The local egg situation is unchanged, with the market on extras firm, while firsts and seconds are barely steady. A sale is reported of a shipment of Ontario eggs at: Extras, 42c; firsts, 40c; seconds, 32c, delivered Toronto, cases returned.

frontiers, but we are not there yet. And if one accepts that only war can change the political status quo then it appears that the practical diplomatic effect of the Briand-Kellogg treaty is to help the political interests of England and France as against those of Germany, Italy and other countries who are not satisfied with their existing frontiers.

It appears true, of course, that from the practical point of view American interests are also furthered by preservation of the status quo, which in all likelihood cannot be disturbed except by war. Our greatest foreign interset lies in our commercial and financial interests abroad, and naturally peace means prosperity for those interests, just as war threatened them with damage.

It is interesting to compare with this theory of the preservation of the status quo that other theory that all history records evolution, and evolution means repeated changes in the status quo, political and otherwise. Whatever theory be the true one, it does seem that America's share in the anti-war pact, the success of which depends on preservation of the political status quo in the world, will inevitably call for display of larger American interest in what goes on in the world of a nature to threaten the status quo.

Some Paris Press Opinions.

That certainly is the idea others hold, whether or not we have as yet accepted it. The Matin says:

"Now it is understood. Henceforth, whichever party is in power in Washington, the peace of Europe is placed under the moral guarantee of the United States."

The Paris Midi recalls that while the pact was being signed, former Chancellor Marx of Germany was demanding the political union of Germany and Austria and that Premier Voldemaras was again claiming Vilna for Lithuania. Thus, says this paper, M. Briand spoke wisely yesterday when he said it remained to organize the peace proclaimed in the Salles de l'Horloge.

The Populaire says:

In future the United States is bound to the League of Nations by a bond which may become tighter, but which should never be broken."

The Petit Journal observes:

"Kellogg came almost to complete the work Wilson left unfinished a decade ago."

While the Volonte says:

"France is proud of having by this pact attached the United States to the work of general pacification undertaken at Geneva."

If we do not mean to help in the business of making our treaty work, we have fooled other peoples, and Secretary Kellogg has said nothing at Paris to set them right.

HONEYMOON COUPLE

he was a restaurant man on Hanlan's Point in Toronto 16 years ago and made and kept his money. Now he says that his money is keeping him. He earned enough in six years at that trade to keep him comfortably," he says.

Mrs. Langlois shares in the same jolly mode of life as they have chosen. She jokingly denies that they are on their diamond honeymoon, and that she is a bride of sixty years, on the grounds that a honeymoon is supposed to be pleasure and that she has to cook and wash and do a lot of work, but it is evident that this is really a pleasure to her, and to travel about "in the house that Dick built" is no hardship.

Nothing can describe the bride and bridegroom of sixty years better than their slogan that is on the back of their travelling house: "Seventy-eight years old, full of pep, seeing this old world or bust, in God and Henry Ford we trust." The true significance is brought out when the secret is revealed that their sedan is a Ford.

Their trip is described by the slogan: "We belong to the you go club" and "More tonic of fresh air and sunshine than you can get out of a bottle."

They remarked on the beauty and the cleanliness of the camp for tourists in Peterborough. They arrived here this morning from Gore's Landing where they were guests of Captain Harrison and will remain for about a week. They are undecided whether to go to Lakefield or Lindsay. This winter they are going to California or Florida, more likely Florida as Mr. Langlois believes the climate to be better there. California for scenery, he says, but Florida for climate.

He has nothing but praise for his wife. He says that she is a wonder, 78 years of age, worked hard all her life and is the mother of thirteen children. Unfortunately there are only three living. For this reason Mrs. Langlois says she hates white flowers and funerals.

Every where they have stopped they have been hosts to many visitors and enjoy having people stop in and see them as they are spending a very happy diamond honeymoon.

MARMORA VISITOR IS 90 YEARS OLD

er whom he says was temperate in every respect, Mr. Sweeney has never smoked. "I am uncommon in this respect I know", he remarked. His marriage dates back to February 7, 1866, when in Kemptville, he became the husband of Mary Ann McGovern, the officiating priest being Rev. Father W. Harty. Of eight children blessing the marriage, seven are living to-day. They are: John, James and Thomas of Chicago, Daniel of Spokane, Wash., Michael of Ottawa, Constantine of Montreal and Mrs. J. E. Gehan of Marmora.

Mr. Sweeney's father died at 76 and his mother at 65 but a sister was 91 at the time of her death and a brother lived to be 85. Farming and the buying of livestock for shipment to Ottawa, Montreal and New York have been Mr. Sweeney's occupations before his retirement. He was too busy at his life's calling to have time for public offices with this exception—he has served on the Oxford Township School Board for several terms. Though not a musician himself, he enjoys music and before defective vision came, reading was his main recreation. "Goodwill among men" is not meaningless with him. Though a devout Roman Catholic, his friendships embrace many of differing creed. In politics his interest is, to use his own words, just ordinary, with the readiness to do his own part for his party when required. One thing is indelible upon his memory and that is "The winter of the deep snow" as it is widely termed. In February of 1868 he recalls that it snowed continually day and night for thirteen days and that for seventeen days the sun was not seen. Stock perished in large numbers before food could be got to them.

Not long ago Mr. Sweeney made the acquaintance of a man who was a lumberman of that winter. In recalling the hardships, the latter stated that trees were cut to the level of the snow so that when the winter was past, stumps twelve feet high came to view. Impaired vision is Mr. Sweeney's only defect. "I have neither ache nor pain," he declares, and those for whom the days of the log house and the oxen span possess a charm may find much to their interest in a chat with this effable gentleman of ninety summers.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN LOWES.

(Examiner Correspondence)

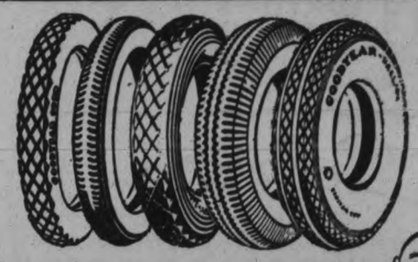
BETHANY, August 30.—On Tuesday afternoon neighbors, friends and relatives gathered at the home of Donald Lowes, Cavan, to pay their last respects to one who had been highly esteemed in this district, his mother, Mrs. John Lowes. Mrs. Lowes had passed away at Nichols Hospital, Peterborough, following a prolonged illness on Saturday night.

The service held in the home was in charge of Rev. James McMullen of Belleville, who has had charge of the pulpit work of the Rev. A. Poulter during the month of August.

Many beautiful floral tributes of sympathy rested upon the casket.

The pall bearers were: Mr. McNevan, William White, Otto Spencer, Harry Lee, Clifford Lowes and Hubert Lowes. Interment was in the 9th Line Cemetery beside her husband who predeceased her several years ago.

Left to mourn are one son, Donald, two small grandsons and one daughter, Mrs. Otto Spencer.



We Can Always Give You Your Size

IT costs money to carry a big stock of balloon tires. And there are so many sizes. If a tire merchant tries to carry two or three brands of tires, he can't carry all balloon sizes of each. He can't give service to all his customers. We specialize on Goodyears. We only need carry one brand. That helps keep our prices down. And we can always give you your size—always give you Goodyear quality and value. Goodyear prices are low right now.

WAKEFIELD SENDS ENGLISH CADETS

Sir Charles Pays Expenses of Team to Rifle Meet.

Sir Charles Wakefield has another splendid act to his credit, which he performs in the interests of the British Empire, when at his own expense, he sent twelve of the English O.T.C. Cadets to compete in the Dominion of Canada Rifle Associati n Meet.

Sir Charles had donated a Silver Challenge Cup for this competition. The English schools represented were Harrow, Glenalmond, and Clifton. The last named school sent members of the team which recently won at the meet held at Asburton. It is very likely that the Canadian boys will pay a return visit for competition in England next year.

Cow Raids Hornets Vanishes From Soo

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Aug. 30.—E. N. MacLeod, of Leeburn, east of the Soo, is searching for a two-year-old heifer which at last reports was heading down the centre of the Trunk Road, regardless of a mass of tourist traffic, for Toronto. MacLeod was driving a herd of cattle from Leeburn to Echo Bay and the heifer detached itself from the others to investigate a hornets' nest hanging on a low limb of a tree. When the cow nosed into the nest the hornets attacked her; she started east and has not yet been located.

PILE SUFFERERS

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting does not remove the cause?

Do you know the cause of piles is internal? That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is an internal remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID, sold by McDermid & Jury, Boyd's Drug Store and all druggists with guarantee of money back if it fails?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing he cause — stagnation of blood in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sick sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation.

SANITATION AIDS IN PARASITE FIGHT

Best Means of Preventing the Young Hogs From Being Infected.

One of the fortunate things about parasites is the fact that their presence does not affect the flesh of the host except from lack of fat. In practically every case these pests are confined to the internal organs. Unfortunately some of the internal organs are so constituted that it is almost impossible to give medicinal treatment without doing very serious damage to the animal. The lung worm, which is present in the lung, serves to illustrate this fact. Any medicine which will damage the worm will also damage the lung. Even if the treatment is successful, it cannot repair the damage which has been done to the lung. The same thing is true of the round worm of swine, which at one stage of its life lives in the lung. Two facts should be borne in mind before attempting treatment. First, infestation is spread by the mature animals, which in many cases show little if any sign of being infested.

Second, the resistance of young animals is very much less than mature animals, and the damage is therefore much greater. For example it has been found that after they reach four months of age, pigs are seldom infested by either lung or round worm. The majority of infestation takes place before weaning.

For these reasons the successful cure of parasites depends on a combination of medicine and sanitation. Medicine for the mature animal; sanitation for the young. A system which embodies these principels has been developed in the States, and has proved both successful and practical. This is known as the McLean County System. Farmers using this system have been able to reduce the number of runts from eighteen per hundred to one per hundred; ninety-eight per cent. of the pigs farrowed were saved. When four months old McLean pigs weighed 28 pounds more than those raised without sanitation and were ready for the market seven weeks earlier.

With very little outlay of time and money farmers of Eastern Ontario can obtain the same results by following this system, four steps are necessary:

1. Three weeks before farrowing, give the sow a dose of some effective worm medicine.

2. One week before farrowing wash out her pen with boiling water and lye, using one pound of lye to thirty gallons of water.

3. Wash sow with soap and water before placing her in the clean pen, being especially careful with her sides and udder.

4. When pigs are two weeks old move both sow and litter to clean pasture on which no pigs have run previously. To be effective the sow and her litter must be hauled to the pasture, not driven.

Results from this treatment depend entirely on the care which is taken with each step. Eggs are passed so profusely that even walking through the barnyard may be sufficient to give the young pigs a bad dose of worms.

The only people worms benefit are the feed men.

Plan to attend the demonstration to be held at Scott's Corners, Friday, August 31, at 1.00 p.m. For further particulars see J. B. Nelson, Agricultural Representative, Peterborough.

Burnbrae

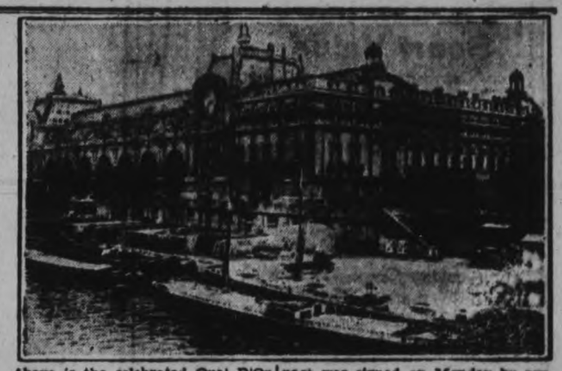
(Examiner Correspondence.)

BURNBRAE, August 30. — A former pastor of the Seymour and Rylstone charge, Rev. J. J. Black, of Barrie, with Mrs. Black and family, spent a few days visiting friends and former parishioners over the week-end. On Sunday, Mr. Black took charge of the afternoon service at Hoard's United Church, while in the evening he addressed his former congregation at Rylstone. Although both were impromptu events on Mr. Black's part, the services were none the less enjoyable to those who have never forgotten their boyish Scottish minister.

Miss Mabel Stewart and brother, Walker Stewart, of Guelph, have been spending some days visiting relatives and friends here.

Under supervision of the Ladies' Aid and Managing Board, the work of re-decorating the auditorium of St. Andrew's Church is nearing completion, and the church will be opened for service on the first Sabbath in September. Mr. Murphy, interior decorator, of Stirling, has been in charge of the work, and his artistry has given universal satisfaction.

Threshing is the order of the day, and local farmers are very busy with this job and the finish of the harvest.



Above is the celebrated Quai D'Orsay, headquarters of French diplomacy, where the Kellogg anti-war pact was signed on Monday by representatives of fifteen nations, including Premier Mackenzie King of Canada.

The regular monthly meeting of the Cheerful Workers' Bible Class of St. James' Sunday School was held at the home of Mrs. H. Welbourne, 323 Sherbrooke Street, on Tuesday evening, with a very good attendance. The program included a reading by Mrs. T. Byers and a piano solo by Mrs. J. A. Brumwell, also a contest which caused a great deal of merriment, first prize going to Mrs. T. Byers and Mrs. W. Atkinson, and consolation to Mrs. Rae and Mrs. Close. The business of the fall was then discussed, after which dainty refreshments were served.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

LONGER SILK STOCKINGS do not excuse the absence of underthings from a woman's dress. I think the question addressed to me this week in this regard is absurd.

• • • • • • •

What a girl weighs, or whether or not her legs are straight, makes not difference, L. H. Our custom demands that she be adequately covered.

• • • • • • •

On the other hand the display of pink and green and purple which one sees when women sit down and cross their knees is in the poorest taste.

Underwear is never attractive, whether it be seen on limbs, shoulders, or clothes line.

• • • • • • •

It is not a question of morals. There is nothing morally wrong with a woman's displaying her bloomers in a hotel rotunda, on a deck chair, on her own verandah, or anywhere else she chooses.

• • • • • • •

But it is a long way from being good taste.

• • • • • • •

Here is another instance of bad taste.

• • • • • • •

In the dining saloon of a C.P.R. steamer the other day at dinner, a woman started smoking a cigarette just as soon as her demi-tasse was served.

• • • • • • •

No gentleman, even, should have smoked in the crowded dining room, with so many women present. But in extreme exercise of that new-won freedom of hers, this woman ignored a tradition the males built up for her protection during her years of repression.

• • • • • • •

She was a very silly woman.

• • • • • • •

No because there was anything morally wrong in her smoking, of course, but because it was very poor taste.

• • • • • • •

On the steamer's' deck I noticed a youthful matron wearing a cute little white felt hat with little black dogs chasing one another around it to form a band.

• • • • • • •

Another young lady was appropriately dressed in a steel-blue knitted costume, the only decoration on which was an appliqued ship forming a pocket.

• • • • • • •

One girl wore a gown with fur trimming to dinner in the sun-warmed dining saloon, and later appeared by moonlight on the breeze-swept deck in a silky white frock without sleeves.

• • • • • • •

Is it any wonder they call us the inconsistent sex?

• • • • • • •

There's no doubt but that aboard ship is the place to breed romance. Everything is so informal that everyone meets everyone, and bridge parties hiking parties, and just ordinary twosomes are quickly organized.

• • • • • • •

Two girls who boarded the ship express at Toronto were speedily escorted by white-sweatered young men, and the quartette seemed to thoroughly enjoy watching the prow of the steamer cleave the moonlit waters of Georgian Bay as they leaned over the forecastle rail.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Wearable and attractive is the black satin negligee with deep fringe at the lower edge. The embroidery on the sides is done in characteristic Chinese coloring.

By MARY MARSHALL.

Never were negligees more elaborate, gorgeous or more tempting than they are at present. There are lovely frilly ones of lace and chiffon with trailing skirt drapery and flowing sleeves that are more alluring than any of the new evening frocks, and there are richly brocaded negligees trimmed with gold and sometimes lined or faced with fur that would compare in richness of fabric and smartness of line with the new evening wraps. In fact, some of these new velvet and fur negligees are intended to be used for evening wraps also.

So gorgeous are these negligee collections that the girl bent on buying a negligee or two for her boarding school or college trousseau is rather nonplussed. And yet as she timidly makes known her wants to the woman who sells these lovely things she acquires by proximity a desire for something not too severe, something practical, of course, but not without a touch of coquetry as well. A season or so ago there was a fad among the college girls for men's bathrobes made of fine striped English flannel. But these new college girls want something different.

There are new coolie coats made of figured, vari-colored brocaded silk that might fill the bill. Less expensive coolie coats are made of printed challis, either wool or cotton. There are silk-covered quilted negligees with rather gorgeous embroidery mingling colors with gold threads — very warm and snuggly. Velvet models lined with silk and cheaper unlined velveteens in rich deep blues, purples, greens, etc.

The negligee shown in the sketch to-day is of black satin with deep fringe—a model that has been chosen by a number of college girls.

MARION'S MAIL.

"Dear Marion:

Just to give you an appreciation of your interesting page. It is fine and improving all the time.

Here is something that probably you might use. A number of families in Peterborough and a few in Otonabee visit each other's homes once or twice a week in card season and hold card parties with small prizes. They have a fine time. They also find out when each other's anniversaries fall—five years, ten years, twenty-five years married, etc. Then one family gives the use of the home, all donate a small sum and something substantial is purchased. All help with lunch, and lo! the anniversary is observed so nicely, and no trouble to the ones who are celebrating. Most folks would celebrate, only for two reasons: (1) the fear that folks would think that the wish for gifts is the reason for the celebration, and (2) all the fuss and trouble it entails. Don't you think those folks' plan is splendid If you discuss it, the idea might spread.

Yours for continued success,

OTONABEE."

Yes, indeed, "Otonabee," I do think the idea splendid. I look beyond the purely personal pleasure, too, and see a community more closely knitted together through this lovely way of celebrating the important events in the lives of its members.

I sometimes think there is too little made of anniversaries. I think I would be looking forward to my fifth or tenth or twenty-fifth wedding anniversary as an occasion to celebrate, and every period like that would be the occasion for a backward glance over happy years. I may get the opportunity!

What do you think of "Otonabee's plan, readers

• • •

"Dear Marion:

I have been reading your wonderful answers in the paper and find them full of good advice.

I have been going with a young man for nine months and like him very much. I am only 17, and he is 21. He asked me to marry him. He is a very good boy, and my people find him the same, and I know if I marry him him I will never worry. My mother does not want me to marry him as she thinks I am too young, but I am sure in my own mind, and would love to marry him. I know he would like me to marry him. His position calls him to the States. I am sure if if I can't marry him I will never be happy. Please advise me what to do?

GOLDY?"

Seventeen-year-old weddings are no longer unique, but don't you think, Goldy, it would be worth waiting a little while in order to ertain your mother's love and respect? After all, at seventeen you have ages of life ahead of you, and at twenty-one your friends is just starting his business life.

How would it be for you to wait until he gets settled in the States. It's not such an awful distance from Peterborough to anywhere there, and you will both be assured, then, of having nothing in the way of mundane things to worry about. Write to him often, and see that he writes often to you. One recalls the many marriages in war time, when young folks hurried into wedlock just before the boy left for overseas. Most, of them turned out happily, and probably those in which the boy failed to return were not all sadness, but there is no such urge in your case.

Frankly, I would advise you to wait a few months at least.

"SALADA" TEA

368

A Tip or Two

A handy twine holder is a small funnel, suspended from the kitchen wall in a convenient place by the small ring attached to it; place the ball of twine inside and run the end of the string out through the funnel end.

Vacuum Cleaner.

If you use your vacuum cleaner on your mattresses every week it will not only keep them clean, but fluffy.

Uncovered Vegetables.

Vegetables should be cooked in little water, and uncovered. This lets them retain their coloring. Most people cook vegetables too long. For the best food values, cook a very short time.

Bright Umbrellas.

Wash your umbrella every once in a while. Open and use nail brush dipped in warm ammonia water. If spotted, soap suds can be used. Turn the bath shower on to rinse.

Jelly Salad.

A delicious and cool-looking salad is made by combining cucumbers and pineapple in a clear jelly salad. Slice the cucumbers as thin as possible and grate the pineapple. Serve chilled on lettuce, with mayonnaise at the side. Garnish with pimento.

Luncheon Dish.

Fried slices of tomato makes an attractive luncheon dish when served on toast, covered with cheese sauce and garnished with two grilled slices of bacon.

ORANGE JAM.

Very nice for those who like a sweet with their toast for breakfast. Slice very thin and seed 12 oranges. Pour over them 3 quarts of cold water and let stand for 6 hours. Then add 6 pounds of sugar and simmer until thick.

LOOSE TILES.

If you find the floor or fireplace tiles to be a little loose, fix them immediately before they are lost. A little plaster of Paris mixed with vinegar to a paste should be placed on the loose tiles and the tiles then cemented into place. Protect them from footsteps until they are thoroughly hardened.

Raybestos Win 18-1 Decision From Napanee

ONE BIG INNING PUTS VISITORS FAR IN LEAD OVER HOME TEAM

Brakeliners Score Twelve Runs in Third and Win Out 18-1.

POOR DIAMOND.

Long Grass in Infield Enables Rays To Use Bunting Game Effectively.

Scoring twelve runs in the third frame of their second round O.B.A.A. game at Napanee yesterday afternoon Raybestos won easily against the Lennox and Addington champions by the score of 18 to 1. Byrons, who started on the mound for Napanee, was wild and the Rays pounded him out in the third. Bentley, the relieving hurler, was greeted by Barry with a triple that scored three runs, but for the remainder of the game the Rays were unable to break away again.

The playing field was terrible. Freshly-mown hay lay over the field and oddly enough the Napanee infield got the worst of the deal. They could not handle the Rays' infield taps, and on one occasion the ball was lost inside the runway.

Maudsley Fans Twelve.

Scotty Maudsley was in top form. He fanned twelve batsmen, whiffing the side in order in the third and eighth, and did not issue a pass. The Rays' left-hander also was given great support, the infield playing a remarkable game throughout. Napanee fans while regretting the off-day experienced by their team, were loud in praise of the visitors' work in the field and at bat.

Big Ed. Barry was prominent in the third when Rays scored a dozen runs, his single and triple driving in five counters. An error at short, allowed Rogers, first up in the third, to reach the bag. Maudsley hit and Scully walked to load the sacks. All three runners had a big lead when Moore grounded down short. But the second baseman allowed the throw to get away, and Rogers and Maudsley counted. Corrin singled to left to score Scully, and Barry's drive to right tallied Moore and Corrin. Oscar Nicholls tripled to score Barry, and went in on H. Nicholls' hit. There were seven runs in and nobody out. Deb. Hillier forced H. Nicholls at second, and Rogers doubled to score Hillier. Maudsley popped to the shortstop. Scully and Moore were passed to put three on. Corrin was hit, forcing in Rogers. Bentley replaced Byrons, and Barry tripled to the centerfield fence to clear the runways. O. Nicholls was thrown out to retire the side. Sixteen batsmen were up in this frame. There were three passes, a hit-by-pitcher, seven hits, and two errors.

The second game will be played at Exhibition Park on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

COLLINS PITCHES DOUBLE VICTORY

Allows Reading Three Hits in Sixteen Innings Yesterday.

TORONTO, Ont., August 30. — Rip Collins returned to the form of his best Major League days again yesterday as he mowed down the Reading Keys to score a double victory in the final games of the season between the two teams.

In wading through the finest day's work for any pitcher in the league this season, or any other, Collins held the Keys to one hit in the nine innings of the first game of the twin bill and to two hits in the seven innings of the second game.

Three hits in sixteen innings and three bases on balls in the same space of time made up the Keys' offensive strength against the Texan and he not only hurled the Leafs to 2-0 and 4-1 ins, but he hurled them back to within a half game of the International leadership. Eight members of the Chicago farm bit the dust by the strike out route in the first game and five in the second.

Three Canadian Girls Finish Course In Third Wrigley Marathon Swim

LAKE SHORE, Toronto, Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press).—Although swimmers from the United States captured chief honors in the Wrigley Marathon swim, won yesterday by Ethel Hertle, of New York, three plucky Canadian girls finished the course.

They were led by Helen Fernandes Galand, of Ottawa, Ont., who passed the finish line eighth, Daisy King-Shaw, of Shawinigan Falls, Que., who came in fourteenth, and Edith Louise Hardy of Toronto fifteenth.

Miss Galand throughout several weeks of training locally was looked upon a strong contender and her showing yesterday was considered very creditable by Johnny Walker, the young girl's trainer. Miss Shaw has had considerable experience in long distance swims and was one of the competitors in the mixed marathon held last year.

In difficulties from cramps on the second lap, Miss Hardy, the only Toronto girl to finish was swimming strongly as she finished. Miss Hardy begged to be assisted from the water on her second round the rectangular course but on being encouraged by her trainer, managed to continue the long struggle. Soon afterwards the cramps were overcome and she finished in good condition.

Gertrude (Trudie) Ederle favorite for winner of the women's section of the third Wrigley Marathon who finished fifth in the gruelling grind yesterday.

British Cricket Team Completed

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 30 (Canadian Press Cable).—The English cricket team which will visit Australia next winter has now been completed by the selection of G. Geary, the Leicestershire bowler. BISONS WIN DOUBLE BILL Defeat Orioles in Double-header After Two Stormy Sessions.

FIRST BY FORFEIT.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press.)— The Buffalo Bisons captured two stormy games from the Baltimore Orioles yesterday, the first decided by forfeit 9 to 0, when the attention of Umpires Meyers and Gaston was called to the fact that Jack Dunn was in the runway of the playing field while under a five day suspension.

Play was halted after the Orioles had played their half of the seventh innings and were leading, 3 to 0. For record purposes the game reverts to even innings, giving the Birds a two run advantage. Jack Dunn's cup of grief was filled to overflowing when Archdeacon, his cast-off outfielder, rapped a home run which gave the Bisons victory in the second skirmish by a score of 5 to 4.

Hollingsworth, former Bison, pitched five innings of this game and was touched for eight hits, among them two terrific homers by Al Moore, both with the bases empty.

Montreal Wins From Jersey City.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press.) — Montreal took the third and final game of the series here from Jersey City yesterday afternoon, 4-3 and moved into fifth place over the slipping Orioles. The clean sweep of the series gave the Royals 13 out of 24 games with the Cats this year. Buckalew pitched a good game, allowing but five hits and none up till the fifth, but the Cats jumped on him for a single and a triple in the sixth, which coupled with some poor fielding by Tom Gulley, resulted in three runs. With the tying run on second base, Eddie Murphy juggled Gilhooley's fly but finally held on to the ball and the Cats' rally was choked off.

PHILADELPHIA GAIN ON YANKS

Defeat White Sox 6-2 To Reduce Lead of New Yorkers.

WIN FOUR OUT OF FIVE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press.)— The Athletics reduced the lead of the Yankees to two and one half games by winning the last clash of the series from the White Sox by 6 to 2 at Philadelphia yesterday, while the champions were idle. The victory gave the Mackmen four out of five on the series, and slashed the lead of the Yanks to the lowest point it has reached since the teams really settled into the race.

The Athletics hammered Ted Lyons almost at will. George Walberg seemed unsteady, and retired to let Ty Cobb bat for him in the fourth. Eddie Rommel then came to the box and held the Sox hitless through the last five innings.

Cleveland hammered Lil Stoner and Kenneth Holloway freely and took the second game of the series from the Tigers at Detroit, 9 to 5. George Burns hit two home runs over the left field fence, the first one with a runner on base. Joe Shaute, the Cleveland left hander, pitched the entire distance.

St. Louis took the final game of the series from Boston four to three, making it four out of five for their visit at the Hub. Stewart pitched effectively until the ninth when after Loepp and Williams singled with one out he was relieved by Blaeholder and Regan hit into a double play, ending the game. Outfielder George Loepp, recalled by the Red Sox from Pittsfield, played at right field and made a favorable impression in all round play.

TAYLOR DENIES BEING KIDNAPED

Could Have Left Lachance Any Time He Wanted To, He Says.

PARENTS RELIEVED.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 30.—Pat Taylor, Cobourg lad, missing from his home for three weeks and alleged to have been kidnapped by a man named Lachane, last night slept in a nice soft bed in the Woodstock Children's Shelter.

At noon yesterday he was brought to the city along with his alleged abductor, who gave the name of McGath when registered in the Oxford County Jail. Pat had previously given the name of James Livingstone when detained by the police, but the moment he was alone with the constable on his way to the Shelter, he admitted after questioning that he was the much-sought-after boy.

Officials from Cobourg arrived here this morning to take the man and boy back to Cobourg, where Lachance or McGath is wanted on a theft charge.

Pat Taylor was interviewed at the Shelter yesterday. After much questioning, he stated first, last and all the time that talk of Lachance having kidnapped him was not right. "I could have left this man the first night after I left home," he stated. "I was after a job down in Cobourg, and while in swimming just happened to meet him. He told me he was a surveyor and offered me a job. I was with him in Cobourg for a week or so before we left home."

Surveyed All Along Route.

Further questioning elicited the information that surveying was Lachance's occupation while in Cobourg and during the trip which extended from Oshawa to Toronto, on to Galt, Brantford and finally ended yesterday morning at a little village just eight miles south of Woodstock.

It was a long story that young Taylor gave out at the Shelter. "Mother knew I was going away," he said, "but she did not think I would be away long. After we left Cobourg we did a little surveying along the road towards Toronto, and aided by a number of lifts from motorists, landed in Toronto."

Asked as to how he was fixed financially, when he left home, the boy said he had twenty-five cents and since then had been given the odd dollar or so by Lachance. Pat said Lechance never discussed religious topics or he had never heard him refer to himself as a monk.

After leaving Toronto, according to the boy, the next stop was Weston. Here the same old steel tape was used for "surveying operations."

The boy could not remember Lachance ever having in his possession any other surveyor's paraphernalia outside of this steel tape. When questioned closely about the surveying, Pat would refer to Lachance.

Relief to Parents

The location of Pat Taylor by High Constable Markle yesterday brought relief to an anxious father and mother in Cobourg, who since August 10, nearly three weeks ago, have been anxiously awaiting news of their missing son. Each day has brought various rumors. On Tuesday, Mrs. Taylor received a letter from her son, dated in Brantford on August 27, which was the first definite trace of him. He said in the letter that he was well and planned to attend the Exhibition in Toronto and return to Cobourg in time for the reopening of school on September 4. The letter had given a forwarding address in Niagara Falls, the investigation of which added no light, but rather a touch of mystery to the disappearance, owing to the fact that the people at that address did not know of anyone in Cobourg.

Reports from Cobourg stated that Lachance represented himself as a "Government surveyor" and that Taylor left to become his assistant. He was to have worked with him on a surveying job near Weston.

EMPIRE'S LARGEST PASSENGER ENGINE

A new Canadian Pacific passenger engine, the largest in the British Empire, which has just issued from the Angus shops at Montreal. The total weight is 424,000 pounds, its length is over 90 feet with the tender, it has four driving wheels, 75 inches in diameter, and can develop attractive effort of 60,800 pounds equal to 3,685 horse power.

MAMMOTH ENGINE LEAVES ANGUS SHOP

Canadian Pacific Has Largest Passenger Engine in Empire.

MONTREAL, August 29. — The largest passenger locomotive in the British Empire has emerged from Angus Shops under her own steam, and close to eight thousand employees, most of whom have contributed something to her creation, stopped to cheer as her throttle gently opened for the first time, she moved slowly forward. She is a triumph of Canadian design and engineering craftsmanship; a graceful mechanism, nearly one hundred feet long, with a tractive effort of 60,800 pounds, equal to 3685 horse power.

The new K-I Class locomotive has been built from designs originated in the motive power department of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the company's own shops by its own employees. Two of these engines have been constructed and they will first be operated on the Montreal-Toronto run.

Although its weight, 424,000 pounds, is greater than that of any other passenger engine in Canada, the extensive use of Canadian nickle steel parts has reduced it to a minimum, and the high ratio of tractive power to weight is a notable feature of the new engine. Other features are a one piece cast steel locomotive bed; a tender with a water bottom underframe; boiler pressure of 275 pounds, the highest of any locomotive in Canada; and a length of engine and tender of 97 feet 5 inches. There are eight pairs of wheels, a four wheel leading truck, eight drivers, and a four wheel trailing truck. The drive wheels have a diameter of 75 inches, and the cast nickle steel cylinders are 25½ inches by 30 inches. The coal capacity is 18½ tons, and water capacity 12,000 gallons. A mechanical stoker considerably lightens the duties of the fireman.

The new design aimed at largely increased power, reduction of weight, and elimination of parts. The result has shown that Canadian technical skill and workmanship is equal to the task of putting a fully equipped engine of the best type under its own power, and that the Canadian Pacific Angus shops, the second largest on the continent, are capable of vieing successfully with recognized engine building plants anywhere in the world.

TROOPS OCCUPY MISSION BUILDINGS

Communists Leading Anti-Foreign Movement at Taimanfu.

PEKING, Aug. 30. — (Canadian Press.)—An anti-foreign movement led by Communists was reported today from Taimanfu, seat of the Shantung Province Provisional Government since the Japanese occupied Tsinan.

Official despatches said troops occupied the British and American mission buildings.

A letter received by the Methodist Episcopal Mission here said that the Taimanfu missions were occupied last week by Nationalist troops, but three American mission workers were not disturbed.

Peter Maher was one of the greatest hitters who ever stepped into the ring, but he lacked judgment in planting his blows, and worse still he had little confidence in his own ability.

One of the athletic wonders of nearly half a century ago was Lou E. Meyers, who ran for the Manhattan ...C., of New York. At any distance from 100 yards to a mile Meyers was almost invincible.

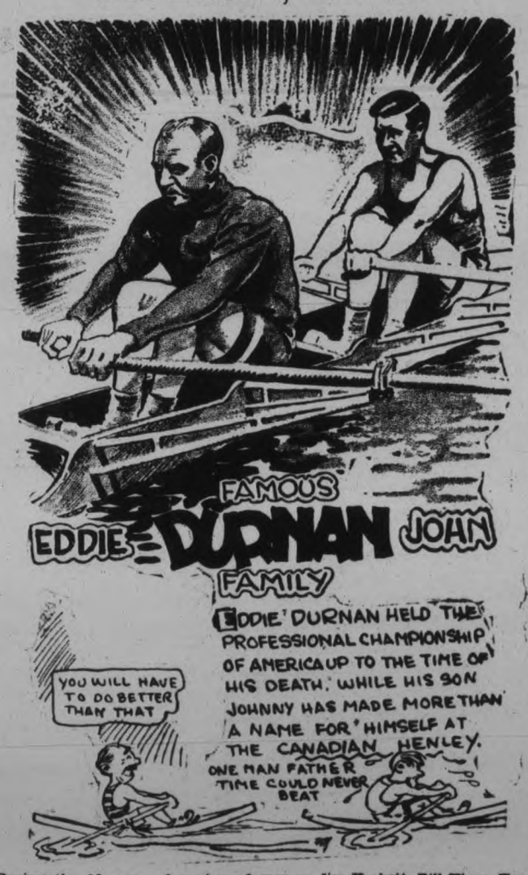
LIKE FATHE R, LIKE SON



During the 36 years of rowing of the late Eddie Durnan, who was senior professional champion of America, he succeeded in accomplishing a feat that has never been equalled in the annals of rowing on this continent. In his first open race at Detroit he romped off with two senior titles and two junior titles all in the same regatta; this is a record that never has been duplicated.

In the same year the famous Joe Wright, Senior, was making a name for himself at the Washington Regatta, and Fred Thompson was cleaning up at Barrie. That fall a race was rowed at Sunnyside, Toronto, all three taking part. Again the unbeatable Eddie came down in front.

From then on Eddie's rowing ventures took him all over the world. He rowed his first professional race at Boston, July 4, 1893, when he made a monkey out of Erastus Rogers. Jim Teneyck, and George Hosmer. In the succeeding years he trimmed such men as Jim Hackett, Bill Hines, Tom Sullivan, Frank Greer, and Mark Lynch.

Last year, a few months before he passed away, Eddie accepted a challenge from Wachter of Boston to race for the senior professional championship of the world. Wachter wanted Durnan to race for $500 a side in Boston, but Eddie wasn't asleep. He was the champion and so he said if Wachter wanted to race he would take him on for $1,000 a side in Toronto. Eddie got no reply from the challenger.

Eddie passed on the art of rowing to his son at an early age. Young Johnny rowed at sewen and won his first race in 1919 at the Dominion Day regatta at the age of seventeen. In 1920 he carried off the association singles and was the senior Canadian singles champion in 1924 and 1925, besides being considered one of the famous Joe Wright's most feared opponents.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

ALL-DAY SUCKERS IN ELECTION CAMPAIGN.

Charlie Murray electioneers with a canron, with home brew, with all-day suckers for babies and five-cent cigars for men in "The Head Man" at the Regent Theatre.

A combination of the methods used in Chicago, in New York, in any stronghold of the woman's vote, and in the old days when the five-center was a good smoke!

"The Head Man" is a mirthful and human screen dramatization of the famous novel by Harry Leon Wilson "The Boss of Little Arcady." Murray is featured in the title role of the picture, which Eddie Cline directed for First National.

Loretta Young and Larry Kent carry the love interest, Lucien Littlefield enacts the role of Murray's village crony in the story; Martha Mattox and Rosa Gore are the famous twins, and Dot Farley is the tank-town social leader. E. J. Ratcliffe, Harvey Clark and Irving Bacon are politicians.

THRILLING PICTURE.

"The Night Flyer," a Railroad Story of the Early West.

For many years, Western photoplays have been regarded as the most thrilling type of movies. Second to these, the railroad stories have probably brought more actual thrills to the screen than any other pictures.

James Cruze is one of the first directors to perceive the possibilities of combining the two. In "The Night Flyer," a Cruze production starring William Boyd and which comes to the Regent Theatre Friday, a small frontier railway centre of half a century ago is the setting.

Pistol fights, holdups and a great railroad wreck vie with each other for thrill precedence. Mr. Boyd and Jobyna Ralston, hero and leading lady of "The Night Flyer," are the central figures of a charming love romance, and participate in a number of highly exciting sequences of real Western and railroad drama.

Philo McCullough, Ann Schaeffer, and De Witt Jennings are in the supporting cast.

MEETING AND PARTING

Sweet as roseate dawn, after night's sable shadows,
Or radiant sunshine, dispelling dull rain,
'Tis, after long years of unsolaced absence,
To meet, with fond greetings, the old friends, again.

Life holds for us here, no more exquisite pleasure,
A more unselfish joy, or a purer than this;
Nor Heaven, in kindness, to mortal yet given,
A sweeter draught, from the cup of bliss.

The friends of our youth, are our friends forever,
Though our meetings be seldom and far, far apart,
For fate, nor fortune, nor time, nor distance
Can change, or estrange, a true, constant heart.

What, if many the miles, and the long years that sunder
True hearts, full soon, will their memory decay,
And friendships warm smiles, and tender greetings,
Atone for the past, and it's sorrows repay.

Oh, bright, but brief, are our hours of gladness,
Lost, in sadness of farewell, and falling tear;
Life's fabric is woven of Sunshine and Shadow,
And all meetings are followed, by partings here.

But, beyond the clouds, there's a world where parting
Through ages, unending, can never be,
Where friend with friend, shall be reunited
In mansions of bliss, by the Crystal Sea.

Full swiftly the sands of time are sinking,
And our earthly meetings will soon be o'er,
Heaven grant us a happy meeting yonder
With those we held dear, in the bright days of yore.

BANFF, LAKE LOUISE AND THE CANADIAN ROCKIES

A region which can offer the finest in natural beauty is the one which makes a direct appeal to the vacationist. If that region has good hotel accommodation and every facility for vacation enjoyment, then greater becomes the appeal.

For the person taking a late August or September vacation no better choice could be made than that of Banff and Lake Louise in the heart of the Canadian Rockies. There one can enjoy the finest of golf, tennis, horseback riding, mountain climbing—and how exhilarating, the warm pools afterward.

Your stay at the world renowned Banff Springs Hotel or Chateau Lake Louise will be a delight long remembered.

Holders Of U. S. Bonds To Have Tax Deducted

The National City Company Limited has recently issued a circular memorandum calling attention of investors generally to the effect of the United States 1928 Federal Revenue Act, insofar as it affects Canadian holders of bonds issued by United States corporations.

Many Canadian investors hold securities of American corporations. The holders of these bonds will now find that a deduction on account of the United States Normal Income Tax will be made when their interest coupons are presented for payment.

The National City Company point out in their circular that in the great majority of cases the amount collected from the individual investor will ultimately be refunded to him by the United States Government, and that the net result of the new law will be the inconvenience it will cause.

The company has made a study of the new legislation, and has undertaken to advise investors of its effect if any, upon their investments.

Wheat Prices Rally After Weak Opening

CHICAGO, August 30 (Canadian Press). — Still readily influenced by small sales, wheat prices eased a little under scattered selling at the opening to-day, but rallied later and stayed near yesterday's closing figures. The opening was unchanged to ⅝ cent lower. September corn slumped 1⅜ cents below yesterday's finish but short covering and fair support from commission house buyers restored trading to yesterday's level. Corn opened irregular, ¼ cent higher to 1⅜ cents lower, with December unchanged and March showing small gains. Oats ruled about steady and provisions relatively easy.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 110⅜, December 116¼. Corn, September 95, December 75. Oats September 38⅝, December 40⅜.

News From the Mines

Through
Solloway, Mills & Company

Noranda.

TORONTO, Aug. 29.—According to advice received from the north last night from a most reliable source, Noranda is drilling vertically from the 975 foot horizon in the "H" ore body cut 160 feet of ore running better than $50 a ton, with the drill still in ore when last reported. This is of extreme importance as should this continuation of the "H" ore body prove to be equally as large as on the 975 foot horizon, it will add an additional $120,000,000 to the indicated reserves of this mine.

The No. 3 shaft is handling about 1,200 tons of ore and rock daily. When the present development is completed, it is thought that with just running ore from the upper levels the shaft may be good for 1,800 tons daily, where practically all the smelter feed is coming from at this time.

The rumoured cutting of the "B" ore body on the 1,300 foot level with diamond drill, if correct, is of more than ordinary importance, as since A, C and D bodies cluster about this one on the upper levels, it is thought that their depth possibilities are equally as good as B.

Amulet.

A report from our field man in Rouyn states that this company are contemplating putting up a raise on the D ore body which from present indications would appear to be fairly shallow. The roof of the crosscut which was driven to intersect this ore body showed some ore, and a raise will be put up here. Some trouble is being encountered in diamond drilling on the north showing. This difficulty is caused by a heavy overburden and large boulders and it is understood the drill is being pulled and moved to another location. Diamond drilling is proceeding on the No. 3 ore area.

Moffatt Hall.

At the shareholders' meeting in Haileybury this week the agreement whereby Porcupine Mines secures control of this property was ratified. The agreement calls for the formation of a new company and shareholders will receive one new for each two old now held. McIntyre is to furnish the treasury with money through taking up stock options. Should the deal be carried through to completion, McIntyre will have spent $1,000,000 on this property for a 58 per cent. interest.

Lake Shore.

The drift on the 1,600 foot level of Lake Shore is practically within 200 feet of the Teck-Hughes line. While no efforts have recently been made towards determining the width of the deposit at this point, a cut driven across the vein a short time ago showed a width of 40 feet composed of high grade ore.

Drifting at the 800 foot horizon has been going ahead rapidly and is now in about 400 feet. Work continues in good ore and results are said to be somewhat better than officially anticipated. We understand the hoist is being reset preparatory to continuing the No. 3 shaft to the 2,000 foot objective, where it will be connected with the No. 1 now at 1,600 feet by drive and a raise.

Millheads are stated to be running close to $20 a ton, while costs are being held around $6. Profits obtaining at the present time with production at the rate of around 1,000 tons daily should run close to $4,000,000 a year or $2 a share.

U. S. GOLFERS START BADLY

Three of Four Pairs Down at First Turn in 36-Hole Foursome.

OTHER PAIR LEADS.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press).—United States started poorly in the first clash with Great Britain for the Walker Cup to-day, three of the four pairs of local golfers being down at the first turn in the 36 hole two-ball foursome.

The fourth American pair, Von Elm and Sweetzer, were two up at the quarter on Perkins and Tweddel, 1928 and 1927 British amateur champions.

Standing in the other matches at the quarter point was, Hezlet and Hope, Britain, two up on Bobby Jones and Chick Evans; A. Torrance and Storey one up on Francis Ouimet and Jimmy Johnston; John Beck and A. R. MacCallum, Brittain, leading Walter Gunn and Roland Mackenzie.

CURTIS ATTACKS DEMOCRATS' PLAN

Says Lowered Tariff Would Have Disastrous Effect On Farmers.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 30. —(Canadian Press).— The Democratic tariff policy, particularly as related to agriculturie, was attacked by Senator Curtis, Republican vice-presidential nominee, in a speech prepared for delivery to-day before the members of the National Grange. He declared if the Democrats were elected nothing could be expected but immediate low revision of the tariff, and went on to outline the disastrous effects of such action to United States farmers.

SWIMS CHANNEL.

Miss Ivy Hawks of London entered the water at Cape Griz Nez at 9.50 on a Saturday, and at 5.17 on Sunday she touched the rocks at Hope Point, near Kingsdown, England. Miss Hawks was rather discouraged at the outset by the fact that Frank Perks of Birmingham, who left Cape Griz Nez a few minutes after she had done, overhauled her and seemed to be going strongly for victory. But it was the tortoise that won. Perks so expended his energy that he was forced to give up his attempt when five miles from the English coast. Miss Hawks is the 14th to swim the Channel.

PENNSYLVANIANS AT CHEMONG PARK

This Famous Band Will Play For Over Two Weeks, Starting Sept. 4.

There is coming to the Chemong Pavilion, commencing with Tuesday night, September 4th, for two weeks or more, Walker's Pennsylvanians, an exceptional eight-piece band.

This band has had a number of very important engagements across the border. The spring engagements was with the Hotel Floridian, at Miami Beach. They were also with the Road House Inn, at Pittsburgh, and were taken from this engagement to fill a twelve-week engagement on Keith's vaudeville circuit.

The management of the Chemong Pavilion is extremely anxious to give its patrons the very best music procurable, and the engagement of this high class band to some extent is with a view of trying out music lovers in the hope of having the band for the 1929 season throughout.

Roberts and his Ohioans give their farewell program on Monday (Labor Day) night. This orchestra has given excellent satisfaction throughout the season and there will no doubt be a big crowd on hand for their farewell.

Walker's Band starts right in on Tuesday and even those who do not dance are invited to hear this music.

FLIGHT ABANDONED AS PLANE CRASHES

Pilot Escapes Uninjured, But Government Decides To Ship Planes Home.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 30 (Canadian Press).—The homeward flight of the research seaplanes which have been exploring Hudson Straits district for more than a year has been abandoned, following the crash of one plane between Sugluk and Erie Cove yesterday. The pilot was uninjured.

The Department of Marine has decided that as weather conditions are likely to continue unfavorable and the only purpose of the flight is to bring the planes home, and there is nothing to be gained by taking chances, therefore the planes will be shipped by steamer and the men come home the same way.

ABOUT THE SWIM.

"Oh, well, you've got to crawl before you can walk," as someone remarked when Hertle and Gattendam climbed out after winning the big swim.

The relief that came with the discovery that Lamprey eels had deserted the course was quickly replaced by consternation in the mind of Pigskin Peters when a wisecracker suggested the approach of sea fleas.

$1,000 a mile! Wonder what the bird was figuring on when he set out to conquer the Atlantic?

To grease or not to grease — the winners didn't but as one of the other girls remarked, "We've got to make up for the cold somehow."

IN MEMORIAM

FROST.—In loving memory of Pte. Arthur Frost, 93rd Battalion, killed in action, August 30, 1918.
As we stood on the station platform
That day twelve years ago,
And watched the train go round the bend
With the ones that we loved so.
Years have passed since the cable came:
It told us his race was run.
There was nothing left but an honored name
And a grave for our dearly-loved son.

SAYS CANADA NEEDS MORE IMMIGRANTS

RUSSIA ACCEPTS ANTI-WAR PACT

Litvinoff Sends Note

Says Pact Imposes Obligation Although Vaguely Worded.

WANTS DISARMAMENT.

Adherence Will Give Soviet Opportunity To Advance Cause of Peace.

MOSCOW, Aug. 31. — (Canadian Press.)—Soviet Russia has consented to adhere to the Kellogg-Briand renunciation of war pact. Acting Foreign Commissar Litvinoff to-day handed to the French Ambasador the answer of the Soviet Government to the invitation extended through France. The note says while the pact is vague and without provision for disarmament yet "it does impose certain obligations upon the countries before the bar of public opinion and simultaneously gives the Soviet Union a new possibility of submitting to all signatory nations the question of greatest importance to the cause of peace, that of disarmament."

CORNER STONE WILL BE LAID

Rev. S. D. Chown Will Speak at Mark Street Church Ceremony.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

Rev. S. D. Chown, D.D., who was General Superintendent of the Methodist Church at the time of Union will preach at Mark Street United Church next Sunday morning, September 2nd and give an address at the corner stone laying of the new church at the corner of Mark and Hunter streets in the afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Under the efficient direction of William and W R. L. Blackwell, architects and T. C. Ephgrave, contractor, the work of construction is making rapid progress. The building is to be constructed of Curtis brick trimmed with stone and when complete will seat about 450 and in separate rooms accommodate 15 Sunday school classes.

Including pipe organ it will cost approximately $40,000.00, of which amount nearly $28,000.00 has already been subscribed.

At the corner stone laying Dr. Chown and others will make addresses. Rev. J. E. Todd, B.A., chairman of Peterborough Presbytery, will conduct the ceremony, G. A. Gillespie will lay the stone and the Salvation Army Band is expected to furnish the music. The officials of the city and ministers of all the churches are invited to be present. Everybody is cordially invited.

REFERRED TO ASSEMBLY.

Canada's Delegate Also Takes Part in Child Welfare Discussion.

GENEVA, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—The League of Nations Council to-day referred to the League Assembly for action the British project for the appointment of a commission of experts to study the opium situation in the Far East. This was done on the proposal of Premier Mackenzie King of Canada.

The Canadian Premier also took the initiative in connection with the development of child welfare work, when, on his recommendation, the Council voted to conduct a preliminary study of the problem of children exposed to moral and social dangers. A French expert was appointed to conduct an inquiry on the matter in Canada, Germany, Denmark, the United States, France, Great Britain, Italy, and Czecho Slovakia.

In discussing the opium problem before the Council, Premier King showed complete knowledge of all efforts made in the past to destroy the evil, and the Council listened with special interest to his views when it learned he had been Canada's delegate at the Shanghai opium conference of 1909.

The Premier presented a report concerning the appointment of a central board which is to be created under the terms of Geneva opium convention which is to go into force soon. He reminded the council that the method of procedure must be considered at an early date since the United States must be invited to nominate some one to participate in the appointment of the members of the board. He asked that an opinion concerning this board might be expressed in order to put the council in a position to decide at a meeting towards the end of the assembly upon the procedure to be adopted. The report was adopted.

Discuss Costa Rica

The Council met in secret session to-day and considered the recent request of Costa Rica for a League interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine.

The Council failed to reach an agreement concerning the request, but will meet later to-day to continue its discussion.

Jesse James, Third Arrested For Theft

CARLINVILLE, Ill., Aug. 31. —Jesse James Jr. of Los Angeles who declared himself the grandson the outlaw of that name, today cleared himself of complicity in wholesale automobile thievery, but confessed stealing one machine in Brimfield, Ind.

He declared that his father, a lawyer in Los Angeles, was the son of the Jesse James of reconstruction days. James Jr. happened along as Sheriff Stubble as making a number of arrests to clear up a reputed automobile theft ring.

Jesse James III picked up two men on the road and amazed them at Gillespie, Ill., by giving them the automobile he was driving. He boarded a traction system car and was arrested in Edwardsville.

The only son the outlaw Jesse James had was the one who was in the next room with his mother and sister when James was shot down by a former partner. The young man under arrest says that his father, then a child, was one of those in the adjoining room.

He Will Marry Ten Women To Find Ideal; Has Fourth

NEW YORK, August 31.—"I'll find my ideal woman if I have to marry ten of 'em!"

This was the answer given by Byron D. Chandler, the original "Millionaire Kid" of New York's Great White Way, when after his third wife, Luella Gear, musical comedy star, had divorced him in 1924, he was asked, "Will you try it a fourth time?"

Whether it will be necessary to marry "ten of 'em" is a subject not to be lightly dealt with so early in the career of the "big boy" of Broadway. He is just past forty years of age and like Peggy Joyce is really just getting started and is only on his third fortune and incidently has recently married for the fourth time.

Though three of his wives have been selected from the realm of the stage and no one of them has proved to be his ideal mate, Byron Chandler has selected the subject for his fourth matrimonial venture from the footlights in the person of the twinkling-toed dancer, Gene West, who perhaps is fifteen years younger than her celebrated mate.

Winnipeg Doctors Starting Campaign To End Infantile Paralysis Epidemic

WINNIPEG, Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press).—An active campaign to check the spread of infantile paralysis in Winnipeg and the rural districts of Manitoba, which during the past month has taken a toll of ten lives, mostly children, will commence immediately under the direction of prominent local physicians who will co-operate with the city and provincial health authorities.

This was decided upon at a meeting of the Winnipeg Medical Society last night at which a committee was formed to conduct a campaign of education. The first case of the dread disease was reported on July 21 and since then seventy seven cases have been recorded in Winnipeg, sixty of which occurred during the past thirty one days.

MADRIGAL SINGERS TAKE PART IN C. N. E. MUSIC DAY PROGRAM

Sing For Directors at Noon Luncheon and Also On Grounds.

MUSIC PREDOMINANT.

Principal Speaker at Luncheon, Hon. A. David, Stresses Its Value.

At the directors' luncheon, held in the dining-room of the Administration Building at the Canadian National Exhibition yesterday, the Madrigal Singers, under direction of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, were the musicians of the day. They were warmly applauded when they came in at the conclusion of luncheon and sang for the three hundred men who filled the large hall to its capacity. They were in excellent voice and did credit to themselves and their teacher by their very fine rendition of a dainty chorus, "The Happy Song," followed by an encore, "O May, Thou Art a Happy Time," which was sung "a capella" (in unaccompanied style), the type of singing which constitutes a severe test of choral voices. They received enthusiastic applause at the conclusion of each number and made a very attractive group in their fresh white gowns which were so appropriate for the warm weather of the day.

In the afternoon, the Madrigal Singers were busily engaged in singing in the Music Building and the Women's Building where they had large audiences, and at different points on the grounds, adding their quota of lovely color to the many pretty groups which go about on Music Day, singing and dancing and playing at various places, in halls and rooms, on steps and lawns and vestibules. Wearing their old-time costumes of mauve, pink, green and yellow, with panniered skirts, white fichus and white caps, they sang pretty choruses that received plenty of applause from the groups of people who congregate about these outdoor minstels, and throng for the indoor programs.

Music Day at the Exhibition is one of the most colorful of the many interesting days. At every turn, one comes on these troubadours and dancers. Hawaiian musicians, wearing brightly-colored leis about their necks, and playing the native guitar; gypsies in bright scarlet skirts and many golden bangles; Bulgarian singers rendering church chants and folk songs; Scotch bagpipers with the breeze blowing about their plaided kilts; old-fashioned ladies with little "pancake" hats and crinoline and demure nosegays; Irish lilters with Paddy green coats; tarlatan-skirted dancers; fiddlers drawing the long bow over resined strings in the strains of "Pop Goes the Weasel," all give their meed of melody to the making of Music Day at the Exhibition.

In the big dining hall where the directors' luncheons are held daily, with the walls draped with flags and the tables bright with crimson gladioli, three hundred men were entertained yesterday. The luncheon was presided over by the president of the Canadian National Exhibition, T. Bradshaw, and was addressed by three speakers, who brought the tang of the French, the English and the Scotch tongue to the gathering. Hon. Athanase David, Provincial Secretary of the Province of Quebec, was the principal speaker of the day, giving his address in precise, careful English that had the overtone and the occasional unusual pronunciation of the French tongue, while Captain Amers, leader of the Royal Air Force Band, was a typical Englishman with a typical English accent, and Hon. Mr. Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, added the rich burr of the true Scotsman to the program of speeches.

LARGE PURSES AN ATTRACTION

Entries of Live Stock and Other Produce Received From Large Area.

GOOD PROGRAM.

Peterborough Exhibition Directors have worked hard this year in securing an extraordinary program for the citizens on September 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15, when the big tents will be raised on the Exhibition grounds.

The generous purses offered to the exhibitors mean that exhibits of Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Swine, Grains Vegetables, Flowers and everything that will be placed in the various classes will be the highest quality as they are attracted from over a wide area.

The Peterborough Exhibition is famed for its clean, and clever grandstand performances and this year's programme is selected from the best grandstand vaudeville that money can obtain. Peterborough's fair for 1928 will outshine any other previous fair.

The Hon. John S. Martin, Ontario Minister of Agriculture will speak in front of the Grandstand at two in the afternoon on Wednesday, September 13th. The Board of Directors has made arrangements for a system of loudspeakers to be placed throughout the stand so that everyone will be able to hear clearly each word of the message that the Minister will bring to them.

PAT TAYLOR GLAD TO BE HOME; RETURNS TO SCHOOL ON TUESDAY

Fed Up With Wandering Around All Day With Lachance.

COMPANION QUEER.

Mrs. Taylor Weeps As She Embraces Her Son On His Return Home.

COBOURG, Aug. 31 (Special to The Examiner).—Pat Taylor's three weeks' odyssey is ended.

The fifteen-year-old boy who vanished from his home here on August 10 returned yesterday in the care of Chief of Police John C. Ruse. With them was John A. Lachance, the "mystery man," in whose company the lad trudged the highways of half a dozen Ontario counties, on an improvised "surveying" expedition.

On Tuesday of next week school bells will summon Pat back to his studies after his adventuresome vacation, but Lachance sits in a jail cell facing a charge of theft of a watch and chain.

The two shared seats in the smoking car of the train which brought them from Woodstock, where they had been found, back to Cobourg yesterday. Pat grinned watching Lachance taking off his tie, ripping it to shreds and casting the pieces out of the window.

Of two things the boy was sure. He was glad that it was all over and he was through with Lachance.

Enough Walking.

The latter, he said, treated him well during the three weeks they were together on their trek from Cobourg, but he had had enough of such a Marion Derby.

"I was fed up on walking around with him all day," Pat declared. "I like playing baseball and being with the kids better than being with him all the time. He has done some queer things all right. When I go home I want to go back to school again and forget all about this. They can do whatever they like with him. I don't think he ever was a surveyor anyway. He is always talking about some man flying around over us in an airplane while we were working. I never saw anybody or knew anything about it.

"I don't know why I did it," Pat said. "I wanted the money and I wanted the job. All the way from Toronto to Woodstock, Lachance told me that his cheque from the Government for surveying would arrive any day. So we kept on going.

Wants to Forget.

"But I want to forget that," he said. "I want to get home."

Lachance, on the train, spoke scarcely a word, seldom answering Pat when he spoke. He sat looking out of the window a stoical smile on his face. He had discarded the soft collar which he had previously worn reverse in clerical style, but he did not seem to notice it and expressed surprise when it was brought to his attention.

Lachance claims to be a returned soldier, wounded at Vimy Ridge and gassed during an earlier engagement. I was wounded in the head at Vimy Ridge," he said, "and since then I never have been the same. I cannot remember many things now and have just been out of the hospital a few months."

"I enlisted in the 22nd Battalion in 1915, the Old Originals," said Lachance, "and we trained at Valcartier."

Lachance Arraigned.

On arriving here, Lachance was arraigned before Magistrate Wilson on the charge of theft and remanded for a week. T. F. Hall, K.C., is acting for him.

Pat Taylor's homecoming was dramatic. As the car bearing the boy home after his wandering drove up to the house, his mother came to the door, and with tears streaming down her face, threw her arms around Pat, who came bounding up the steps to greet her. For minutes she could not speak, and then all she said was: "Pat, my son."

After another embrace she turned to Chief Ruse and thanked him for his unwearying efforts to find Pat. Mrs. Taylor told of the terrible anxiety of the past weeks.

"It was the most awful experience I have ever gone through, and I have had not a little trouble during my life," she said.

FIGHT AS HOME BURNS.

BERLIN, Aug. 31.—When fire broke out in several farm buildings near Ilkofen recently alarms were sent into two nearby towns. Fire brigades from both places responded and met each other at the blaze. An argument ensued; both companies claimed the exclusive rights to quench the fire. Soon the Ilkofener and Regensburger men were battling each other with their hoses. Meanwhile the farm buildings burned to the ground.

Canadian Apples Are Not Sold In London

OTTAWA, Ont., August 31 (Canadian Press). — "You seem almost ashamed of your own fruit," said Sir D'Arcy Lindsay, of the Indian delegation at yesterday afternoon's sitting of the Empire Parliamentary Association. Sir D'Arcy was referring to the display of fuit in the Canadian shops he had seen.

"And the prices you have to pay!" exclaimed Sir D'Arcy. "Talk of your profiteers! Why, you pay here in your own shops in Canada as much as you pay for the same fruit in London. And the hotels . . !"

But Sir D'Arcy had reached his ten minute limit, and his speech was abruptly ended.

He remarked earlier that while the billboards of Great Britain were covered with advertisements to "eat more fruit," Canadian apples were not pushed on the streets of London.

ROADS ARE GOOD IN THIS DISTRICT

Only Chemong-Lindsay Road in Poor Condition at Present.

SOME CONSTRUCTION.

The majority of roads in the district are in fair shape except the Peterborough-Lindsay Highway, which is sort of a drag as far as the construction operations are concerned. Compared with the rapid progress on the Port Hope-Peterborough Highway construction the short stretch to be paved between Chemong and Peterborough appears to be slow, while the detour in places is very rough and narrow, which calls for very cautious driving

The Lakefield road is in good shape, with a little construction near the old goose neck which was eliminated several years ago. But for the dust this road is in fair shape.

The roads to the east Norwood and Keene are good gravel roads, while the road to Marmora is in good shape.

The following is the road report for the week ending Sept. 8th, as issued by the Department of Highways for this residency:

Road No. 2—Toronto to Kingston, paved, roadside detour at Napanee. Construction work is in progress east of Napanee. Roadside detour. Motorists are advised to drive carefully where men are at work.

Road No. 12.—Whitby to Atherley. One detour. Pavement, Whitby to Greenbank. Detour between Manchester and Greenbank will be opened on Sept. 1st, and new detour established north of Greenbank. This will be well marked to direct traffic. Greenbank to Brechin gravel road in good condition. Construction grading is in progress between Brechin and Atherley A temporary detour will be established during wet weather. Some sections are very rough.

Road No. 7.—Langstaff to Brooklin. No Detour. Langstaff to York County line, macadam road in fair condition. Construction work will be in progress west of Unionville for one mile after August 29th. From York County line to Brooklin good gravel road.

FORKE LAYS POLICY OF DEPARTMENT BEFORE EMPIRE PARLIAMENTARY ASSOCIATION

Welcome All Immigrants of the Right Type, Says Minister.

COUNTRY PROSPEROUS.

Question of Migration Viewed in Canada From Many Angles.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 31.— (Canadian Press.) — Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, laid before delegates of the Empire Parliamentary Association yesterday, the general policy of his department. "We welcome all immigrants of the right type," he said, "but especially do we welcome those of Great Britain who come here to make their home."

The question of migration was viewed in Canada from many angles. There were those in Canada who wanted no restrictions on immigration at all but would throw the door wide open. There were others who would place heavy restrictions on immigration. Another recture of the situation was, Mr. Forke proceeded, that he had received resoltions from municipalities that they would not be responsible for unemployed immigrants in the coming winter.

In their journey through Canada delegates of the Association would be impressed with the prosperity of the country. Canada needed immigration and would welcome it.

"Our policy is to welcome all immigrants who can possibly be assimilated," he added.

Statements Not True.

Mr. Forke very much regretted paragarphs which had appeared in certain English papers that British immigrants were not welcome in Canada. Such statements were not in accordance with fact. British immigrants were welcome, he said.

Mr. Forke said he had heard complaints that British immigrants were required to answer questions which were not put to continental immigrants. This was not the case. Continetnal immigrants were asked the same questions. They were simple questions having to do with the health of the intending immigrant and similar subjects. But, said Mr. Forke, if it could be proven that Canada was more strict in questioning than, say Great Britain or Australia, he would be prepared to consider modification of the Canadian form.

No Dominion of the Empire was putting forth more strenuous efforts to obtain British immigrants than Canada, continued the immigration minister. Of course, Canada, in seeking immigrants, must see that those coming here were mentally and physically fit. Mr. Forke doubted whether there was much in the complaint that intending immigrants were subjected to hardships in going through the physical tests. Agricultural workers of the right type were required in Canada, but it was a noticeable fact that many supposed farm workers from Great Britain soon drifted to the cities.

Knew No Restrictions.

Mr. Forke failed to see any justification for the complaint that British immigrants were faced with bothersome restrictions when coming to Canada. He knew of no such restrictions. What was there to prevent any British subject from going down to the dock in England, buying a ticket and coming to Canada. Then why talk about restictions. The minister declared that Canada did not contribute one cent to continentals coming to Canada.

Rt. Hon. Thomas Shaw, of the British delegation, said that it should be made quite clear that Great Britain was not desirous of sending out to the Dominions any of her surplus population unless it was of a character suitable to the needs of the GIPSY AND CLIENT'S $1,000 VANISH IN WAR ON SPIRITS.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., August 31. — While she was having her fortune told, the gipsy in charge of the performance told her to put her life savings, about $1,000, in a bag. Mrs. Margaret Vanvarick did as the gipsy told her, because she had been warned by the fortune teller that a bad omen was plaguing her husband. She wanted no harm for her husband.

She held tightly to two eggs and repeated an imprecation against the spirit that sought her husband while the gipsy turned her back. She took the bag home as instructed and placed it under her pillow. Becoming suspicious after a few days, she opened the bag and found it filled with newspaper clippings. So she told the police. The Yonkers police are now looking for the gipsy.

Anthony Rich, a laborer, asked the North Bergen police yesterday to help him recover $8,000, his entire savings. Last June, Rich said, a gipsy in Columbia Park, North Bergen, told him he would lose his sight unless he deposited all his money with her. He did so, and has since been looking for the woman.

TWO TEACHERS JOINING STAFF

Misses Cox and Green Succeed Misses Glover and Paxman.

BUILDINGS REPAIRED.

Interesting sidelights on the school situation as it will be when the local schools open next Tuesday morning, September 4, were given The Examiner this morning by Inspector A. Mowat, who stated that there will be few changes in the Public School staff when schools re-open.

Misses Cox and Green have been added to the staff to replace Misses Glover and Paxman, who have left the teaching profession.

The Public School buildings and grounds have received considerable attention during the holidays, and everything possible has been done to make them attractive.

The two Public School classes will be continued at the South Central. These are the auxiliary class for boys and the primer class for the small children of the neighborhood of the school.

RECORDS BROKEN BY SCHOOLBOYS

VARSITY STADIUM, Toronto, Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press.)— New records were made in the running broad jump and the 12 pound shot putt, the first two events on the program at the annual schoolboy championships of Ontario Athletic Commission to-day. W. Rogers, Brantford, won the broad jump with a leap of 19 feet, 9 inches, breaking the previous record by seven quarter inches.

G. Syargratt, North Bay, won the twelve pound shot putt event in the Intermediate High School class with a heave of 41 feet 4½ inches, also a new record.

Honeymoon To Last, Say Artist, 26, and Bride, 51

SAN FRANCISCO, August 31.—Love founded on the granite of complete understanding will endure despite a disparity of age.

On this sonorous platform the honeymoon—now in mid-career—of John W. S. Bogle, 26, Berkeley writer and artist, and Mrs. Lillian Bogle, 51, advances musically.

The happy bride and bridegroom have just returned from a honeymoon excursion to the heart of the Sierra. They are at home in their bungalow, Berkeley. Mrs. Bogle is the former wife of Maj. A. H. Allen.

Against a background of petunias Bogle said: "What difference does age make if you are in complete harmony? Flappers are nothing to me. They only make me smile. Our viewpoints are identical.

"Lillian and I understand each other perfectly. We are not concerned with what the rest of the world thinks about our union. It is not to be expected that outsiders will understand, and it is not necessary that they should. We are happy—all of our tastes coincide. Our happiness is destined to last."

Optimism Felt at Council Opening

PEACE TREATY WILL LEAD TO ARMS REDUCTION

Opinion of Lord Cushendun Who Replaces Chamberlain at Geneva.

OLD FACES MISSING.

Preliminary Conference Delegates Unable to Reach Agreement On Draft Convention.

GENEVA, Aug. 31.—(A. P.)— The council of the League of Nations met for its 51st session yesterday in an atmosphere of optimism based primarily on the signing at Paris last Monday of the Kellogg-Briand anti-war treaty.

This optimism took definite form in confidence voiced by Lord Cushendun, who is replacing Sir Austen Chamberlain for Britain on the council, that the multi-lateral pact will gradually lead to reduction of armament—an end long sought by the council.

Lord Cushendun's statement was made in the course of a conference with British newspapermen after the council meeting had adjourned. He said, too, that too much should not be expected from the council in the dispute between Poland and Lithuania and the difficulty between Hungary and Rumania concerning land expropriations.

"Some men seem to think," Cushendun said, "that the council has only to issue decrees and have them enforced, but I am convinced that any effort to settle such questions without due regard to the feelings and views of the nations concerned would not settle the questions at all and would put a great strain on the League itself."

Unable To Reach Agreement.

While Lord Cushendun was expressing this sentiment, delegates to the preliminary conference on private manufacture of arms were dolefully admitting supreme difficulties in the way of reaching an agreement on the text of a draft convention. It was said that certain fundamental divergencies of views made it impossible to agree upon a single text and that another session would be necessary before convocation of the International Congress for Control of the Manufacture of Armaments can be thought of.

Yesterday's council session which was presided over by H. J. Procope, youthful Finnish Foreign Minister and the council's new president, saw three leading figures of its previous session missing. Sir Austen Chamberlain and Gustave Stresemann, both ill, and Foreign Minister Briand of France, who will not arrive until next Monday when the League assembly opens. There was one new figure of prominence, Premier William Lyon MacKenzie King, of Canada.

Yesterday's session of the council was taken up principally in a private discussion of members of various questions of the agenda.

JOURNALISTS TOUR AMERICA

Will Be Guests of Carnegie Board For International Peace.

TWO MONTHS VISIT.

NEW YORK, August 31.—(Canadian Press).—Fourteen British journalists arrive here on October 1, for a two months visits as guests of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

In inviting the journalists, Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University and director of the Carnegie Endowment, told them that the purpose of the journey was that they might study all aspects of United States life at first hand.

He reminded them that the time of their visit would coincide with the presidential campaign and election, thus affording them an unusual opportunity to study United States political methods.

The journalists are Sir George Armstrong of the Lancashire Daily Post, William Cowper Barrons of the Yorkshire Evening News, Ralph D. Blumenfield of the London Daily Express, president of the Institute of Journalists, William Clark of the Belfast Telegraph, W. T. J. Collins, of the South Wales Argus, H. G. Davey of Berow's Worcester Journal, Sir Charles Igglesdes, of the Kentish Express, H. Jacques of the Surrey County Herald, F. Lawrence Johnson, of the Northeast Daily Gazette, Henry Collinson Owen, of the Glasgow Sunday Mail, Alan Pitt Robbins of the London Times. P. B. M. Robbins of the Edinburgh Scotsman, R. A. J. BUSINESS SECTION CLEAR TO-MORROW

Surfacing Operations On Campbellford Streets Nearly Finished.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 31 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Surfacing and sewer installation is all that remains to be completed in connection with the three and one-half miles of pavement which this town is laying this year. The concrete base was completed yesterday morning and the machinery is being prepared for shipment to the next scene of operations of the company. Already all the surfacing work is complete on the west side of the town and the major portion of the east side is similarly situated. West side residents are entirely rid of the inconvenience of paving operations, and the east side folk are coming in for their full share. Bridge street, in the business section, was barricaded yesterday, but was clear to-day when Mill street had its traffic stopped. At the present rate of progress, this week will see the work nearly completed. When the workmen called it a day long after dark last night, Bridge street was completed as far as the interesection of Front and half the intersection as far as the bridge as well.

Preparations had been made to start work this morning at the south end of Mill street, but orders were issued later in the evening to continue from the laving off point last night, and go south on Front and Mill street. This will relieve possible traffic congestion on one of the busiest intersections of the town. To-day is a half holiday, but Saturday is always a busy day on the streets. The streets blocked today will be open Saturday. This will mean that the business portion of the business section will be free of barricades over the week-end. At eight-thirty last night the steam roller was still at work finishing up the day's run.

Germans Test Automatic Radio Warship, A Phantom Ship Without a Man On Board

WILHELMSHAVEN, Aug. 31.—Germany's phantom war vessel, the former battleship Zaehringen, which sails the seas faultlessly without a single man aboard, today made a trial trip and proved a complete success.

The ship is equipped with automatically working engines and pumps and is steered by radio waves sent from an accompanying vessel. It moves forward and backward at any desired speed and even makes sharp turns whenever they are desired.

The radio waves directing the ship are received by a large antennae. In case this appliance is shot down a new antannae automatically rises from the interior of the hull to continue the work.

To prevent sinking the ship it contains a large cargo of cork.

Experiments with crewless warships were begun during the World War when a few small vessels were directed by radio waves sent from airplane. The idea was developed further only within the past few years, however. The Navy Department has spent 2,500,000 marks to reconstruct the Zaehringen and adapt it for the present purposes.

During the next maneouvres the automatic battleship may be used as a target, but great care will be taken that it shall not be shot to pieces or sunk.

Naval experts believe that the success of the tests made to-day may have a large influence on commercial navigation and encourage the building of vessels of the same type generally.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERS ARE ENTERTAINED AT PICNIC

Large Number of Young People Enjoy Themselves at Outing.

GOOD PROGRAM GIVEN.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—Mrs. L. W. Smith entertained the Sunday School class of which her daughters are members and of which Miss Jean L. Burnham is the teacher, at an enjoyable picnic outing at her home, east of the village, on Tuesday afternoon; the guest including several of the parents of the young folk numbering about twenty-five.

The wide verandahs and large lawns were used for the happy gathering, the usual games entertaining the younger members of the party; the prize winners in the program of races being:

Children 2 to 4.—1, Teddy McDowell; 2, Leatha Rowland; 3, David Hatherly.

Girls under 8.—1, Beatrice McDowell; 2, Dorothy Smith.

Girls 8 and over.—1, Ethel Rowland; 2, Kathleen Smith.

Potato Race—Six on a side, captained by Mrs. Smith and Miss Jean Burnham, respectively; the latter's side winning.

Soomersault Race.—Beatrice McDowell.

Sack Race.—1, Kathleen Smith; 2, Margaret Smith.

Backing-Up Race.—1, Mary Burnham; 2, Margaret Smith.

Shoe Race.—1, Mary Burnham; 2, Ethel Rowland.

Three-Legged Race.—1, Margaret and Kathleen Smith; 2, Esther Might and Marjorie McDowell.

Soda Biscuit Race (the winner being the one having first eaten the biscuit and then whistled).—Beatrice McDowell; 2, Margaret McConnell.

Peanut Scramble

A peanut scramble completed the sports list, and gave everyone a chance to show their agility in picking up the shower, which fell in generous quantities over quite a large area of the greensward, the children showing great glee as each added to his and her pile when hands were too full to keep scrambling though the "drops" continued to fall.

The tea tables were laid on the side lawn, with the kitchen conveniently near for serving, those assisting Mrs. Smith in looking after her young guests being: Mrs. Thomas Douglas, Mrs. J. H. Might, Mrs. J. Willis, Mrs. A. J. Henderson, Mrs. Irwin Hatherly, Mrs. M. McDowell, Mrs. F. H. Smith, and Mrs. W. W. Jones. An important item in the menu, especially in the eyes of the younger element, was the big freezer of home-made ice-cream which the hostess had generously provided.

As the evenings now close in at an earlier hour than was noticeable even one short week ago when the members of the mission had their annual outing, there was but little time for further play after the tea hour, and with many expressions of thanks for the good time provided both by the hostess and the teacher of the class, the car-loads departed carrying the happy-hearted young folk to their various homes.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Garside, and two children, Audrey and Freddie, and Mrs. Garside, Senior, of Peterborough, motored to Loon Lake. On Sunday, Mr. Garside returned that evening, but the other members of the party are remaining for a week with friends at their summer home.

Rev. R. J. and Mrs. Stillwell, and her mother, Mrs. W. H. Byan, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham, Port Perry this week. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Byam motored over with the party and spent Sunday, returning the same evening.

PICK MEN WHO COOK.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—It begins to look as though the men who can cook a tasty biscuit or concoct a succulent omelet is the favorite with the girls of to-day. Of 25 recent brides in Chicago who were questioned as to their ideal mate, 16 of them declared the ability to cook is the first domestic virtue. Several admitted their husbands were better cooks than they were.

Chinese Authorities May Seize Fossils

PEKING, China, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—Faced with probable seizure of 85 crates of fossils dug up by his expedition in the Gobi Desert, Roy Chapman Andrews may appeal to Washington for aid in getting his discoveries out of China. This became known yesterday when Mr. Andrews said he had heard that Chinese authorities in Kalgan were contemplating confiscation of the finds.

Not all the results of the expedition to Mongolia are included in the cases at Kalgan, but among the tons of relics are bones of a prehistoric monster which the scientist claims was the largest beast known to science.

Vernacular newspapers here state that the seizures have already taken place, but definite word of this is lacking.

THREE MISSING FROM TOW BOAT

Twenty Other Members of the Crew Rescued When Boat Upsets.

IN OHIO RIVER.

ALIQUIPPA, Penn., Aug. 30 (Canadian Press)—Three persons are missing and are believed drowned, while twenty others, members of the crew of the towboat Aliquippa of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, are thought to have been rescued when the boat turned over in the Ohio River early to-day.

The accident occurred when a double crew was on the Aliquippa, and it was preparing to pick up a tow of ten barges loaded with steel. Without warning it turned keel upward. Quick work on the part of a ferry boat crew nearby is believed to have saved all but three members of the crew. No check up is possible as some of those who reached shore went home immediately, but a chambermaid and two deck hands were missing.

Picked a Policeman For First Burglary

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.— As a burglar Giuseppe Palovienne is a good dishwasher. He admits it himself. In fact he promised the desk lieutenant in the police station last night that if that official would overlook his first and extremely ill-advised attempt at burglary he would stick to dishwashing forever after.

Giuseppe's first venture into burglary was indeed ill-advised. Not only did he choose as his first victim a policeman, but he chose a policeman who was at home at the time and who, tired though he was from working the late hour, was having the greatest difficulty trying to snatch a wink of sleep in the bedroom of a warm apartment.

Patrolman John Warner, who took Giuseppe to the police station, told the story as follows: "I was stretched out on my bed in my apartment trying to take a nap, when I heard some one at the window. I closed my eyes and waited. I heard the window raised softly and heard someone step inside the room.

"Then, opening my eyes, I saw him (indicating Giuseppe) rummaging through the bureau drawers. He stuffed my wife's jewelry into his pockets, whereupon I decided that things had gone far enough, so I arrested him."

Giuseppe was led away to a cell and locked up charged with burglary. The moral to Giuseppe's story is, according to the police: "A good dishwasher is better than a bad burglar."

WESTWOOD GIRLS HOLD CORN ROAST

Young Ladies of St. Andrew's Sunday School Enjoy Social Time.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WESTWOOD, August 31.—On Tuesday evening a corn roast was held under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Bible Class of St. Andrew's Sunday School. The large bon-fire was built on the bank of the Ouse river on the farm belonging to David Brackenridge.

While the corn in a huge iron vessel was cooking, the crowd enjoyed various games played by the moonlight. All anticipations were fulfilled when the corn was passed, followed by apples and boxes of candy.

Popular songs brought to a close a very pleasant evening.

Rev. James Borland of Knox College, Toronto, will conduct the service in the Presbyterian church on Sunday afternoon. As Rev. Borland spent his boyhood in this district, a special welcome is assured him.

An evening service will be held in St. Andrew's United Church on Sunday. Rev. H. B. Herrington of Warsaw United church will preach.

Mr. H. A. Thistlethwaite of Elgin took charge of the service in St. Andrew's United Church last Sunday morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. S. H. Moyer, and preached a splendid sermon.

Mrs. Stanley Judge and son, Billy of Toronto are guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Tucker.

Miss Jessie Geen of Hawkesbury, a former teacher of the Westwood Public school, is a guest of Mrs. Thomas Cardwell.

Mr and Mrs. Charles Brackenridge and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brackenridge motored to Belleville on Saturday and spent the week-end with friends there.

INCENDIARY FIRE MENACES HOTEL

Few Minutes' Delay in Giving Alarm Would Have Been Fatal.

PRESTON, Aug 31. — Fire which menaced the Sulphur Springs hotel on Thursday morning and forced 15 guests to flee from their beds, was definitely proved yesterday to be of incendiary origin.

Both Deputy Fire Marshal Burnett and Fire Chief Spalding stated that there was not a doubt that the fire had been deliberately set. A few minutes longer delay in giving the alarm the chief said, and Preston would have been the scene of one of Ontario's worst hotel disasters.

The incendiary showed absolute disregard of life, the chief declared. It was 3 o'clock in the morning when the blaze was discovered by night constable Murphy, who forced his way into the blazing building and pounded on the doors to waken the guests.

Prompt action of the fire department saved the building, but the flames had eaten their way through the partitions from the cellar where coal oil had been liberally sprinkled, the investigators claim. Chief Spalding said that the construction of the building made it a very difficult blaze to fight. The loss has not been definitely esimated, but will run into several thousand dollars.

On Tuesday a public inquiry will be conducted under oath, and witnesses have already been summoned. Mr. Burnett had nothing but praise for the prompt action of the local brigade. With fire breaking out at several places at one time, it was difficult to understand how the blaze had been controlled, he added.

Mr. Bleiberg, the manager, was examined yesterday morning by Mr. Burnett, but could throw little light on the near tragedy. Mr. Bleiberg manages the hotel for Mr. Finglestein of Hamilton, the lessee. The building is owned by Mr. Garfunkle, of Toronto.

Police and special investigators did not place much credence in the theory that the fire bugs who have been operating in Guelph had transferred their operations to the neighboring community.

Developments, it was intimated, may follow the investigation which opens at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning

The Planter of the Tree

By RUBY M. AYRES

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally is in love.

POPPY, Sally's room-mate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

Akers says he is through with Sally, and the doctors say she can never walk again. Sanderson assumes her care and plans to get a cottage in the country for her and Mrs. Kiff. Sally hates the country at first but gradually becomes reconciled to it.

XV.—THE VICAR.

Every week-end Sanderson and Sometimes came down to stay from Saturday to Monday, and then Philip took Sally out in a long spinal chair, or in a car, and Sometimes ran on ahead like an outrider, returning every few minutes to see that everything was in order.

The cottage was in the heart of the Surrey hills, and nearly two miles from the nearest village. At first Sally grumbled at its isolation.

"Nothing but fields and trees," she wailed. "I shall die if I can't have more life. If only a motor-bus would go by!" But when the weather improved her spirits improved, also. A great many motor cars passed by the little cottage, and sometimes as she lay in her long chair in the small front garden, people would stop and speak to her. One day the vicar from the village rode over on his bicycle and had tea.

"A Nosey Parker, that's what he is," Mrs. Kiff declared after he had taken his departure. "Sich impudence! He asked me what relation you was to Mr. Sanderson."

Sally smiled and her blue eyes sparkled with unusual interest.

"What did you say?" she asked.

"I told him you was none!" Mrs. Kiff said emphatically. "I told him you was just friends, and then I as good as told him that it weren't any business of his, anyway."

Sally laughed.

"There'll be a scandal," she said, and was pleased.

When Sanderson came down at the week-end, she told him:

"We've had the vicar to tea. He was a nice vicar, with big shoulders and grey hair. He asked Mrs. Kiff what relation I was to you."

"He can mind his own business," Sanderson said sullenly.

"I don't expect he'll come again," Sally answered. "I think he was shocked."

But the parson did come again, several times. He was a very human parrson, and he told Sally that he was a lonely man and that he lived in a big, rambling vicarage, the half of which had been shut up since his wife died, six years before.

"Did you live all alone?" Sally asked.

"Yes. I have one son, but he is abroad."

"A black sheep, I expect," Sally suggested. She had a vague idea that all parsons' sons were black sheep.

The vicar laughed, but he did not look at all offended.

"Well, he's a wanderer, certainly," he admitted. "He found life too dull here, so he went abroad. I don't blame him. I dare say if I could have done as I wanted to do when I was his age I should not have been the vicar of Ash Hill now."

"It can't be much of a job," Sally agreed.

She liked the parson; he had kind eyes and a deep voice, and his name was Nairn—a name of which, as she told him, she entirely approved.

"It sounds upper-tennish!" she explained.

"It's a good old Scotch name," the parson agreed.

One day Sally asked him how old he was.

"How old do you think?" he inquired with a twinkle.

She hazarded a guess.

"About sixty?"

"No; I'm only fifty-three. My son is twenty-eight."

"What's his name?"

"Garry."

"What a funny name!"

"It was his mother's maiden name."

"Oh!"

It was strange how interested Sally became in all these little things. Three months ago it would have bored her unspeakably to talk to such a man as Robert Nairn; it would have bored her unspeakably to take tea with him; but now she quite enjoyed his visits and looked forward to them.

In return for his little confidences she told him about herself and how she used to dance at the Faun Cafe. Her eyes sparkled and her cheeks flushed with excitement at the memory of those days that now seemed so far, so very far away. She described the frocks she used to wear, and the admiration she got from the men, and the suppers she used to be taken to, and the flowers that were given to her.

"Have you ever been to the Faun?" she asked.

The parson shook his head.

"No, but I am sure it must be a very amusing place," he said kindly.

"It was! It was just — Heaven!" Sally breathed, and the tears ran down her cheeks. She looked away from him to the open window and the garden outside, where the trees were budding, and the daffodils were just peeping up from their bed of green leaves, and she saw instead the blue and gold upholstery of the Faun Cafe, with its dozens of small tables, each one lit with a golden lamp, the many flushed, excited faces, and the gleam of the polished floor upon which her tiny feet had so often danced.

"It was just — Heaven!" she breathed again.

The parson smiled and leaned back in his chair.

"We all have such different ideas of Heaven," he said. "Now, what do you think mine is?"

Sally wiped the tears from her eyes to answer scornfully:

"Golden stairs, I suppose, and harps and angels."

He shook his head.

"No, it's a spring morning like this—sunshine and flowers and birds, and perhaps an apple-tree in blossom like that one in your garden. There could be no finer Heaven."

Sally stared at him.

"You are funny!" she said.

But again he was not at all offended. He just laughed, and said that it was a good thing everyone had not the same opinions.

Then Sally told him about her accident.

"It was Philip's fault," she said in a hard, ugly voice. "He was drunk, and he knocked me down with his car. He always is drunk after six o'clock in the evening," she added angrily.

"And who is Philip?" Mr. Nairn asked.

"Philip Sanderson. He gave me this cottage, and he pays Mrs. Kiff, and for me, too. He comes down every week-end. I expect you'll see him some day. He's very tall—like a chimney-stack, and he wears awful clothes, and he's got a hideous dog called 'Sometimes' who goes everywhere with him. You'd laugh if you saw the pair of them, I expect."

"And it was he who knocked you down?"

"Yes, the ——" Sally bit back the bad word just in time. Somehow, by instinct, she never used bad words before Mr. Nairn.

"Poor man!"

She stared at him.

"It's me who's the poor one," she said offendedly.

"I am more sorry for him," Mr. Nairn insisted gently. "Think what his remorse must be."

Sally considered.

"Oh, I don't know," she said reluctantly. "He's a queer one! You never know where you are with Philip."

"He seems to have been very kind to you."

"No more than he ought to have been," she answered sharply. "I'm finished for life, and I haven't got a halfpenny. He's only done what he ought to do."

"And that is a great deal more than most of us can say," Mr. Nairn answered.

Sally lost her temper.

"Here, I don't want to be preached at!" she shrilled. "If that's what you've come for, you needn't come again." But the next moment she was apologizing. Somehow Mr. Nairn was not a man to whom you could be rude without immediately apologizing humbly. And he took it so well, he told her that he just wanted to be friends with her, and before he went away he promised to come again quite soon.

"Garry will be home in a month or two," he said. "I shall bring him to tea if I may."

"I'll be thankful to see anyone," Sally told him ungraciously. "It's frightful lying in this place alone, with only Mrs. Kiff to talk to."

"I like Mrs. Kiff," the vicar said cheerily.

Sally relented immediately.

"So do I. She's a dear old stick," she agreed.

To-morrow—Bad Temper.

FORKE SAYS

Dominion concerned. Great Britain was much too proud to send her people to any place where they were not desired.

Sir William Glasgow, of the Australian party, took the opportunity to explain that, though the Australian delegation included no representative of the Labor party in the Commonwealth, this fact had no significance. It should not be construed as an attempt to slight either the Empire Parliamentary Association or the Dominion of Canada. He had been informed by the leader of the Australian Labor Party that the only reason that party was not represented on the delegation was because of the pending lection in Australia.

Mr. Forke said that he had had some hesitation in sanctioning the coming of the 10,000 British miners to work in Canada's harvest fields, but his department was anxious to do all it could to protect them. It was pretty well understood that the British Government would take steps to osee that no miner was left here in distress after the harvest was over.

SEYMOUR LINE PUT IN SERVICE

Most of Farmers Along 20 Mile Circuit Already Using Electricity.

OTHERS PREPARING.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 31.—The rural power line which was constructed under contract by P. C. Denyes has been completed and the current has been flowing through the wires for the past few days. The line serves many of the farmers in Seymour east and most of the services have already been installed. Although the line has been formally handed over to the town plant for operation, there is much secondary work still to be done. Several consumers have not yet had there buildings wired. Work is going on along this line with the greatest possible despatch.

The line originally proposed was in the neighborhood of seven miles in length. The complete line is almost twenty miles long. This fact was revealed by Mr. Denyes yesterday afternoon and maybe taken as an indication of the popularity of the original scheme.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—Lucien Renard, Montreal member of a work crew, was killed and three other workmen received minor injuries when a C.P.R. passenger train from Quebec came in contact with a work train picking up rails at Blue Bonnets race track shortly after 4 p.m. yesterday. The passengers were uninjured.

The track was temporarily blocked, but the passenger train was backed to Mile End Station, where the passengers detrained.

A PROHIBITION REFERENDUM.

Prohibition is the paramount issue in the United States presidential election, the New York Times declares. The efforts of the Anti-Saloon League to keep the question "out of politics" have miscarried.

The Times says:

At this stage of the campaign all positive forecasts on either side are to be regarded as highly untrustworthy. But what is already certain is that this issue is cutting deep into party allegiance and is bidding fair to result in the most extraordinary shifting of votes and moving across party lines seen in this country since the first Bryan campaign of 1896. Many Republicans, some of them well known, are saying openly that they will be compelled to vote for Smith on the prohibition issue. How many likeminded, but silent members of their party are planning to do the same thing nobody knows. Also there is evidence that Democrats are considering it their duty to vote for Hoover as the unyielding upholder of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act. How this exchange of party preferences will foot up, or balance, by the time election day comes cannot now be foretold. But this very uncertainty, together with the feeling which veteran political managers have that the very ground is giving way beneath their feet, is added proof that the proposals boldly made by Governor Smith are already acting as a great solvent of our political parties.

COMPULSORY MOTOR INSURANCE.

Compulsory automobile liability insurance premiums in Massachusetts have been increased for the new year beginning September 1, that they may have one effect of bringing about a reduction in the accident record with consequent lowering of fees.

The new rates on small cars have been increased from $29 to $53, on medium cars from $37 to $53 and on large cars from $45 to $70. This is the first and only State to adopt the compulsory system. In this respect it is something of a labratory for other countries from Canada to New Zealand. The law is then an experiment thus far. It requires the owner of a motor vehicle to insure, and companies in the State must take the business provided only that the owner be a "poper risk." Care are classified as private vehicles, commercial vehicles and public vehicles.

In 1927, the first year, the insurance companies received nearly $17,000,000 in premiums; their total loss was about $11,500,000 and their total expenses $7,000,000. They therefore lost $1,500,000.

The new rates determined by the actuaries have been bitterly disputed but the Insurance Commission says they are exact computations, and are the basis of any system of insurance. They may prove a check on reckless motorists who must realize that they have to pay for one another's carelessness.

UNSOCIAL INFLUENCES.

Our elders contend that the old days were the more sociable. Certainly society seems to have been more closely knit. They had more interests in common, and their customs tended to bind and hold them together, whereas to-day the tendency is centrifugal. The family automobile may keep one family together but it keeps neighboring families apart; and the man who is listening to his radio is not listening to his neighbor. These are unsocial influences and they are increasing. Years ago a man at a dance in Peterborough knew everybody there; to-day he would be aware of many strangers; there is more division, more grouping, "cliques"; and this disintegration can conceivably reach its ultimate extension in a company in which the groups are reduced to single couples and partners know only each other. The more the people, the fewer is the individual likely to know.

If we are to have movies by radio and television of the actual occurrences of the day shown in our homes the theatre as a social forum might become a total loss.

The extent of the change in some aspects of society may be noted from the facts that young gentlemen settlers on Sturgeon Lake used to paddle to Chemong then walk to Peterborough to attend a dance at Major Hamilton's until five in the morning, whereas now a young couple in an hour are fifty miles or thereabouts from home. Our present customs tend to disperse us.

ADULT EDUCATION.

A French Canadian merchant of Cochrane, Ontario, a man of forty-six years and a member of the federal parliament will enter Ottawa College this Fall to begin an Arts course, and will subsequently take the law course at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. This is an encouraging example of a lively, personal interest in adult education.

A fanciful reflection upon the legions of children trooping to school next week is the thought of the legions of adults whose serious studies ceased at the entrance to high school or in some of its classes. Great numbers of them presumably quite satisfied with the limited knowledge they have acquired. They cannot be said to beseige the public library. Their names do not appear on the register of correspondence courses, nor are they pressing local educational authorities for assistance. Some perhaps have lost their little ambitions; some are chained to routine. Some have aspirations but lack determination and clearness of vision. Mechanic, business man, professional man,—the categories are much alike. Gene Tunney enunciated an old truth when he said that the use made of spare hours counted most. The young lawyer, secure in the possession of his indenture to practice, develops a golf complex. The judge on the bench readily perceives the studious, earnest lawyer. Too many business men are wrapped up exclusively in their sales and credits; too many mechanics spend their spare time in pursuits of pleasure. With the great majority of us there is no sense of rusting, of stagnation; just a warm contentment, or apathy, or resignation. And the world teeming with new ideas, new inventions! We lack the impelling motives of so many of the new citizens of the United States, who quickly learn English and in so many instances reach out for better things. Across the border, the need of adult education has been more general and imperative. Opportunity and competition have increased the demand for it, but there is also the growing desire for learning, as indicated in the successes of the various "outlines" that have become best sellers.

Few of us should offer the pretext that we haven't time. Some of the busiest men, the exceptional factory manager, the expert physician, are the most informed on the progress of the times. But their bowling scores are not so good.

Somebody remarked recently that in most people interest in serious things is not inborn. They do not even regard themselves as serious things. But this Cochrane merchant has evidently a clear image of his desired goal. He should be an inspiration to so many men who are either trifling with life or blinking and gawking at it as if they couldn't make out what it is all about.

THE BUNYAN CELEBRATION.

When a group of English lovers of John Bunyan planned a celebration of the tercentenary of his birth they resolved to hold it on the farm where he was once arrested for certain preachings. The pastor of Bunyan Meeting, in Bedford, where Bunyan lived and worked, headed a band of pilgrims bound for a farmhouse in Lower Sansell, where it was supposed the arrest had occurred.

While the service was going on a neighboring farmer appeared. He interrupted with the announcement that the outrage had taken place on his land, about 900 feet away. The clergyman and his pilgrims obligingly moved and resumed the service.

Then another seeker after honor came in. He boasted that the true site was his own farm, and added that he had anticipated the arrival of the guests by decorating the ancient barn with British and American flags. There the memorial service was concluded, with the pilgrims saved from the slough of inaccuracy and the two Apollyon defeated and left languishing on their false sites.—New York Times.

LOOK OUT FOR COLDS!

Summer is on the wane. The nights will soon be nippy and chill, and if we have not been careful to stock up on our bank of health with a little surplus energy during the long sunshiny days, we may be disgusted to find ourselves with a developing common cold. Coryza is its official name; but the name is not very indicative of the nastiness of the disease at first blush. Coryza is a real menace. There is no other affliction that quite so universally causes discomfort or so great a loss of time for workmen, businessman and school child.

The real menace of a cold is its possible bad aftereffect on the individual. As it is caused by varieties of bacteria very closely allied with those responsible for the pneumonias, for bronchitis, laryngitis, and possibly catarrh, it often leaves in its wake damages that are permanent.

When we speak of "catching" cold, we speak correctly, if by "catching" we mean getting it from the other fellow. About 90 per cent. of our colds come from him.

Very rarely one may develop his own cold, for these germs probably are ever-present in the nose and throat and will multiply and thrive should the vitality of the host be sufficiently lowered to furnish a good culture ground for their growth.

This may be effectively accomplished by avoiding fresh air and sunshine, by loss of sleep, by over-fatigue or by living in over-heated rooms. Insufficient, improper, or excessive food or clothing assists greatly.

But for the vast majority of our colds, we may blame close contact with our neighbor who coughs, sneezes, and spits, and who uses his handkerchief to saturation and then greets us with a friendly handshake.

Ignorance of man-made law excuses no one; ignorance or disregard of the law of health eventually spares no one. The person with a bad cold should be regarded as having a dangerous communicable disease, and we should know enough, and our children should be taught, to avoid him. Even among people who realize this, knowledge generally outstrips practice, and on and on goes the cold.—The Canadian Red Cross.

READING PEOPLE'S FACES.

"My face is my fortune, sir," said the young person in the song. But it was the sprightly lady herself who so evaluated it. Reading fortune in the faces of others, according to Dr. Carney Landis and L. W. Phelps, psychologists of Wesleyan university, is impossible for practical purposes. They have made exhaustive tests, submitting to a number of students old-time and recent portraits of both distinguished and undistinguished persons and inviting them to guess the vocations of the subjects and the measure of their success in life.

The judges of physiognomy did not do very well. One gathers, reading between the lines, that the engineers were generally mistaken for lawyers, the lawyers for scientists, the scientists for bankers, and the bankers for clergymen. What the clergymen were mistaken for apparently has been supressed from the report. So the popular belief that we can determine a man's ability and personality from his facial characteristics, the investigators conclude, is not borne out by the evidence.

This is in accordance with common experience. It has long been realized that many eminent men have sported unprepossessing features. Socrates, for example, had a snub nose, and snub noses, as is well known, are simply incompatible with philosophic thought. Dr. Johnson had a tic douloureux, Oliver Goldsmith drove his friends to distraction with an imbecilic grin. Dr. Franklin in his fur cap looked like an amiable old lady, and it has been strongly suspected that Darwin got his peculiar idea of the origin of man from a chance glance in the mirror.

The list could be extended indefinitely, but to no purpose. In spite of the conclusions of science and common sense, captains of industry, to the end of the chapter, will keep on boasting at the club of infallible systems for "sizing up" men at a glance, bankers will continue to pick out potential absconders to fill positions of great trust and doting school teachers will predict spiritual pre-eminence for future hi-jackers.—Chicago News.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, August 31.—Yesterday's livestock market was very dull, it being the last day of trading before the long week-end. The receipts were 35 cattle and 60 sheep besides one load of lambs which sold at $14.50. Some hogs came in by truck and were sold at steady prices.

Canners $4 to $4.50. There was a little more life in the bull trade; choice heavy selling at $7 to $7.50; choice butcher bulls $7.75 to $8.25; rough bologna bulls $6 to $6.50. Baby beeves were active, choice selling $14 to $14.50; good $12 to $13; medium $11 to $12. On Tuesday trade was steady with Monday. On Wednesday trade was again active and an early clean-up effected.

Springers and milkers — Trade steady, any choice springers are active at $110 to $135; good, $80 to $100; medium to common, $50 to $75; strictly fresh milkers, $70 to $90; good $50 to $60. Common and faulty cows mostly sold over the scales.

Reports from Mr. McCurdy are to the effect that there is an unlimited demand at Winnipeg for all classes of cattle to go to the U.S.A., and prices are high, especially on steers.

Breeding sheep can be obtained from now on.

MONTREAAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was extremely dull. The trade in cash grain in the local market was confined to car lots to meet immediate wants. There was no further change in prices.

A moderate amount of business was done in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour and values were firm.

The demand for all lines of millfeed was fair and values were well maintained. Standard grades of rolled oats were quiet and unchanged.

Owing to the increasing scarcity of fresh extra eggs and the fact that British Columbia dealers have advanced their prices to 41 to 43c per dozen, f.o.b. Vancouver, with Ontario shippers in some cases asking as high as 45c per dozen delivered here, the tone of the local market was strong and prices were quoted one to two cents per dozen higher by some dealers. The demand was good. The receipts were 2,607 cases.

There was no change in the condition of the market for imported beans, the undertone being strong on account of the continued scarcity of supplies on spot. Small lots of choice white hand-picked sold at $4.10 to $4.20 per bushel, exstore, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $3.90 to $4 per bushel, ex-track.

Further strength developed in the butter market and values were marked up another fraction. The demand was inactive. Receipts were 582 packages.

The demand for cheese continued dull and prices were irregular. Receipts were 4,506 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—Buying was dormant in the grain pits yesterday, and with the traders apparently awaiting some new trend to develop, the prices yielded a trifle. A break of three cents in September corn was accompanied by the sale of a round lot of mixed corn by the leading holders, and other deliveries followed September downward at the close.

Threshing returns from the Canadian harvest fields were high, and this, coupled with continued forecasts of clear weather, deterred buyers at the start. There was a short lived spurt soon after the opening that lifted quotations back to Wednesday's close, but support was hesitant and trade quieted down.

Interest was expressed in the amount of frost damage to Canadian crops, one observer reporting the damage was considerable but placing the probable yield in excess of 500,000,000 bushels, while another believed an estimate of 550,000,000 bushels conservative, and the frost damage

REAL MEN NEEDED.

What this country needs more than anything else is men that can think straight—men that can reach conclusions based on intelligence and knowledge. Not on ignorance and prejudice. The nation is crying for men that can neither be caught by the glittering spiderweb of Bolshevism nor blocked by the reactionary's wall of selfishness and stupid precedent.

One bit of Carelessness at the wheel

Their Holiday Ruined —Perhaps WORSE

CARE COURTESY COMMON SENSE

They left for their week-end holiday by motor—all happy and free from care. But the driver took a chance—was careless or inattentive for just a moment. An accident! Their holiday ruined—perhaps worse.

It happens too often. Yet most automobile accidents can be averted if drivers will only be alert all the time.

Again Ontario highways lure the holiday seekers. Because of the International Holiday on Monday—Labour Day—during this week-end over three million persons will be touring on the roads of Ontario. Automobile traffic probably will reach a volume never known before. The hazards of accidents will increase in far greater proportions.

The slightest bit of carelessness or inattention is a positive risk. Play safe always. The few minutes to be gained by taking a chance are not worth while if even a slight risk is incurred.

The driver who maintains a reasonable, steady speed, gets there almost as soon—and gets there safely. The reckless driver, cutting in and out of traffic, now "stepping on it," now jamming brakes, gains little in time and is a constant danger to himself and to his passengers and other innocent people on the road.

During this week-end Traffic Officers and Municipal Police will be particularly vigilant and maximum punishment may be expected by all who receive a summons. Be Careful.

REMEMBER these 7 Rules of Safety

1. Have your car in perfect mechanical shape—particularly Brakes, Steering Gear and Headlights.
2. Give your undivided attention to your driving. In passing traffic, be sure there is a place for you in the traffic line ahead.
3. When other motor vehicles try to pass you—let them pass.
4. In entering main streets or highways, or in approaching a railway crossing where a full view of the track is obstructed, stop and look.
5. Don't "loaf" where traffic is heavy.
6. Always signal before you slow down, stop or change your course.
7. Never back up before ascertaining that the road behind is clear.

KIWANIS HEARS OF EDUCATION

Tendencies of Present Day Discussed By Queen's University Registrar.

INTERESTING ADDRESS.

There have been many fine speakers at Kiwanis, but none have appeared with a more interesting, more comprehensive and unusual subject than that so ably presented at today's luncheon by Dr. W. E. McNeill, Registrar and Treasurer of Queen's University. "At the Crossroads in Education" was the title befitting an address which dealt with the modern tendencies in education from that based on the classics of Greece and Rome toward vocationalism. As in religion, so in education—there has been through the centuries a tendency toward free thought with a tendency toward more practical things, and in his address to-day, Dr. McNeill dealt with this trend—its possibilities for good or evil.

Delegates Named.

The appointment of delegates and alternates to the District Convention at Kingston, September 23, 24, and 25, was one duty performed at today's luncheon, President Joe John and Secretary Herb. Gilgour being appointed, with the vice-president, J. J. Turner, and the treasurer, being appointed alternatives.

Jack Nelson submitted a suggestion from the Agricultural Committee that each Kiwanian spend one day on a farm next week assisting with the harvest—this with a view to developing a better spirit between urban and rural peoples of the district. It fell through.

Miss Daisy Murray provided the musical numbers of the day, following a courteous introduction by President Joe John, who referred to her generosity in the past and to the fact that she is soon to leave Peterborough. Miss Murray's contributions, always so welcome, were to-day outstanding.

Herb. Gilgour's booster prizes were won by Fred Allen J. W. Hanbridge, and J. J. Turner. "J. J." derived pleasure from passing on his prize to Miss Murray.

To Inspector Downey fell the pleasant lot of introducing W. C. McNeill, Registrar and Treasurer of Queen's University, as the speaker of the day. Mr. Downey expressed his pleasure at hearing Miss Murray sing and at the privilege of introducing so splendid a speaker. He spoke of the splendid record of Queen's graduates in every walk of life, and declared that Dr. McNeill had not inherited greatness but had achieved it.

Dr. McNeill.

"I find myself embarrassed by Mr. Downey's introduction, so flattering. I have come to you with a somewhat solemn subject, 'At the Crossroads in Eduaction.' Educational themes seem dull, but are bright at intervals. But education, next to religion, is most subject to changes of thought.

"In the early days, a series of precepts threatened the adventurous free thinker but to-day, despite such back-water impeachments as the attempt to prove Darwin's theory, there has been a strong tendency to go against tradition.

"A similar revolution has occurred in education and there has been a similar reaction.

"What was the traditional education that held the field for centuries I can recall that an education consisted of a sound knowledge of Greek and Latin according to an early teacher, and logic and philosophy based upon it. How did it happen that the study of classics dominated education through the ages? Because when Greece and Rome were at their greatest, a knowledge of their literature, philosophy and arts became paramount, and the glory of Greece and grandeur of Rome have remained impressed upon the intellect of the world. The newer nations learned to turn to the Greek and Latin traditions and writers turned to those languages to make their works immirtal.

"Toward the end of the 19th century, Tennyson finished his great Ode to Virgil, showing why it was that such unswerving allegiance was paid to these ancient classics.

The Mechanical Age

Then came the mechanical and industrial revolutions and the intellectual evolution and above all the development of the democratic ideal that one man was as good as another.

"As a result came the inevitable rebellion against authority — men began to think for themselves. This reaction against religion set in — and art and literature have been interrupted also by departure from tradition. What happened to Education—which brings us to what I call

"The First Cross Road"

But Education, Agricultural Education and various other new schools for the education of the majority began.

But what happened the liberal education — Herbert Spencer, attacked the classics with the education of science.

"Let us go to Oxford. There, 160 years ago was nothing but classics but now even science has crept in. Thus the problem was valued by an enormous education outside the colleges and inside by a broadening of courses.

"The Second Crossroad

The world is becoming more and more practical and this tendency has spread among school and university students. Vocational schools have crept in. In the conservative universities, the yielding to a demand for vocational education has been moderate and for instance philosophy have come to assist the business man. "But radical views have come into other universities and vocational subjects have been promoted by schools of commerce which had their origin in Manchester, England. In these there is the same line of clevage — some principles of economics, foreign trade banking, etc., have been emphasized while on the radical side are the glove and hosiery trade, window dressing, salesmanship, pistol marksmanship (not from the curriculum of the University of Chicago).

"Is the old side of education to be forced back by these new tendencies? If our whole system is to become vocational it will result in the narrowing of lines and the development of a second rate civilization.

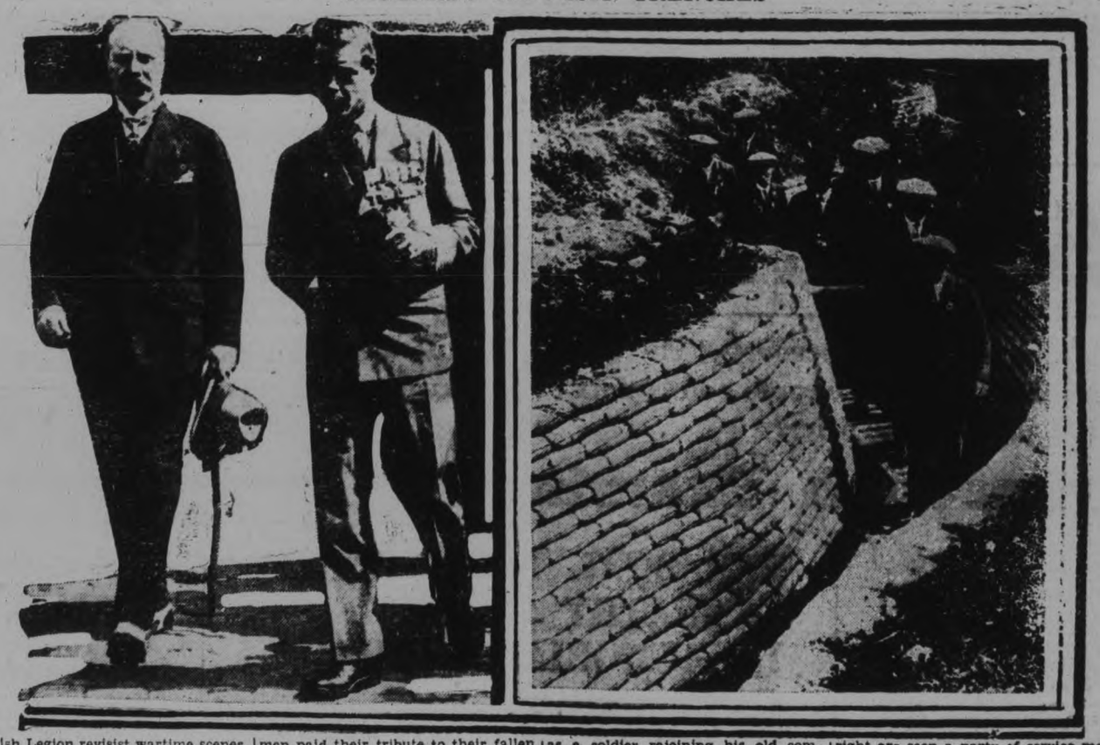
"Mathew Arnold has predicted that mankind will turn more and more to poetry—when I quote two passages glorifying merely what man has become and the other looking forward along evolutionary lines into a dim future—you may decide for yourselves.

"Kiwanis has done an enormous service as a social service club. If you feel that there has been a too great tendency toward vocational education in Peterborough, you will be serving your day in a very fine way. There is a danger that we may sell our birthright for a mess of pottage."

The vote of thanks was sincerely voiced by Charlie Saunders. He also performed another duty. He introduced J. J. Turner who, in turn, on behalf of the club, presented Miss Murray with a beautiful bouquet as a token of regret at her departure from the city.

Among the guests present to-day were J. W. Hanbridge of Peterborough; A. H. McClure of Detroit; Dr. A. G. Howson, and Dr. Neal.

VETERANS RE-VISIT TRENCHES



British Legion revisist wartime scenes. As Britain observed the 14th anniversary of her entry into the great war, some 11,000 British ex-service men paid their tribute to their fallen comrades in a great memorial pilgrimage to the battlefields of France and Flanders. Among the pilgrims, as a soldier rejoining his old comrades, was the Prince of Wales. Above his royal highness is seen at Bethune, walking with the mayor. At the right are seen a party of service men filing through a trench, preserved in its wartime appearance by "sandbags" of concrete, at Vimy Ridge.

were Premier Ferguson and a group of fifty-two men from New Zealand, lawn bowlers from that far-away land who have been making a bowling tour of the world commencing last February and ending in November.

Musical Education

That the children of the land should have an education in music as well as in other branches, and that an item in this achievement might be the installation of a radio in each of the small schools of the country, was the plea made by Hon. Mr. David, during the course of a sparkling and vivacious address which was puctuated by laughter that followed each of the speaker's sly references to differences between the two provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

"Of what benefit is to to develop our material resources if we neglect the intellectual potentialities of the nation?" Mr. David asked. "The wealth of a country is as nothing compared to the brains of a small child. And I believe it is no more difficult to teach music, as an art and as a recreation, to classes of twenty children, than it is to teach chemistry and physics to groups of the same size. I think that education is not education in the broadest sense of the term unless it trains along cultural as well as practical lines.

"If we forget the bad jazz which the radio gives us, we can realize that it is going to play a very important part in the musical education of the people. Broadcasting may become an instrument for good in this way. There are many people who never heard of Rachmaninoff or Mischa Elman or Heifetz until they bought a radio set or a gramaphone, and from these instruments they have learned to like and appreciate such masters of fine music.

Radio for Schools

"Without telling Ontario what it ought to do, it seems to me that it would be an admirable plan to equip every one of its schools with radio sets. At stated intervals each week, great societies, newspapers and other interested institutions would broadcast concerts of great musical classics, to which these schoolroom sets could be tuned in.

"I hope that Quebec will set a good example along these lines, and that Ontario, as in the past, will follow," said Mr. David, to applause. He went on to speak of the fine reception which Ontario always gave its visitors from other sections. "Toronto will always give a Liberal a good reception, although it won't give him a vote," he continued, quoting the words of a former Premier of Canada, and again bringing a ripple of laughter from his listeners.

Hon. Mr. David spoke of the time which he hoped for, when Canada would not need to send its musical-inclined youth abroad for an education, but would have a National Conservatory of Music, of its own. In his pleasant, deliberate speech, with careful enunciation, he went on to tell them the story of the two children who planned to elongate a single penny into two by placing it beneath a railroad train. But when the express had passed, the penny went with it. "It was the Aberdeen Express."

"Come and see us," he concluded, extending an invitation to visit his native province. "Quebec is like a little lady that ofen wants someone to come and see her. She has had compliments showered on her, which she has learned to take with a little salt, and she has had attacks made, which she has learned to take with a little sugar."

Captain Amers

Flight-Lieutenant John Amers, conductor of H.M. Royal Air Force Band, spoke later, referring to the Canadian National Exhibition as the top notch enterprise of its kind in his experience, surpassing even the great Wembley Exhibition of England. He and members of his band have found nothing but kindness during their tour of the Dominion, he said, and they will return to England with a sense of astonishment at the thought of the immensity and resources of this land. He spoke of Banff and the Lake Louise district as being unsurpassed for beauty anywhere in the world, in his opinion.

During his stay in Canada, Lieutenant Amers telephoned from Regina to his wife in London, England; he was initiated as a full chief of the Creek tribe of Indians, and he laid a wreath on the cenotaph at Vancouver, B.C. He spoke of these experiences with pride, and remarked that the visit of the band to this country was for a dual purpose, "to try and help you to cultivate a taste for good music and also to cement the bonds of good felling between Canada and the great Mother Country."

Hon. Mr. Bruce

Hon. Mr. Bruce, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of British Columbia, spoke very briefly. He introduced his short address by comparing himself to the cow which was described by its owner as lacking a pedigree or many good points, but as being "a kind beast who will give you everything she has." He went on to bring words of greeting from his Province to Ontario, and to speak of his pleasure in having his visit synchronize with that of the Empire Parliamentary Delegates, who are visiting the Exhibition to-day.

THINK DRIVER WAS ASLEEP

Provincial Police Advance Theory of Cause of Fatal Accident.

WAS NEW TO JOB.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 31 (Special to The Examiner).—The possibility that Ernie Hicks, victim of Thursday afternoon's wreck of a transport truck near Brantford, may have been overcome by sleep is likely to be probed by the Provincial Police. Hicks, who had returned home from Detroit a few months ago had not had steady work since last Christmas and early this week a friend named Skinner gave him a letter of recommendation to the Merchants' Transport Company. Skinner had worked for the transport company and also had a connection at a service station.

"I have more than I need," he told Hicks. "I'll stay on the service station job and you take the truck."

Hicks made two trips in three days without misadventure and was on his third run when he met death.

Hicks was burned to death at his wheel when he drove through the bridge over Fairchild's creek on the Hamilton highway east of Brantford. The accident occurred when Hicks attempted to pass another car on the bridge. The truck caught fire after the plunge and the driver was imprisoned in the cabin.

OSHAWA LIKELY TO GET BREWERY

License Will Probably Be Issued To Budweiser Firm.

(Special to The Examiner)

OSHAWA, Ont., Aug. 31.— The Budweiser Brewing company of Canada, which had been endeavoring to locate in this city, has been practically assured that it will be granted a license to operate a brewery here, according to information received yesterday afternoon. G. W. Taylor, Commissioner of Excise, in replying to a wire from interested parties in Oshawa, said that the applicants had been informed that there is apparently no objection to issuing a license to the Budweiser Brewing Company of Canada providing that all requirements of the law and regulations are complied with. Sir Henry Drayton, Chairman of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario when requested by wire by the same interests to venture an opinion, replied that he had not given any approval for the license.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

Saturday, September 1, 1928.
(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Until late to-day the planetary rule is unfavorable to many activities on the planet Earth, according to astrology. Benefic aspects are slightly perspective after sundown.

This should be a favorable aspect for the settlement of financial matters, but it is well not to contract new obligations while this configuration prevails.

The sway is most promising to newspapers who will profit greatly by means of advertising.

Writers also will profit through unusual demands for their work and books of sensational contents seem to be foreshadowed.

Judges and lawyers should be cautious to-day, for they may be subjected to severe criticisms, especially those who are seeking any sort of public office.

Merchants and manufacturers should be wary lest they be deceived in making purchases that will be affected by vagaries of fashion which are indicated.

Under this rule many new organizations may be formed, but the indications are not promising for them.

While the stars appear to smile on women they should not be easily swayed by romance and should delay any decision regarding marriage.

There is a good sign for theatres and places of amusement. It is a favorable date for political meetings.

Weddings on this date should be fairly lucky and should be blessed with prosperity.

Astrologers have prophesied for this month the outbreak of wars and revolutions. Rumania, Russia, and Turkey come under a sinister direction of the stars.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of many new interests for the coming year. They should be slow to believe gossip and should cultivate self-confidence.

Children born on this day probably will be affectionate and kind-hearted, successful and happy. These subjects of Virgo are usually capable and efficient. Many writers, musicians, and public speakers are born under this sign.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SQUIGGLE BUG.

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

(By Howard R. Garis.)

Uncle Wiggily was hopping along the Woodland path carrying a soft bundle of bird nesting hairs from the tail of Gup, the kind old horse.

"Yes," said the rabbit gentleman to himself, "these hairs will make a lovely cushion for Baby Bunty to sit on. And another thing," thought Mr. Longears, "If I should happen to stumble and fall on my way home I could hold this bundle of horse hair under my pink, twinkling nose and it wouldn't get bumped."

Uncle Wiggily felt so happy he began to whistle He had just left Gup, the horse, who, as I told you in the story before this, had been fooled by the selfish Cow Bird into switching his tail against a barbed wire fence to pull out a lot of the fine, long hairs on the stickery points. The Cow Bird made Gup do this and the Cow Bird was saving the tail hairs and was going to sell them to other birds next year for making nests Oh, a wise chap was the selfish Cow Bird!

Mr Longears sat on the log

But Uncle Wiggily had taken the hundle of horse hairs from the hollow stump where the Cow Bird had hid them and the rabbit was now skipping along through the woods as happy as a lightning bug on a night in June

"But I don't seem to be having any adventures," said the rabbit gentleman when he had hopped along about as far as you can throw a snowball on June 20, which is the longest day in the year "I thought something would happen before this."

Twinkling his pink nose, Uncle Wiggily sat down on a log to look around. Not far away was a tall, slender, cat-tail plant growing high up in the air.

On the top of the brown cat-tail stalk, away above Uncle Wiggily's head, was a cute, wee, tiny house in which lived a Squiggle Bug with pretty red spots on his wings. And as Mr. Longears sat on the log, looking at the cute little home of the Squiggle Bug on top of the tall cat-tail stalk, all of a sudden the rabbit saw smoke coming out of the windows.

"The Squiggle Bug must be sooking dinner," thought the rabbit. "But there is no use of me expecting to be invited to eat, for the Squiggle Bug's house is so tiny, and so high up on that tall plant, I could never climb up or get in. Anyhow, I doubt if the Squiggle Bug would have enough food for me."

So Uncle Wiggily sat there in the sunshine, blinking his eyes and twinkling his nose and thinking how nice everything was and how Baby Bunty would like her horse hair cushion when he made it for her and all things like that, when, all at once, more smoke poured out of the little teeny weeny windows of the Squiggle Bug's house on top of the tall cat-tail stalk.

"My! That Squiggle Bug must be burning something," said Uncle Wiggily, sniffing the air. More smoke poured out and then, all of a sudden, the Squiggle Bug appeared on the front porch of his house, high up in the air, and the Squiggle Bug began to buzz:

"Help! Help! Help! My house is on fire!"

"What's that?" asked Uncle Wiggily, who had begun to fall asleep.

"What did you say?"

"I said my house was on fire! Dear me! Can't you see the smoke?"

"Yes, I see the smoke," said Uncle Wiggily. "But I thought that was on account of you burning something on the stove when you were cooking lunch."

"Well, that's how it happened," buzzed the Squiggler jumping up and down on his front porch "I began by getting dinner but the teakettle boiled over and now my whole house is burning."

Uncle Wiggily thought it would not take long to burn such a little house as the Squiggle Bug lived in, for it was no longer than your mother's thimble. And then the rabbit gentleman pinched his leg to wake himself up and murmured:

"This is no time to think such things as that. I must help put out the fire."

And it was high time, for the poor Squiggler was jumping up and down faster than ever shouting:

"Save me! Save me!"

And how this was done you shall read to-morrow night. Then if the lead pencil doesn't get stylish and think it's a fountain pen and play in the park, the story will be about Uncle Wiggily, the bug saver.

THE END OF A PERFECT DAY IN HOLLAND.

Much of the pleasure of a holiday in Holland is derived from the quaint customs and old tales which are met everywhere. If I tell how many of these country girls do their courting it will surely interest. There is a proverb here, "There are only two things a girl chooses herself—her potatoes and her lover." I suppose it begins like everywhere else in the world — a glance at a Kermiss or a glimpse on the street, and the young man puts on his best suit, and goes to the home of the girl. He is quietly received by the parents, smiled at by the girl and her sisters, who probably nudge each other. Nothing is said about the reason for his coming, though everyone guesses right. In the late evening the brothers and sisters, even the parents, go to bed and leave the two principals alone. No, he does not fall on his knees. They talk of everything but love. If the girl lets the fire go down, the lad must take it as a sign that he is not wanted and he goes out into the night never to return. If she chooses him, she builds up the fire, and that becomes the end of a perfect day. I wonder what they will do when gas and electricity take the place of the old-fashioned fireplace?

IN DAYS GONE BY

What Peterborough People Read in The Examiner.

MONDAY, AUGUST 31, 1903.
25 Years Ago To-day.

J. A. Fife, Science Master of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute returns from trip into the far north with the Cameron Surveying party. In New Liskeard he encountered several former Peterborough folk prospering, among them being, Mr. Armstrong, now a land agent, William Murray of Otonabee who began up north as a farmer but later drifted into the berth of Librarian in the New Liskeard Public Library; William Tighe, former janitor at the Central school buildings and Hugh and James McFee, formerly of Keene.

R. Gibbs, well known city liveryman has increased his stock by purchasing a two-horse, rubber-tired cab and a single or double Victoria, also rubber-tired.

Thomas Henry, employee at the C.G.E., received painful injury while lifting the wheel of a boiling machine. The board gave way and his foot and leg was submerged into a boiling composition as high as his knee. Fortunately his boot prevented the composition from coming in direct contact with his foot. Dr. Pigeon ordered his removal to his home.

The bicycle road race between Messrs Reefer and Young, scheduled for Saturday afternoon did not materialize. Mr. Reefer and his supporters were at Smith street at 3 o'clock where they met Mr. Young but he declined to race on the grounds that the course was not in a good condition to give a true result. Since Mr. Reefer was willing to race, his supporters were of the opinion that he had won the race by default and presented him with the $25.00. Young offered to race anytime after September 1, and his opponent agreed, providing that he put up the same trophy as his own.

STUDENTS HONORED FAREWELL PARTY

Third Year Men of Nova Scotia Technical School Banquetted.

A very enjoyable evening was spent last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Cameron, 458 George street south.

The occasion being a farewell banquet to the third year students of the Nova Scotia Technical College, Halifax, N.S., by the graduate members of that college now residing in Peterborough.

Blue and grey being the college colours, the banquet room was very prettily decorated with them. While white asters in large blue and gray baskets combined with the black and white of the men's dinner jackets presented a very pleasing scene.

Immediately before starting the dinner a one minute standing silence was held for the late Mr. G. Brown, who was also a graduate of this college.

Mr. Cameron (toastmaster) after a toast to His Majesty the King spoke of how all had enjoyed having the third year boys here this summer and of the regrets at seeing them leave, but extended the very best wishes for their next and final year at the college and that it was hoped they would return to Peterborough next year again.

Mr. Bert Zwicker next proposed a toast to Nova Scotia Technical College. Speaking on the merits of this little college by the sea, young in years but very very old and wise in the manner of education.

Mr. Jerry Clarke replied to this toast in which Mr. Clarke laid stress upon the fact that a little help from the graduate alumni of "Tech." would be appreciated by both the third and fourth year men. That is to say if you are a "Tech" graduate and have or know of a vaacnt position pass it along to some "Tech." man back home. In other words don't forget to put out a helping hand. Mr. Clarke also said that there are many "Tech." men working in places were occasionally a third year man goes, but he would never know it. Don't be ashamed of your college, if it was good enough to graduate from it is good enough to stick up for and stand by.

Mr. Ian Patterson followed with a toast to the third year boys, telling them when they go back to keep up the "spirit" for which "Tech" is noted and also how much he and Mr. Zwicker would miss the hearty handclaps which as Mr. Patterson says, gives one a mighty thrill.

He also mentioned that in all sports and in fact everything undertaken by Tech. there will always be a strong backing of its alumni and above all things co-operation must be strongly developed. He closed with a few witty remarks on how much they would be able to tell their professors they had learned during their three months with the Canadian General Electric Co. here. Mr. Harry Bell next responded with a toast to the graduates, speaking of their hospitality and of how a little encouragement in the way to telegrams and so forth go to buck up the spirits of the rugby team or any athletic team just before a big game. It gives them a feeling that the old boys are still with them in spirit. Mr. Bell also expressed the regrets of Mr. Alfred Mahon who on account of illness was unable to attend.

Mr. Cameron before the singing of the National Anthem wished the third year boys to tells the faculty of "Tech" that its graduates feel after coming in touch with the business world and its associates that a Nova Scotia Technical College graduate is capable of competing with those of any other college in the world and that as time goes on they will feel more and more grateful of their Alma Mater for her wonderful training which has made this possible and for the very personal and active interest and co-operation of the faculty.

Ending the Nova Scotia Technical College yell a very enjoyable evening was brought to a close.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31. — When the tired business man plays golf and bets on the result, he is doing his nerves more harm than good, according to Frederick Pierce, a New York psychologist, who addressed the Executives' Club here. There is more mental strain in a round of golf for money than there is in a whole week's office work, he said.

MISTAKE SAVES JEWELS

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Miss Rosabelle Whitely, a maid, disobeyed her employer and got a raise. She was told to pack Mrs. L. F. Foster's jewelry in the case Mrs. Foster was taking on a motor trip. The case was stolen from the car, but later it was discovered that Rosabelle had forgotten to put in the $45,000 worth of jewels.

to quality rather than quantity. Private crop figures are due next Tuesday.

Export demand was slow most of the day, but toward the close Portugal was reported a buye rof 3,500,000 bushels of wheat for shipment by June, and late cables had a distinctly better tone. The Portuguese purchase was of American or Argentine wheat at the sellers' option. Some wheat was reported available for export from the Black Sea district. Wheat finished ⅝ to 1⅛c lower: September 1.10⅛; December, $1.15⅛ to ⅝; March, 1.20⅛ to ½; and May $1.22½ to ⅝.

Official reports indicating that corn in portions of Kansas and Iowa has been adversely affected by heat and drought seemed to have no influenced on the futures. September corn did advance at one time to a fraction above Wednesday's close but the rally was brief and discouraged holders of September and disinterested buying support together drove down all corn deliveries. Shipments out of Chicago totaled 212,000 bushels. Corn closed heavy at ⅝ to 3⅛c lower: September 92¾ to ⅞; December 74⅛ to ¼; March 76⅜ to ½, and May 78⅜.

Oats were dull and easier with corn, closing ⅜ to ½c lower: September 38½; December 40⅝ to ½; March 42¾, and May 44⅛.

Provisions were generally easy. September lard down 10c to 12.30 to 12.32.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, August 31. — Distinct firmness featured yesterday's butter trading on tde local wholesale produce market. Advances of a cent a pound for all grades were announced at the close of the market session.

The week has not produced any changes of importance on Canadian egg markets. Developments which have taken place have merely solidified the position of a week ago and the situation is now clearly reaching the stage where fresh receipts will be insufficient to meet consumptive requirements and storage stocks will be drawn on to make up the deficit. Reports from various sections of the country do not indicate that the storage movement now is much greater than a week ago. A few small supplies are being moved out of the coolers in some centres and quotations are being issued in others, but retailers are not anxious to use storage stocks so long as fresh supplies are available. There is also a tendency on the part of dealers to wait until the weather turns a little cooler before drawing on storage stocks to any appreciable extent.

The scarcity of supplies has resulted in active trading, both in carlot and less than carlot shipments with points not receiving sufficient to meet their requirements buying freely from centres where a slight surplus exists. With supplies scarce, of course, this trading has not reached any great volume, but any offerings are taken readily. There have been some further importations of American eggs costing approximately 37 cents laid down. It is understood that the majority of these eggs are of fairly good quality, and it is the opinion at Toronto at least that these ardivals are tending to prevent any further immediate local price advances. United States markets showed a firmness on fresh receipts at the end of the week and it is probable that this may be reflected in Canadian prices during the coming week.

CONFIDENCE MEN USE GLASS GEMS

Swindle Hamilton Man Out of $1,100—Make Getaway.

HAMILTON, Aug. 31.—Despite a city-wide police search, the two confidence men who swindled Peter Stringer, 23 Cathcart street, on Wednesday, had not been apprehended last night. It was the old gag of a stranger making the acquaintance of his prospective victim on a business pretext, of being joined later by an accomplice, and quickly putting on the work.

A slim, well-dressed stranger called on Stringer and said he was in the market to buy real estate. While walking on Ferguson avenue, to inspect some of Stringer's property holdings, the two were approached by a young man of Russian countenance.

"Pardon me," he said, "are both of you Jewish?" Stringer and his companion admitted they were, and the tihrd man informed them in confidence he had just landed in Canada with a quantity of diamonds he was anxious to sell. Stringer's newfound friend advised purchase and a sample stone was taken to Controller Peebles' jewelry store on King street for appraisal. The clerk in the store estimated its value at $700.

Stringer immedaitely became interested. The purchase price was fixed at $3,500 for the lot. Stringer had $70 with him and went to the bank to draw out $1,050, the understanding being that his companion would put up a like amount. That individual, however, was short of cash, but was positive his brother-in-law would oblige him with a loan. Stringer turned over $1,125 to the owner of the diamonds, the stones being given to him to keep, and the three separated, the understanding being that they would meet at Wellington Park later. Stringer waited long past the appointed time, became suspicious and took the stones to another jeweller for appraisal. There he was told they were worthless, the genuine stone having been removed from the assortment by the swindlers.

Good descriptions of the men have been given the police, but they are satisfied the confidence artists have shaken Hamilton's dust from their feet.

'WILD MAN' CAUGHT.

East London Residents Had Been Terrified By His Actions.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 31.—Police early last night arrested a man whom they believe is the "wild man" who has been terrifying residents in the vicinity of Clark's side road near this city. He is being held at the County Jail on a nominal charge of vagrancy. He was taken into custody in East London after several complaints had been lodged with the police regarding his actions. He was running across lawns and climbing onto verandahs. He told the police that he had been working at the barrel works in East London and had been living in a shack at the rear of the factory. He had $3 in his pockets when arrested. He is about 50 years of age, and has long, straggly hair and a thick, unkempt beard.

FINED DIME FOR BOOZE

JERSEY CITY, Aug. 31. — Because he had waited four weeks in jail before his trial was called Louis Totar was fined 10 cents for possessing liquor. This is not the smallest liquor fine, however. Two years ago Federal Judge Lynch fined a man 5 cents and, when the prisoner couldn't produce it, the judge paid the fine himself.

STOMACH TROUBLES THAT ARE DANGEROUS

(CUT THIS OUT)

Some forms of stomach trouble, if neglected, often lead to dangerous conditions — ulcers or cancers—then, a surgical operation is about the only hope.

For this reason, even the most simple stomach ailments should be given prompt and careful attention. So, don't neglect acid stomach, sourness, gas or bloating! And don't waste time with unknown or unreliable treatments. At the very first signs of distress, go to any good drug store and obtain a few cents' worth of pure Bisurated Magnesia. This special Magnesia Compound is safe and pleasant to take—quickly, almost instantly, effective and does not act as a laxative. Be sure and ask for BISURATED Magnesia for stomach troubles only.

A PEACEFUL IDYLL

What is Life? Is it a never-ending routine of shopping, visiting theatres, or attending dances? Or is it the sitting beneath a canopy of leafy trees imagining that the hardships and worries of life are far distant, and in front of us the steady lap of waters? The latter, we all agree, for it has many compensations not found in the former. It is in the country that we sing a new song, with the hidden brook offering its peaceful accompaniments. It is with the Noble trees, and hills and valleys, that the beauties of life are reflected, and the highest emotions creep forth. Go to the Kawartha Lakes, Muskoka, Georgian Bay, the Bungalow Camps at French River and Nipigon or the many other delightful spots for which Ontario is noted and revel in the peace and beauty of forest and stream.

BELLEVILLE FAIR SETS NEW RECORD

The result was the largest attendance of any one day since the new organization was effected. Treasurer Harry Stock states that 9,059 passed through the gates. Six men operating two booths were arrested by the police. They were running a game contrary to the Fair regulations. The accused were each fined $15 and costs.

NO SECRET CLAUSE IN NAVAL TREATY

French Minister of Marine Denies Rumors About Tentative Pact.

PARIS, Aug. 31. — (Canadian Press).—Interviewed by Le Matin, Minister of Marine, Georges Leygues categorically denied that the Franco-British tentative naval accord contains any secret clause or any agreement for joint naval or military action.

He furthermore denied that it embodies even the slightest infringment of the Washington naval convention but he cannot explain the exact terms of the agreement until the other naval powers have commented upon it.

KINGSTON MURDER.

Mrs. Maud Victoria Williams, an honor Arts 1925 graduate of Queen's University, whose murder is charged to her husband, Wilbert Richard Williams, is shown in the top picture. LOWER is a view of their home at Kingston, Ont. They had been married only 13 months. The husband telephoned police saying: "I think I have killed my wife." He said he hit her over the head with a claw hammer because she "nagged" him when he went to the bathroom without his slippers. The case has aroused wide interest owing to the prominence of the principals. Both were former Collegiate teachers and the victim was very popular. The husband was regarded as "a bit eccentric." Only the day before they had played tennis together. Williams, aged 46, also taught in the Sunday School, and was a faithful churchgoer. He had private means, it is said, sufficient to have retired in 1927 from his profession. He showed no emotion over the affair, calmly smoking cigarettes in his cell. He is a graduate of Toronto University.

HOLDUP VICTIM WOUNDED HIMSELF

Was Trying To Kill Himself Because of Quarrel With Wife.

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—After telling the police that he had been attacked by a bandit at Brooklyn Avenue and Queen Street, Wednesday night, and shot in the arm, Charles W. Toohey, 36 Spruce street, confessed to Detective Harry Clarke yesterday morning that his story of the hold-up was false and that really he had wounded himself while despondent. Toohey, who is recovering from his wound in St. Michael's hospital, is charged with attempted suicide.

Toohey related quite a sensational story to Sergeant Henshaw and other officers. He said that he had been on his way home on Brooklyn avenue, when the thug had stepped from the shadow of a telegraph pole, and after robbing him of two dollars, had shot him.

The tale looked fine until Detective Clarke, not liking the ring of it, and suspecting that Toohey was not telling the truth, began investigation in the vicinity of the affair. After a search, Clarke discovered a revolver in a garbage can within a few feet of where the wounding had occurred.

This he took to Toohey at the hospital. At first the fellow denied that it was his, but after pressure had been brought to bear on him he admitted its ownership, stating that he had purchased the weapon from a poolroom habitue for $3, with the intention of shooting himself, because of a difference with his wife, from whom he was separated.

But his aim was poor. He walked about with his wounded arm until he arrived at Brooklyn avenue and Queen street, and then, not yet being dead, for some reason he could not explain, he fired a shot in the air and aroused the residents.

BOBS IN CHINA

TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 31.—Maybe there are some old-fashioned girls in China, but a cargo brought here recently from the Orient bears evidence that the bobbed hair craze is sweeping that country. The ship discharged seventeen bales of Chinese women's tresses and several other shipments are expected soon.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

THE GENERAL APPEARANCE of the kitchen has been, and is at the present time, a topic for discussion especially among the farm folks.

• • • • • • •

The kitchen is the most used of any room in the house, especially on the farm. For this reason, it must be a pleasant room with bright furnishings.

• • • • • • •

To make the kitchen beautiful will improve the quality of the meals to a certain degree, because the housewife does not mind staying in such a room to cook the meals. The health will also be improved because there is less friction and annoyance to disturb oneself.

• • • • • • •

It is possible, if one is willing to take the trouble, to make the kitchen not only a workshop, but a place of beauty.

• • • • • • •

The kitchen has long been regarded only for its utility value. It has been forgotten that the average woman spends a large proportion of her life there, probably two-thirds of her time, in many cases.

• • • • • • •

Why not, then, make it as pleasant and pretty as possible?

• • • • • • •

To begin to make your kitchen attractive, start by choosing a suitable linoleum for the floor, of the color scheme you want to make your kitchen. You might choose black and white—a color scheme which is very popular to-day—in order that any color scheme will go into it.

• • • • • • •

To decorate the walls, take the color scheme of the linoleum. If it be gray and blue—let the walls be gray with blue trimming and so on.

• • • • • • •

It is better to have the larger furnishings in the kitchen such as the ice-box, cupboard, etc., painted in the neutral color. The smaller things would be pretty done in the brighter color.

• • • • • • •

A very pretty and very essential furnishing are the curtains. Curtains which would add greatly to the appearance of the kitchen can be bought in some of our stores for a very nominal sum.

• • • • • • •

In a recent issue of a well-known magazine, I came across the following words, comparing the kitchen of to-day with that of long ago: "This new kitchen nicely done, through contrast with the older one, is twice as handy, sleek and nice; it has more pep, more joy, more spice for us because we now can see, what monsters kitchens used to be!" Of course we all know that our kitchens are much more cosy and attractive than those of our forefathers.

• • • • • • •

Isn't it annoying to have one's dresses always slipping off their hangers? To remedy this, wind elastic bands around the ends of your hangers, and you will not be troubled any further with dresses slipping from them.

• • • • • • •

A very small amount of gasoline in the water when scrubbing very dirty floors will do away with grease spots.

• • • • • • •

We often wonder why so many women are so interest in shopping for materials to make clothes, and one reason is because they enjoy very much making clothes for themselves and for their families.

• • • • • • •

Many ingenious women are able to copy the very fashionable dresses from the newspaper illustrations from Mary Marshall shown in The Examiner every night.

• • • • • • •

Many women find while in shopping for the cheaper grades of garments, that the made-up garment is generally the most economical buy.

• • • • • • •

Unless you study the possibilities, in any event, in home sewing, you will not know of its many economies. This applies to wearers or shoppers after all classes of garments.

• • • • • • •

To prevent a blister on the heel when shoes slip, rub paraffin or soap on the stocking. In a short time the slipping will stop. If slippers do not cling to the feet while dancing, gum a small piece of velveteen and place it inside the back of each heel. Or try a patch of adhesive tape.

• • • • • • •

New gloves have arrived in the shops. If you fall ensemble is a navy blue one, you may choose pale gray gloves with navy trimmings. Imported cape kid gloves in bright red, jade green and navy blue are very tailored and show the tendency of fall gloves to be short.

• • • • • • •

To put out a coal oil fire, pour milk over the flames; it will put the fire out at once. Don't pour water on burning fat; smother it with flour or an old blanket.

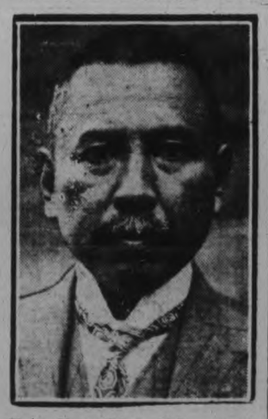
This week the Home Help offered is instructions for making one of the new pointed slips—these instructions will be sent you on receipt of the coupon printed on this page and a two-cent stamp.

PROTESTS AGAINST LAW.



Chow Kwo Hsien, PhB., consul-general for China at Ottawa, who has protested to the Ontario government authorities in an attempt to prevent the enforcement of the law prohibiting the employment of white girls in restaurants, factories and laundries operated by Chinese. Mr. Chow Hsien is protesting the law on the grounds that it is beyond the power of the provincial government to discriminate legally against foreign residents of the Dominion.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The new minaret bears very little resemblance to the rather stiff, wired short tunic that came into fashion and then quickly made its farewell bow a dozen years ago. And even less does it resemble the sloping roof of an actual minaret.

The peplum that is spoken of as the new minaret flounce is shown here in a dotted silk of grey and white, worn with black hat and pointed fox scarf.

When these tunics appear to be a continuation of the bodice you may choose to call them peplums instead. Sometimes they seem more like tiers of the skirt—but apparently they become minarets only when they are quite short and fairly outstanding.

There are new hat bands made of three different sorts of ribbon braided together. Sometimes two strands of belting ribbon are used with one strand of velvet ribbon and the belting ribbon may be striped or of solid color. These bands are knotted at the ends with the three strands of ribbon hanging loose two or three inches to form a side trimming for the hat.

The large artificial flower is more often worn on the hip than the shoulder in the new evening frocks I have seen. A red transparent velvet gown with a deep yoke has three large roses placed one below the other slightly to the front of the left hip and a new blue chiffon evening gown has two enormous blue velvet roses placed in the front, one at the girdle and one just below it.

From Paris comes a silk scarf for wear with a tailored suit, made of finely figured silk, and to go with it a buttonhole bouquet of little flowers made from the same silk. Another Parisian novelty consists of a handbag covered with finely dotted silk with a four-in-hand tie to match—to be worn with the mannish two-piece suit.

MARION'S MAIL.

"Dar Marion:

I enjoy your column so much—it is like having a friendly little chat with so many different types of people to read the letters that you print.

There is just one suggestion I would like to make for the Women's Page—why not a special column for business girls? There are so many of us in Peterborough and I think we meet problems that are not so very likely to come up elsewhere.

Here is one of my problems. We have several clients who are Roman Catholic priests. I am a Protestant. "Father" seems too beautiful and intimate a title to use unless one is of that faith and the title has a real meaning to one. One the other hand, there are times when it is necessary to use a name, and it would seem an insult to say "Mr." although the majority of Protestant Clergy are addressed in that way.

Just how would you overcome the difficulty?

—PUZZLED."

I am very glad, "Puzzled," that you enjoy the column, and I am delighted that so many readers help me.

Your suggestion for a column for business girls is good, but the difficulty is to keep such a column going. If you can enthuse your friends and get them to help out, I'll be very glad to conduct it—say on Saturdays. Just sound them out and let me know—and we'll start on Saturday, September 8. Please mark your letters, "Business Girls' Column," so that I can't get them mixed up..

Your problem after all, has only one solution, and that is not really what you desire. I have never yet been in the position where I really had to say "Mr." Your conversation can be changed around to avoid it—if you so desire. And even in address the King or the Prince of Wales it is correct to say "Sir," so why not in your case say, "Yes, sir," instead of, "Yes, Father So-and-So," or, "Yes, Mr. So-and-So?" I don't see any objection, personally, to the "Mr." form of address when speaking with a Roman Catholic priest any more than when speaking with a Protestant Clergyman.

"Dear Marion:

You're all right.
May the blessing of God rest on all
Who cheer, inspire, and build up,
With poem and prayer and practical help,
And never, never give up.

Yours earnestly,
—CONTSANCE."

Thank you, Constance, for your delightful sentiment. I get a real thrill out of my work of conducting this column. In fact, I enjoy it more than any other work I do—and I have to do plenty!

One of the big things in life is helping others, and I think this column is filling a great purpose in giving readers an opportunity to pass on ideas that aid and inspire. In that class is your little poem. Won't you give me another for my Saturday "Songs of Love"? I think that one last Saturday by Judy O'Shea was wonderful.

And, anyhow, write soon again.

Marion

Bisons Leading International League Race

DEFEAT READING IN DOUBLE BILL

Make Record of Sixteen Wins in Last Eighteen Games.

ROCHESTER IN SECOND.

BUFFALO, N.Y., August 31.—(Canadian Press)—The Buffalo Bisons whirled into first place in the League standing by a full game here yesterday when they twice came from behind to thrash the Reading Keys by scores of 5 to 4 and 4 to 1 to make a record of sixteen victories in their last eighteen games. The Bisons ended the winning streak of the great Socks Seibold when they thumped him from the mound in the fifth inning of the first game for his fifth loss of the season. Fielding plays of the three reel thriller type saved Curly Ogden's face in the second game when he was tapped for 14 hits in seven innings and yielded only two runs. Thomas, Marriott, Moore and Fisher all negotiated plays that seemed impossible. Bill Kelly and George Fisher furnished the drives to beat Welch when each hit terrific home runs in the sixth and final inning. Fisher's triple also was the principal drive in the winning three run rally in the first game.

LOSE TO BLACK CATS.

ROCHESTER, August 31.—(Canadian Press).—Rochester dropped to second place in the International League schedule here yesterday losing to the Jersey City Black Cats 5 to 1. Jersey City rallied in the ninth inning to find Jim McCracken for five hits, including two doubles and two triples before Herman Bell took the mound. Another hit off Bell brought in the fifth run of the game.

Through the first eight innings, McCracken had allowed but four safe blows and but one man had reached second base, Selkirk reached that station in the eighth. Bream had allowed one run in the second inning and it looked like a victory-producer, until the Cats broke loose with their heavy artillery. The first run was scored with one man away and the next four after two were out.

WIN FOURTH STRAIGHT.

MONTREAL, Que., August 31.—(Canadian Press).—The Royals won their fourth straight game here yesterday afternoon and jumped into a virtual tie with Reading for fourth place when they defeated the Newark Bears, 11-7, in a freely-hitting contest that opened the last series between these two teams this season. Hub Pruett, who opened for the Bears, was batted to the showers in the third after six runs had been scored and the Royals kept up the attack on Jack Bentley to breeze through to a victory. Roy Sherrid was hit hard but was never in danger and took his own time with the Bears scoring his third straight triumph over Walter Johnson's team without a defeat. Jacobson and Haines hit homers.

Olaf Herset a former Norwegian ski-jumper has made a good impression as a light heavyweight fighter in recent appearances before some of the New York boxing clubs.

EVERTON WILL MEET PORTSMOUTH

Principal Among Saturday's Matches in English First Division League.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press Cable). — English first division league soccer has swung into its stride with a rush this season and though the season is only one week old the matches have begun to develop intense interest. Principal among the matches next Saturday will be the clash between Everton, league champions, and Portsmouth. last week Portsmouth downed Huddersfield town, runner up for both English cup and league championship last season. The match will be played at Everton. Portsmouth had a splendid career in the minor leagues, being promoted to senior company last year. They languished near the bottom of the averages for a long time and then, due to a lavish expenditure of money on players, managed to escape relegation. Everton won their first match against Bolton Wanderers last Saturday through the brilliance of their great center forward, Dean. However, the champions could not do better than draw with Sheffield on Wednesday.

Another fine fixture will be the domestic affair between Manchester United and Mancher City, the latter team having come up from the winners this year.

Leeds United, the other second division clubs, to earn promotion will get a real testing this week, as they have to travel to Leicester City, the third team in the averages for 1927-28. Leeds United made a fine start last Saturday when they humbled Aston Villa by four goals to one. They also swamped Bury in a mid-week fixture.

The Scottish first division lay out is not attractive as usual because such teams as Celting, Rangers and Queen's Park have no league engagements this week.

WIN FROM BRITISH PAIRS

Victors Take All Four Points After Inauspicious Start.

FOR WALKER CUP.

CHICAGO GOLF CLUB, Chicago, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—In the first clash between British and United States premier golfers for the Walker Cup, the home players made a clean sweep yesterday of the two-ball foursomes and won all four points after an inauspicious start. Much of the golf was not good but some of the matches finished with a burst of brilliancy.

Bobby Jones and Chick Evans had a hard struggle with Major C. O. Hezlet and W. L. Rowe, but they finally became two up at the 27th hole, and scoring the last six holes in 20 strokes, won handily.

The only one-sided match was that in which George Von Elm and Jess Sweetser, up all the way after the second hole, put out the British champion, T. P. Perkins, and the British captain, Dr. William Tweddell, 7 and 6, having gained a lead of 7 up in the first round.

Ouimet and Jimmie Johnston, the only pair down at the end of the first round, came back strong yesterday afternoon and ended in a blaze of glory when Johnston whaled home a spoon shot of 220 yards to the green of the 527-yard 16th hole so close that Ouimet tapped it down with one hand for an eagle 3, the Britons, T. A. Torrance and Eustace Storey, losing 4 and 2.

Gunn and Roland MacKenzie, after losing the first four holes, ended the round 2 up on Beck and Dr. A. R. MacCullum, and finally won 7 and 5.

To-day the teams will contest for the remaining eight points in as many singles matches.

BRITISH CHAMP BEATS BROWN

Johnny Hill, Scottish Flyweight, Earns Decision Over Newsboy Brown.

HARD FOUGHT BOUT.

LONDON, August 30.—Johnny Hill, clever little Scot, won the decision over Newsboy Brown of New York in a fifteen round bout here Wednesday night. Hill is the British and European champion at 112 pounds.

The bout was clean and hard fought from the first gong. The final rounds turned into a terrific slugging match with Brown trying for a knockout, which was his only chance of overcoming the big lead on points that the clever Scotsman had piled up in the earlier frames.

Hill had the advantage in nine of the fifteen rounds. Brown took four and two were even.

The British fighter made the American miss many wild swings in his attempts to land.

In another bout scheduled to go 15 rounds, Johnny Curey, of England, won from Sammy Shack, American bantam, in the seventh round when Shack was disqualified for fouling.

LEAFS SPLIT WITH ORIOLES

Lose First Game in 11 Innings, But Win the Second.

HEAVY HITTING.

TORONTO, Aug. 31.— The Leafs' best yesterday in the first double-header of three to be played in as many days with the Orioles was an even break. They lost the first game 6 to 3 and they won the second 9 to 3. The first game went eleven innings, but the Leafs were more or less lucky to be in that long.

Wally Leverenz, veteran southpaw, was hit hard and often. He was raked for sixten hits and only some great work by his supporting cast prevented him being overwhelmed. Three times double plays relelved the pressure for him and so did swell running catches by Ralph Shinners and Clayton Sheedy.

Jess Doyle started out to pitch the second game but did not last long. He filled the bases on walks in the opening inning, pitching nine straight balls before putting over a strike. Somehow or other he got by without a run being scored.

He did not in the second. Clark laced the ball past Alexander's mit a mile a minute and when it passed out of sight at the end of the stand the umpires gave Clark a home run.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Raybestos and Napanee in return O.B.A.A. game here in Exhibition grounds to-morrow afternoon.

After a visit in two towns for O.B.A.A. playdowns, Raybestos club officials are a bit critical of group conveners. The East Peterborough League was tied down to a strict observance of the O.B.A.A. constitution, but what they get away with elsewhere is a vastly different story.

* * * *

If Raybestos can make it two straight against Napanee, Art. Primeau's ball tossers will likely get a game next week with the winner of the Stouffville-Penetang series. Stouffville club has been getting a lot of notice because of the team's pitching ability. Such a series should produce some fine ball games.

* * * *

Big Ed. Barry, the 'Charlie Murray' of the Rays got a laugh from players and fans alike at Napanee. There was not a shingle at the pitching box, the home plate bore but feeble resemblance to the real thing, and there was much hay. In search of a ball thrown into the infield, Umpire-in-chief Colling was busily engaged in his hunt for the spalding when Barry with fine sarcasm asked: "What are you looking for, the home plate?"

* * * *

Starting with their series against the Cogs, Raybestos have won seven straight games, taking the second and third contests in the city finals, two from Hastings, two from Cobourg and one from Napanee. The Brakeliners should be in good shape to tackle some stiff opposition which they undoubtedly will get in the next round The victor of the round goes into the Ontario finals.

* * * * * *

The Royals will meet the Elizabeths, champions of Toronto here on Monday afternoon at the Exhibition Park by reason of the latter's 9-5 victory over Oshawa's junior entry in the O.B.A.A. play-offs. Kitchen, the pitching ace for the locals will meet his match in the person of Levinsky, hurler for the Lizzies who is counted upon as being one the best performers in the junior ranks. Baseball fans cannot afford to miss this, it will be a hard fought contest right from the beginning to the end. Game will start sharp at 3 o'clock.

MOTHER AWAITS FASTEST HUMAN

Percy Williams Due To Arrive at Montreal On Sunday Morning.

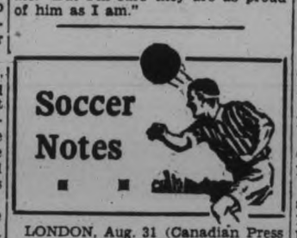
MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—Having come 3,000 miles to welcome home her boy who won fame for himself and his country at the Olympic Games, Mrs. Charlotte Williams, of Vancouver, is staying with friends at St. Anne De Bellevue, near Montreal, awaiting the arrival or Percy Williams, winner of the 100 and 200-metre sprints at Amsterdam. Williams is on the White Star liner Doric, due at Quebec to-morrow and at Montreal on Sunday morning.

Mrs. Williams, in an interview, said her son would not go to a United States University in the fall. "He will attend the University of British Columbia, and will complete his education there. But, of course, that's all up to him. He will decide for himself, and I am sure he will want to stay in Vancouver and Canada." Mrs. Williams, in reply to a question, said she had received several offers from United States universities.

The sprinter's mother said he had made her "the proudest mother imaginable. Really, I never thought he would be the best of the runners in those races. I felt sure, at first, that it would be some American or European runner who would win. I had confidence that my son would do well but he did better than I thought.

After Percy arrives, his mother said, they would go to Toronto, where he will be given a civic reception, thence to Winnipeg and another reception. From there they will go to Vancouver, the "home town," where he will receive the greatest reception of all.

"Vancouver is so anxious to greet him," Mrs. Williams said. "You would think he belonged to them and not to me. But I'm sure they are as proud of him as I am."



LONDON, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press Cable).—Football games played in the Old Country yesterday resulted as follows:

English League—Third Division, Southern Section.

Northampton T. 2, Luton T. 2.
Queen's Park R. 0, Newport Co. 0.

Northern Section.

Carlisle U. 2, Bradford City 2.

BRAVES WIN FROM PHILLIES

Homers Feature 6-5 Victory Made By Boston in National.

CUBS LEAD REDS.

NEW YORK, August 31.—(Canadian Press).—A two bagger by Bell with the bases full in the sixth inning was the deciding factor in the six to five win the Braves pinned on the Phillies in the first game of their series at Boston.

Cy Williams and Freigau drove balls into the left field bleachers for homers. Cy hit his in the first with Leach on and Freigau got his in the eighth. Williams provided the fielding features.

Cincinnati and Chicago engaged in a contest for runner-up honors to St. Louis yesterday and the Cubs won a 2 to 0 decision in six innings when rain forced a postponement of play. Root held the Reds to four hits. Chicago scored in the fifth on Hartnett's double, Beck's triple and Root's sacrifice fly.

Roberti-Hansen Fight For Charity

NEW YORK, August 31.—(Canadian Press).—Humbert Fugazy, boxing promoter, announced yesterday that he hopes to put on a heavyweight bout in which both main event principals will forfeit their purses for charity.

The match, Fugazy said, he had in the making is between Roberto Roberti and Knute Hansen, "the Durable Dane", and is set tentatively for 15 rounds at Ebbets Field, October 12.

RUTH MAKES 47TH HOMER

But Senators Win 3-1 Decision From Yanks at Washington.

ATHLETICS ALSO LOSE.

NEW YORK, August 31.—(Canadian Press).—Babe Ruth's forty-seventh home run was insufficient to halt the Senators at Washington yesterday afternoon, and the Yankees were forced to accept a 3 to 1 reverse in the opening game of the series. Waite Hoyt absorbed his fourth defeat of the season as Sad Sam Jones, the former Yankee right hander, had one of his very best afternoons. Since the Athletics also lost, the Yankees retained their margin of two and one half games over the runners up.

Ruth's drive was the only real dent the Yanks made in the armor of the gallant old sage through a long and sultry afternoon. It was delivered in the seventh with none out, and placed the Babe seven games, seven days and five home runs ahead of his record schedule of last year.

The Yankees lost the game in the sixth inning yesterday when the Senators broke a scoreless tie with five hits and three runs. Singles by Rice and Judge tossed on either side of Goslin's triple gave the home boys their first two. Bluege's sacrifice and Reeve's bounder through Koenig for a single sent Judge around with the third marker.

The lightning in the great right arm of big Ed Morris of Boston struck thrice in the same place yesterday afternoon, and so deprived the Athletics of the chance to profit from the Yankee reverse in Washington. The great hulk of the right hander blazed his fast one past the bats of Joe Hauser, Tris Speaker and Eddie Collins in succession in the ninth inning and the three resultant strike outs saved a lead of 3 to 2 the Red Sox had earned in their own half of the round.

The defeat of the two leaders left the Mackmen trailing the Yanks by the same two and one half games.

A three run assault in the first by Detroit was too much of a handicap and the Tigers won the last game of the series with Cleveland and the final contest of the season between the clubs, 5 to 3, the first four men to face Willis Hudin hit safely, Hargrave's triple driving home Neun, McManus and Gehringer. After the initial session, the game was a pitching battle between Hudlin and Vic Sorrell.

Detroit and Cleveland met 22 times during the season, the Tigers winning 12 games and the Indians 10.

NAPANEE PLAY HERE SATURDAY

Bentley Will Be On Mound For Visitors in Return Game.

AT EXHIBITION PARK.

Napanee, with Bentley pitching, should make a much better showing against Raybestos at Exhibition Park on Saturday afternoon. After Bentley, who was the relieving pitcher, retired the side in that awful third frame at Napanee on Wednesday, he twirled good ball. His teammates got all the bad breaks of the contest, having to field many ground balls on what is probably the worst diamond in the province. Napanee has a fine catcher in Cairns, who has plenty of pep, and a great throwing arm.

To-morrow's game will start at three o'clock with Umpires Kay and LeBarr in charge. The arrangement for umpires for the series were made by the O.B.A.A.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

REGENT FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Loyalty to Engine by Driver Pictured in 'The Night Flyer." William Boyd, Star, Displays Affection When "99" Wins Gruelling Race.

No boy is more loyal to his dog than is the old engineer or fireman to his locomotive, according to railroad legends. This love of his engine by William Boyd, starring as a railroad fireman in "The Night Flyer," James Cruze's new production for Pathe-DeMille, is perhaps the most interesting feature of the story.

Walter Lang, who directed the picture, has caught the spirit exactly and built it to greater proportions. "The Night Flyer" will be shown at the Regent theatre on Friday and Saturday next. Jobyna Ralston plays opposite the star.

It is because of Boyd's love that the division superintendent of the Y.M. and T.R.R. preserves old "99" one of the most famous engines of the West. When old "99" makes her last mad rush across the plains with the United States mail, reaching its destination on time, the locomotive seems almost human as it puffs before the station while Boyd caresses her, tears in his eyes.

"Engineers and firemen regard their mounts as human," an old-timer in the railroad yards told Cruze and Lang. "These men call their engines by pet names. They take loving care of them, keeping them polished and oiled. If they gave as much attention to their wives, these women would probably wonder if their husbands were gone suddenly crazy."

Labor Day

"The Patsy," Marion Davies' new starring production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which comes to the Regent Theatre Labor Day is the filmization of one of the most popular stage farces of the last theatrical season. The play, which ran for many weeks on Broadway and in every other large city in the country was only very slightly changed for film purposes.

TOSS HORSESHOES AT FAIR GRONDS

Several Courts Will Be Laid Out For Exhibition Week.

There's going to be plenty of amusement for the old-timers who come to Peterborough Industrial Exhibition this year. According to Art Moffat, who, assisted by his committee of Kiwanians, has put over the King Edward Park Horseshoe Club so successfully, there will be a series of pitches set out at the Exhibition Park for use during Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of the week.

The idea, sponsored not only by Mr. Moffat and other private citizens, but also by the Exhibition Board, has already resulted in many inquiries from prospective visitors to Peterborough that week, and accordingly, Mr. Moffat has issued a request, through the press, that all those wishing to play during any of the three days, send in their names immediately. A nominal fee will be charged but will not be of a magnitude to scare anyone away.

Park Courts Doing Well.

With the final installation of adequate lighting facilities last week, the horseshoe "courts" are attracting a great deal of interest—indeed, more than had been anticipated by the Kiwanians when they put in the equipment. Twenty players can now be accommodated at one time, and every evening that weather permits, there is a happy gathering of men who find that throwing the shoe requires skill, combined with a good eye. By next year, the club will have a sufficient membership to sail into a regular schedule. But for the lateness of the season, it would have materialized already.

WEDDING BELLS

SMITHERAM—NICOLL

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the parsonage at Norham on Wednesday, August 15, when Ivey, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Nicoll of Highland Grove was united by marriage to F. Burritt Smitheram, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Fred Smitheram of Fenelon Falls. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. D. R. Clare. Following the wedding ceremony the bridal party journeyed to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Arthur Russel where a dainty wedding dinner was served, after which the happy couple left on a short honeymoon trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls.

DINNER—LYNCH

The Sacred Heart Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday morning, when Julia Ann, daughter of Mrs. Hannah Lynch and the late Thos. Lynch of Otonabee was united in the hold bonds of matrimony to James Vincent Dinner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dinner of Bracebridge. The ceremony was uerformed by Rev. P. J. Lynch, brother of the bride, while present in the sanctuary were Very Rev. Dean O'Leary, uncle of the bride, Rev. P. Flanagan and Rev. C. Maloney. During the ceremony solos were sung by Miss Minnie Allen.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Frank Lynch looked lovely in a gown of peach georgette with velvet hat to match. She wore the groom's gift, an amber fox fur and carried a shower bouquet of Columbia roses.

She was attended by her sisters, Miss Mary Lynch, as maid of honour and Miss Kathleen Lynch as bridesmaid, wearing similar gowns of poudre blue and orchid georgette with black velvet hats and Isabella fox furs and carrying bouquets of Premier roses. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. John Dinner.

After the ceremony the wedding party assembled at the home of the bride's mother in Otonabee, where a wedding dinner was served to a large number of friends.

The groom's gifts to the bridesmaids were white gold bracelets, and to the groomman white gold cuff links.

The bride and groom left later on a motor trip to Hamilton, Windsor and Detroit, the bride travelling in a sand ensemble with sand felt hat. On their return they will reside in Bracebridge.

CRICKET

The final match between the Peterborough C.C. and the C.G.E. will be played at the Oval tomorrow afternoon. The game will commence at 2.30 sharp. All players are asked to be on hand not later than 2.15. The following will represent the Peterborough Cricket Club:

Elliot (Capt.), Dunkerley, Thorpe, Stuart, Monkman, Smith, Gore, F. Dyer, Imming, Hamilton, Massey-Cooke and Coleman.

Great interest is being shown in this game as eac hteam has won one game and the last game was a tie.

NEW TUBES TO ACT AS SAFETY AID

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Experiments with photo-electric tubes reveal that many new usues may be expected of them in the automatic operation of every day devices, according to S. M. Kintner, manager of the research department of the Westinghouse Electric Co.

With the highly sensitive gridglow and photo-electric tubes, Kintner said, safety devices may be developed to greater efficiency. For instance, the approach of a train can be made to light crossing warnings and light up stations. In the same way, a motorist approaching a cross roads gains the right of way and automatically sets the crossing light.

Vibration of an airplane motor as the ship approaches a landing field at night can be made to turn the switches that light the field. A photo-electric tube device may be used to open garage doors as soon as the headlights of an approaching car strike it.

160 MEN ADDED TO NAVY STRENGTH

More Needed To Supply Crews For Two New Destroyers.

OTTAWA, Ont., August 31. — In anticipation of the addition of two new destroyers to the Canadian Navy, there has been arranged an increase in the naval establishment. At present the permanent naval establishment numbers 550, but an Order-in-Council has been passed increasing it to 710. The two destroyers now in Canada, the Champlain and Vancouver, have a complement of 90 each, while the new destroyers will require at least 150 each. Additional to the 710 of the permanent staff, there is a volunteer personnel of 1,000 and a reserve staff of 500. The former, particularly, is kept up to strength and Commander W. Hose, head of the naval branch of the department, who recently returned from an inspection of the various centres for naval volunteer work, reports the force in splendid condition. Some of them from the Prairie Provinces are now taking a month's training on H. M.S. Durban at Vancouver.

Fifteen tenders have been received for the construction of the two new destroyers. Only one of these (Canadian Vickers) is a Canadian tender, the others being from the United Kingdom. The contracts will not be awarded until the return to the capital of Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence. It is believed the Government is desirous of placing the contract in Canada, but owing to moderate cost of construction, the Canadian price may be prohibitive. If the Canadian tender is not too much higher than those from Great Britain, the destroyers will be constructed at the Vickers plant in Montreal.

News From the Mines

Through
Solloway, Mills & Company

Keeley.

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of Keely Mines held this week, it was decided to forego the payment of a dividend for the six months ending August 31st. This did not occasion any great surprise, as it had been expected the consulting engineer would recommend the exploration of the lower contact, and that money would be needed for that purpose. It will now be possible for this exploration work to be carried on without encroaching on the cash reserves of the company

At this meeting the directors decided to authorize such exploration at a depth of approximately 1,400 feet through the workings of the adjoining Frontier mine. It is anticipated that this exploration work will take about eight months to complete, during which time it is hoped to maintain production at the present rate. The fact that the Frontier workings may be used will greatly reduce the cost to the Keeley company.

Aldermac.

Cross-cutting at the 1,125 foot level of the Aldermac Mine is approaching close to the area where diamond drilling last fall indicated high values in copper gold ore over good width. Up to the present time most of the development work on Aldermac has been in low grade ore, but as the ore body is very large, it will make for cheap mining. In any event, results of development on the 1,125 foot level are looked forward to with a great deal of interest, some news of which should be available within the next two weeks.

Majestic Mines.

Following a report by W. E. Simpson, preparations are being made to resume operations at the Majestic Gold Mines, adjoining McMillen, near West River on the Algoma Eastern Railway. This property was worked years ago and a shaft was sunk to a depth of about 200 feet. Samples are reported to have yielded very encouraging values.

Sylvanite.

A very important report has just been received from the head office of Sylvanite, in Buffalo, to the effect that the continuation of their ore at the 700 foot level has been encountered at the 1,500 foot level, with values grading similar to those at the 1,375 where they average $20 a ton.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 31. — The wires were not so busy this morning and a lack of anything real hot in the way of news was the result. Kirkland Lake was the only camp to report any fresh developments; indeed it would be a queer day when this field would remain silent. It is unofficially reported that the Federal Kirkland cut into a 12-foot vein in the south crosscut on the 400-foot level. Officials of the company state that they have heard nothing definite as yet, but an engineer is on his way up to check up on these reports. The trail is getting hot at this property and according to calculations it is about this time and place that the vein should be cut. Therefore, it is quite possible that the report is correct. Federal is approaching a critical stage and news may be expected from this property. The report talked of $8 values.

It is understood that assays from the main vein on the properties recently acquired by Murphy Mines have shown excellent values and that the break has been traced for over one-half mile on the property. A shaft is to be commenced at once with 100 feet as the immediate objective. It is then planned to crosscut to determine the size and extent of the ore body at depth.

Waite - Montgomery shares have been under steady accumulation by insiders for some time past, and seem firm and in demand on the unlisted market at around $3.25. Very little of this stock is in the hands of the public. Shipments of copper ore have been made regularly to the Noranda smelter, and it is understood that this is averaging about 15 per cent.

Milling operations are now in line for the Canusa property, formerly the old Scottish-Ontario. A shaft was sunk here to a depth of 100 feet in former days, before the Hollinger or McIntyre were heard of. This is to be dewatered and repaired and lateral work will then commence at the 100-foot level. A 100-ton mill is to be installed as officials claim that work done to date justifies this step. The Canusa was one of the first discoveries of the Porcupine area, handicapped, however, by lack of finances and inadequate machinery.

Crosscutting at the 1,125-foot level of the Aldermac Mines is approaching close to the area where diamond drilling last fall indicated high values in copper gold over good width. Up to the present time most of the development work on Aldermac has been in low grade ore, but as the ore body is very large, it will make for cheap mining. In any event, results of development on the 1,125-foot level are looked forward to with a good deal of interest some news of which should be available soon.

In the latest diamond drill hole, Creighton Fairbanks at Chelmsford, cut 105 feet of quartz carbonate showing zinc values, it is reported. This hole is near the No. 9 hole where the best results yet had on the property were obtained. The core is being sampled and some information regarding values may be available soon. Previous efforts to get near to No. 9 hole were not successful, the holes changing their dips to such an extent as to make the results inconclusive.

It is reported that the new Vipond shoot on the 7th level on No. 9 vein has developed a length of 150 feet and the grade has improved to $8 over five feet width. It has been decided to explore for this ore on the levels above and below.

McIntyre Earnings

Word reaches the Financial News Bureau that earnings of the McIntyre-Porcupine Mines for the month of July are $75,000 higher than for June. The ore is said to average about 75 cents per ton over those of June.

A very important report has just been received from the head office of Sylvanite in Buffalo, states Solloway, Mills and Company, to the effect that the continuation of the ore at the 700-foot level has been encountered at the 1500-foot level, with values grading similar to those at the 1375 where they average $20 per ton.

Rich Strike at Amulet

It is reported that a rich new surface discovery has been made on the Amulet property, with grade said to run 25 per cent copper.

Abana Statement Reassuring

With the official statement that the water, reported to be filling the Abana Mine was not serious, comes the further report of assays from crosscut No. 2 in ore body No. 2. In this connection Mr. Spearman, consulting engineer, says that "This crosscut is 200 feet east of the diabase dyke and the ore has a width of 34 feet, at this point and averages $32.70 per ton, with over $5 per ton in gold and silver values, crosscut No. 3 has just been started at 300 feet east of the diabase dyke on the first round from the crosscut gave $36.72 per ton, of which $8 was in gold and silver values. The remarkable feature about this ore body No. 2 east of the diabase dyke, is that gold and silver values are persistenly high, averaging $5 per ton, and the copper content is increasing as the distance from the diabase dyke is increased.

Canadian Progress Notable This Year

In view of the present condition of the Canadian money market, the following, taken from a recent article in the New York Times, will be of interest, says Investment Securities. It is apparent that there is little the matter with the Canadian industrial and commercial situation, and that the present tightness of money may be largely attributed to over-speculation and to a glut of undigested securities. Attempts at liquidation have, as is invariably the case, depressed the prices of sound securities which can be sold freely, while a great volume of indifferent securities which have been offered at inflated prices are largely unsaleable. In the course of time the latter group must be distributed, entailing probably a more proper valuation being placed upon them, before the money situation can be entirely satisfactory; but at the present moment sound securities are obtainable upon very attractive terms. The article which follows is bound to make us enthusiastic about Canada, and if investors will use discrimination they will find, at this time excellent opportunities for the profitable employment of their funds.

"Canadian manufacturing plants are turning out in physical volume approximately 140 per cent of the output reached at the peak of wartime activity ten years ago, and in spite of lower prices their products have a gross value more than 20 per cent higher. The value for 1927 was recently stated to be in the neighborhood of $3,500,000,000 or about $250,000,000 more than the figures for 1926. This constitutes a record in the history of the country and indicates the extent to which Canada has shared in the general industrialisation of non-European countries since the war.

"Commenting on these figures, S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, draws attention to the general growth in industry during recent months. At the end of 1926 the capital invested in Canadian plants stood at $4,000,000,000, but since that time this has been increased largely by extensive additions to plants and the erection of new factories, notably in the pulp and paper, the real and artificial silk and the automobile industries in allied lines, and in concerns supplying construction materials and household goods of all kinds. A survey of recent developments in Canada made by the bank indicates that during the last eighteen months more than 200 important extensions have been added to existing plants and more than 100 new factories have been erected.

"A healthy sign of the times, Mr. Logan says, is the general increase in industrial efficiency that is taking place in Canada as well as elsewhere linked as it is with the world-wide movement for standardization and rationalization. Europe is slowly recovering from the loss entailed by the over-capitalization of the war years, which made industrial leaders consider anew their methods of production and distribution and brought into greater prominence the need of further scientific research. The movement has made rapid strides in the United States, and although it is comparatively new in Canada, the recent report of the National Research Council shows what already has been accomplished and the wide range of investigations that are now under way.

"It is significant that the Dominion Parliament at its last session increased the annual appropriation to the Council from $170,000 to $300,000 and that the Legislature of Ontario recently voted $1,000,000 for an Ontario research foundation. $200,000 to be expended annually for five years upon condition that an equal amount be raised by private interests. Manufacturers now look for economies in the cutting of costs rather than of wages, and it is notable that although the number of employees is on the increase, not only the average wage but the value of the ouput per capita is increasing. An analysis recently made by the bank showed that in 1926, the last year for which figures were available, the value of Canadian products added by manufacture was $3,600 an employee, which compares favorably with the corresponding figure for the United States in 1925, namely $2,740.

"The relative importance of Canadian manufactures, as measured by the gross value of their products, has altered in many respects in the last ten years. The pulp and paper industry, for example, has risen from third to first place, while automobiles have risen from eighth to fifth. Flour, meats and lumber occupy the intervening places in the order indicated; the first two have in recent years shown steady growth, while lumber has lately taken on a new lease of life.

"The rapid extension of the automobile trade has again brought the rubber industry into prominence, and, taken together with the increased demand for machinery of all kinds, has improved the condition of the metal working trades, although the value of iron and steel manufactures has not recovered the predominating position which it occupied during the war."

Dull Morning On Exchange

TORONTO, August 31 (Canadian Press). — Trading on the Standard Stock Exchange this morning was very dull. Malartic headed the trading, registering well over 20,000 shares dropped two to 1.57. Amulet was called on to a great extent, but also suffered a loss, dropped to 3.78 with a loss of 14. Hollinger was off 10 at 8.90, Crown Reserve off 1 at 43, Newbec with heavy turnover was off 1 at 28, Sherritt-Gordon was off 12 at 7.03, Teck Hughes was off 15 at 9.15, and Vipond was off 1⅛ at 50½. Noranda with light trading lost at 56.10. Issues which registered slight gains were Dome Mines 25 at 8.50, Kirkland Lake 2 at 1.53, Lake Shore 10 at 23.10, McIntyre 25 at 23.50, Sudbury Basin 13 at 7.05, Sudbury Contact 1 at 23, and Tough Oakes Burnside up 1¾ at 28¾.

Wall Street Price Reflected In Toronto

TORONTO, August 31 (Canadian Press).—The strength in International Nickel on Wall Street to-day sent the issue soaring to 121¼ at the morning session of the Toronto Stock Exchange. Nickel was in great demand all morning, and although the price sagged to 118¾ for a while, it rapidly regained its sensational price, closing at noon with a new gain of 6¾. Trading on nickel rights was even heavier, registering a gain of ¾ to sell at 6. Other issues on the list were less active. Canada Dredge failed to retain prominence, and with little trading, dropped to 49 with a loss of 4, while Preferred stock dropped to 150 with a loss of 3. Alberta Pacific advanced 1¾ to 66¾; Brazilian Traction, fairly active, advanced ¼ to 58, and Massey Harris advanced a quarter to 43¼.

Confidence Shown In Chicago Wheat

CHICAGO, August 31 (Canadian Press).—A healthier tone at Liverpool brought little more confidence into the Chicago wheat pit at to-day's opening and prices ranged unchanged to 5-8 cent above Thursday's close. The trade, however, continued uninterested and there were enough offers on the upturn to bring small recession. Cool weather lent firmness to the corn market, and with short covering and some buying by local interests, prices were unchanged to ½ cent higher. Oats were steady and provisions easy.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 110¾; December 115 7-8. Corn, September 93; December 74 3-8. Oats, September 38 3-8; December 40 3-8.

Stock Prices Make Further Recovery

NEW YORK, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—Stock prices made a further recovery to-day as large scale pool operations were resumed in a wide assortment of industrials, rails and specialties. More than two score issues were lifted to night high records. Extreme gains ran from 1 to 14 points, with trading so heavy that the ticker fell more than twenty minutes behind the market.

Call money was renewed unchanged at 7½ per cent. Banks called $40,000,000 in loans by the early afternoon to meet the heavy month-end and Labor Day currency demands. Time money held firm at 6½ per cent. Buying rate of bankers' acceptances was reduced ⅛ of one per cent on all maturities. Rails took a more prominent part in the advance to-day. Missouri Pacific Common ran up four point to a new top at 74½, St. Louis Southwestern climbed 3 to a new peak at 112⅜; and St. Paul Preferred and Rock Island also bettered their previous 1928 high prices. New York Central was bid up 3½ points. Renewed selling of Loft Candy, based on unconfirmed reports of stock exchange investigation of recent fluctuations in that issue, sent the stock down about 5 to 9½, as agai na high of 19⅝ on Monday.

OBITUARY

ALFRED MASON.

J. S. Mason, Armour Road, received a cable message this morning stating that his father, Alfred Mason, had died yesterday in Richmond, Surrey, England. There are a number of Surrey people in the city who will be sorry to learn of the death of Mr. Mason.

MRS. HENRY KELLETT.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Henry Kellett, formerly Mrs. John Dwyer, took place on Wednesday morning, August 29th, from her late residence on Smith street. The requiem High Mass was sung by Rev. Paul Costello, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral. The remains were interred in St. Peter's cemetery, where Rev. J. T. Finn said the graveside prayers.

The deceased was born sixty-one years ago in Asphodel, where she lived until twenty-three years ago, when she and her deceased husband moved to Peterborough. During those years she took a keen interest in parochial activities and was an ardent worker for every good cause. She was a member of the Confraternity of Christian Mothers and the Catholic Women's League.

The deceased had been ill nearly eight months and although her death was not unexpected it came as a shock to her many friends and acquaintances. Fortified by the rites of Holy church she rendered her soul to her Creator with perfect resignation to His divine will.

There are left to mourn her loss besides her husband two sisters, Mrs. Michael Herr of Norwood, and Mrs. James McArthur of Rochester, one brother, Mr. John Boland of Norwood. She is also mourned by a vast number of friends and acquaintances.

The pallbearers were her six nephews, Frank, John, Louis, Fred, Edgar and Augustine Boland.

ALBERT CHARLES HERRIDGE.

The funeral of the late Albert Charles Herridge took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, 755 George Street.

Service at the house was conducted by Rev. Dr. Blagrave of St. John's Anglican Church, of which the deceased was a life-long member.

The funeral was under Masonic auspices, and there was a large attendance of members as well as of friends made by the deceased during his long residence here.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, three daughters, the Misses Albertina, Irene and Marguerite, his sister, Mrs. K. Boomer, and nephew, A. H. Boomer, all of Peterborough.

CLARA RENNIE MONTGOMERY.

After a lingering illness of some years there died this morning, Clara Rennie Montgomery, the beloved wife of W. G. Montgomery. The deceased passed away at her home, 557 Water Street, and has been a resident of this city for twenty-one years. Her birthplace was Woodstock.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 557 Water Street, on Saturday, September 1st, at 12.45 noon to Gamebridge, Ontario, and then to Gamebridge Cemetery, the Rev. Mr. Thomas officiating in the absence of Rev. William Allan of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, of which she was a member.

LINES ON APSLEY

(By Amy Lean)

We call our village Apsley;
It is pretty to behold,
With trees and flowers everywhere
And houses new and old.

Quite close behind the village
The river Eel doth run,
Where lumber men drive logs in Spring
And swimmers have great fun.

And, as you motor into town
The first building that you see
Is the Red Cross Outpost Hospital—
A great benefit, all agree.

A lovely monument stands erect
In memory of our boys,
Who through love of home and country,
Gave up friends and life and joys.

No matter what your creed is,
There is worship here for you—
In two pretty little churches
Standing on our corners two.

You'll find two general stores
And a good post office, too,
And a crowd of right good jolly folks
Greet you as you pass through.

You'll also see two good hotels
Who'll answer to your call,
Whenever you will come this way
You'll be welcome one and all.

We also have a garage man
Who renders service on the dot;
He's always ready to give a hand
To make cars go that will not.

On the west side of our village
You will find a blacksmith shop
Where horses needing shoe repairs
Keep the blacksmith on the hop.

A parish hall is further on,
Where the happy people go;
So if you're out for a good time
Just come to a dance or show.

To the north and south of Apsley
Stand two sawmills, new and old;
Where logs are cut into lumber
All ready to be sold.

A town hall also you will find
Where our councillors do meet;
Where the people at elections vote
Before the reeve can take his seat.

Just a mile around the corner
Is a little white frame school,
Where children seeking knowledge
Are taught the Golden Rule.

Passing by the Orange Lodge—
And this is last of all—
You'll see our forest are protected
As you pass the Fire Rangers' Hall.

And this is dear old Apsley
And, though it's very small,
I treasure it in my heart
As the dearest place of all.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear uncle, Mr. John Craig, who died August 29th, 1926:
The month of August again is here,
The saddest month of all the year;
Just two years ago to-day
My loving uncle passed away.
What would I give to clasp his hand?
His bright face to see;
To hear his voice, to see him smile
That made life sweet to me.
—Sadly missed by his niece, Mrs. W. H. Hanison, Toronto, Ont.

EMPIRE PARTY IS WELCOMED

Premier Ferguson Speaks At Informal Conference in Toronto.

BOOSTS ONTARIO.

TORONTO, August 31 (Canadian Press). — Premier Ferguson and the members of the Ontario Governmnet welcomed the delegates of the Empire Parliamentary Association to Toronto to-day. During their four-day stay in Toronto, the delegates face a heavy program interspersed with visits to Niagara and London.

The program opened with an informal conference at the Parliament Buildings between the members of the Provincial Government and the delegates.

Opening the conference, Premier Ferguson described the development and possibilitis in mining, agriculture and industry in Ontario. "You will be told," he said, "that the Prairie Provinces raise a wheat crop which brings five hundred million dollars into Canada Ontario produces agricultural products to the value of five hundred million dollars which we never say anything about."

The Premier urged British investment in Canada, saying that forty per cent. of the industrial development was by American capital and the American people drew dividends which were spent in the United States.

Viscount Peel, who headed the parliamentary party, voiced the sentiments of the entire assembly in saying that the members were more than delighted with the success of their tour and with their reception in Canada.

Commenting on the bringing of miners from Great Britain to Canada, Viscount Peel said it was a vital experiment in immigration.

W. E. N. Sinclair, Liberal leader in Ontario, joined Premier Ferguson in the welcome to the visiting delegates.

PRESS DAY AT BIG FAIR

Newspapermen From All Over Canada Gather at Toronto.

PLACE OF MEETING.

(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, Aug. 31. —Press Day at the Exhibition brings a small army of editors, publishers and writers together. "The name of Toronto means place of meeting" says Thomas Bradshaw, president of the C.N.E. "and the first settlement of Toronto was on these very grounds. It therefore is appropriate that the exhibition should continue to be a place of meeting."

Which it is. For to-day the scribes and publishers came flocking into the park in their hundreds. All over Canada they are interested in the fair. As Hon. Athanase David, Provincial Secretary of Quebec, puts it:

"The fair is more than Toronto's or Ontario's. It is Canada's.

The press building, therefore, was one centre of interest to-day and there the newspaper men gathered, registered, exchanged greetings and talked shop and exhibition. There was a great recalling of old-time memories and comparing of long distance records in attendance at the fair.

Hon. George P. Graham, former minister of Railways, a former newspaper editor and still interested in the publishing business, was the feature speaker at the C. N. E. Directors' Luncheon to-day.

ALDERMAN STOCKER RESIGNS CHAIRMANSHIP

Not Asked About Work

Board of Works Chairman Says He Was Not Consulted By Staff.

SUCCESSOR NAMED.

Ald. Hamilton Elected By Council To Vacant Post—Debate Waxes Hot.

Alderman Walter Stocker's resignation as chairman of the Board of Works was accepted last night at a special meeting of the City Council after heated debate both in the Board of Works meeting, which broke up when Ald. Stocker refused to continue in the chair, and in the council chamber. Ald. James Hamilton was appointed chairman until Tuesday, when the council meet again.

Last night's meeting started out apparently as calmly as most routine sessions, with accounts, etc. for the committees and the formal passing of the by-law for the vote on the hospital grant on the docket. In fact there were only seven members of the council present, Aldermen Cotton, Ackerman, Greene and Macdonald being absent from the city or otherwise unable to attend, although they will be back for Tuesday's regular council meeting.

The debate started in Finance committee with the presetnation of accounts for materials on whose purchase, Ald. Stocker said he had not been consulted, and which could not be passed because he refused to certify them, continued into the Board of Works meeting, which broke up when Ald. Stocker refused to remain in the chair any longer, and concluded in the council meeting when his resignation as chairman was submitted and accepted.

The debate in the finance meeting was short lived. Ald. Stocker declared that he would not sign certain accounts until after the meeting of the Board of Works, as he had signed accounts last month for $20,000 about which he knew nothing, so a motion was passed that the chairman report the accounts for payment when properly certified. In the Board of Works meeting things were more brisk.

Ald. Stocker started the fireworks by questioning the motives which prompted Ald. McIntyre to ask about holidays for the sewage disposal plant staff. Ald. McIntyre replied that he had asked a simple question in open council as was his right, and Ald. Stocker replied that it was unnecessary to bring it up, as there was a chairman of the Board of Works.

The Disposal Plant.

"I'm supposed to be chairman of the Board of Works and I haven't seen Fife (ex-Ald. J. O. Fife, who is in charge of the disposal plant) to speak to him for three months," he added. "I understand he reports to the Mayor daily."

"No he doesn't," retorted His Worship. I've seen him once in that time and asked him how things were going, the same as I intend to ask any member of the staff.'

"When have you gone down to the plant?" was Ald Huffman's query.

"I haven't," replied the chairman.

"If the chairman of the Board of Works has not been down there he is not on the job. I think any member of this council should have the right to ask any question he wants," declared Ald. Huffman.

"There was all that road work in the south end. I was never consult-

HE'S DONE IT AT LAST!

FOLKESTONE, England, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press—Ishak Helmi, Egyptian swimmer, succeeded in crossing the English Channel to-day. He landed here at 1.46 p.m., twenty-three hours and five minutes after he entered the water at Cape Gris Nez, France.

A huge crowd welcomed the Egyptian when he came ashore here, lining the beach and the piers as he stroked his way to the harbor.

His feat, accomplished after several unsuccessful attempts extending over several seasons, brought the total number of Channel swimmers to sixteen.

BRITISH ACTION WINS APPROVAL

League Council Finds Agreement With Amir in Accord With Mandate.

REPORT QUESTIONED IT.

GENEVA, Sept. 1. — (Canadian Press.)—Great Britain's mandate over Palestine became the subject of discussion at the Council of the League of Nations to-day after reception of the report of the Permanent Mandates Commission. It was questioned in the report whether the agreement between Great Britain and the Amir of Trans Jordania was in accord with the mandate decree, as it had apparently delegated powers of legislation and administration to the Amir.

Lord Cushendun assured the Council that Great Britain regarded herself as responsible to the council for the application in Trans-Jordania of the Palestine mandate. The council thereupon adopted a resolution declaring that the agreement was in conformity with the principles set forth in the mandate.

The month of August closed with the city of Peterborough boasting a clean bill of health save for one case of diphtheria, which had come from Toronto; and which had been placarded in a private residence, according to Sanitary Inspector Charles S. Stapleton. In conversation with The Examiner this morning, he also revealed the interesting fact that during the past month, seventeen notices for sewer connection were issued by his department.

Mr. Stapleton leaves shortly for Hamilton, where he will attend the annual convention of Sanitary Inspectors of Ontario, the dates of the convention being September 4, 5 and 6.

WOULD TAKE SON'S PLACE UNTIL TRIAL

Eighty Year Old Father of John Sullivan Cannot Raise Bail.

HAS FAITH IN SON.

Knows He Could Prove Innocence If Free For Few Weeks.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 1 (Special to The Examiner).—Denis Sullivan, eighty-year-old father of John Sullivan, held at Toronto Jail as a suspect in connection with the $20,000 mail robbery at the Union Station last June, would take the place of his son in Toronto Jail from now until the date of the trial if by so doing he could obtain the young man's temporary freedom to enable him to construct his defence.

"I cannot raise the $100,000 to get him out on bail, although my daughter and I have tried hard to get some influential person to be responsible for the money," the aged father said to-day.

"But my boy loves me. I have been mother and father to him since his mother's death years ago, and if the police could only recognize it, his love for me would be a better guarantee that he would appear in court when he is wanted than a bond for $1,000,000, much less $100,000.

"I am now powerless to help my boy except by offering myself. Even in the little store out of which he made a living before he was arrested, I can do nothing. Everything must now be done by his sister. But I know he is innocent and I believe that if he is given his freedom for a few weeks he will be able to get the evidence to prove his innocence. Why will the police not let me go to jail for just a little while so that he may be able to work on his case. He won't let me stay there. He will be back just when he promises."

"How long would you be prepared to stay in jail," he was asked.

"As long as necessary to help him," the aged man replied.

THE WEATHER

In this section August had more rain than usual. The total for the month was 3.16. Rain came down on 15 days. There were thunderstorms on 5 days; the heaviest on the 4th. The highest temperature was 88 degrees on the 15th and 16th. The lowest was 44 degrees, on the 26th. There were 16 days when the temperature was above 80 degrees. This (Saturday) morning it was down to 44 degrees, and the effects of frost were to be seen in some places.—W.P.

PLANE FLOAT FOUND AT SEA

Is Identfied As Part of Seaplane in Which Amundsen Flew North.

BROUGHT TO TROMSOE.

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—The first definite clue to the fate of Roald Amundsen and the five men who accompanied him on his expedition to rescue members of the Nobile Arctic party was brought here to-day. It was a float from the seaplane in which the adventurers started for Spitzbergen on June 18.

The relic was found by the Norwegian vessel Brood. It was picked up near the Fugloe Islands, a rocky group off this port that is seldom approached because it is so dangerous to shipping.

Officers of the steamer Michael Sars and the French vessel Durance identified the float as belonging to the French naval seaplane in which Amundsen rode with Rene Guildaud, pilot, Lieut. Lief Dietrichsen, and three French Navy men.

FOUR INJURED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—A ten car interborough subway train was side-swiped by a work train on the elevated structure in the Bronx early to-day, causing injuries to four persons and shaking up seventy-five passengers.

What's Wrong With Peterborough?

Not with the idea of fault finding, but in a genuine effort to better conditions which he thinks are wrong, one of Peterborough's prominent business men has given The Examiner the following interview.

It may be said, in explanation, that The Examiner does give the home-town publicity free. The advertisements urging people to buy here, the Chamber of Commerce items, the editorials—are all donated by The Examiner in its role as a community newspaper endeavoring to serve Peterborough as it best can.

This is what The Examiner is told:

"I have noticed the space you are giving to educate Peterborough to buy from Peterborough merchants. I also noticed now and again in your question column that someone asks what is the matter with Peterborough. Your advertising campaign may be gratis and voluntary on your part or influenced by local business interests, but I have often wondered if our merchants are really trying to induce the public to buy at home, or is there back of it all merely the thought that because we live here we should buy here? It is possible that the stores owe something to the people at large? I would say that they have more to fear from outside competition than from their neighbors. I represent one of Peterborough's factories, employing upwards of 50, and consuming certain supplies, and a wide variety, regularly every month. In that respect we are only one of many, yet I don't recall ever seeing a representative of any of Peterborough's stores in our place, except specially called for, but we have at regular and stated intervals, visits from salesmen from dozens of out of town houses. Our merchants should realize that these continued visits sooner or later create a feeling of personal friendship, and these fellows walk away with the orders.

Then, do our stores make any special effort at service? I can recall instances without number when we have wanted some article, called our local store on the phone, were told they did not have it; tried other stores, same result, and none of them offer to get the article. They will tell you they have some substitute, and you somehow sense their feeling that you should take that. I can pick up the phone, call Toronto, and in nine times out of ten, get just what I want, and via overnight truck service have it in hand at starting time the next morning.

"I only lately ordered a certain quantity of one article locally and found when delivered less than I ordered, without any explanation. Upon phoing the store was told that was all they had. This was about four weeks ago. Am still waiting for the balance. I don't doubt they have gotten in a new supply, but never made any note of our order delivered short. I could mention any number of cases of a similar kind, and friends of mine, consuming in their different businesses a varied assortment of goods and articles, tell me the same story. To prove that the trouble is more geenral than you might think, here is what happened to my wife Saturday last. She went into one of George street's largest stores, in business I believe over forty years, and asked the saleslady to show her some goods on display in the window. The young lady got out several pieces, nothing like, in quality or design, what she had seen. Mrs. then said she would buy the piece that was in the window, but the saleslady said there was no one to get it out, and when my wife told her there was no hurry and it could be sent later, the young lady said she would not be there after 6 o'clock. Mrs. finally said she would get what she wanted elsewhere, and the young lady said "all right," which strikes me as expressing in the best possible word the general attitude of our stores."

CHAMBERLAIN STILL VERY ILL

British Foreign Secretary Unable To Receive Official Callers.

TAKING SEA VOYAGE.

LAROCHELLE, France, Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—The condition of Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Minister, has shown little improvement on the first two days of his sea voyage to the coast of California. He was carried aboard the steamer Orcoma at Liverpool on Thursday and to-day, when the ship called at Larochelle, was too ill to receive official French callers.

The distance which the tire had travelled was 39,789 and Mr. Frank's estimate was 39,760. P. Blade was second with an estimate of 39,642, whil H. R. Roberts was third with 39,606.

Positive Case Of Rabies Established, Dog Bites Three Children And Woman

SARNIA, September 1.—(Canadian Press).—A positive case of rabies at Corunna and Courtright has been established with the receipt yesterday from the Department of Health at Toronto of a report on a dog owned by Omar Strangway, of Corunna, which on Monday and Tuesday bit three children and a woman. The dog was killed and the head sent to Toronto by Dr. L. R. Aiken, of Courtright, for bacterial examination. The department's report declares that the animal was rabied.

The dog bit Ronald and Kenneth, two children of Jack Duffy, of Courtright, Dorothy, ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Gayrof, Sarnia, and Mrs. Duncan Anderson, of Corunna, a relative of Mr. Strangway, the owner of the animal. Mr. Anderson killed the dog with a hammer. At an emergency meeting of the Courtright Board of Health a by-law was passed ordering that all dogs in the village be kept on chain until further notice and additional by-law will probably be passed by the Moore township council at once.

Pasteur treatments are being administered daily to the three children and to Mrs. Anderson.

34 PERMITS WERE ISSUED LAST MONTH

Buildings To Cost $74,095 Authorized By Building Inspector.

BEHIND LAST YEAR.

This Year's 249 Permits Not As Valuable As Last Year's —Much Plumbing.

While it may not indicate adequately the general progress of the city, still, the record of building permits at the City Engineer's office provides material for perusal. During the past month, no less than thirty-four permits were issued, providing for the expenditure of approximately $74,095, and thus bringing the total for 1928 up to $283,627. This is in comparison with 42 permits accounting for the expenditure of $37,885 in July of this year and 22 permits amounting to $9,435.00 in August 1927.

Behind Last Year.

Due largely to the month of July, in which the total expenditure was boosted to $541,885, an dalso because of 25 permits providing for expenditure of $307,557.00, the total for the first eight months of 1927 was far ahead of corresponding period of 1928. A summary shows that for the first eight months of 1927, 199 permits were issued for total expenditure of $567,950.00, thus exceeding 1928 up to date by $284,323.00, despite the fact that the 1928 total number of building permits issued is 249, 50 more than last year.

The Collegiate permit for $295,000 made up a great deal of the 1927 total.

Folowing is found a record of the first eight months of 1927 and 1928:

	No. of Permits.	Amount
January	7	$16,835.00
February	1	700.00
March	15	9,310.00
April	59	35,915.00
May	39	131,310.00
June	31	40,258.00
July	25	307,557.00
August	22	16,630.00
1928
January	3	$7,515.00
February	5	17,860.00
March	11	3,245.00
April	53	38,827.00
May	64	79,187.00
June	37	25,013.00
July	42	37,885.00
August	34	74,095.00

It is notable that for the first two months of the two years, the total number of permits issued was the same, that in both years a big increase in permits is noted from the end of March to the end of April and that while there is a general "let-up" during the summer months, this year has been less susceptible than 1927 in this regard. May and July were the big months in 1927, so far as expenditure is concerned, while May and August topped the 1928 list.

Plumbers Busy.

Plumbing Inspector A. G. Metherall's report for the month of August indicates a steady progress in that phase of the city's business, for no less than 36 permits for plumbing were issued, providing for the installation of 26 water closets, 12 baths, 21 basins, 27 sinks, 6 laundry tubs, and 5 floor drains. The total number of old houses to which sewage connections were made, thus doing away with the unsanitary outside privies, was sixteen.

Inspections and tests made were as follows:

Number of water tests of plumbing—39.

Number of smoke tests of plumbing—12.

Lay-outs—6.

Miscellaneous inspections—34.

Certificates of completion issued—23.

Around the City

The Fire Department has not had an alarm for several days.

Fire Chief Gimblett issues a warning that the owners of defective chimneys must repair these at once. Inspections have been made by the engineer of the Fire Department and by the Chief. Fifteen days of grace are allowed to the offenders, and if the defective chimneys have not been remedied by September 15, the owners will be prosecuted under the fire prevention by-law.

At Hard Labor To Repay Theft

OTTAWA, Sept. 1.—A unique sentence was imposed by Magistrate Hopewkell in Carleton County Police Court yesterday afternoon, when Patrick Quinn was convicted of stealing $25 from his employer, Miss Martha Christopher, farmer, of Osgoode Township. The Magistrate sent Quinn back to Miss Christopher's farm "to put in 20 days of honest toil" to reimburse her for the money stolen.

CANADA GIVES GOOD CHANCES

Thornton Ridicules "Crazy Notion" That British Aren't Welcome.

ARE PREFERRED.

LONDON, Sept. 1. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—What he described as a "crazy notion" that British settlers were not welcomed in Canada was ridiculed by Sir Henry Thornton when interviewed here to-day. The president of the Canadian National Railways reached England yesterday for a brief visit

Sir Henry declared that Canada preferred British immigrants if they were physically and temperamentally suitable. "We don't want any communists or disturbers of the peace, but only persons who are willing to live under Canada's laws and social system," he said. "Any man physically fitted and willing to work can earn a good living in Canada and there is still the possibility of earning a fortune by industry, foresight, and business acumen."

JAPAN FAVORS NAVAL ACCORD

Would Be Basis For Further Discussion By League's Commission.

DELEGATES SILENT.

GENEVA, Sept. 1. — (Canadian Press.)—It was reported here to-day that Japan deems the Franco British tentative naval accord acceptable as a basis for future disarmament discussion by the League of Nations Preparatory Disarmament Commission.

The Japanese delegation declines to talk on the subject, due, it appeared, to the fact that the replies of Japan, the United States and Italy, to whom the acord was submitted for study, have not reached France and Great Britain.

MORE BOATS USE CANAL THIS YEAR

Figures Seem to Indicate That They Go Farther and Stay Longer

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 1. —Last season the month of August was the heavy month for tourist traffic through this section of the canal. This season the total fell to thirty-three for the month as compared to thirty-seven last year. Inspection of the lists show that there are more boats up the canal at this time than was the case in 1927 and this may be taken to indicate that the tourists are both going farther and staying longer than other years.

The summer resorts along this section of the waterway are enjoying full houses practically all the time and the fishing is excellent. Everyone is telling of the big ones that they have either caught, seen caught or got away. The latter class is far in the majority. The strange part of it all is that the fishermen will not give up the quest. They still hope that the big one they lost today will come around again to-morrow.

Creditor Nation Soon

U. S. Official Says Export of Capital Growing Rapidly.

QUOTES STATISTICS.

Gives Credit To National Thrift For Strong Financial Position.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Canada is an exporter of capital, and in the not far distant future is likely to enter the ranks of the creditor nations of the world, according to Ray Hall of the United States Department of Commerce, in an article published in commerce reports recently. Analyzing the statement of Canada's balance of international indebtedness for the years 1920 to 1926, inclusive, recently released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, he points out that since 1923 Canada has on balance been exporting capital. The official estimates on which this conclusion is based are conservative.

According to the article, one item in Canada's credit account, her receipts from the tourist traffic, is, in the opinion of United States statisticians, probably far too low. Despite this and other factors which tend to reduce the estimated Canadian credit balance, it is believed that in the four years, 1923 to 1926 inclusive, net capital exports from Canada exceeded $600,000,000. This credit balance has been growing year by year. Canada has been repaying old obligations faster than she has been making new loans abroad. This fact established by the figures published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics is borne out by the record of actual transactions in the capital market.

Status is Changed

Mr. Hall remarks: "A few years ago when a Canadian loan was floated in the United States, virtually all the issues would be subscribed by Americans; the Canadian participation in such an issue was usually negligible. For recent years, however, the Department of Commerce schedules of Canadian securities underwritten in the United States show a steadily growing Canadian participation."

In this respect, says Mr. Hall, the financial status of Canada closely resembles that of the United States just before the war. As the latter country was then gradually achieving its financial independence of Great Britain through the joint underwriting of American securities in New York and London, so Canada is doing an increasing share of its own industrial financing through the joint underwriting of Canadian issues in Montreal and New York. This emancipation has already gone so far that by 1927, according to Mr. Hall, "Canadian-United States transactions in long-term capital were practically at a stalemate."

Offset By Money Export.

This means that, although in that year $268,000,000 of new United States capital was invested in Canadian securities in addition to some $51,000,000 invested "directly," this movement of long-term funds was almost entirely offset by the export of approximately $288,000,000 on capital account from Canada to the United States.

Exports of capital from Canada to the United States take the form of redemption payments to United States holders of Canadian bonds, an item of about $77,000,000 in 1927; sinking fund payments to United States holders of Canadian bonds, an item of $25,000,000; purchase of Canadian securities formerly held by United States investors, an item of approximately $51,000,000; and Canadian net buying of United States securities, an item of about $135,000,000.

According to Mr. Hall, the forces behind Canada's change from an importer to an exporter of capital are "Canadian prosperity and Canadian thrift." He concludes that these forces may well continue at work.

"With little imagination one visualizes Canada at no very remote future as ranking among the creditor nations. What might most retard this development is the great riches of Canadian natural resources. Their further exploitation may require, now and then, more capital than even a prosperous Canada can save."

CUPID AND STORK BUSY

The month of August showed the stork and Dan Cupid turning in a much better average than in the previous month, while Old Father Time fell down—this from the records of vital statistics compiled at the City Clerk's office. During the past month 57 births, 20 deaths and 31 marriages were registered as compared with 49 births, 24 deaths and 21 marriages in the preceding month. In August, 1927, the records showed 45 births, 23 death and 22 marriages.

PLUCKY ACTION OF YOUNG GIRL SAVES TOURISTS

Miss Elsie Woods Keeps Men Afloat Until Brought Ashore

OFF FEE'S LANDING

Men Were Standing in Boat When Craft Upset by Wind

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, September 1. — A near tragedy was narrowly averted on Tuesday morning by the plucky and prompt action of a young lady. Mr Twist, an American tourist, and his seventeen-year-old son, who have been holidaying at Fee's Landing, went out fishing in a rowboat, and when near the rice bogs, they started to cast for bass. Both men were standing, when a sudden gale drifted their boat on a snag, precipitating both men into the water. Neither of the men could swim, and clinging to the boat they called for help, but it was almost an hour before their cries were heard by Miss Essie Woods, daughter of Thomas Woods, who lives on a nearby farm. Miss Woods hastened to the water's edge, and being quite accustomed to handling a boat, managed to reach the spot in a frail craft, which they kept for their own private use, and heroically aided in keeping the drowning men above water until help arrived.

Giving Children Lift.

A thoughtless motorist driving west from Peterborough last Sunday picked up five little boys, who hailed him for a drive, and brought them as far as Omemee, where he informed them he was not returning to the city. The youths ranging, in age from eight to twelve years, one of the smaller being barefooted, bravely struck out to walk home, hailing a ride as they journeyed along. Luck seemed against them as every car was loaded. Nothing has been heard since of the youthful adventurers, but one wonders at the thoughtlessness of any motorist taking small children so far from home.

TRENT PICTURES FOR YACHT CLUB

Association Will Give Airplane Views To Toronto Yachtsmen.

Canadian yachtsmen have a keen interest in the Trent Waterway. An Examiner representative, calling at the Chamber of Commerce this morning, encountered the following interesting letter from C. O. Stillman, President of the Imperial Oil Company who this year was elected Vice-Commodore of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, Toronto. Mr. Stillman is a frequent visitor to the Trent System in his palational yacht "Thalassa" and because of this fact as well as his connection with the boating fraternity on the Canadian side of Lake Ontario, the Trent Waterway Association and the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce have in mind the presentation to the above named yacht club through Mr. Stillman of framed airplane views of the Kawartha Lakes and Trent Waterway area surounding Peterborough. These interesting pictures, each of which is 30 inches wide and 40 inches long, would hang in the lounge, chart or reading rooms of the Toronto Yacht Club and serve to keep this part of Ontario fresh in the minds of the boating fraternity of Toronto. Mr. Stillman's letter follows:

"I have received your letter of the 28th instant, also the copy of the June issue of the "Blue Bell" showing aeroplane view of the Kawartha Lakes-Trent Waterway district, and have read the article with much interest.

"You may not be aware of the fact that I make from one to two trips each season up the Trent Waterway. Last year I went as far as Orillia with my yacht "Thalassa." This season I was up the Waterway in June, and we always enjoy the outing.

"Regarding the framed aeroplane views of the Kawartha Lakes, I am sure the R.C.Y.C. members would appreciate very much having one of these for the Club House. I hope your organization will continue to work on the project completing the canal through to the Georgian Bay. I am sure it would bring a lot of new business up through that district."

W. M. S. GROUP IS ENTERTAINED

Ladies From George Street Church Discuss Hospital Work

ADDRESS ON NURSING

Mrs. W. H. Hatherly of 577 Division street, entertained her group of the W. M. S. of George Street United Church on Tuesday afternoon. In the absence of the leader, Mrs. W. McMillan, Mrs. A. I. Brown presided. The subject for discussion was "Looking Into Our Hospitals." Mrs. Coon and Mrs. Stubb gave readings on mission hospitals.

Miss McCamus, Mrs. Rowe and Mrs. Hatherly gave Scripture selections on how women in New Testament times helped in spreading the Gospel. Miss Olive Rowe added to the interest of the meeting by singing a solo.

The speaker of the afternoon was Miss Lucy Germain of Petrolia. Miss Germain has a charming personality and the group was delighted with her talk on nursing as a profession. Miss Germain spoke with authority on the grandeur of hospital work. She has been an instructor of nurses the past year in Port Huron General Hospital.

Rev. Dr. A. I. Brown spoke words of encouragement to the group on their work of love and service. All joined in singing "At Even Ere the Sun Was Set the Sick Oh Lord Around Thee Lay."

The hostess served dainty refreshments.

MOTORS CRASH AT INTERSECTION

Damage Done Both Cars in Campbellford Collision Yesterday

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, September 1.—Dust bew at the intersection of River and Rear Streets about two-fifteen yesterday afternoon when two cars came to grief. Both cars are this year's models. Dr. Longmore was proceeding south on Rear Street when R. W. Scott appeared on the corner coming east on River Street. The two collided. Mr. Scott's car was turned half round, and left on the east side of the intersection in a more or less battered condition. No one was injured.

From information received from Mr Scott and eye-witnesss, it appears that neither driver was going very fast, but the trees on the corner so obstruct the view that it is impossible to see another car till both are out on the intersection. At the present time, this corner is subject to heavy traffic on account of the detour necessary to paving operations. Ordinarily the vehicular traffic ic comparatively light.

From general appearances, Mr. Scott's car got much the worst of the accident. The left side of the body is badly dented, the running board and fenders are practically demolished, and the right rear wheel is broken. The mechanics who were summoned to remove the cars expressed the opinion that there might be some "internal injuries."

The doctor's car appeared to be more fortunate. His left front fender, headlight, and axle are badly battered, but otherwise his car seems to have come through unscathed. Both cars are covered by insurance. They were removed to the Melklejohn garage. Half an hour was required before the intersection was entirely clear for traffic.

LITTLE PLOWING DONE AT WARSAW

WARSAW, Sept. 1.—Owing to the late prolonged harvest work, there is not likely to be so much Fall wheat sown this year as usual, as it has been impossible to get the soil properly prepared.

Very little plowing is done as yet. There is a great deal more buckwheat than usual this year, and so far it looks well

Pastures are good and cattle on the Summer ranches are in good condition.

The rain on Tuesday afternoon effectually stopped drawing in for the day. The fog in the morning was so heavy, very little was done until nearly noon.

Cutting is done, except in a few small places where the sowing was necessarily very late.

Several who had to put their teams in went to the sheep judging at William Forsythe's. About forty were there. Fathers came with their sons to study and get the benefit of the instructors, and the mothers came, too.

Tender budding leaves grown 4,000 to 7,000 feet elevation used in "SALADA". Packing done automatically without human hands touching tea —hence outstanding strength and purity of "SALADA". At all grocers—75c to $1.05 per lb.

CHILD INJURED BY STRAY HORSE

Alfred Burnett, Two, Has Both Jaws Fractured and Face Badly Cut.

PLAYING NEAR HOME.

MARMORA, Sept. 1 (Examiner Correspondence).—Alfred Burnett, 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Burnett, Marmora Township, was badly injured while playing on the common near his home yesterday at noon. It is believed that a stray horse which was on the common caused the injuries, which consisted of gashes on forehead, nose, and chin, and fracture of both jaws.

The little lad was playing with a pup on the common, and when the pup came home alone Mrs. Burnett went out to look for the child and found him near the house, bleeding profusely from the cuts. Medical examination revealed that the jaws were fractured and the child was brought to Peterborough this morning for an Xray.

The bridal couple are taking a wedding tour to the West as far as British Columbia.

WHITMORE—JOHNSON

APSLEY, Sept. 1.—A pretty wedding took place in St. Stephen's Church, Chandos, on Wednesday afternoon, August 29th, when Florence Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Johnson became the wife of Joseph Frederick Whitmore, the eldest son of Mr. Archie Whitemore, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. C. A. G. Spence. The bride was prettily dressed in white beaded georgette, with bridal veil and wreath of orange blossoms, and was given away by her father. Mrs. Verda Washburn attended her, and Leonard Johnson officiated as best man. Here is brilliancy of performance that gives new luster and meaning to the word.

It is the master car at every issue. And in every performance asked of a motor it possesses ability beyond anything heretofore known.

In all the years your Hudson serves, you will hardly require its full capacity. You can scarcely encounter a situation to tax its limit of power.

This performance mastery gives innumerable advantages. For instance you travel faster within the speed limits. That is because you are away quicker. You pick up faster. You level hills with ease. You have smoothness that makes the long journey comfortable and free of fatigue.

And these qualities have won Hudson the greatest reception, sales and public acknowledgment in its history.

GREAT SERMONS

The Petition of the Moralist

By REV. CHARLES STANFORD, D.D., LONDON.

Mark x. 17.—"Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?"

I first call your attention to the petitioner here. I have described him as a moralist, but in this description I use the word in a wide sense. Morality has to do with this life, and the moralist is one who tries in particular to cultivate what is right between man and man, what is right belonging to this life, what is right arising out of his position and connections as a creature of time and an inhabitant of earth. In a wide sense of the word, this man was a moralist, at least, it was as such that he uttered this request.

I next proceed to point out that it was a great spiritual crisis when this request of his was addressed to Jesus Christ. Perhaps now may be a great crisis with some of you. Life is full, if we but knew it—we often do not until the crisis is over—life is full of critical moments. History is crowded with records of critical moments, on which history depends, when what is thought or not thought, said or not said, done or not done, may for weal or for woe affect all the future. War has such moments—so at least said Napoleon. There are critical times, sometimes narrowing into ten minutes, sometimes into one, in which what is said or done will decide the fate of the battles, and affect the balance of power, perhaps, all over the world. There are such times in politics; and was it not such a time in the history of Queen Esther, if she had stood for a moment irresolute before the festive door, if she had for a moment hesitated before her half-heroic, half-angelic resolve when she burst into that place which threatened to be the death of her, before she said, "If I perish, I perish," and went in to risk her own life, and to plead for the life of her people? And as to our own poor, frail, simple life, we know that there are critical moments when the mystical impulse of life says, "Shall I go or not?" There are critical moments in physical life; but the most critical moment of all critical moments is a certain moment in spiritual life when the truth strikes as it never struck before, when the Spirit strives as it never did before in your history, and when all within you is a tumult working to a decision as to whether you will accept life or death.

It was such a moment in the history of this petitioner when he addressed this petition to Christ. He was wrought up to a point which he had never reached before. It was a great thing for a man like that—not like Nicodemus, by night—to come like a leper, saying, "Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" It was a critical time: it could only come once in that man's history. He never saw Christ to speak to Him in this world after that. I am not speaking at random—you will see that Jesus was on His last journey to Jerusalem. He said, "Behold we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of Man shall be delivered unto the chief priests and unto the scribes; and they shall condemn Him to death, and shall deliver Him to the Gentiles. And they shall mock Him, and shall scourge Him, and shall spit upon Him, and shall kill Him." That young man never saw his Saviour again in this life. Perhaps there may be a similar time in your soul's history which you may remember a million years hence. Not a night like the leaves of the trees in a forest, but a night the circumstances of which shall stand out for ever; a night in which you have to give your answer to the searching Spirit—an answer to Christ Himself, "Yes" or "No." If "Yes," in that word may be the germ of life; if "No," in that "No" may be the germ of death. May God help us, help me, help you. What if this should be the commonplace talk of man? Eternal life is not commonplace; the question of gaining eternal life is not commonplace.

In the third place, let us look at the petition. It is a petition in the form of a question—"Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" This petition—allow me to call it so—has two things in it. It has two elements: first, what he wanted to have, and then what he wanted to know. He came to Jesus, wanting to have something. There are persons in this circle to-night who would have been ready to say, "What can you want?—you have everything." But though he had in all externality everything, there was one thing he wanted to have, and that thing was eternal life. He wanted that first. He had the great blessing and privilege of youth. There are some old men anxious about eternal life, but without, perhaps, the right feeling. They say, "If I were young again, I should not be so agonized as I am now." Oh, to be young again! There is nothing like youth; and, true, there is no privilege like youth. Youth! the very word has a fascination in it, when life is at its best with hope and poetry. Youth can run; youth can rest—no easy thing to rest; youth can rejoice. Youth! full of the freshness of life's morning. To think of youth with no stain on its glory! I do not wonder that persons who have not found the great secret think that if they had youth they would want nothing else. How long would you like to have that youth?—five years, ten years, twenty years? You are not permitted to have the youth spoken of here for a longer period in this life. That would not be enough for me; to have youth for a thousand years would not be enough. I like the idea of youth, but I want it in reality, and that is in Eternity. Speak about a million million years: what after that? Once a Hindoo who had left all his property to his priests, said to them, "What shall I be after I die?" "A bird." "What after that?" "A beast." "What after that?" They could not say. After that! That is the awfulness of life! A million years of youth! What after that? When you come to think, if you have youth, you want eternal youth; for while you are speaking about youth, it flies. Youth in the strongest sense, too, is life. What causes a web of wrinkles upon a face is something that is not youth. Well, eternal life is eternal youth. I want that; I want it to work with. It is so fresh and emotional, that I am right in thus speaking about it.

But there is an awful shadow over it! This youth must soon be gone, and what then? And this thought pressed upon the young man's mind, and made him say, "Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" The thing he wanted to have was eternal life, although he had we like to look upon his bright, eager face. We find, however, that humility, integrity, and charm are not enough to make a title to eternal life. If he wanted a title, so do you; if he put up that prayer, you also can.

There were two elements in his prayer: something he wanted to have—eternal life; something he wanted to know—how to get a true title to eternal life.

I advance to Christ's reply. It is summed up, "One thing thou lackest." He answers unspoken thoughts that are burning in the young man's mind, as to certain things he had done which might perhaps make a title to eternal life. This young man comes and brings his case before the sovereign counsel and sovereign judgment of the King. He has a hope, and yet he has a fear; sometimes the one is high, sometimes the other. He hopes—I think you will detect this—that this good Teacher will say he has done enough. Perhaps he thinks he will have a compliment for his sensitiveness; but Jesus sees through the surfaces, and weighs in the balance the moralist or the ritualist, and this man He found short weight. He had many things, but says the Judge, "One thing thou lackest." Oh, brethren, here at times our souls are brought from sin. We are in earnest; how shall we apply these words of Christ to our own case? Does Christ say to any one of you, "One thing thou lackest"? At first sight it seems delightful for Him to say that we have all things but one. Does it not, however, depend upon what that one thing is? For a ship to have all things but one thing. What is that thing but a compass? Or a watch to have all things but one—the mainspring! Or for a house to want one thing, and that thing the foundation. Or a plant of fragrance and beauty having everything but one, and that the root. For a body to have everything but one thing, and that thing the soul: poor man to have everything but one thing! An inquirer after eternal life to have everything but one thing, but that one thing the thing needful, that one thing the true title—that the one thing lacking! That was the one thing which this man lacked. A man can be young and wealthy and influential, and have a sound belief, and have a true morality, and yet be lost; he can have a beautiful and winsome address, and be lost; he can have a house in the country and many servants, and be lost; he can come running to Christ, and be lost.

There are two conceivable ways in which a title to eternal life may be gained. I am speaking about a conceivable way—perfect obedience to the law. Now it seems that the first thing missing in this young man was a want of true understanding of the perfection of the law. The right standard of goodness, that is the very first thing which Christ indicates. The word "good" occurs in the three Evangelists. This young man wanted to know what good thing he could do. He called Jesus "Good Master." Christ was not going to accept that term "good" as a compliment. He addresses this term to Him as he would have done to any Rabbi. In the absolute sense, Christ is speaking about goodness when He says, "Why callest thou Me good? there is none good but One, that is, God." He now speaks in His manature. He wishes to call the man's attention to the ideal goodness—God without flaw. But the man would not see it,—he could only see surfaces,—so Jesus Christ tells him to sell all he had and follow Him. It was not a command to you; it was a command to him for a special purpose—a command from Him who saw that the weak point in that man was an excessive love of wealth. He wanted to make him see it too; but when the young man heard these words, he turned sadly away. If he had to give up one of two things, he would rather give up the future than the present. He gave up the eternal rather than the temporal; and would not the thought come to him, "I can get to heaven on the principle of perfection?"

There is the gospel way, and that is trusting in Christ; but the man preferred his wealth rather than the Saviour—trusted in his riches rather than in Christ, so that he lacked trust. I put it to you whether you have got the trust. Your title is in Jesus Christ, and the one thing you have to do is to get it by faith. If you had to do anything, what could you do? Go to the forest, select many trees, and with them build an ark of salvation? Could you build a bridge that could span the abyss from the house of Dives to the house of Lazarus? No; if the plan of salvation were left to you, you must give it up. But there is no need for it; Jesus Christ has done it.

So I come to the old Sunday-school story—"Believe on the Lord Jesus Carist." But I want to rescue Jesus Christ's gospel from a misconception. How easy it is to travesty gospel truths! Our true doctrine is, that we trust to the work of Jesus Christ for our title. But when we have an interest in Jesus Christ, what is the alvation that He gives? We have it described here—"life." Not merely safety, but life—eternal life, that follows the example of Jesus Christ's life; and this eternal life begins now, directly we believe. Heaven will be but the consummation of that which will begin in you now, if now for the first time you believe in the Lord Jesus.

Attraction

The weight of a load depends upon the attraction of the earth. But suppose the attraction of the earth were removed? A ton on some other planet, where the attraction of gravity is less, does not weigh half a ton. Now Christianity removes the attraction of the earth, and this is one way in which it diminishes men's burden. It makes them citizens of another world. What was a ton yesterday is not half a ton to-day. So without changing one's circumstances, merely by offering a wider horizon and a different standard, it alters the whole aspect of the world.

They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.—Matt. ix, 12, 13.

STORIES FOR LITTLE PEOPLE

DAVID, or THE YOUNG SHEPHERD
1 Sam. xvi. 1-14.
"(By M.B.)"

Samuel did not know whom God meant to be king instead of Saul. At last God said to him, 'Fill a horn with oil, and go to Jesse, who lives in Bethlehem, for I have chosen one of his sons as king.'

Jesse was an old man, and he had a great many sons who were grown up to be men. Samuel found Jesse and his sons in Bethlehem. Then Samuel looked at the eldest of Jesse's sons, to see whether he was the man that God had chosen to be king.

Now this son was a very tall, fine-looking man, who seemed fit to be a king, and Samuel thought to himself, 'Surely this is the one that God will choose me to anoint.'

But God told Samuel that he had not chosen him. God does not care how a person looks, but God cares for the heart. Now the heart of Jesse's eldest son did not please God, and this time God was going to choose a king who loved him in his heart.

Then Samuel looked at Jesse's second son; but when he saw him he said that God had not chosen him. Then Samuel looked at the third son; but God had not chosen him. Then he looked at the fourth; neither had God chosen him. Then Samuel looked at the fifth, next at the sixth, and last of all at the seventh; and yet God had not chosen any of them.

So Samuel said to Jesse, 'Have you any more children?'

And Jesse answered, 'I have one more child, the youngest, and he is keeping the sheep.' Then Samuel said, 'Send and fetch him: I want to see him immediately.'

So Jesse sent a person to desire this youngest son to come to him.

The name of this son was David. He was not a grown-up man, but only a boy. He had a beautiful color on his cheeks, and his eyes had a pleasant look.

But did he love God in his heart? Yes; he did love God.

When he came in, God said to Samuel, 'Arise and anoint him, for this is he.' So Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him, while his seven brothers stood by.

Then Samuel went back to his own house.

You will hear a great deal about David. God did not mean him to be king for a long while; but David knew that he certainly should be king one day. He went on keeping his father's sheep. As he watched them, he played on his harp, and sang sweet songs of praise to God. His songs are called 'Psalms.'

Do you think that David wished to be king? I do not think he wanted to sit on a throne, and to wear a crown, but I know that he would like to call people together to praise God. When David was king, he could have people taught about God; and he could be kind to poor people; and he could punish wicked people.

When Samuel poured the oil on David's head, God made his Spirit come on him, to make him very wise and brave, and fit to be a king; for it is God who makes people wise and brave.

* * *

Old Jesse's sons, in order due,
Once passed before the prophet's view.
The eldest born, of stately height,
Was not accepted in God's sight,
Six others came, by Jesse led,
Yet on their heads no oil was shed.

Where was that fairer, younger one,
Whom God would place on Israel's throne?
Beside his father's flock he stayed,
And on his harp he sweetly played:
On him the holy oil was pour'd,
For he was chosen of the Lord.

'Twas not his lovely form or face,
That made him with the Lord find grace
But God, who every secret knew,
Saw in his heart affection true,
That still his gracious favour sought,
And on his loving-kindness thought.

The holy Samuel could not tell
Which son the Lord approved well:
Men see our looks, our words they hear,
But cannot know whose heart's sincere:
The Lord into each bosom pries,
And pierces through each fair disguise

Saturday Sermonette

Isaiah xxv, 4.—"For Thou hast been . . . a refuge from the storm."

* * *

See where the storm-cloud lowers, the lightning glances bright,
The tempest fierce is threatening, dark as a moonless night.
Where shall we go for shelter, safe from the storm to be?
Be it of sore temptation, or grief, or misery!
God alone is our refuge; there is none other that hears
Our heart-wrung cry for assistance. And He throughout the years
Has tenderly aided our efforts, that the weakest cannot fail
To conquer, and rise triumphant, though heart and spirit quail
Before the strength of the onslaught. Oh, Father it could not be
That we, Thy children, will vainly call for Thy help to Thee?
"Come to My Heart, My children, take of the strength within.
"Come to Me, I am your refuge from the storms of life and sin."
—Elizabeth Cameron.

Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures. —1 Cor. xv, 1-4.

In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel.—Rom. ii. 16.

A PRAYER

Prayers of the Seven

Prayer No. 2.

O Blessed Jesus, Who didst promise the penitent thief to be with Thyself in Paradise; Grant us by the love of Thy Passion to hate the sins by which we have crucified Thee, that, seeing Thee outstretched upon the cross, we may be filled with penitence, and, making confession of all our sins, may receive of Thee the assurance of pardon and peace through the virtue of Thy precious Blood, and be raised to newness of life in the power of Thy resurrection, Who livest with the Father and the Holy Ghost, God for ever and ever. Amen.

Human Nature

"(By Robert C. Chapman)"

The carnal mind ever lies in wait for self-exaltation, and will catch at any straw for this end.

Deceptions are recorded in God's Word with their corrections, that we may avoid them: if Abraham deceived, we find him corrected; if Isa ac deceived, he is rebuked; and the deception Jacob practised on his father was visited upon him for almost all his life. If David and Jonathan had agreed to cast themselves only upon God, how much after-trouble would have been prevented.—(1 Sam. xx, and on.)

Correction does not always consist in bitter things coming upon us, but it may be in our failing to obtain some higher honour, which, had we walked in greater simplicity, we should have received from God.

That is the hardest to bear which touches my pride; offended pride has no bowels, and hearkens to no reason.

Hurry is the working of the flesh; faith, like God, works at leisure.

Angels have no envy, because they have no pride. Is God glorified? angels are happy. Let the glory of God be our delight, our meat, our drink. Love envieth not: if one member be honoured, saith love, that is my honour, my joy.

Christ must be extolled and be very high in our hearts, if the unruly flesh and its wayward cravings are to be curbed.

Self-righteousness and carnal wisdom are ringleaders of the enemies of the soul.

We should deal with our corrupt nature as we would with a notorious thief—never trust it.

The greater part of our sorrows arise from mortified pride, thwarted self-will, and anxious unbelief.

Pride has always an envious eye and an envious tongue: envy is but the vexation of pride.

It is a mark of true growth in grace and spirituality of mind, to be looking back and dealing afresh with God respecting past iniquities. The soul is greatly profited by a tender conscience dealing before the Lord with the sins of early youth. Defects of character, and feeble resistance of temptation, may be traced up to neglect of dealing with God through the cross about our easily besetting sins. Looking back and reviewing our past state will enable us to read the story of God's present discipline, and aid us in the present and future growth of our souls.

The gospel of Christ is a more open enemy to the pride of man than is the law of Moses. Israel received Moses' commandments with vows of obedience but said of Christ, "Away with Him! crucify Him!"

The master-sin of man is independence of God. What is the cure? Christ the Son of God self-abased, even to the death of the cross. (Phil. ii, 5-8).

Naaman, the Syrian, was somebody in his own sight: therefore he was angry at the commandment which made him nothing.

If we think we are undervalued, let us weigh ourselves in God's balances, and we shall easily bear the slight.

The vauntings of self-exalting man are but the trickery of his pride, to hide his native vanity from his own eye and his neighbour's.

Man without God may seem something at a distance. Come near him; be familiar with him; you find him to be nothing. But "blessed are they that dwell in Thy house; they will be still praising Thee." Even now, while yet in the earthly house of this tabernacle, we find that growing acquaintance with God brings with it increase of reverence and love. Oh, blessed hope! we shall know as we are known; see face to face and be satisfied; waking him in the likeness of the Lord.

Many there are who can talk well of the truth of the gospel, but who, when called to self-denial, taking up crosses, suffering for Christ's sake, prove sounding brass and tinkling cymbals: knowledge puffeth up, but love edifieth.

Absalom's vanity let his hair grow long; and his long hair did the service of the hangman's rope. Let parents hear the warning voice, and teach their children from earliest days to reckon the fear of God their best ornament.

For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all.—Jas., ii, 10.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation: but is passed from death unto life.—Jno. v, 24.

The backslider in heart shall be filled with his own ways: and a good man shall be satisfied from himself.—Prov. xiv, 14.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin. Jno. viii, 20, 21.

For is pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell; and, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself, by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or in heaven.—Col. i, 19, 20.

For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.—Luke xix, 10.

Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven. —Matt. v, 20

The Divinity Of Christ

Some look upon Jesus as merely an exceptionally good Man; others say He is Almighty God. The Scriptures make plain both those errors, and state plainly who Jesus was and what He is now. When it is said Jesus is divine, it would mean that He was of the same nature of being as Jehovah God, with life inherent, and beyond the power of death. To be of the same nature as God does not necessarily follow that He was the same Being.

The Scriptures show Jesus existed before He lived here on earth. Concerning Him we read, in Colossians 1:16: "For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him, and for him." Again in John 1:3, we read concerning the Word of God or Logos, which is the Greek word and His title before coming to earth: "All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made." Jesus Himself said: "Before Abraham was, I am," showing His existence before the time of Abraham. Jesus was not divine before His resurrection. He was not Jehovah God, for He could not be so, if He was the Son of God, as the Bible says He was. Jesus said: "My Father is greater than I," and of His own self He could do nothing. Rev. 3:14 says of Him, that He was the beginning of the creation of God, not God Himself. Prov. 8: 22 to 30 gives us further knowledge of the Logos, showing that He was an entirely separate and distinct Being. The Bible shows that Jesus was not divine before His resurrection, if He had been, He could not have died, and if He did not die the ransom price of man's redemption was not provided. It was necessary that one perfect life must be given for the perfect life lost by Adam's disobedience. The ransom price must be an exact equivalent, no less, no more. This is the absolute justice of Jehovah God. Jesus was more than an ordinary human being for He was perfect, whereas today all are imperfect (Heb. 7:26). In Philippians 2: 9, 10, because of His faithfulness, God has highly exalted Him, giving Him a divine nature. If He already possessed the divine nature, which is the highest form of life, wherein would be the exaltation? Jesus was not divine, but received the divine nature upon His resurrection. The Doctrine of the Trinity, which claims He was God Himself, is neither reasonable nor Scriptural. The fact that He was the Son of God does not mean that He was divine; for others are spoken of as sons, and they have died. Further, a divine Being could not die. Jesus to provide the ransom, of necessity had to be mortal in order to take Adam's place in death.

DELORO BOY SCOUT TROOP

MARMORA, September 1.—The past week has been a busy one for the troop, every spare minute being used in the building of the trek cart. After a little more chiselling and sandpapering, it will be painted to be ready for the week end hike arranged for Septemer 15. At Tuesday evening's meeting the outside games came first that advantage might be taken of the failing light of day. A good game of "Hold the Fort" was played casualties being heavy on both sides.

Inside headquarters a different kind of "Hold the Fort" was played when the casualties were caused by a scout not being able to answer or perform what his opponent could do himself in scouting subjects.

The sing-song half-hour again had the rafters ringing, old camp favorites being given a good rendering.

Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.—1 Jno. iv, 10.

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—Jno., iii, 16.

A VOICE FROM ALGOMA.

Sault Ste. Marie, which last week entertained the editors of Ontario Provincial Dailies, is noted for other things besides its wonderful hospitality. It has, for instance, a huge steel plant that plans a development of $12,000,000; pulp and paper mill that spends $20,000 a week in the city; and it is the centre of a district fabulously rich in mineral ores and forests. Added to these big industrial developments is the splendid attraction to tourists of mountain streams and tree-girt lakes; marvellous vistas of granite and sand and water; interesting relics of bygone days, and a hundred other things that intrigue and delight. Sault Ste. Marie and the Algoma District, of which it is the financial and business centre, are rich beyond measure in historical interest, present-day industrial development, and promise of future expansion.

But there are some things needed by the Soo that can be given only by Old Ontario. It is said, and one can readily understand the truth of the assertion, that Old Ontario gets 90 cents out of every dollar made in Algoma. The new district is dependant upon Old Ontario for its farm produce, its textiles and its other necessities of life, but what Old Ontario has failed to realize is that lack of development in Algoma directly affects business in every industrial centre in Old Ontario.

What does Algoma need in the way of help? In the first place it needs a sympathetic understanding. Conditions are so different at Sault Ste. Marie from those pertaining in the highly industrialized districts of southern and eastern Ontario that the situation must be viewed from a new standpoint. Here, in Peterborough, the farms encroach upon our back gardens and our eighty factories thrust their railway spurs and their buildings out into the farms. Two hours' train journey away is the industrial centre of the province, Toronto. A few hours' farther in the other direction is the greatest of inland ocean ports, Montreal. We have industries so diversified that a slump in one does not seriously affect the life of the city. We are isolated from United States by a wide barrier of water, and we are removed from the lake front with its drifting population and its itinerant visitors that menace law and order.

Take, on the other hand, the situation of Sault Ste. Marie. The few farms that surround the city are inadequate to supply its needs, and the season is much later, so that most of the Soo's meals are carried from Old Ontario instead of across the fence as here. Hundreds of miles separate Sault Ste. Marie from its nearest neighbor city; a long lake and canal voyage intervenes between the Soo and Montreal; the city's industries are centred in one or two lines, so that interference with them is courting disaster. The Canadian Soo is separated from United States by only a narrow river, and in many places the shores are so close as to be within stone throwing distance.

Yes, Algoma requires sympathetic understanding. But Old Ontario must go farther than the mere giving of good wishes, if it itself is to prosper. Definite assistance must be given Algoma's infant industries—infant only in the sense that they have yet so much of development before them. There is, for instance, untold store of ore in Algoma to feed the steel mill at Sault Ste. Marie, but development is discouraged by the importation of $300,000,000 worth of steel yearly from the United States. The Soo plant would like to expand so as to supply Canadian steel made from Canadian ore to build Canadian skyscrapers, bridges and all other buildings as require structural steel. What is needed is protection that will enable the Canadian industry at the Soo to meet the competition of United States mills with their tremendous output, based on the buying power of that country's 120,000,000 people as compared with Canada's 9,000,000 population.

The Government in power, through the Tariff Board a business institution, should take Algoma's situation under serious consideration and make a sincere attempt to strike a policy that will enable the Canadian product to develop while at the same time the interests of the Canadian consumer are not jeopardized.

The prospect of developing a $12,000,000 industry in the heart of a district as rich as Algoma in buying power, taking all its living necessity and its fabricated products from Peterborough and older Ontario, is too big to be lightly dismissed. Much less worthy and far smaller industries have been helped out of their difficulties.

And the time seems ripe for this exploitation of Ontario's marvellous heritage—the ores of Algoma.

LABOR DAY.

Canadian labor can look back with unqualified satisfaction on the year which ends on the eve of its annual holiday. It has been a year of humming prosperity, and on the whole it has been a year marked by industrial peace. There have been no serious, crippling strikes in Canada during the twelve months. Labor has apparently signed its own pact renouncing the strike as an instrument of trades policy, just as nations on August 27 pledged themselves in a disavowal of war except as a last resort. War has proved too costly both to the victors and vanquished, and industrial strife is equally disastrous in the range of its effects. Trade unions have accomplished great benefits for their members. To-day they can still be of service, but they may sometimes be a real detriment to the rank and file. Labor's days of crusading are ended. Its gains are for the most part consolidated and secure. A new industrial world has developed in recent years, requiring the readjustment of old ideas and old attitudes. And because of the new conditions, labor, when regarded as an organization, needs above all wise, reasonable, cool leaders. Even here in Peterborough strikes have been precipitated by hot heads who should have been muzzled, if there had been adherents sufficiently courageous to oppose them. It's a wise union that avoids a strike.

Last year Canada had only two workers in every thousand involved in industrial disputes, according to statistics published a week ago. This was a rather commendable figure and was equalled by Great Britain, France and the Netherlands. United States reported three per thousand, Germany six, Belgium five and Australia twenty-five. The same report indicated that industrial disputes have been steadily declining since 1919.

Australia's industrial turbulence is surely not a flattering figure for a country whose labor leaders have boasted of the strength of their unionism. Of course, some persons probably hold a different opinion, but fortunately they are an insignificant minority. It is more reassuring to note that in the United States and Canada, where labor is well paid and sharing more and more in actual ownership of industries, disruptions were comparatively few.

Sir Archibald Crawford, K.C., in a lecture in London recently, ventured this prediction: "In fifty years' time the division between capital and labor will have largely if not wholly disappeared, because all will be capitalists. Where share-holding and profit-sharing are not in operation, there will be machinery, set up by industry itself, for seeing that wage conditions are absolutely beyond complaint, because there will be an established minimum, plus a standard depending upon the ability of the worker.

So much for the long view. Looking around us we see the need of cautioning the average worker against the temptation of luxuries he cannot afford. Too many of the sons of working men are foolishly trying to keep up with a pace for which they are not financially geared.

Workers, and that means most of Peterborough's people and our nearby farmers, should look to the federal government for especially one activity, a constant effort to open up new markets for our products. And finally there should be personal concern for self-improvement, not only as better equipment for our special work but as matter of self-respect, of respect for the God-given intellect that demands higher ends than perhaps we usually seek.

GOOD-BYE SUMMER.

And so another summer passes....us. Summers have flowered and faded through all the ages, but these few are ours. Such we vainly fancy them, and would bid the sun stand still while yet the trees are green and black winter is far off. Crabapples are ruddy in the clusters that where white and fragrant in the late May days, and wild cherries are wine red along the fences. Fat robins spread their wings in the afternoon sun squatting on the east slope of the gabled roof. The goldfinch feeds on the Cosmos seeds, a living, fluttering flower on swaying stems, and the golden rod glows along the roads and fills the angles of the log fence with transient beauty.

The Great Bear lumbers in the northern sky ahead of Bates and his dogs, and the frosty breath of Orion is upon these first September mornings. Change is all around us and in us; even our summers and years seem swifter, briefer. But the seasons and the moons round out their courses with unvarying regularity in an infinite, perfect system that allots us our summers and our little day.

THEY SHOULD TEST IT BY RADIO.

When the music of the African band in its native land does not soothe the savage breasts of the tribesmen, the musicians are punished with horrifying severity. A curator of African ethnology in Chicago has been explaining the customs of natives in using certain instruments, on exhibition at Field Museum. If the player of pipes blows a sour note, he is liable to cruel penalties. The corners of his mouth are slit so that he will never be able to pucker up his lips. Drums, which are used for signaling as well as for dancing, must be correctly played or the drummer may lose his hands.

The curator recommends one type of drum to American jazz bands. It is not beaten, but is equipped with a wooden rod thrust through the drumhead and projecting about a foot and a half. This is stroked with the palm of the hand, which has first been rubbed with rosin. The resulting vibration causes penetrating groans and wails which not even the modern saxaphone can hope to equal.

If jazz band masters are interested to try this device, they should not forget the unpleasant practices that go with it. Of course, civilized movie patrons are not going to leap into the orchestra pit and chop up the players if the music does not suit, but an African friction drum might have an uncivilizing effect.—New York Times.

WHEN PEOPLE ARE BORED.

Dr. Moreira, a well-known psychiatrist, affirms that isolation and boredom are responsible for more cases of mental disorder than is either hard work or the speed and intensity of moden life. Indeed, few men of science entertain the notion that the average person works too hard and requires more leisure. Leisure and recreation are necesary, but in moderation.

A British philosophical writer, in an article in Harper's magazine asserts that the extraordinary restlessness of Americans—their love of travel and their enthusiasm for motoring and golf—is to be attributed to their dread of boredom. Americans, the writer says, are more easily bored than Europeans, and simple pleasures do not satisfy them. There is truth in these observations, but there are also exaggeration and misapprehension.

The United States has no idle class. Everybody works. This national habit probably makes boredom a greater nuisance in this country than elsewhere. Killing time is an art that requires training and practice. But why should any intelligent person ever have to dread boredom? What with useful and interesting work, normal recreation, reading, the discharge of civic and social duties, and cultivation of the arts, boredom should be a rare phenomenon.

Men and women, it is true, need to be educated for leisure as well as for work and social service. This important fact has received due emphasis only in recent years. No boy or girl should be graduated from college or even from high school without having acquired a genuine interest in good books, in music, in the more popular sciences and in politics and beneficial activities of the community. The educational system that condemns its graduates to boredom, or time-killing futilities, or the risk of incurring mental disease, is a failure.—Chicago News.

Excerpts From Week's Ontario Provincial Dailies.

EDITORS ARE SPORTS

The trout of Wartz Lake on the Algoma Central Railway are ready to affirm that never since the steel was laid along the top of the big ridge at Pangis and the paper company's camp established on the Chippewa River lagoon, have they encountered better sports than the editors of the Provincial Dailies who visited the lake on Friday and Saturday last.

For instancce, the editors did not invide the haunts of the big trout until well on in the day. They did not take advantage of the speckled chaps while the latter were, after a night's fast, bent on seeking breakfast, and likely to inhale a suspicious looking worm. The editors waited until around 10 o'clock before disturbing the waters with pounds of lead sinkers and succulent night crawlers. The newspaper men made it a sporting proposition. They put the matter up to the trout squarely and fairly.

"Take it or leave it," they told the trout, "If you can separate the worm from the hook without being snared, go to it. We know you have breakfasted well and do not need food. We've just dropped over to see what kind of sports you are anyway."

SPOILING LANDSCAPE

Signs are all very well in their way, but there is a logical location for everything, and we cannot understand the ignorance of psychology displayed by some advertisers who have a flair for billboards. They are often placed in position whicch cannot avoid giving offense and the resentment of the spectator is transferred subcocnsciously to the product of which the advertisement tells, and a prospective customer is given a negative suggestion, which, as salemanagers tell the men they send out on the road, is very undesirable. Still it seems that advertisers must be protected from themselves and in Montreal they are pressing forward with a proposal to restrict billboards, and asked to pass an act which will give municipalities power to restrain them.—Belleville Intelligencer.

A PLEA FOR ALGOMA

Algoma has wonderful resources but as remarked by one of the visit-Sault, the finest asset of the country is its people. There is a new outlook all through Algoma at the present time and particularly at Sault Ste. Marie, where the development of the steel industry promises to make a city of 50,000, instead of 23,000, and to plant a prosperous town overnight at the mine head where Canadian iron ores will be at least brought to the surface and $200,000,000 per year is now spent by Canada on foreign-made steel, and yet we have the iron, the plants and the men who can manufacture for every Canadian requirement It is an appreciation of this which stirs Algoma people with hope and the requests being made for some tariff concessions, to get this great undertaking firmly under way, are only reasonable. An investment of twelve or fourteen million is planned for Sault Ste. Marie by a company which is now Canadian controlled.—St. Catharines Standard.

WHY JAPAN ADDS "MARU"

Those interested enough to read the maritime news must have observed the frequency with which the word Maru follows the names of Japanese shipping lines, or even the name of the ship itself. Ever since the Japanese flag appeared in foreign ports this word "Maru," the Brandon Sun observes, has been generally taken as mean "ship," or more recently steamship. But well-informed Japanese shipping men explain that to "Maru" originally, and is still, attached a connotation more important than for mere descriptive purposes. It may be taken as meaning either something "beloved" or "greatly treasured," or secondarily a "castle," more especially the inner court or citadel of a castle or stronghold.

In ancient days a Japanese nobleman would often add the name "Maru" to the given name of his first born if it happened to be a boy, the term in itself being of the masculine gender. In this respect the general bestowal of the appellation on vessels differs from the usage of English-speaking nations, where a ship is always referred to as "she."

A combination ofthe two definitions of "Maru" is probably responsible for the maritime use. Japan, an island nation, being particularly dependent upon the sea. Therefore, to add the term "Maru" to ships, which make trade possible is a natural extension. As for the "castle," a vessel might be regarded as a floating building. An interesting exception to the general rule is that of warship, none of these taking "Maru."

THE WIDE-EYED

Wide-eyed is no meaningless word. One has but to travel up the lane of the midway at the Belleville fair to see that the perfectly enraptured express themselves through wide open eyes.

The wide-eyed are the salt of the earth. They are children whether big or small before the vision has narrow down to a squint such as is found in the adult world. Idealists and romantics are wide-eyed, not wild-eyed as some might expect.

Those who attend fairs if they attend them long enough have a good traning in keeping the eyes wide open. Even the burning sun cannot close the lids of the children, at least when they are out to see things on the track, to see the midway, and to inspect the exhibits

AN IMPORTANT INDUSTRY.

The pulp and paper industry is the most important manufacturing industry in Canada; heading the lists in 1926 for gross and net value of manufactured products as well as for distribution of wages and salaries. In total capital invested the industry is second only to electric light and power plants and in total number of employees it is second only to sawmills.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., September 1—(Canadian Press)—The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was practically at a standstill which exporters attributed to the fact that the pools were underselling them by 2½ to 3c per bushel There was an increased inquiry from New York exporters for berth ocean room here to the continent and it was reported that the surplus supply on spot to Antwerp and Rotterdam was pretty well cleaned up at bargain rates.

There was no change in car lot prices for cash grain in the local market. The demand was better for domestic and country account and a moderate amount of business was done.

The trade in spring and winter wheat grades of flour was fair and values were steady.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for standard grades of rolled oats and values were marked up fifteen cents per bag. The demand for all lines of millfeed continued good and prices were unchanged.

A feature of the egg trade was the further strength that prevailed in the market and jobbing prices for all grades were marked up another cent per dozen. This was attributed to the steady increasing demand and the limited supplies. The receipts were 1,187 cases.

The market for imported beans was without any new feature to note, prices being firm on account of the continued small offerings. Prices for all grades of butter were well maintained under a fair demand. The receipts were 1,035 packages.

Extreme dullness again marked the local and export trade in cheese but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 13,899 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, September 1 (Canadian Press). — The lethargic grain trade was aroused a little yesterday by firmer cables. Undisposed to take the lead in any action, up or down, the wheat traders followed Liverpool's example and pushed prices fractionally higher, but the entire day's range in September was only ¾c. Corn was extremely sensitive, September again appearing tight and closing at a maximum gain of 1½c, while the later months moved forward timidly in a margin of less than one cent.

One of the chief influences on the dull market was the combination of the month-end and the week-end holiday. All markets will be closed on Monday, and the following day will see the new crop estimates released by private observers. To-day will mark the first edliveries of grain on September contract, too, and some

Ontario Editors Visit Wonderful Algoma

(By J. R. H.)

When J. W. Curran of the Sault Ste. Marie Daily Star invited the Editors of Ontario Provincial Dailies to his home town last week, he had no idea that they could have such a good time as they had. He couldn't have imagined it.

There were sightseeing trips around the Soo in which there seemed to be something new at every turn; a civic dinner in a floating (or nearly so) pavilion; afternoon tea at the country club; business meetings aboard ship; a fishing expedition up the Algoma Central Railroad for the men and a wonderful sight-seeing trip of nearly 300 miles on the same line for the women of the party; the whole excursion being begun and ended by magnificent sails on the C.P.R. steamer, Keewatin.

The serious purpose behind the trip was the learning by editors of the potentialities of Ontario's north-west, and the needs of the country which is on the threshold of wonderful development. In this regard the exploration was particularly successful, because the editors, not satisfied with the written and spoken description, insisted on travelling into the rich mineral and pulpwood sections of Algoma to see for themselves the possibilities this northland holds. They came, they saw, and they were convinced.

The Peterborough Examiner was represented by the Managing Editor, accompanied by Mrs. Heron, and others in the party were: Mr. and Mrs. Templeton, Guelph Mercury; Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Whitaker, Brantford Expositor; Mr. and Mrs. Harris Walsh, St. Catharines Standard; Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, Woodstock Sentinel Review; Mr. Arthur Partridge, Manager Canadian Daily Newspaper Association; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Euler, Kitchener Record; Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Martin, Woodstock Sentinel Review; Mr. and Mrs. George Dingman, St. Thomas Times Journal; Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Gadsby, St. Catharines Standard; Mr. F. H. Leslie, Niagara Falls Review; Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Hunter, Woodstock Sentinel Review; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, Owen Sound Sun-Times; Mr. J. M. Cowan (editor) Niagara Falls Review.

By courtesy of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the party left Toronto by the boat express on Wednesday afternoon, embarking on the S.S. Keewatin at Port McNicoll at 4 o'clock under personal care of Mr. Banks of the C.P.R. advertising staff. A business meeting of the representatives of the Ontario Provincial Dailies was held in the drawing room of the steamer that evening, while the ladies of the party played bridge or strolled the deck in beautiful moonlight. J. W. Curran, of Sault Ste. Marie, on whose invitation the trip was arranged, travelled from Toronto with the party and was so solicitous for the comfort and enjoyment of the newspaper people that few remember a more delightful trip.

On arrival at the Soo on Thursday forenoon the visitors were taken under the wings of charming hosts and hostesses, in whose homes they were billetted, and spent the afternoon in sightseeing.

Smooth roads gave access to new marvels at every turn. The steel works amazed by their magnitude; the newsprint mill of the Abitibi Company was especially interesting to the editors; the old fur trading block house is no less picturesque than it is historically interesting, and a lock built by the Northwest Company in 1797 makes the visitor smile when compared with the huge ship canal nearby with their continuous stream of shipping. About half the newspaper party drove a few miles from Sault Ste. Marie to the shore of Lake Superior, there to have a lunch of lake fish served by the Indians. They were guests there of Messrs. Carney and Farrell, two of the most energetic in their efforts to entertain. A few miles from Sault Ste. Marie is a splendid resort, somewhat like Chemong. Instead of a small lake, however, there stretches to the horizon the waters of Lake Superior, and instead of low hills behind the cottages there are beetling heights of granite that add interest by their contrast. It is a delightful spot.

On the road as the party approached Steelton, now part of the city of Sault Ste. Marie, a pipe was seen conducting water from a field to the roadside ditch. It was from an artesian well, flowing continuously at an even temperature and deliciously refreshing.

After the sight-seeing tour in which more of interest was seen than can be told, the ladies were entertained at afternoon tea at the Country Club. Heavy rain did not appreciably dull the affairs' enjoyment, because it appeared to the visitors that the darker the weather the brighter glowed the hospitality of the hostesses. In spite of the downpour, the City Editor of the Brantford Expositor, A. T. Whitaker and his host played a nine-hole round of golf.

At 7 o'clock the visitors were guests at a citizens' dinner, served in the pavilion which was, for the first time in its history, surrounded by water. Access was by way of a gang plank leading from the road, and the spice of adventure was added the occasion by its transit. As at all other meals served in this district, the dinner was marked by the presence on the menu of the wonderful Lake Superior white fish.

Speakers at the dinner included Hon. James Lyons, Minister of Lands and Forests, who represents Sault Ste. Marie in the Provincial Legislature; J. D. Jones of the Algoma Steel Works, J. A. McPail, and some of the visiting editors. Reports of these addresses, containing as they do, so much of interest to old Ontario, will appear in The Examiner under another heading. The accounts of the possibilities of steel development are particularly interesting in Peterborough because of the industrial nature of this community.

Farther North.

The dinner concluding at 10 o'clock, the men of the party hastily donned less festive, but more practical garb, and boarded a special car on the Algoma Central Railway for a fishing trip north. The General Manager generously loaned his private coach, as did the General Superintendent his for the ladies next day, and everything possible was done to make the wonderful trip more wonderful still. Meals were served on the car by a permanent chef, and most of the party slept aboard throughout the trip.

A run of 72 miles brought the fishermen to Spruce Lake, when the car was placed on a siding. At 4:30 a few sleeping individuals were tossed from their berths, to find many of the men already girded for the fishing fray with rods and nets. After breakfast the party split up, most of the men going through the bush to Swartz Lake, guided by Isadore Paquette, French Canadian government guide, while four—Messrs. Partridge of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association, Walsh, of the St. Catharines' Standard; Leslie of the Niagara Falls Review, and Heron of The Examiner—went to Mr. Curran's log cabin on Spruce Lake. The former party landed 15 nice speckled trout, but all the efforts of the four at "Woodpecker's Hole" brought not one bite. As Walsh declared, "I've no doubt but that there are fish in the lake, but they're no fools."

However, the smaller party did not suffer hunger because of the inability to catch fish. Those around Peterborough who think they know the meaning of hospitality would be amazed by the interpretation given the word in Algoma, and as an instance may be told the contents of the larder as Mr. Curran and his associates furnished it for the four visitors for a two day stay. This is the list—8 loaves of bread, 4 tins soup, 5 lbs. tomatoes, 2 tins corn, 4 tins peas, 6 tins pork and beans, preserved raspberries, pears and peaches, bottle of vinegar, olives, French mustard, 5 lbs. cheese, 1 packet cream cheese, 3 lbs. butter, 3 packets and 1 tin soda crackers, 2 lbs. coffee, 1 lb. tea, 8 cans milk, 1 tin milk powder, 1 package rolled oats, 1 peck potatoes, onions, celery, 3 dozen oranges, 2 lbs. sugar, 2 dozen eggs, 4 packets breakfast foods, ½ dozen lemons, 1 bottle each mixed pickles, sweet pickles, onions, catsup, sauce and chow chow, a large roll of ham (probably 10 lbs.) and all the extras such as flour, seasonings, and rice, topped off with a dozen bottles of dry ginger ale. This list may come in handy for some Peterborough party of four starting out for a summer cottage for two days!

The scenery in this section is magnificent. Very little land has been burned over, and the canoe glides along densely wooded shores that reflect mirror-like in the water. All through the bush are scattered or clustered the most brilliant blue, red and purple berries and flowers. Here and there a sandy beach tempts the bather. Everywhere is peace and quiet.

On Friday night, the four cottagers sat in camp chairs around the fire and swapped newspaper yarns or talked shop, while a mile away the men in the railway coach held a post-mortem on every fish they had caught.

With the Ladies.

In the meantime, the ladies had boarded the Superintendent's private coach and were being transported northward on the A.C.R. to Franz, on the C.P.R. transcontinental line, passing through the famous Agawa Canyon. From the stories told the men afterward, it appears that a lady had but to spy a pretty stone or flower she fancied to have the train stopped so that she might pick her trophy. At one point the train stopped a long time while the ladies visited an old prospector's cabin in the Canyon—the while ordinary passenger watched from the windows of the trains and wondered what it was all about.

The railway traverses the Agawa Canyon for some twelve miles, in the most magnificent and imposing scenery. Col. J. A. Currie, in his book, "The Red Watch," says in comparing the Highlands of Scotland with the Agawa Canyon: "The peaks (Scotland's Highlands) are not so majestic as the . . . Range of the Agawa Valley on the northwest coast of Lake Superior, which is the most beautiful spot probably in the whole world."

At Franz the ladies were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Selkirk, who opened their home for square dancing and games. Some of the party slept in the hotel, while the remainder were made comfortable in the railway coach. On Saturday they came southward, picking up the men's coach on the way. Dinner for the ladies included the fish caught by their husbands—proof positive that it was really a fishing trip.

Wonderfully attractive, both to the sightseer and fisherman, is the Algoma Central Railway line running northward from Sault Ste. Marie. There are many summer homes along the line and the A.C.R. has built a number of cottages which may be rented for summer camping or for winter hunting. These are all log cabins, 24 x 18 feet, containing a living room and two bedrooms. Bunk springs, mattresses, dining table, kitchen table, chairs, stove and all the other appertanences are to be found in every cabin.

The Montreal River with its foaming rapids and placid pools, is an attraction to anyone with the love of nature; nothing prettier can be found than the Chippewa River, 48 miles from the Soo, and there is nothing more magnificent in the Rockies than the Agawa Canyon with its over-hanging cliffs on one side and its deep drop to the Canyon floor on the other. In places the Railway train winds around cliffs or twists to follow the river. Ninety-one miles from the Soo there is a modern steel bridge under which the water of the Montreal River tumbles in cascades as far as the eye can see.

This district appears destined to be a wonderful tourist resort and only knowledge of its wonders is required to bring hundreds flocking by railway, by the splendid road that runs from Toronto to the Soo, or by the splendid lake steamers that are so comfortable, and so reminiscent of the ocean-going vessels.

On arrival at the Soo, the party found hosts again waiting with their cars, and a quiet night followed the excitement of the previous three days. On Sunday morning most of the party concluded a wonderful holiday by accompanying their hosts to various churches, immediately thereafter boarding the Keewatin for the return trip. An interesting practice was noted here. Every Sunday morning the Rotarians of Sault Ste. Marie call at the boat with their cars to take passengers to church; the services end at 12:05, giving time for the Rotarians to drive the visitors back before the up boat sails at 12:30 and the down boat at 1 o'clock.

Bethany

(Examiner Correspondence)

BETHANY, Sept. 1.—The Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Poulter and children, Patricia and Theodore have arrived safely at the United Church parsonage Thursday evening after an absence of seven weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Poulter were on a tour of England and France, while the children remained with their grandmother, Mrs. Wooten, at Belleville.

A committee of the ladies of the church opened the parsonage, aired it and had prepared supper in anticipation of their arrival. Mr. and Mrs. Poulter were very glad to be at home again and they are prepared to tell many things about their trip.

Mrs. Joe Coulter and children of Lindsay are visiting Mrs. Coulter's sister, Mrs. Harry Hutchinson.

Miss Ruth Hamilton was home for Thursday from their cottage at Thurstonia Park.

Mr. John Marshall of Lindsay is helping to harvest his brother-in-law's Wess Steer's corp. Mr. Steer was badly cut in the leg with the binder several weeks ago, but is improving as well as can be expected, the stitches being removed on Thursday.

Mr. McBride, manager of the Bank of Toronto here, has returned from a two weeks' vacation trip through Ontario.

The public school here opens for the fall and winter terms on Tuesday, September the 4th. The teachers are Mrs. Ida Carscadden, principal, and Miss Gladys Fierheller, assistant.

It is expected that the annual Sunday school rally in connection with the United Sunday school will be held on Sunday, September 30. Programs have already been received and the theme for this year is "Peace and good will."

EXHIBITION HUMOR

(By Jeanette.)

An unconcerned pair at the Toronto Exhibition who attracted a great deal of attention, and didn't seem to mind it at all, were a young man and woman who carried their infant about with them in a large clothes-basket, covered on top by mosquito-netting. Under this protective covering, the fat, good child slept peacefully, unmindful of the stares of the curious-minded who craned their heads to look at it. It was surrounded by free samples which were collected by the parents, who bore a handle apiece and steered the basket carefully through the crowds.

Another unconcerned individual who added much to the joy of life for his passengers was a plain-faced street-car conductor who refused to become peeved over the Exhibition rush. With his hat tilted on the side of his head and his pleasant blue eyes staring short-sightedly out of his glasses, he jollied the crowd in the noon-day car, and sent them out smiling, one and all.

"Step to it, lady, or one of the young men will grab it," he advised the feminine seekers for a seat. "Move along there, but don't hurry yourselves," he admonished the fumblers for tickets or small change. "Here, try one of these," he remarked shoving a transfer at a girl who wanted to get to some other part of the city.

They were tired, and hot, and hungry. They wanted to get some other place in a great hurry, and they were jostled and pushed about in a crowded car. But, instead of frowning, they smiled, because a little plain man jollied them and kept his temper in the rush.

An old lady crossed one of the streets of the Exhibition. She had a black coal-scuttle bonnet, a black cotton dress that sagged to the pavement, and a black enveloping shawl. She leaned heavily on a stick of thick yellow wood. And she ordered and drank with a relish, a large glass of "Honeydew."

HALF HOLIDAY CHANGE MOOTED

Some Campbellford Men Think Wednesday More Suitable Day

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—There has been nothing official done yet, but there is a feeling among certain business men that Wednesday would be a more suitable day for a half holiday than Friday, as is at present the case. At the present time, the half holiday is a real half holiday. There is practically nothing taking place in town. The stores are closed, only an occasional car appears parked or moving on the streets. Till after the heat of the day has passed, the tennis courts and bowling greens are deserted. Then only a few of the more ardent fans take advantage of their half day of freedom.

Even the paving crew seems to be working a little more leisurely, although the amount o. work completed does not seem to be falling off in the least. The motor accident yesterday afternoon was not at one of the busiest corners, but in the residential streets. Some of the local fun makers dared a boy to walk bare-footed across the warm surface of the newly laid street, but the workmen caught the trespasser before he got far. A hound dog belonging to a merchant started to make the same passage. It got part way over, felt the heat and hesitated. In that moment, the animals courage failed and he retraced his steps, lifting its feet as high as possible after each application to the hot surface.

LYRICS OF LIFE

(By Douglas Malloch.)
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Saturday Night.

The boys were talkin' around the shack,
As they often do, till the boss comes back,
And it wasn't Hoover, it wasn't Smith,
They picked that night for to rassle with.
The question they argued pro and con,
As they often do, when the boss is gone,
While each man stated each view of his,
Was "what is the happiest time there is?"

Some thought childhood, some middle life,
Some to be single, some have a wife,
Some thought summer, and some thought spring,
And had good reasons, like everything.
Then Scotty Stewart the word let fall
That Saturday night is the best of all,
"Yes, Saturday night is the best," he said,
"Two sleeps, five meals, and no work ahead."

I've thought it over the summer days,
And spring is pleasant in lots of ways,
And we'd all be glad to be boys again,
There's pleasures even for married men;
But Scotty Stewart I think was right,
Life's brightest moment is Saturday night,
When a fellow comes in, as Scotty said,
Two sleeps, five meals and no work ahead.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Cream, black and red ribbon is used with double ring adjuster to form a headdress appropriate for tennis and other sports.

A summer fashion that certainly will not go with summer days and that I am sure will continue in favor all autumn and into the winter is the fashion for the ribbon sports turban. Or rather the ribbon bandeau worn turban fashion.

To make one of these turbans you should choose some sort of wide striped ribbon and get enough of it to wind twice around the head, with ends hanging at one side. If you like you may tie the ends each time you wear it, but it is more convenient to get one of the new slip rings or buckles of the sort shown in the sketch.

If you want a scarf to go with the bandeau get enough of the wide ribbon to make a shoulder square—four or five lengths of it you might need and these should be sewed together with a short fringe left at the two sides where the ends of the ribbon appear.

Of course skirts will be longer for autumn—but for evening and formal afternoon wear there is very good reason to believe that the long-in-back, short-in-front hemline will prevail. At some of the very recent Paris showings there have been evening gowns almost up to the knees in the front and down to the heels at the back. And this down at the back line will surely be important.

Figured prints are apparently to survive frost. The tendency seems to be in the direction of smaller, more subtle patterns. Printed velvets are spoken of in connection with recent displays of almost all the smart French dressmaking houses, and for autumn wear shops are already showing interesting use of printed challis and wool crepe materials.

TRAVEL-LOG.

"COME AGAIN" TO IRELAND

The French say "Au revoir," the Germans, "Auf weider sehen," the English "Good-bye," but the Irish say, "Come again." More than forty Aprils have awakened the shamrocks in the meadows since I first set my foot on Irish soil. I have said farewells to friendly hosts in nearly every country in Europe, from the Greek templed rocks of Sicily to the grey-green lakes of Finland, from Constantinople to Gibraltar, but nowhere have I found as cheerful a "God-be-with-you," as in Ireland. The Irish "Come again" is as generous as the open hand and as hearty as the embrace of an old friend. The "Good-byes" of other nations call attention to the time which must elapse before we meet again, the Irish "Come again" rather anticipates the pleasure of the next meeting.

"Who comes to my cabin in the wee green glen,
So well will he love it, he must come again."

So many millions of Irish men and women have emigrated that the "Come again" greeting has become one of our most familiar idioms. You may hear it in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver almost as often as in Cork, Dublin and Belfast. I would like to suggest that wherever you hear it, you associate the greeting with its birthland, and remember that it is Ireland calling across the s.a.s.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

Doubt of one you love
Is like the chameleon
Creeping about
In the trembling foliage of Fear;
Assuming first one color
And then another
Of the bright, flaunting flowers,
Of fallacy and falsehood . . .

WHOEVER sent me this little verse did not even sign a pen name, but I am using the poem here because it just fits in with a letter I received a day or two ago. My correspondent, following up "Bubbles'" letter of Friday week, tells me about her husband's going out at nights and remarks that he does not tell her where he has been. "Bubbles," you will recall, said she had heard that all married men went out with other women.

• • •

I am quite convinced that fewer men are faithless than one is led to believe by reading the fiction current in magazines of to-day. It almost appears to me that my correspondent has been reading one of the so-called "true" magazines, and has imagined herself in the place of one of the poor wronged women pictured there.

• • •

The situation does not seem so desperate, after all. There's no great crime in a man's not telling what he does when away from home, though it would be better if he did tell, because then these chameleon doubts would not arise.

• • •

Men are sometimes not so thoughtful in this regard as they might be. They will go off to lodge or somewhere and stay half the night talking with cronies, but if their wives stay out until midnight at bridge parties they find the home air decidedly chilly on their return.

• • •

It is tragedy in the making when doubts creep into the mind of either husband or wife. It would be better, far, to see the thing through at the first worry—just ask plump and plain what you want to know. Then there will be, possibly, a flare that is hundreds of times better than gnawing doubt.

• • •

And probably there will be no trouble, but only a good laugh for both of you.

• • •

I am busily engaged now in preparing for the Fall Fashion Number to be issued shortly. There's so much to write about, and so little space to put it in! I intend having a few general articles on the styles, but most of the number will be given up to descriptions of goods in Peterborough stores.

• • •

In one of the smart Toronto stores a few days ago I saw a new fabric that will doubtless appear here in the openings. It is a soft sheen velvet, with a mirror-like surface painted in dazzling colors and designs. Velvet, they say, will be the ultra-chic fabric this fall.

• • •

Wherever smart women gather they will wear fashions that intrigue and fascinate, so buoyantly youthful are they, so utterly feminine. Among the forecasts told by a George street dealer I made a note of these: coats will dip subtly, frocks will lean to color, ensembles of fancy woolens will predominate, millinery will be individual.

• • •

The dip of the new coats at the hemline will be adored, and the useful and decorative pockets will please every woman. I was given a peep at one ravishing model with rich soft fur trimmings that would delight any feminine heart.

• • •

Satin is distinctly in for frocks, with scarfs, jabots, flared and draped treatment that further develops the femininity now gaining so much headway.

• • •

Apparently the designers of millinery have had so much success with modes that frame the face that they do not intend to relinquish the success. I was shown what is said to be the "latest" in fall millinery (if there can be any "latest" in fashion!) that is formed in the now popular skullcap design. Trimming is very important, and much of it is just of that effective simplicity offered in the design we gave our readers a few weeks ago. All of these helps are used up, by the way.

• • •

Color runs riot in the new frocks. Violets and blues vie with browns and greens, and there is any number of new interesting reds. Black, of course, goes on forever.

• • •

This week's help is a sheet of printed directions for making the new pointed slip, with sketch and diagrams showing how to cut the pattern. All necessary information is given. The service is free.

• • •

A criticism has been made of the recipes recently printed. It is pointed out that the recipes do not appear in proper season. I don't see how I can arrange it differently, except by courtesy of my readers who send recipes—because, you see, I print them as they come to me.

• • •

When you start preserving or cooking any seasonal dishes, why not send in your recipe right away, so that your neighbors may have an opportunity to try it out? Your name will not be used if you so desire.

• • •

It is wonderfully encouraging to see the interest being taken in this column and in my mail column. I would just like to remind readers that I am delighted to receive hints or criticisms.

• • •

This should be a real forum, where women readers of The Examiner can bring their difficulties for solution, and bring their ideas in a neighborly way.

• • •

Let's be neighbours.

Cupid and the Gossip

By H. IRVING KING

Mystery has a fascination for all normal people — male or female. Some of the males of the species pretend not to be "intrigued" by mystery but such people are promising candidates for the Annanias Club. Anyway Gilbert Martin was a mystery. He had arrived in Forestdale, a town of about five thousand inhabitants—put up at the best and only real hotel of the town; had stayed there for three weeks and had spoken to the hotel clerk only when he registered, the waiters only when he ordered his meals, and to the other guests of the hotel not at all. All the luggage he had brought with him was a suitcase and a small trunk—a steamer trunk apparently.

His case was discussed in full assembly in the hotel lobby. Sam Jugerson, the town gossip, decided that the stranger was a rum-runner. Sam was always of a suspicious nature.

Once he had met the minister of the First Baptist Church making his rheumatic way home alone at eleven o'clock at night, having just come from seeing one of his parishioners who had become obsessed with the idea that he was about to die and would like to see the minister before he did so. Sam saw the minister hobbling home and asked him: "Elder, what are you doing out here so late at night?" and the minister replied: "Gathering them in, gathering them in," and passed on.

Sam was not much of a sleuth by nature, simply a gossip, but under the stress of circumstances a man can become almost anything—a bum or a hero—capture machine gun nest single handed or ask the casual passerby on Park Row for "beef and mustard." There are limitless possibilities to the "pressure of circumstances."

Gilbert kept pretty close to the hotel, going out twice a day for constitutional walks, but walking nowhere in particular and speaking to no one—as Sam, who always trailed him on these health exercises, found out. No letters came for him and he sent none. It was springtime and the wealthy people of the town who had flown away for the winter months were beginning to fly back again and open the big houses on the hill. This was Sam's harvest time, for he had for years acted as a general handy man about the estate of Colonel Mathew Oakley. The Colonel regarded Sam as a character and used to like to hear him reel off the town gossip. While affecting a stern and uncompromising manner the Colonel was in reality, a rather weak man and secretly fond of gossip himself. Like all weak men he was obstinate and called his obstinacy firmness.

The Colonel's only child, his daughter Eleanor, was something like her father in this respect—she was obstinate. You could order her to do anything and she wouldn't do it. Otherwise she was as near perfect as they make 'em. And when it came to looks she was a dream.

"Well, Sam, what the news," asked the Colonel when his faithful henchman showed up at the Elms—the name of the Colonel's place.

"Oh nothing very alarming," replied Sam, "except that there's a fellow stopping down at the hotel who is a mystery. Nobody knows what he's here for. My idea is that he's the head of a rum-running gang. There was a schooner caught down the Bay last week with two hundred cases on board, and if this Gilbert Martin ain't—"

"What!" cried the Colonel. "Gilbert Martin? Eleanor, do you hear that?"

"I hear," replied Eleanor. "Suppose you dismiss Sam now and we will—er—confer."

"Father," said Eleanor when Sam had disappeared, "what does this mean? Did you arrange for Gilbert Martin to be here when we returned?"

"No, I didn't" snapped the Colonel. "If he's here he's here on his own hook. When we were in Rome this winter I ordered you to marry Gilbert— and you refused. That ended it as far as I was concerned. You never do anything I tell you to, anyway."

Eleanor was meditative. "Well," she said at length, "Gilbert seemed to be so sure that I would say yes—and then you went and actually ordered me to marry him. And I won't be bossed about."

And here, greatly to the trepidation of the Colonel, she began to cry. For Eleanor was a woman and human after all.

The Colonel fidgetted. "What was the last thing you said to him?" he asked.

"I said that when I wanted to see him again I would let him know," replied Eleanor drying her tears.

"Well," said the Colonel, "you see he has got here before us and placed himself right handy in case you should want to see him again. Sam," he cried going to a window which opened on the lawn where Sam was working at cleaning up. "Come here; Miss Eleanor wants to speak to you."

Sam came in wondering.

"Sam," said Eleanor with great dignity, "you can tell Mr. Martin that Colonel and Miss Oakley will expect him to tea this afternoon."

"What, the bootlegger!" cried Sam. "Get out, you scoundrel and deliver your message," roared the Colonel.

The wedding took place in June, of course.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

SOME ESSENTIALS TO THE SUCCESS AND PERMANENCY OF W. I.'S.

By Mr. Geo. A. Putnam, Superintendent of Ontario Women's Institutes, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

After a little more than twenty-four years active association with the Women's Institutes of the Province of Ontario and in recent years with representatives from other provinces of the Dominion, I accept with full appreciation of responsibility the task of outlining "some essentials to the success and permanency of the Women's Institutes," of which there are 1,100 with 40,000 members in the Province of Ontario.

First, we must remember that this organization was established with a view to bringing to the rural districts some of the advantages which are enjoyed in the centres of population The Institute must, if it is to be permanent, continue to be of real educational value along practical lines to the members. It has been demonstrated n and through the Institutes that added efficiency on the part of home makers can be secured through th Women's Institutes as in no other way. The Institute must continue to be not only an educational factor, but also a social influence making for good citizenship.

An organizat on largely made up of mothers and those who have the mother spirit will continue to render effective service to the individual as well as to look to the needs of the whole community.

The permanency of the Women's Institutes would be doubly assured if there was a more general recognition of the fact that in rural districts the one organ zation can accept responsibility for determining policies and administrating those features in which all the people are directly o: indirectly concerned; education for grown-ups, libraries, co-operation with schools, community centres, wholesome amusements, relief and the support of public institutions.

The Institutes will be further strengthened when it is more generally recognized by those who have to do with the administrating of service of various kinds in the rural districts that there is no more effective medium through which the rural communities can be quickly and effectively reached than through the Institutes. The Institute stands ready to co-operate in all protective, corrective and constructive work.

Because the Institutes have utilized their talents and equipment to the best advantage and co-operated with Departments of Government and other organizations bringing to the rural communities the advantages of service which were formerly largely confined to the centres of population, those in authority have been ever ready to supplement their efforts along lines requested by the Institutes.

Irrespective of party affil ations, religious leanings, class distinctions and national characteristics all have been welcomed upon an equal basis n the W.I., and there is no possibility of this foundation-stone being destroyed for the basis of organization and administration in the Institute makes it impossible for partyism, nationality or sectarianism to dominate the organization.

THE POSSIBILITIES OF WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

by Mrs. J. W. Stone, President of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario, Bond Head, Ont.

The motto of the Women's Institute is—"For Home and Country." Doesn't that include about everyth ng in the world? Now this organization is so well established and do ng such good work in Ontario, the other Provinces and the Mother Country that one realizes the wonderful possibilities for the organization. This organization being non-political, non-sectarian, includes all classes and the work is with the urban women as well as the rural.

We have in Ontario an organization one thousand branches with approximately forty thousand members, which is recognized by those in close touch with our activities as a most forceful factor in the development of the individual and the branch, in establishing high standards for home life, community activities and providing facilities for education, amusement and social ntercourse.

The members of the Women's Institute realize the possibilities that lie before them and feel as never before the obligations that these afford. Many lines of interest to the whole people are receiving valuable support, both in management and contribution from the Women's Institutes. It has been said the Institute is "the great rural University" and truly it is. The Department offers so many splendid courses to the girls and women that it is possible to learn at these classes how to be efficient in many lines of work. The literature supplied by the Department is available for the asking. The chief purpose of the Institute is to make towards greater efficiency in the multiplicity of duties which face women of responsibility.

The Institutes have always taken a keen interest in health problems. Let us face the question of Maternal Mortality and get busy at once and do something to lower the death rate. At the Bienniel held in Wolfville last year it was resolved to devote the coming term to a Dominion-wide effort to ensure a material improvement. We must do our share in the mother province.

The women are keenly interested in better conditions in the homes and we have a wonderful vision of wha this province is going to be with the advantages in Home Economics, better housing, better sanitary conditions, better clothing, food and equipment generally. Our relief means a great deal to the future of our citizens. We are discovering very needy families every day and let us always keep n touch with all poor unfortunates the subnormal and feebleminded. We must see that everyone is properly cared for and given both physical and mental attention.

We stand for educational opportunities for all children, study of underlying principles of successful school administration and a well-balanced curriculum This means a change in educational administration as the rural child is not receiving educational opportunities like the urban child receives.

We want and need musical training in the rural schools. Leading educationists today from a purely educational point of view accord to music a value equal to the best subjects taught in our educationa institutions.

The need of compulsory medical inspection in our schools is urgent. The women should get behind this movement unitedly. In some of our urban schools we have school nurses, but what about the defective children in our rural schools! There are so many cases sadly neglected. They have inspection in other provinces, surely this is one possibility for the future of Ontario. Women are taking a deeper interest in Agriculture. Many taking up poultry-raising, beekeeping, dairying and small fruit raising. The women are co-operating with the men, beautification and much can be done in improving the home surroundings as well as the roadside. Immigration is a burning question today and if the women go out 40,000 strong to welcome the newcomer, the Institutes should do a great deal to help Canadianize their neighbours. It is the general custom now to welcome new neighbours to the community. Speaking of Canadian citizens, we think of Canadian industries. With the natural resources of this land we see great possibilities for the future. Members are urged to be loyal to Canadian products—Buy Canadian-made goods. BE CANADIAN.

"Breathes there the man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,—
'This is my own, my native land'."

MILLBROOK

The initial branch of the Women's Institute in this district was organized at Millbrook on March 22, 1901, and the first annual meeting is listed by the secretary, Mrs. John Mulligan, as having been held in June of the same year, the minutes, which give evidence that the ideal of 'good homemaking and good citizenship' was well in mind from the start, reading:

"The Women's Institute of East Durham held its first annual meeting in the Town Hall, Millbrook, on June 13, 1901 at 2.30 p.m. sharp. Present 32 ladies. The president, Miss Ada Richardson, called the meeting to order, and after a few words of welcome, gave an address which included many of the objects and aims of the Society.

The minutes of the organization meeting, and of the executive, were given by the secretary, and the auditor's report showed: receipts, members' fees, $11.50; expenses, $2.30; balance on hand, $9.50.

Moved by Miss Gardiner and seconded by Mrs. John Eakins: That Mrs. T. W. Allen be appointed Honorary President. Carried unanimously.

For Millbrook municipality, six members were nominated and voted for by ballot with the result that Mrs. (Dr.) Hassard, Miss A. Vance, Mrs. J. R. Eakins, were elected directors; (Miss Needham and Miss Henry acting as returning officers).

By Mrs. Walter Gillott and Miss Smith: That the Women's Institute send greetings to the Farmer's Institute. Carried.

On account of limited time the other directors were elected by open vote. Moved by Mrs. Hassard and Miss Vance: That Miss Lowes, Mrs. G. S. Thorne, Miss Kelly, Miss Richardson, and Miss M. S. Fair be appointed directors for Cavan municipality. Carried.

By Mrs. Milligan and Mrs. John Allen: That Miss Henry be director for Hope municipality. Carried.

By Miss Vance and Miss Fair: That Miss Lucas be appointed director for South Monaghan municipality. Carried.

Commenting on the program, the secretary remarks:

'The paper on the "Cultivation of the Sweet Pea," by Mrs. J. R. Eakins was very complete. The talk on "Butter Making with a Separator," was by Mrs. G. S. Thorne, the lady using the DeLaval Separator, kindly loaned by Mr. A. T. Armstrong, in her exp anation. She made it very interesting and many questions were asked. The subject, "Table Decoration," was prepared by Mrs. W. C. Allen, and read by Miss Vance, as Mrs. Allen could not be present; some critics thought (after the meeting was over) that other decoration as centrepieces, doyleys, etc., should have been mentioned in the paper; however I think it was a very good paper, and that all three were very good for amateurs.'

Suggestions at the meeting included spending the funds on flowers, fruit trees, etc., also to engage a delegate to give lessons in cooking; or for literature on floriculture, and housekeeping, but the president thought it best to leave the money in the treasury as there was not much on hand. 'Just now a messenger appeared at the door bearing greetings from the Farmers' Institute, and a gift of $5.00 enclosed—all well received.'

Other resolutions: Premium plants to each member who gave a paper, $10.00 to be spent on purchasing summer plants at once; thanks to the Farmers' Institute for the $5.00, and to A. T. Armstrong for loan of the separator.

The meeting adjourned."

CAVAN

Cavan Women's Institute held a very pleasant social evening on the lawn of Alex Hunter's farm, Ninth Line, on Tuesday evening.

There was a large number present, both the older people and younger members of the family being included. Games were played on the spacious lawn by the younger people.

Others were grouped on the verandahs where social conversation filled in the time happily, until the supper hour arrived. This consisted of corn and pie, in abundance, served outside.

These community gatherings, where parents and children gather and enjoy a social time, are a feature of the Institute activities.

The Institute has demonstrated its worth in many communities and countries.

It originated in Ontario to fill a local need, but quickly spread to other counties and countries.

When the war came, owing to this organization, women very quickly fell into line in rural communities to make and send supplies and comforts to the war zone.

Then a call came from England for organizers to go to talk on Institute work and help organize. The Institutes have since done a good work there.

Reading in a magazine lately, an account of the work of the Institute in India was given, and the place it is filling in the lives of the women of that country.

Any worth while organization soon demonstrates its value by its work, and the fact that it continues to grow and extend to other districts.

The founder of the Institute would be justified in feeling proud that she had started something wh ch has been so helpful, far-reaching and permanent

TO ANOTHER WISE MAN

I think that in the centuries past
When that white star shone bright,
You travelled with the holy men
And prayed with them that night.

I think you dreamed a perfect dream,
And felt a faith sublime—
I think you realized the love
Of that first Christmas time.

And when they left—you stayed, I think,
And knelt and kissed Him, dear,
For every time you touch my lips
I feel that God is near.

—Isabel.

WARSAW.

It is generally recognized that since the Women's Institutes have been organized throughout the country, there has been a higher standard of living both morally and physically, for the women of our land have been educated, through the Women's Institute that prevention is better than cure

The scope of work taken up by the Institute may be seen in the following program which outlines the work of the standing comittees:

Health—Development, prevention of diseases and service.

Home Economies—Clothing, feeding and housing

Education — Literature, addresses, discussion, systematic study and instruction, home and school co-operation.

Agriculture—How women may increase the farm income, home beautification

Legislation—Laws and administration thereof affecting women and children

Immigration—Helping newcomers.

Relief — Assistance to individuals, families and institutions.

Community Activities—Furnishing community equipment and utilizing it to the best advantage, beautification of public places.

Historical Research—Making and collecting historical records and exhibits

Canadian Industries—Study and encouragement of home industries.

In reading reports of Institute meetings, it will be noticed that some one or more subjects under these headings has been taken up, and slowly but surely the results show. In some places the results are very great. In other places after a long time great improvements show in contrast to what has been. Sometimes there is much to oppose, but eventually the right thing happens, perhaps not what was at first desired, but generally something much better.

A Tip or Two

A better flavor will be given fried fish if cooked in slightly salted fat.

Rich biscuit dough may be used as a foundation for old-fashioned fruit shortcakes.

More fresh vegetables and fruits and less meat is the health cry of the summer months.

A bottle of kitchen bouquet or a dark brown gravy coloring sauce is a joy to the woman whose gravies seem to be a little too pale to look appetizing. Just a few drops of the sauce and a rich-looking gravy is obtained.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION:

I enjoy your page very much, especially the Whatnot. It is almost the first thing I look at. I read your letters all the time, and so many people seem to get help from you I thought I would try my luck.

I wonder if you or any of the readers could tell me what to use on a steel-topped stove after it gets red. I thought there should be some kind of varnish or black besides black-leading.

Blue-eyes,"
(Lakefield.)

Thanks very much for your kind appreciation, Blue Eyes. I am so glad to know that I am helping out.

I'm afraid that I haven't at the moment the recipe you require. Can any reader tell Blue Eyes what to use?

* * *

"Dear Marion:

In Friday's Whatnot Column there were some paragraphs about women keeping their jobs after marriage.

Men, as a rule, do not like it. They seem to feel they should, and are, perfectly capable of providing for their wives. Sometimes they do not, and the wife has to go without a good many things she should have, and could have if she had done some work at which she could earn a good wage and pay to have the rougher routine work done.

True indeed, a woman's first place is her home, but why should she wash and scrub and do other heavy work, when she can earn enough to pay to do that work and add a few comforts or conveniences?

A talented, educated woman is likely to feel cramped if she has to neglect her talents and skill, to do work some one else is more able to do, and would be glad of the job.

What benefits the community or the country, comes back as a benefit to the home, and if a woman is musical, literary, artistic or especially talented in any way, it would seem she should use these talents. She could not well do so and attend to everything, but she would enjoy doing what she is fitted to do. It would really fill a soul-want with her, and help those for whom she works, those whom she employs, herself and her family. She would be fresher and more able to manage her household.

Yours, sincerely,
Mrs. Warsaw."

I am delighted indeed, Mrs. Warsaw, to have this expression of opinion, which so nearly coincides with my own. As a matter of fact, I had a long conversation on the same subject with another newspaper woman a few evenings ago, and she firmly declared that she couldn't see her way clear to getting married if it meant the giving-up of her writing. Another writer I know has a large family, but she earns enough writing special articles to more than pay a maid. It's not the money in work that counts, but the satisfaction in self-expression and achievement.

The pity of it is, there are so many men who declare that they will not stand for their wives working after they are married. That is selfish and short-sighted and cruel. I do not agree with a married woman working if her job is routine and she simply does it for the money, provided her husband is able to make ends meet without that assistance. I know one, for instance, who is getting $10 a week for routine work—and she is losing more than $20 in home life and comfort.

Write again, Mrs. Warsaw. You need never doubt the welcome I give your letters.

"Dear Marion:

I am a young married woman, and a constant reader of The Examiner, especially the Women's Page. I find it very interesting and helpful.

I wonder if you will send me your instructions for trimming a winter hat, also the coolie coat. Do you think anyone would be so kind as to send me or tell me how to make and set in a sleeve. I would be very much obliged.

Mrs. C."

It is very nice of you, Mrs. C., to say so complimentary things about my page.

The pattern for the coolie coat has been sent you, but I am sorry that so many requests came in for the hat-trim my supply is exhausted. I believe, too, that the printers destroyed the cut, and in that case we cannot get any more. However, I will do the best I can, and perhaps you may receive it in a few days.

Will some reader be good enough to send instructions for making and setting-in the sleeve?

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Kindly send me the pickling recipes, etc.

Your paper is just fine.

Yours truly,
Mrs. J. R. W."

I'm very glad to hear from Warkworth, Mrs. J. R. W., and to know that The Examiner is so appreciated there. If you did not get all the helps you desired, please drop me a note.

"Dear Marion:

I have some lovely vegetable squash in my garden, but I do not know how to cook it. Will you please tell me how?

Best wishes,
Ruth Marie."

Havelock.

There are several good ways of cooking and serving vegetable squash, Ruth Marie. I shall try to print them early in the week—and in the meantime will readers please rush their recipes in time to save Ruth Marie's fine crop?

"Dear Marion:

I am sixteen years of age, blue-eyed, and of dark complexion.

I love a boy who has only eyes for other girls. I have tried to win him, but it seems impossible.

Can you advise me about this?

Blue-eyes."

It isn't often I receive two letters in the same mail with the same pen name. The other Blue Eyes, however, is a Lakefield girl.

You don't give much information on which to write, Peterborough Blue-eyes. Has the boy another girl friend? What age is he? How do you know you "love" him, if you have had so little contact with him? Write me a fuller letter and I will answer privately.

Your P.S. says, "Is it wrong to allow boys to kiss you?" Well, Blue-eyes, I'd like to see any boy I didn't like awfully well try to kiss me! I think it's safer to reserve your embraces for a particular boy. Promiscuous kissing will not endear you to anyone, particularly. Is this to blame for the boy you mention not paying more attention to you?

Mrs. L. J. M. I'm very sorry to hear of your illness, and hope that you are now recovered. The recipes were sent you some time ago. Please write again.

* * *

Johnnie: Write to the Seckatary Hawkins' page. Judging by your letter that is more your age.

* * *

Myrtle: I wouldn't, if I were you. It is playing with fire—and burning lasts a long time.

* * *

Safety: Write to Dr. McCoy, care The Examiner, telling all your symptoms. Enclose a stamp for reply.

FASHION NOTES

Frills of crisp black lace trim many of the dance and dinner dresses for summer. Occasionally whole skirts are made of lace, but oftener, it is used to edge black taffeta or chiffon. Chantilly is used for most of the evening dresses.

* * *

Transparent velvets are reported in high favor abroad for autumn dresses, and the probability of their vogue, both in plain and printed effects, is suggested.

Paris reports a vogue for navy and cornflower blue cardigans and short double-breasted jackets with white frocks finished with a band of blue at the hem.

* * *

Earrings are staging a return especially for evening, and they are longer than ever, while bracelets are getting wider and wider, and the newest versions are at least three inches in width.

* * *

Have you ever wondered whether corduroy would some day be smart rather than simply a serviceable material for sports knickers and little boys' suits. Corduroy is decidedly smart, for it makes the very newest type of sports coat for this season! Brown, dark blue, black, bronze-green and glowing old-gold are the most swagger colors.

AN APPLE SHOWER

Is there some girl in your circle of friends who just adores apples? She isn't going out of town or going to be married soon is she? For if she is, an apple shower is just the thing to give her. Can't you just imagine the fun that could be created from an apple shower?

Send the invitations out, cut in apple shape and tinted with green and red water colors, with a verse on it including the girl's name, and telling about her weakness in regard to apples. It should also be asked that the shower gifts be sent the day before.

The first amusement for the afternoon might be an apple guessing contest, the names of different varieties of apples to be guessed from literal definitions, such as the Royal apple being the King. Following this an apple peeling contest might be held and each girl throwing the peeling over her left shoulder to discover the initial of her future husband.

During the afternoon the gifts may be presented in a huge bushel basket apparently filled with huge rosy apples. Each gift is wrapped in red crepe paper and ted around the top with greent ribbon. It is easy to think, too, of all the things which might be included in this kind of a shower. I have noticed quite a number when shopping recently which might be included. There was an up-to-date corer, a new novelty plate for baking apples, and a fat plush apple pin-cushion for the kitchen. There is also on exhibition just now some very artistic looking baskets for apples on the buffet, and also wonderful apple-trimmed fruit bowls.

If any of the girls which are to be present are clever cooks jars of canned apples or home-made applesauce which will keep for some time, would also be very acceptable. I also noticed some stenciled table runners with an apple design stamped on each end—this would be lovely for use on the porch table. There is, also some cute sport handkerchiefs with a cluster of apples on one corner, on display as well as smart hat ornaments in the shape of three apples.

While the bride-to-be is exclaiming over the gifts the hostess may begin serving the buffet luncheon. There may be made little individual molds of pink apple tapioca, topped with whipped cream, and small home-made cake (they always taste better you know, than something purchased in a store a few minutes before). If time is had these may be frosted and a miniature apple bough as a decoration. This may be made from two red maraschino cherries, two leaf-shaped pieces of green angelica and a bit of citron.

As little favors for the girls in memory of the day of the "apple shower" the hostess may present each with a tiny bunch of apple sachets which are easily made from scraps of apple-colored silks.

THE SATURDAY MARKET BASKET

The season has advanced so much now that nearly every kind of fruit and vegetable has made its appearance on the market. Because the crops are so plentiful, prices have come down considerably in the last few weeks.

Cucumbers sell for 50 cents a basket, and small white onions for pickling cost 15 cents a pound. The pepper assortment remains large and plentiful, large green ones selling at 3 for 10 cents.

Beets, carrots, and parsley are always present in quanties. Beets and carrots sell for 5 cents a bunch and parsley 2 bunches for 5 cents. Celery sells for 15 cents and 20 cents a head, and head lettuce 15 cents a head.

Tomatoes are very plentiful, selling as low as 35 cents per 11-quart basket.

Cabbages, large heads, sell for 5 and 10 cents a head, and large white heads of cauliflower are 15 and 20 cents a head. Yellow bantam corn is quoted at 20 cents a dozen, Duchess and yellow transparents apples sell for 30 cents a peck.

The melon family continues to hold an important place. Watermelons are $1.25 each; honeydew melons, 30 and 35 cents each, and large juicy cantaloupes, 15 and 20 cents.

Peaches, plums and pears continue to ask for attention. Peaches, No. 1 quality, 6 quart baskets are 85 cents; large and juicy pears are 5 for 25 cents, and greengage plums are 2 quarts for 25 cents. California grapes are 25 cents a pound, and green Malago grapes, 15 cents a pound. Bananas are 25 and 30 cents a dozen; oranges, 40 to 80 cents a dozen, and lemons are quoted from 30 to 40 cents a dozen.

Potatoes are selling from 17 to 21 cents a peck, and sweet potatoes are 3 pounds for 25 cents.

Huckleberries may still be obtained at $2 for an 11-quart basket, or 25 cents a quart box.

Cucumber Relish

Take medium size cucumbers, peel them, split open and scrape, out the seeds, then chop very fine. To every quart of chopped cucumbers add one tablespoon of salt. Mix well and let stand overnight in a covered jar. In the morning drain them and to every quart of cucumbers add one-half teaspoon cayenne pepper, one-half pint of cider vinegar, one-half teaspoon of black pepper and one tablespoon of made mustard. Put in a granite saucepan and boil five minutes. Seal in glass jars and keep in a dark, cool place.

SAVE THE CHILDREN

In Summer When Childhood Ailments Are Most Dangerous

Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house may feel that the lives of their little ones are reasonably safe during the hot weather. Stomach troubles, cholera infantum and diarrhoea carry off thousands of little ones every summer, in most cases because the mother does not have a safe medicine at hand to give promptly. Baby's Own Tablets relieve these troubles, or if given occasionally to the well child they will prevent their coming on. The Tablets are guaranteed to be absolutely harmless even to the new-born babe. They are especially good in summer because they regulate the bowels and keep the stomach sweet and pure. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOROSCOPE
The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1928

Good and evil influences contend today, according to astrology which interprets the aspects as on the whole rather helpful than otherwise.

Women are subject to stimulating influences making for success in public activities.

Reform movements of every sort should benefit while this sway prevails and should be pushed, especially in the evening.

The church should benefit while this planetary government prevails, but there is indication of growth of prejudice and increas of denominational bias regarding important issues.

Under this direction of he stars cleavage in opinio is likely to be distinct, making for sharp differences and even dissensions.

For those who desire to sway the minds of men an women emons o speeches shou'd be forceful rath r than persuasive today, when th aspects presage much vague thinking and lack of logic.

Courships today are suppose' to be lucky whether they are promoted under the blue sky or under less romantic environment than the outdoors provides.

There is a promise of success in all social contacts and the day should be fortunate for all who seek the companionship of old friends.

It is well not to argue under this rule which is conducive to rise of temper and to foolish quarrels.

There is a forb'dding sign for 'ourneys begun under this rule, fo storms and accidents are presaged.

This s a day for logical reasoning and for weighing projects that are to be pushed later. The stars will prevent too sanguine an outlook.

Speculation may tempt many in the coming week when there will also be a tendency to bet. Ventures of every sort should be avoided.

Persons whose birthdate it is may expect a year of many unexpected happenings, of changes and surprises. Successful investments in real estate are indicated. The subjects of this sign succeed as editors as well as in scientific pursuits.

Children born on this day probably will be clever as inventors and able to use their hands in trained vocations. These Virgo subjects usually have a great variety of talents. They are naturally orderly.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1928

Good and evil planetary influences are foreseen for today by astrologers who find that benefic aspects dominate.

It is a day in which to seek support, financial and otherwise in business or politica matters.

Labor now comes under a sway making for a critical attitude toward the job and its earning possibilities. It is well for employees to look at more than one side of a question while this prevails.

Farmers are still subject to an adverse aspect of Saturn that may delay adjustments of their difficulties.

Neptune is today in an aspect supposed to encourage clear thinking on most mooted question and the stars are read as presaging much changing of opinion, especially on political issues.

The sway appears to favor reforms and improvements in many policies that affect the public weal, especially along educational lines.

Schools and universities have the forecast of a banner year in which they make great progress. The stars seem to presage more seriousness among usually careless students.

Today is fortunate for all constructive work, for building in thought as well as in brick and mortar.

Engineers are subject to the best possible direction of the stars, while this planetary government prevails and they will be able to command first rate assistants in their big enterprises.

Household matters are well directed today which encourages the improvement of the home and the intent to stress beauty.

This should be a lucky day for those who must consider drastic dental operations, especially those that promise improvement of facial lines.

September is to be marked by an unusual heat wave, if the stars are rightly read.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have rather a trying year, but it shou'd be marked by success. These subjects of Virgo have talents that may be used with supreme authority. They may climb to the heights.

Children born on this day probably will make their own careers and overcome many difficulties. They should be rarely gifted.

UNCLE WIGGILY
By HOWARD R. GARIS

7-days Bedtime Story

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY, THE BUG SAVER

Uncle Wiggily stood in front of the tall cattail plant on the hgh top of which wasthe Squiggle Bug's tiny wee house. And the rabbit gentleman was so excited that he dropped the bundle of soft hairs from the tail of Gup, the kind horse. The reason Uncle Wiggily was excited was that Squiggle Bug's house was on fire.

And out on the porch, high up above Uncle Wiggily's head, the Squiggler was flipping up and down crying:

"Save me! Save me!"

"I'll put out the fire and you will be saved!" shouted Mr. Longears.

Taking his tall, silk hat, Uncle Wiggily scooped up water from the pond on the edge of which the cattail plant was growing.

"Here comes the water!" called Uncle Wiggily

"Better raise your umbrella or put on a raincoat!" called the rabbit to the Squiggle Bug. "Here comes the water!"

"Water is just what I need, for my house is burning!" buzzed the Bug. "Toss away!" Never mind about an umbrella!"

So Uncle Wiggily tossed the water, but just then the wind blew and swayed the tall, slender cattail plant with the Bug's tiny house, as big as a thimble, on top, and so the water, instead of putting out the fire, splashed back into the pond.

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" moaned the Squiggle Bug, who was getting hotter and hotter and choking from the smoke. "Oh, this is terrible!"

"Now don't get excited!" begged Uncle Wiggily. "If at first I don't succeed I'll try, try again," and he sang these words.

"Never mind about succeeding!" buzzed the Bug. "What I want is to have you put out the fire that is burning my house!"

"I'm trying to!" said the bunny uncle. Once more he scooped up water in his tall, silk hat and threw it at the burning house. But again the wind swayed the cattail stalk and the water splashed on the ground. Then Uncle Wiggily called:

"You had better fly down out of danger, Squiggle Bug. I should have thought to tell you that before. Fly down and you'll be safe!"

"I can't fly!" buzzed the Bug.

"Why not?" asked the rabbit.

"Because I sprained one of my wings, and if I tried to fly I would turn somersaults."

"Then jump down to the ground!" shouted Mr. Longears. "Quick! Your house is burning so fast now that nothing can save it. The slender cattail stalk would break if I tried to climb up it. Besides, we rabbits can't climb. The only thing for you to do is to jump."

"But it's so far!" buzzed the poor Squiggle Bug, looking down. "I'll smash myself if I jump. Haven't you an umbrella you can catch me in when I flop down?"

"No, I haven't," answered the rabbit. "But that reminds me. Here is something soft and springy for you to land on when you jump."

So saying Uncle Wiggily spread on the ground at the bottom of the cattail stalk the bundle of soft hairs from the tail of Gup, the old horse. And when the Squiggle Bug saw that bundle of hair, which Uncle Wiggily was going to make into a cushion for Baby Bunty, then the Bug was no longer afraid, and down he jumped.

Safely he landed on the bundle and, after bouncing up and down two or three times as you do on the spring bed, the Bug came to rest and said:

"Thank you, Uncle Wiggily, for saving me. But, alas! I fear my house is all burned!"

"Yes," said Uncle Wiggily, "it is. There goes the roof!" As he spoke flames and smoke spouted up through the roof of the tiny house built on top of the cattail plant and it was all over.

"Alas! Alas!" sighed the Squiggle Bug. "There goes everything in the world that I own! Alas! Alas!"

"Don't feel so badly about it," said Uncle Wiggily, the bug saver, kindly. "I will take you home to live with me until you can find another home!"

So the rabbit gentleman, picking up the bundle of horse hair to make Baby Bunty's cushion, hopped on toward his bungalow, followed by the Squiggle Bug crawling on the ground. And if the June bug will stop pretending that he is an aeroplane and quit banging against the screen door, I'll tell you about Uncle Wiggily and his bag of rice.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally is in love.

POPPY, Sally's roommate, another dancer at the Faun.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

Akers says he is through with Sally, and the doctors say she can never walk again. Sanderson assumes her care and plans to get a cottage in the country for her and Mrs. Kiff. Sally hates the country at first but gradually becomes reconciled to it. One of her frequent visitors is the rector, Robert Nairn.

XVI—BAD TEMPER

Sally was thinking of Mr. Nairn and of their many talks together as she lay in bed this wonderful spring morning, with Philip Sanderson's telegram on the quilt beside her.

It was queer, she thought, how she had been forced into such a different world; sometimes it gave her a pleasant little thrill to believe that she was turning into what at the back of her mind she designated as "a real lady."

In a vague way she always associated clergymen with "real ladies"; she wondered what Poppy would say when she knew that she had made friends with a vicar!

Poppy had only been down to the cottage once, and that time Philip had brought her in his two-seater car. After the first half-hour Sally had quarrelled with Poppy, for somehow Poppy had seemed out of place in the little cottage with its wide-open windows and clean freshness. Poppy's face had been more deadly white and her eyes more coal-black than usual, or so they had seemed, and her clothes had been more bizarre and her voice louder and more rasping than Sally had remembered.

"I don't know why on earth you brought her," Sally said to Philip afterwards resentfully. "I didn't ask you to."

"I thought you'd be pleased to see her," he answered.

"Well, then, I wasn't" Sally declared flatly. "Supposing the vicar had called! What do you think he would have thought of her?"

Sanderson only laughed.

"You're getting quite a snob," he declared.

Sally was not sure what a snob really meant, but it pleased her to be called one; she had once heard it said that a certain Countess of Railie was the biggest snob in London, and it tickled her fancy to share something in common with a real live countess.

Although Sally was unaware of the fact, she was slowly but surely changing. Her ideas were altering, and so was her outlook on life. She had begun to listen for the song of the birds in the early morning, and to watch the flowers unfolding in the garden, whereas three months ago she would only have thought the birds a nuisance for waking her up so early, and she would have infinitely preferred a forced, weakly-looking rose that had cost half a crown from a Bond Street shop to the dainty spring flowers that were now pushing their way through the brown earth on all sides in the cottage garden.

She was proud of the cottage, too, whereas once she had thought it dull and too small. Often as she lay in bed her mind was filled with plans for its beautifying and re-arranging.

"If only I could get up!" she thought passionately. She knew there were many things she could do about the little house of which Mrs. Kiff's clumsy hands were quite incapable. To be able to pick the flowers and tender green leaves and arrange them herself would be a delight; even to be strong enough to have a washing-day out in the back garden, as Mrs. Kiff did, seemed an entirely desirable thing!

Would she ever be able to walk again?

Once or twice Philip Sanderson had tried to bring the subject round to specialists and further opinions, but Sally always shied away from it, dreading more pain and perhaps disappointment. It was only when she was alone with her thoughts that she felt able to face anything—anything—if only some day she could walk about again as other people did.

She had almost made up her mind to speak about it to Philip, and now this wire had come, saying she need not expect him till the next day. Sally began to feel angry as she lay there with the sunshine streaming in upon her. What was he doing, that he could not come as he had promised? Perhaps he was getting tired of her—getting tired of a bed-ridden girl who could not go for long walks with him over the fields and down the lanes, and who must always be pushed in a hateful invalid chair, and carried to and from her bed.

But Philip carried her so easily; his arms were so strong and gentle. Once, knowing full well how light she was, she had asked him if he found her at all heavy.

"Heavy!" He scoffed at the suggestion. "Why, I'm like the giant in the fairy-story who carried a butterfly."

"A butterfly with broken wings," Sally said, and then was sorry for her words, seeing the sharp look of pain in his eyes.

In spite of what she had told the vicar, Sally knew how wonderfully good Sanderson had been and would always be to her, and yet in a queer way the knowledge made her resentful.

Although the pain of her parting from Josh Akers was slowly fading from her heart, now and again it would return with a swift pang.

"If only it had been Josh!" The thought would rise unbidden into her mind whenever Philip showed her some little extra kindness, or brought her some unexpected gift. If it had been Josh, there would have been nothing in the world left for her to wish for. If Josh had loved her as she was sure Philip Sanderson loved her, Sally would have been in Heaven. But Josh had gone out of her life, and was never likely to return. Once she ventured to ask Philip for news of him.

"I don't know anything about him, and I don't want to," Philip told her uncompromisingly. "If he's wise he'll keep clear of me."

"You're a bully," Sally declared, but in her heart was warm, because she knew that in Philip she had a champion. But in spite of everything she was very seldom kind to him. Often after week-ends during which he had done his utmost to please her and make her happy she would send him away without a good-bye or a smile.

Once she had put him into a towering rage by hitting Sometimes with a stick which was always kept beside her bed to knock on the floor for anything she wanted; there were no bells in the cottage.

Sally was conscious of a little cold shiver whenever she recalled that day. It had been one of her bad days; she had had considerable pain, and it had rained, and she had not been able to go out. And Philip had seemed so cheerful and strong all day he had been whistling about the cottage, busy and apparently quite happy. He had chopped wood for Mrs. Kiff, and drawn water from the little well at the end of the garden; he had put up a new archway for some rambler rose he had brought with him from town, and had hammered away most of the afternoon till the sound got on Sally's nerves and made her want to scream, and then, to cap everything, Sometimes had raced in from the garden, waving his long, whip-like tail, and had jumped on to the bed with his muddy feet. That had been the last straw of Sally's endurance, so she caught up the stick and hit him.

Sometimes, although not very badly hurt, yelped loudly—he was not used to such treatment—and rushed out to his master with one paw held pathetically in the air.

Sanderson came into the cottage with a face like a thunderbolt.

"What happened?" he demanded. "Who hurt him?"

"I did," Sally said defiantly. "Look what he's done, the dirty beast! I hit him with my stick, and I'll hit him again if he doesn't behave."

"Willy u?" For a moment Sanderson seemed to forget Sally's utter helplessness, and took a threatening stride towards her as she lay on the bed. Then suddenly he stopped, his lean face flushing crimson, for Sally, really frightened, had cowed away from him.

"Don't hurt me, Philip—don't hurt me!" she whimpered.

"Hurt you!"

For a moment he stood looking down at her, almost beside himself with shame at his loss of self-control, then without a word he turned and strode out of the room and out of the cottage.

SUMMER COLONY GROWS SMALLER

Cottagers at Trent River Leaving for Winter Homes in Cities

TRENT RIVER, Sept. 1.—(Examiner Correspondence). —As the holidays come to a close and schools re-opening the cottagers are thinning out once more for another season, and business will be down to normal in another week. The cottages were nearly all occupied this year, with the exception of three or four. A number of tourists enjoying their holidays by tenting and carrying their outfit in cars, also visited this resort.

It has been a most enjoyable summer for the majority of cottagers, and there has been excellent fishing throughout the entire season.

Trent River resort is one of the most beautiful spots along the Trent Canal. There have been more tourists' yachts pass through here this season than in any previous year. The two general grocery stores have had a busy season catering to cottagers, tourists and picnic parties, and the post office is a scene of great activity when the time for the daily mail arrives. The cottagers are not handicapped in the way of supplies as everything is delivered.

Even the ice man makes his daily rounds. There are two milk deliveries selling pasteurized milk. Fresh vegetables and meats are delivered certain days of each week and all the necessities can be purchased at a reasonable price." A number of visitors remain for September and October for the shooting while the majority end their season on Labor Day each year.

evening up by traders was noted yesterday. Fairly liberal deliveries were predicted by the trade.

Poor collections were reported out of Russia, coupled with increased demand on Liverpool wheat from the continent, and shipments from both Australia and the Argentine were smaller. Against these bullish influences were set the optimistic crop report of the Bank of Montreal which reiterated prospects for a big crop despite some frost damage, continued dearth of export demand and hedging pressure. Local cash sales were 23,000 bushels, only 11,000 bushels being bought from the country and 126 cars inspected here. Wheat closed firm, ¼c to ⅜c higher; September 110⅝ to 110½; December, 1.15⅞ to 116; March, 1.20¾; and May 1.23¼ to 1.23¼.

September corn climbed 2c at the peak of the bulge, but there was considerable selling on the hard spots, cooler weather over the domestic belt being one factor in the better undertone. Export demand was a little better. Corn closed ½c to 1¼c higher, September 94¼ to 94¼, December 74¾, March 77, and May 79¾.

Oats ruled a trifle firmer, with some buying of September and selling of December. Cash interests were buyers yesterday. Oats closed uncharged to ⅜c higher, September 38½, December 40¾, March 43, and May 44½.

Provisions were affected by high prices of hogs, and there was considerable liquidation in September lard, unsettling the market. September lard was down 10c to 15c at the close and December was 7c lower.

CROP REPORT

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the Head Office of the Bank of Montreal from its Branches. The Branch Managers have compelte and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned.

General.

Crop conditions generally in the Prairie Provinces continue favorable. Some hail and light frosts are reported. Cutting is gradually becoming general and next week should see wheat cutting in full swing in practically every district. In Quebec warm, dry weather during the past week has been conducive to the development of all crops, while in Ontario another week of ideal weather has enabled the farmers to make splendid progress in harvesting. Similar good weather conditions have also prevailed in the Maritime Provinces to the great advantage of the crops, and also in British Columbia, where harvesting operations are proceeding without interruption. Details follow:

Prairie Provinces.

ALBERTA WESTERN AND NORTHEASTERN AREA—Conditions continue favorable and cuting should be general in the later part of the month. Light local frosts in a few districts may slightly reduce grade and yield. ALBERTA SOUTHEASTERN AREA—Conditions continue favorable with crops maturing rapidly and damage from all sources is reported as negligible. SASKATCHEWAN NORTHERN AREA—Harvesting has commenced and will be general this week. Some crops are showing evidence of sawfly. SASKATCHEWAN SOUTHERN AREA—Crops are ripening well under favorable conditions and cutting will be general this week. MANITOBA—Cutting, which otherwise would have been general, has been held up by unsettled weather. Some local damage has been occasioned by hail.

Province of Quebec.

Wheat, oats and barley are making good progress and will soon be ready for cuting. Corn, which had been somewhat backward, is now doing well. The hay crop has been satisfactory and harvesting is practically completed. A good crop of potatoes and other root crops is expected. The apple crop is average and other fruits are plentiful. Pastures are in good condition.

Province of Ontario.

Threshing is general, and fall wheat is turning out well, with yields varying from 25 to 40 bushels per acre. Barley is practically all under cover and while not yet threshed is expected to yield above the average. Oat cuting will be completed shortly. The crop is heavy and difficult to harvest owing to lodging. Corn has made good progress and damage from the corn borer so far has not been important. Root crops are promising. In Eastern Ontario much late hay was stored during the week, in fair condition. There is a heavy second crop of alfalfa. All fruits are doing well and the crop looks promising. Tobacco is growing fast and cutting will commence this week. Pastures are good.

Maritime Provinces.

Oats are well headed; cutting has commenced and a large yield is expected. An above average hay crop of good quality is practically harvested. Potatoes promise a bumper crop. Apples continue high grade and it is expected the value wil be about the same as that of last years larger crop. Pasturage is excellent.

British Columbia.

A good hay crop has been cut; threshing continues to show grains of excellent quality and yields will be well above average. Roots are doing well, but rain would be beneficial. Former fruit estimates are unchanged, namely, apples 115 per cent. of average; peaches, 100 per cent; pears 80 per cent; plums and prunes 90 per cent. Hop picking is about to commence and a 70 per cent. yield is predicted. Pasturage while still abundant, is drying up rapidly.

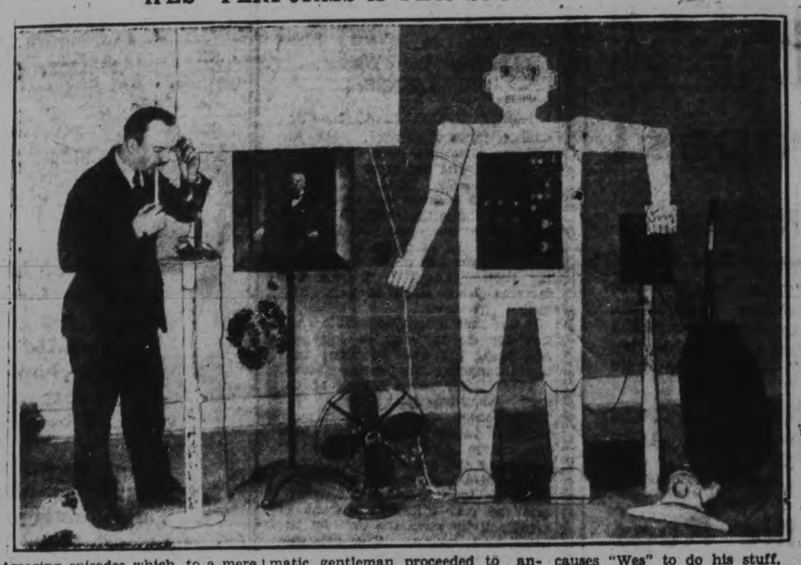
"WES" PERFORMS A FEW STUNTS



Amazing episodes which, to a mere human, might have originated in the mind of an imaginative author were enacted in Toronto this week when "Wes" Robot, the mechanical man from Pittsburg, performed a number of eye-opening "stunts" for the benefit of a group of engineers and scientists who made his acquaintance under the auspices of the Westinghouse Company. Deliberate and efficient in all his actions, the automatic gentleman proceeded to answer telephones, talk, turn on fans, turn off stoves, light up buildings and manipulate signs under the direction of Dr. Roy J. Wesley, his master. "Wes," who possesses a frame body is dependent upon electric current for his vitality. When the telephone circuit is completed the life giving-current passes through the network of wires in his body. Vibration caused by Dr. Wensley whistling in the telephone receiver causes "Wes" to do his stuff. Dr. Wensley stated that this remarkable automaton responded to a device which corresponds to the auditory nerves. Under the telephone receiver, on which his hand rests, is an electrical ear, through which he actually "hears." Waves are then transmitted to the "membrane" in his stomach, and the required order is carried out by means of electrical connection with the stove, window, furnace or lighting system.

SAVIGNY OPPOSED TO MAKING A WILL

Wanted Widow To Get Everything and Wishes Are Respected.

TORONTO, September 1. — The renouncing by twelve heirs-at-law of the late Richard A. Savigny, well-known downtown tailor, to a share in his $19,486 estate, was a result of the wishes of the deceased's relatives. Although legally entitled to their division of the residue, approximating $6,500, they have unanimously ceded their rights in favor of the widow, Mrs. Ida Savigny.

Even after a severe stroke, some four years ago, which left him speechless and bed-ridden for a year, "Dick" Savigny, as he was known to many, made no will.

"Those who make wills," he is know to have stated on several occasions, "soon have occasion to require their use."

At the same time, it is reported, he acquainted all his relatives with the desire that his property should go wholly to his widow.

None of Mr. Savigny's relatives, with the exception of his widow, reside in Toronto. All are said to be well-to-do merchants and executives, living in various sections of of Canada, United States, and Mexico.

Among them are William and Ethel Savigny of Peterborough, Ont., Thomas Savigny, Moose Jaw, Lorne Savigny, Pittsburg, and James Savigny, of Mexico City.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Savigny had no children. Mrs. Savigny is at present staying with friends in Buffalo.

ROYALS MEET TORONTO TEAM

Junior Semi-Final Game Will Be Played in Peterborough On Monday.

AT EXHIBITION PARK.

Peterborough baseball fans will have an opportunity to look over two of the smartest junior teams in Ontario on the holiday afternoon, when Peterborough Royals clash with Elizabeths, Toronto champions, in the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association junior semi-finals. The calibre of the Royals is well known to Peterborough fans, who have watched them play together for several years—first in the Midget series, then as Juveniles, and now as Juniors. They play a good brand of ball, hitting heavily, fielding well, and getting excellent pitching from Holmes, Kitchen and Cripps.

On the other hand, the team that wins the Toronto Playgrounds League title and goes through to the T.A.B.A. championship is no slouch, and the Elizabeths proved this in a hard fought three-game series with Oshawa. All in all, Monday's battle should be well worth the price of admission and doubtless will be watched with interest by a large crowd. It takes place at the Exhibition Grounds and starts at three o'clock.

NOT ASKED ABOUT WORK

ed about that," complained the chairman.

"We couldn't get you," explained His Worship, going on to list the places where he had been sought. "We couldn't hold up the men."

"You oiled the C. P. R. and C. N. R. station yards. You're always doing things on private property for people."

"You've had enough done for you," charged Ald. Huffman.

"Spill it," ordered Ald. Stocker.

Used City Equipment.

"You had the cement mixer doing work for you."

"I paid $3 a day for it."

"You borrowed a wagon."

"I gave the treasurer my check for it."

"You had gravel."

"I paid for it."

"That's not the point," interrupted His Worship. "Youre kicking about not being told things. Why not tell us when you use these things."

"You fixed the railway crossings," Ald. Stocker resumed his former charges.

"Who uses them?" returned Ald. Lowe. "The people," he answered his own query.

"That doesn't matter. You don't catch the railways doing anything for the city for nothing."

"You had no right doing business with the council. You can be disqualified," asserted Ald. Huffman, returning to his former chrages.

The chairman turned to the accounts he had not certified. He had, he said, signed a great many last month and had issued orders that nothing was to be bought without an order from him, yet there were many there he knew nothing about Some of these he mentioned were for sewer pipe, sharpening scarifier teeth repairs to the sweeper, etc.

Get Away With Murder.

"They get away with anything short of murder in that office," the chairman continued. "I'm not going to be a rubber stamp for anybody." He went on to say that he had heard men talking about the paving on Reid street, and they had said that it was scandalous the work that was done wrong and had to be done over and was paid for as extras

"I'm resigning, I'm not waiting around with my tongue hanging out for a job at the sewage disposal plant," he declared, moving from the head to the side of table. From there he declared that every time he went into the engineer's office there was some representative of the paving company, or the Clay Products Company, or other firm there, but as soon as he showed up they shut up. This brought a heated retort from the City Engineer when Mayor Denne granted him permission to speak.

The Engineer Talks Back.

"They have a perfect right to come into my office and talk to me. We can't get sewer pipe any place in Ontario except from the Clay Products people."

Without a chairman, the Board of Works could do no more, and adjournment was made to the council chamber for the special meeting of the City Council, called to pass the by-law for the vote to be taken Sept 26 on the hospital grant. When this had been done Ald. Stocker submitted his resignation and Ald. McIntyre moved that it be accepted. Several moments of silence followed, with no person seconding the motion.

"I think Ald. Stocker has a wrong idea of what the chairman of the Board of Works should do," declared Ald. Hamilton, breaking the silence. "I don't see that a citizen should be asked to give all the time that apparently is expected. There is a lot of work. I don't see what he has in his mind. There are a lot of things he can't do himself but when the officials do them he objects "

"I certaintly object to any official spending thousands of dollars without consulting me," retorted Ald. Stocker.

Why Consult Chairman?

"What's the use of consuling you?" was the reply. "You nor any one of us would know nothing about it."

"I think the city engineer should order such supplies as tile," added Ald. Huffman.

"The council ordered the sewers put in. They had to have the tile," stated Mayor Denne.

"There are other things; asphalt—oil."

"Do you want to order the oil? Is there any pull?" queried the Mayor.

"I'm not objecting to the oil. It's the system. Would any of you allow your ---- to order stuff without consulting you?"

"I certainly would. If any man of mine needed something for a job and I wasn't around he'd order it and tell me afterwards," stated Ald. Huffman.

"Is it your wish to have this (the resignation) accepted?" asked the Mayor.

'Certainly", replied Ald. Stocker.

"Then speed up", His Worship ordered the Council.

"I'm willing to hold on to the end of the year but I want consideration," offered Ald. Stocker.

"I don't think it possible to show him the consideration he wants," asserted Ald. Hamilton.

It was suggested that action be deferred until Tuesday, when all the aldermen would be out, but it was pointed out that the accounts would not then be signed. Ald. Stocker offered to sign the acounts and let the council take action on Tuesday, but Ald. McIntyre objected.

The Second Time.

"This is the second time that Ald. Stocker has threatened to resign," he declared. 'I think it is time to call a halt. We should be big enough to take his resignation. He should restract his statement and apologize to the city engineer."

"What statement," asked Ald. Stocker.

"That they get away with murder."

Mistakes As Extras

"I said they could get away with anything less than murder. They make mistakes on the paving and charged them to extras."

"What told you that?" demanded the city engineer.

"I heard men say it."

"Prove it."

"Certainly I can prove it. I back up any statement I make."

"Bring your men here."

"I think Ald. Stocker will not be able to work with Mr. Parsons after this. I second the motion to accept his resignation It's the wisest thing," said Ald. Hamilton.

"Certainly", assented Ald. Stocker.

The motion was put and passed, followed by one by Aldermen McIntyre and Stocker that Ald. Hamilton be chairman until Tuesday night Ald. Hamilton immediately took up his duties, going into the committee room where he and the engineer went over the accounts in the presence of several aldermen and passed them.

The Hospital By-law.

The by-law for taking the vote on the request of the Nicholls Hospital Board for a grant of $300,000 passed the second and third readings last night.

Ald. Hamilton reported for the committee which had met a committee from the Nicholls Hospital Board. The hospital committee had agreed to take up with the full board the matters of control of the Isolation Hospital and Laboratory. The hospital representatives had not seemed friendly to the idea of larger representation of the Council on the hospital board, and had thought that the board was within its rights in asking the citizens for the money.

Mayor Denne pointed out that the Hospital Board is governed by a private Bill of the Legislature, and that the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature would decline to alter this.

It is a matter for the people, added Ald. Hamilton. They're not asking us for the money; they're asking us to let them ask the people to give them the money. If they were asking us for the money we could bargain with them.

Will Buy Capacitator.

The city will buy a capacitator from the Canadian General Electric Company at a cost of about $1,500 to be put in service at the sewage disposal plant to correct the power factor. This will be bought by a committee, consisting of Ald. Cotton, the City Engineer and the manager of the Utilities Commission. The installation would save the city about $1,000 a year.

The City Engineer was instructed to shut down as much as possible of the sewage disposal plant during the peak load hours of 11 to 12 and 4 to 5 to reduce the cost of power. The 100 h.p. compressor can be shut down at these times.

The indigent patients' accounts and the ordinary accounts occupied the attention of the Finance Committee at its regular monthly meeting.

Sales Tax Removed.

The Dominion Government has removed the sales tax from gravel, crushed stone, sand, etc., produced by the city and used in the city's construction work. The city will still decline to pay sales tax on the cement tile it makes and uses, which have not yet been relieved from this impost.

New Chrysler "65" 4-Door Sedan $1620

New CHRYSLER '65' and '75'

...a glorious escape from Obsolete Fashions

AFTER nearly four years of imitation and emulation Chrysler now brings to the price groups of the new "65" and "75" a lavishness of beauty which was never there before.

The style of yesterday, still living in many new cars, is rendered obsolete because it is succeeded today by Chrysler cars so completely new in design that they establish new measures of beauty and style.

New slender-profile chromium-plated radiator, arched-window silhouette, the grace and sweep of its "air-wing" fenders, the luxury of fitting and appointment single these new Chryslers instantly as the new style that re-styles all motor cars.

Surely the mere evidence of the eye—because performance is assuredly the very name of Chrysler—proves at once that both the new "65" and the "75" have been lifted up to an intrinsic value which hundreds of dollars—yes, even a thousand—more than their selling price could not have secured before.

New Chrysler "65" Prices — Business Coupe, $1490; Roadster (with rumble seat) $1485; 2-Door Sedan, $1515; Touring $1525; 4-Door Sedan, $1620; Coupe (with rumble seat), $1620. Wire wheels extra.
New Chrysler "75" Prices — Royal Sedan, $2250; 2-Passenger Coupe (with rumble seat), $2250; Roadster (with rumble seat), $2245; Town Sedan, $2420. Wire wheels extra.

THE ADVENTURES OF SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS CLUB

THE MYSTERY OF CAVE RIVER

Our club surely had plenty of trouble and excitement this summer. Seems like we fellows just can't keep out of trouble, somehow. Last week while we were camping out on Seven Willows Island, Clarence ran away and joined a circus. We got him back before the camp broke up, and so we made up our minds not to let anyone know about it, but somehow his daddy found it out, and gave him a good whipping when he got back from camp. Then he got the notion in his head that I told on him, which I certainly did not, and it made me feel pretty bad, because I always helped Clarence out when he got into fights—he never could lick anybody. It hurt my feelings, that's all; and I was thinking about it, as I sat on a stump down on the river bank, with not a single one of the boys around to cheer me up. When anything goes wrong, the fellows come to me pretty quick to help them out so I said to myself I guess everything is running alright today, because there was none of them around.

But you can't keep trouble away from this river bank. I had no more than looked up when I saw Bill Darby coming up from our little boat landing. "Hawkins," he says, "one of those crazy Pelhams from jacross the river punched a hole in my canoe. Come on down and fix it, will you?"

I looked at Bill and felt like telling him to fix it himself, but shucks! he isn't having a Merry Christmas all the time, neither, so I went along with him and we patched up the canoe.

Just as we had finished, along came Ham Gardner, one of the Pelham fellows.

"Say, Ham!" I called out to him, and he came up to us. "That was what I call a mean trick you fellows did—punching a hole in this canoe."

But Ham just looked at us with big eyes, and said: "You must be wrong about that, Hawkins. None of us fellows been around here for a week. We just got back this minute from a vacation trip—the boys are just unpacking the things now, and I'm goin' up to the drugstore to get something—if there is a hole in any canoes around here, somebody else put it in."

Ham walked on, and Bill and I went up to our big tent, where all the other boys were holding a meeting. Jerry Moore was talking.

"We boys have got something else to worry about now," he says; "the Pelham fellows are back from their vacation."

"We will all remember this," said our captain, "that we must keep away from those fellows, if we want to keep out of trouble."

"I don't mind fightin'," says Jerry, "if it's goin' to be a good scrap—"

But our captain's wooden hammer banged upon the table, and he says: "There's not goin' to be any more fightin' between us and the Pelhams—or anyone else, as far as that goes."

"It won't go very far," says Jerry, with a frown; "as soon as those Pelhams get home, they look to see what kind of trouble they can make for us."

And i looked that way, too, the next morning when we got down to our landing and started for a canoe ride. There wasn't a single canoe to be seen. Somebody had taken them away, and naturally we figured out that the Pelham fellows had done just what Jerry had said they would do. We tried to figure out where they had taken the canoes. There wasn't a sign of a Pelham fellow anywhere. There were five old tubby-looking flatboats across the river lying half out of the water. Jerry swam over and brought a boat back with him. We got in and went over and got the other four. Then we rowed around for a while, but we soon got tired. Those old flatboats are not like canoes. They are heavy and it's hard work rowing.

"Well," says our captain, "I guess we will just take these flatboats up and keep them till those Pelhams give us our canoes back."

We put the boats in a clump of bushes up the river, where we knew the Pelhams would never find them. We went down to the hollow and played ball the rest of the day, hoping we would hear from the Pelhams, but they didn't show up.

* * *

The next morning, when we came down to our big tent, there was Doc Waters, and behind him stood the whole Pelham gang.

"Hawkins," says Doc, "these boys say you stole their flatboats."

"No," I said, "we're only keeping them till they give us our canoes back."

"Look here," says Briggen, the Pelham leader, stepping up to me, "if you fellows lost those fine canoes, we sure are sorry, but we didn't take 'em."

"Give them their boats, Hawkins," says Doc. "You boys don't want any trouble; and until you are sure the Pelhams took the canoes, you'd better go slow."

So we showed the Pelhams where the flatboats were hidden in the bushes, and they got in and rowed back to their shore. Doc went about his business, and we boys went fishing for a while. Soon we saw the Pelham flatboats coming over to our side again. Briggen's boat landed first and he got out and came up to where I sat.

"Hawkins," he says, "we know a fine place down the river to have some fun—we found it yesterday—but when we started in we saw something that scared us, and we came right out again."

"Don't make me laugh," I said, "I know you fellows would get scared at anything—"

"Cross my heart," broke in Briggen, "if there isn't somethin' funny going on down there, and I says to the other fellows, I says Hawkins would like this to figure out—"

"I'm game," I told him. "Show us the place where you got scared—but listen, Briggen, if you fellows are fixing to play any tricks on us—"

"Honest, Hawkins," he says, "I don't aim to play any tricks. Come on, see for yourself."

So we all piled in the Pelham boats. For once in his life Briggen was nice enough to let me have a boat to myself, but I took Bill Darby and Jerry Moore with me, and we just followed Briggen's boat, in which were Ham Gardner and Dave Burns. We sailed down the river with the current, down along the cliffs, where the willows hang over into the water and hide the rocky shore. I watched Briggen's boat—it made for the low-hanging willows, and all of a sudden Ham and Dave pulled aside the willows and Briggen paddled the boat through the opening. I was never so surprised in my life. I thought sure they must have bumped up against the rocky sides of the bank there, but I didn't hear any bump, and I didn't see the boat, either. I said to Bill Darby: "You and Jerry pull up the willows while I paddle under and see where they went."

We shot under the willows, and oh, boy! there was a round space hollowed out in the rocky shore—you could see that it was a branch of the river that ran into a hole which looked like a cave in the side of the cliff. Briggen's boat was waiting there.

"Isn't this a fine place, Hawkins?" asked Ham Gardner.

"Yeah," I said; "Let's go in and see how far this water runs."

"Not me," says Briggen.

"I've got plenty matches," I says; "it won't be dark."

"And I've got my flashlight," says Bill Darby.

But Briggen said again:

"Not me!"

"Well, come on, Bill, you and Jerry ain't afraid, are you?"

Of course they weren't, and they started to paddle in. But Briggen got so afraid that he and his pals turned their boat around quick, and began paddling out, and I turned to look at them, thinking they were playing some trick after all, and blooey! my head hit the top of the cave—I ought to have known better than to stand up in a boat, the entrance was too low, it nearly knocked my head off. I sat down quick and yelled: "Light your flashlight, Bill."

But Bill didn't—I saw him and Jerry both put out their oars against the rocky sides of the cave and push back as hard as they could—

* * *

We were too frightened to do anything. Away down that dark tunnel we saw what looked like a white pane of glass—like a window—and through it a frightful face was looking out at us, with a spooky light shining, softly all around it—that's all we saw, but believe me, we got our boat backed out of that dark place and turned around under the overhanging willows, and then we paddled! Oh, boy, how we paddled away from that place! Another boat with our boys was just steering for the tunnel, but we yelled for them to turn back, and they got around so quick and shot away so fast I lost sight of them. By the time we got out into the main river again, Briggen's boat was far upstream. We followed as fast as we could, and when we landed at our tent, we all sat around on the ground and talked. We were so excited we forgot the Pelhams were our enemies.

"Well, Hawkins," says Briggen, "you saw it for yourself."

"Yeah," I said, "I saw it, but what was it?"

Nobody could figure it out. The more we talked, the more we began to shiver, and pretty soon the Pelhams slipped away, one after another, and I think all of us boys were sore at ourselves for letting them give us such a scare.

I couldn't sleep that night. I kept thinking of that strange face shining in the dark tunnel where the river runs into the cliff. The more I thought about it, the more I wanted to find out just what it was. The next morning I got a message to call at Doc Waters' office, so right after breakfast I went up.

"Well, Doc," I says, "here I am."

"Yes, and it's lucky you are," says Doc, "and I want to warn all you boys to stay indoors at night. Poor old Judge Granbery got hit on the head last night by somebody who is prowling around here—somebody broke in his house last night, and when the Judge went downstairs to see what was the matter he got hit on the head with a chair—the poor old fellow—I've just been up to his house to put some sticking plaster on his head, and he's in a pretty bad fix. Now, Hawkins, I'm goin' to ask you to try to find out who it was—"

"Don't kid me!" I said with a laugh, "I'm no detective—"

"That's all right," broke in Doc, "you and your club helped out many a time, and I wouldn't be surprised if you would be the one to figure this out, too."

Just then the Sheriff came in. He had been up to Judge Granbery's house, he said, but nothing was found to be missing, so he didn't think the prowler had broken in to steal anything.

"We looked all around the house for footprints," says the Sheriff, "but except for the grass being trodden down, there were none. We found this, however."

He took from his pocket a little stone figure—it looked like a little doll with a very funny face. The Judge has a lot of queer things up in his library, like stuffed birds and alligators and odd vases and statues—he is a nut about such things—but I had never seen this funny little figure before.

"Where did you find it?" I asked, as I picked up the thing and looked at it.

"One of my men stepped on it—right under theside window—it was lying in the grass," said the Sheriff. "It may have dropped out of the pocket of the fellow who jumped out of the window."

"Well, Hawkins, you keep it, and when you get up to Judge Granbery's house, give it back to him," says Doc. "And keep an eye open for any stranger you might see."

* * *

I went down to the tent and joined the boys. Jerry Moore had a new fishing net that interested all of us, and we had a good time trying it out. I showed the boys the funny little statue that Doc had left in my care, and Jerry Moore offered me his pocket knife for it, but I shook my head and put it back in my pocket. Just then a Pelham flatboat came up the river, with Ham Gardner and Dave Burns in it.

"Hey! Hawkins," yelled Dave "we saw one of your canoes down the river a piece."

At that we forgot the fishing net. We wanted to get our canoes back. So Jerry and Bill and I went along with the two Pelhams in their flat-boat, and we traveled a good distance, but saw nothing that looked like a canoe. We started back and were almost at the last bend when we saw a red canoe—by golly! it was my very own—and in it was a funny-looking little old man who made me think of a Japanese, he had such funny eyes and yellow skin and a wide grin on his face. He was coming down toward us. I was just about to tell him to get out of my canoe, but he grinned and sang out: "Hello, boys, have a nice time?"

His canoe shot past ours boat "Turn around and follow him!" I said. The boys turned the boat, but the funny-looking man was watching us. I saw him lift a rifle out of the canoe. "Go on!" he yelled. "Go on! Don't stop here! What you think?" We boys struck our paddles hard and turned our boat back upstream and we went as fast as we could. We had to go home—it was getting dark, and so we all scattered. Right after supper we met again and went to Doc Waters' house. The hired man told us Doc had just been called to Judge Granbery's, and so we got up and started for that place.

When we arrived in front of the house, it was pretty dark, and I saw something that ran crouching, and at first I thought it was the Judge's big dog, but the next second I knew it was the funny little man we had seen in my canoe. He was crawling over the grass beneath a window, looking for something. I remembered that little statue—I pulled it out of my pocket and ran up to him. He turned and snarled at me as though I had frightened him.

"Did you lose this?" I asked. I held up the little stone figure. He gave a yell and snatched it from my hand. The next moment he was running like a rabbit for the dark trees across the road.

"He's heading for the river," says Jerry. "No use following him, Hawkins."

"Don't worry," I told him, "you don't catch me following him in the dark."

And then Doc Waters came out, and we told him what had happened. "He's our man," said Doc. "We will get him tomorrow, when it's light—no use poking around in the dark at night." And then he sent us home to bed.

* * *

The little red canoe was sighted about two o'clock, the next day. We boys were hiking along the river bank, behind the bushes; and though we had our hands scratched up, we kept our eyes open for the red canoe. And just when we were sure we had sighted it, the little canoe suddenly disappeared from the river.

"It went under the willows!" yelled Jerry, who had a better place to watch. "It went into the cave river."

We took up our positions where we would have a good view of the willows behind which was the entrance to the cave river. Doc Waters and the Sheriff came down and we told him about it. Doc says: "Well, who's going in with me to fetch him out?" None of us said a word. But we didn't have to. All of a sudden the willows parted and out shot the little red canoe with the funny-looking man in it. The Sheriff struck out in a flatboat to head him off, and before we knew it the two had a collision and over went the canoe, and the Sheriff jumped from the flatboat and grabbed the man and brought him to shore. He fought like a tiger, but Doc ran to help the Sheriff, and soon they had handcuffs on him. "Take him up, Sheriff," says Doc, "and don't let him get away." The Sheriff took the little man up the bank.

"Now," says Doc, "let's take a look at this cave river." But none of us boys cared to go. So Doc went alone. We saw his boat carry him under the willows, and for ten minutes we waited. And then Doc came out again, and in his boat he had a big piece of frosted glass with a big face painted on it.

"Here," he said, "is what that foreigner put up in there to keep people out of his hiding place—there were a couple of candles burning behind it and it sure did look spooky."

We all laughed about it, then, but when I remembered the scare it had given us, I felt cheap.

"I don't know what we would do without you boys," said Doc, as we were getting ready to go home; "you certainly are about the finest kids I ever did see."

"Forget it, Doc," I told him.

"Forget nothing!" says Doc. "I told you it wouldn't surprise me if you turned out to be a good detective, Hawkins. You discovered this fellow first, didn't you?"

"No, not by myself," I said, "but he had my red canoe—"

"Well, that's about the same thing," says Doc with a laugh. "That little Chinaman, or whatever he is, was workin' up in Watertown lately, and some other fellow told him where that good luck statue was—"

"Was that what I had in my pocket?" I asked.

"Sure," said Doc; "that statue brings good luck to anybody who carries it—"

"Well, then, it brought me luck, for sure," I said, with a grin, "because it helped me to tell which man it was that broke into Judge Granbery's house—"

"That little Chinaman would have broken in again and again until he got what he was after," said Doc, "but you'd have been a better detective, Hawkins, if you weren't afraid to go in places."

"What d'you mean, Doc?" I asked.

"Well," he says, with a smile, "if you hadn't been afraid to go in to that cave river yonder, you would have found all your canoes—they're in there, I just saw them—that little Chinaman must have liked canoes, for he's got them all tied up there in the dark. You'd better go right in and get them so you can take 'em back with you now."

Which we did.

The Prize will be a Seckatary Hawkins Adventure Book.

THIS WEEK'S PASSWORD

Every member of the club should figure out the password each week. In keeping with the title of our contest, the password this week will have something to do with "School Days." Here it is:

I overheard part of a conversation between one of the boys in the upper grades, and a school inspector. I didn't hear what the inspector said, but I heard the boy say

"I TEACH IT, MR."

Later on I remembered what he said, and I started with a pencil to change the letters around, and by Jinks! I found out what the pupil taught. It was one of the studies that we all must take in any school we go, and if you'll just take a pencil and paper and put down what the boy said, and then start changing the letters around, you'll get it. And when you have it right, it will spell on word, that means a pretty hard school book for most of us.

Last week's password was "Mas'olunge."

A LETTER FROM THE "SECKATARY"

Dear Club Members:

We want every boy and girl who reads this to take part in this contest, because it is a subject that every boy and girl should be able to write about. Our vacation time is drawing to a close, and school days are drawing near again. Back to the old school house, and take up the old books that have been neglected for the jolly summer vacation. Well, we have all had a wonderful time this summer, and we ought to be fair and square now, and be glad to go back to school. School days are fine days, anyway—days that we will never forget—and we should enjoy them just as much as we enjoy the vacation days.

If you have not yet joined the club, be sure to fill out the coupon which you will find in another part of this page, and write your name and address plainly—and don't forget to give your age. Then send in your coupon with a stamp for your club button and membership card, and you will be eligible to take part in all the contests to be conducted by the club.

Then get busy and write your contest paper about "SCHOOL DAYS." You may write a story or a verse, or draw a picture—or if you can't do any of those things, just sit down and write me a letter and tell me about your school days.

Remember the prizes, and don't be discouraged if at first you don't succeed in winning. The one who keeps on going gets there, but the fellow who stops never has a chance standing still and doing nothing, and furthermore, who wants to be a quitter? Nobody. Remember our motto—"Fair and Square"—and even though it means hard work, don't let go of your standard. Every morning right after breakfast say to yourself: "Work hard and win!"

Boy, oh boy! That's magic.

Our Weekly Meeting.

Of course it is impossible for every member of our club to attend meetings down in the little old club house on the river bank, but we are going to hold a meeting on this page every week, and in that way every member can know what the club is doing, and all about our contests and everything. So be sure to watch this page every week.

Every week we will present in our regular meeting a number of communications from different members, and it should be your aim to have your letters printed here.

This Week's Prize.

This week's prize, for the 'Rainy Day" contest, is won by Helen Cameron, of Birdsall, first girl member of the club. It's a lovely little story that I am sure you will all enjoy.

Don't forget that the competition on "A Fish Story" is open until tonight. The prize-winner will be announced next Saturday.

Now we shall have some letters from members:

Here's a perfectly lovely rainy day story by Helen Cameron, of Birdsall, who, by the way, has brought in two new members. This story, of course, wins the prize this week, and I have sent Helen her book. Helen has another distinction, too—she was the first girl member of the Club.

Dear Seck:

I am sending in a story and I hope to get a book. Here it is:

"What Twins Did on a Rainy Day."

The twins, Arthur and May, were looking out of the window very disconsolately. It was raining and they could not go to school. Their mother, who was very tired, was lying down, and the twins were trying to think of something to do.

All at once May's face cleared. "I have it!" she cried, excitedly. She whispered to Arthur and they went out to the kitchen.

"We'll get a nice lunch fixed up for mother and then we'll get supper ready for Daddy and us."

Arthur thought it a great prospect.

They got a dainty lunch ready for their mother and got supper. After their father had finished his supper, he praised them and told them they had the genius of a cook.

"I'm going down town for a few minutes," said their father with a wink.

When he came back he held an ice cream cone each for the twins who thought it the end of "A Rainy and Perfect Day."

Yours, fair and square,
Helen Cameron.

Birdsall, Ont.

This is a nice little story by Michael O'Leary. I've seen barns just like it on a rainy day—but how nice and warm-smelling the inside is!

Dear Seck:

This is my composition on 'A Rainy Day.'

The place was littered with wet straw that had been scattered by harvesters. In one corner was a pool of water. There were several half-drowned fowls crowded together under a cart, among which was a miserable rooster, drenched out of all life. A wall-eyed horse, tired of the loneliness of the stable, was poking his head out a window with the rain dripping on it from the eaves.

Yours fair and square,
Michael O'Leary.

R.R. No. 9,
Peterborough, Ont.

Beverly Rogers writes this nice letter with the membership form for Betty Scott. I hope both she and Betty write soon.

Dear Seck:

I have sent in a new member's name and she is going to try for a prize, and is going to try and get a new member so she can get your picture.

Hope to see you soon.

Yours fair and square,
Beverly Rogers.

McFarlane Avenue,
Peterborough, Ont.

It is easy to join the Club, Walter. All you have to do is promise to play Fair and Square at all times. Please send me a note of your birth date.

Dear Seck:

I do not belong to your club but would like to join. Please send me full particulars.

Yours, fair and square,
Walter Ward.

236 McDonnel Street,
Peterborough, Ontario.

I am very glad to have Robert Spence as a member of the Club. His letter is very nice. Be sure you try the competitions, Walter, and try to get some more members in Lakefield.

Dear Seck:

Ever since The Examiner branch of your club was started, I have wanted to be a member of it. I cannot find a membership form, but I am sending in my application anyway. I hope I will get an answer from you anyhow. I am 13 years old and my birthday was on the 21st of June 1915. I like your stories very much and I hope to get one of your books some time. I will try and get another member also and receive your picture. I will join your contest "A Fish Story" if I have time and I hope I will win a prize. Hoping I hear from you soon,

Yours, fair and square,
Lakefield. Robert Spence.

John Londerville sent in a new member right away—Howard Cunningham That's being right on the job, I think. Here is John's letter.

Dear Seck:

As I did not notice your application to join your club in the Daily Examiner, I am going to send in the full particulars hoping you will allow me to join this way. I am 13 years old. I was born on January 1st, 1915. I am going to send in a story, hoping it will win. Well, goodbye until next week.

Yours, fair and square,
John Londerville.

Adolphe Le Clair also sent in a new member right away. He proposed Donald Penrose. I'll be looking for your stories, Adolphe.

Dear Seck:

As I could not find an application to join your club in the paper, I am sending in particulars, hoping I will be able to join this way. I am 10 years old, being born on July 25, 1918. I hope to send in as many stories as I can, starting this week. Well, I must be quitting now as you must be tired.

Yours, fair and square,
Adolphe Le Clair.

Arthur Stinson is a most aggressive member, having sent in several names of new members. I think I'll have to get special prizes for boys and girls who send in a lot of new members.

Dear Seck:

Lloyd is sending in a two-cent stamp to pay for his button. Even if he does not receive a prize he will enjoy being a member of your club. I hope to receive a picture of my president, (Seckatary Hawkins). I enjoy your page very much every Saturday night and I am sure my friend will.

Yours, fair and square,
Arthur Stinson.

Here is David Rogers to tell us about his wonderful big dog, Caesar. Doesn't he write a nice letter?

Dear Seckatary:—

I am joining your club and will be very glad to do so. I am 8 yrs. old. My birthday is in May.

I have a dog named Caesar. He is very big. He shakes hands with all my friends. All my friends are Caesar's friends. He is so big that he scares nearly everyone that comes to the house.

Please send me my membership pin.

Yours fair and square,
David Rogers.

And here is a wonderful little story about a member of the Club by John Londerville of Havelock. I don't think it will be long till you see John's name in the list of prize winners.

Dear Seck:

Here is the story I told you I would write in my letter.

On a rainy day usually everyone is sad because there is nothing to do. Tommy, a little boy of nine years, belongs to the wonderful Seckatary Hawkins' Club.

"Mother," said Tommy one rainy day, "I bet there are children lots worse off than me, maybe lame or sick, so I think I will make them happy by corresponding with them and telling them about the club."

"Yes," said Tommy's Mother, "That would be living up to your club. The motto is "Fair and Square."

Thus Tommy showed he was fair and square and his rainy day correspondence brought sunshine into many a sick boy's life.

Yours, fair and square,
John Londerville.

Adolphe LeClair writes a nice little story about a rainy day. It was a splendid idea, wasn't it, to write to another boy to brighten him up?

Dear Seck:

This is the story that I am sending in:

One rainy day when I was sick, I asked my mother for a pencil and paper so that I might write to some other fellow who was sick and worse off than I was, perhaps making him happy, showing that I was fair and square.

Adolphe LeClair.

Lowery McQuade, who has already won a book, has written a story about camping on a rainy day. Oh boy! isn't it awful? You can't go out of the tent and you can't cook—but as Lowery says, you can play nice games inside.

Dear Seck:

This is my third letter to your club. I like the stories in your book, "The Gray Ghost." I think they are very interesting.

"A Rainy Day."

This day we were out camping. We were having a great time in a boat on the water.

It was a cloudy day and the clouds began to get black. We just had time to get to the tent when the rain started, so we had to play inside. We played games such as checkers, lost heir and many others.

Then there came an awful wind which opened the flaps of the tent and blew the rain in our faces, but we put them back again.

Once more the wind came. This time it came near blowing the tent down.

Yours, fair and square,
Lowery McQuade.

Myrtle Boreham had a splendid idea when she shared her umbrella with the dear old lady. That is being really nice. Write soon again Myrtle, and don't forget to reply to any of the members who write to you.

Dear Seck:

As I was walking along one day, and the rain was coming down, I met a poor old lady who was getting all wet with the rain. I shared my umbrella with her, and she never forgot me again.

Yours, fair and square,
Myrtle Boreham.

P.S.—I would like to hear from some of the members.

This is a sad story told by Ross McConnell of Omemee. Rain certainly does spoil a camp—especially when the wind blows the tent over.

Dear Seck:

This is my first story to your page. One day George Jones and his companion were in their tent when a wind and rain storm came up and blew their tent over. They both got wet and went home very unhappy. That was their last camping on a rainy day.

Yours, fair and square,
Ross McConnell.

HARRISONS TAKE FIRST GAME OF PLAY-OFFS

Win From DeLaval 15-5

Victors Play Practically Errorless Ball to Defeat League Leaders

TIMELY HITTING

Separators Take Off to Good Start With Lead in First Frame

Harrison's North Enders were the winners of the first game of the play-off in the softball league last night in Confederation Park, when they came out on the biggest end of a fifteen to five score against the De aval team. The score indicates the play. Harrison's displayed the same form with which they have won their last four games by playing practically errorless ball, while in many cases the De Laval seemed to be playing is if in a daze.

Starting off to what looked like a whirlwind take-off, the Separators came through in the first frame with two runs, Jones and Fowler scoring. Undaunted by this lead, when the Harrison men made the trip to the plate in the last half of the first they were not satisfied with one or two runs and tieing the game but they scored nine runs in one frame to put the game on ice right then and there, and assumed a lead that the Factory crew never threatened to overcome. Twelve Harrisonites faced Carruthers, and had no trouble in locating his offerings. Such a batting rally has not been seen in Confederation Park since the teams have been in mid-season form.

Numerous errors in this frame and timely hitting were the cause of the downfall. Dorrington, Dundas, E. Vinette, Bob Ross, Montgomery, H. Vinette, Clark were responsible for seven of the runs, while Dorrington and Dundas, not content to make the circuit once, went around for the second trip, making the nine runs, seven of which were scored with two out.

Out After Chocolates

The second innings was scoreless for the De Laval, while Montgomery polled out his homer. It is said that a box of chocoltes are offered by the Harrison manager to the player with the most home runs, and Montgomery is right in for the chocolates. Last game he was responsible for the win. Harrisons took a little breathing spell in the next and did not score any runs, while Jones scored in the fourth for the De Laval Harrison's scored again in the fourth when E Vinnette came in on Miller's error.

The fifth was scoreless for both teams. The sixth was same for the De Laval, while Harrisons staged another batting practice at the Separators' expense, and nicked the Milkmen for three more tallies, Dobson, Vinette and Ross scoring.

In the seventh the De Laval threatened to come through and there appeared to be a break for them, but Fate gave it to the winners in that frame. The bases were filled when Jones rolled a small one. Ward was caught going home and Miller and Jones tried a double steal, both getting caught off the bag for the three put-outs. However Carruthers, the King of the Bunters scored giving the Separators their fourth score.

The eighth was scoreless for both and the first half of the ninth saw Carruthers again crossed plate for the De Laval's fifth and final run.

Calladine on first for Harrisons, had a hard luck night as far as the scoring end of the game was concerned, he was the only one of the Northerners not to get a run, but on first he was effective, using his baseball brain to get the Harrison team out of the hole they fell into in the seventh.

Jake Hall travelled far from third base over into foul territory to make a pretty running catch of Clark's fly; while Clark, in right field, made some nice catches, and Montgomery, in centre field, stabbed a beautiful one that looked as if it was already marked on the score card for a hit.

The teams only had on change in the line-up when Manager Fowler put Simmons in centre field for Cooper in the seventh. Both pitchers stood the gaff and went the whole route.

There was only one strike-out in the whole game, and that went to Dundas the Harrison hurler. He got better support from his teammates than did Carruthers, who seemed to lack his usual control, the whole De aval team lacked their usual pep and were off their tight game that carried them to the top of the ladder during the season.

There was the largest crowd of the season on hand to watch these teams battle for the league honors, and the winning of the Harrison team tightens things up considerably.

Three upmpires handled the game, L. LeBarr at the plate as umpire in chief, and Bill Jackson and Si. Haskell on the bases.

The teams lined up as follows:

De Laval.—Miller, c; Hall, 3b; Jones, ss; Fowler, 2b; Frick, 1b; Cooper cf; Simmons, cf; K. Miller, lf; Ward rf; Carruthers, p.

Harrison's—Dorrington, 3b; Dundas, p; Calladine, 1b; Dobson, c; E. Vinette, lf; Ross, 2b; Montgomery, cf; H. Vinette ss; and Clark, rf.

Score by innings:

De Laval.. .. ..201000101— 5
Harrisons.. .. ..91010310x—15

Home runs—Montgomery, 1; Strike outs, Dundas, 1.

LEAFS ARE BACK IN SECOND PLACE

Beat Orioles Twice, While Buffalo Defeats Keys

TORONTO, September 1.—Propelled along by Clayton Sheedy's mighty bat the Leafs yesterday defeated the Baltimore Orioles twice and scrambled back to second place in this the most hectic pennant chase the International ever knew. Sheedy brought extreme grief to his old boss, Jack Dunn, and sent the Toronto fans into a frenzy of joy, when, with the Birds leading 7 to 6 in the eighth inning of the curtain-raiser, he lifted the ball over the left-field fence, scoring Cote and Freitag ahead of him to give Toronto a 9 to 7 victory In the second game he continued his good work, geting two hits, but neither figured in winning the game, although Shedy, who got on in the seventh via the force-out route, scored the wining tally when Alexander lifted a sacrifice fly to Brower in right field. The final score was 5 to 4.

BUFFALO WINS.

BUFFALO, Sept 1.—The Buffalo Bisons ran their victorious streak to seventeen wins in nineteen starts when they tok a rather easy game from the Reading Keys yesterday. The score was 8 to 2. Art Mills limited the Keys to six hits one a homer by Conroy.

A long double by Herb Thomas and another whistling triple by Bill Mariott led to the scoring of five Bison runs. Thomas and Mariott also starred on the defensive.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By a Wise Cracker

STONEY LAKE, August 29.

Mister Sporting Editor:

I hope, Mac, you still are on good terms with the butchers for they don't seem a chance in the world for you to get any fish from Stoney Lake, at least so far as I am concerned. I been up here now the better part of 2 weeks and the only fish I've saw has been surrounded with tin. If you want any of the finny tribe my tip to anybody is to leave the fishing tackle home and bring along a good can-opener. You can get results that way but otherwise you ain't got as much chance as they is of a Eskimo winning the Toronto swim I'm waiting for 1 bird and if him and I ever meet the Tunney-Heeney fight will look like a meeting of the Peace Society. I mean the guy what writes them folders that tell about the lakes up this way just teeming with bass and lunge. That gink must have a imagination that hits on all 8. He'd have you believe you couldn't hardly run a boat in these waters because the fish is so thick but you take it from me the loneliest thing in the world is a bait on a line up in this neck of the woods. If the worms didn't die of ennui (you didn't think I could pull any of that high hat stuff, eh, Mac?) a fellow could get through a coupla weeks here Mac with the after section of 1 good sized dew worm. As for trolling, Mister Sporting Editor, I wasn't never no good at figgers so I can't tell you the exact No. of miles I've towed a hunk of copper and silver around the east end of Stoney Lake but take it from me it's been plenty and I don't mean possibly. I've sure saw a lotta scenery and got plenty of p.t. as the Sergt.-Major calls it but fish—they aint no such animal as the farmer said when he saw the camel in the circus.

Its getting near the end of the season Mac up here. Bare-legged girls ain't nearly so plentiful as a week ago and in a few days only the all-season gang what hangs out till the lake threatens to freeze over will be left. Its a great life and the only trouble with yours truly except the fishing feaco is he can't get enough of it in 2 weeks.

Well, Mac, to get down to the sporting news they don't seem much to be said from this distance. My best to the Raybestos for coming through the 1st round like champions. The boys has been 1 of the mainstays of hard ball in Peterborough for years and if they can come through and cop the intermediate title they won't be no one more tickled than your scribe. I'm about 3 days ahead with this letter and a day behind so far as the dope is concerned so I can't say much about the sports of the day.

Anyway, Mac, I gotta a few days left and I'm going make a big effort to land a fish for you before I hafta to pull stakes. You'll hafta take it run of the mine, Mac, for I can't guarantee any particular size if any. Understand you get the 2nd I catch and as I didn't get none last year and the same this year up to now you can dope out the percentage for yourself.

My best for the customers and be sure you look up and down before you cross the street yourself.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

P.S.—If I get that fish before Sat. night, Mac, I'll phone you and you can get out an extra. A. W. C.

P.S. 2—Oh joy I got him this a.m. smashing a 2-year record all to pieces. He was only a bass at that but ain't it a grand and glorious feeling when you been paddling for days without getting nothing on your line but weeds to pull something live over the gunwale. You needn't get out an extra, Mac, he ain't hardly big enough for that. A. W. C.

ATHLETICS MOVE CLOSER TO YANKS

Win From Boston Red Sox While League Leaders Are Idle

NEW YORK, Sept 1.—The Athletics reduced the lead of the Yankees to two games by defeating the Boston Red Sox, 3 to 2, at Philadelphia yesterday in a hard-fought game George Walberg pitched for the Mackmen against Danny MacFayden and Pat Simmons.

Each team was held to four hits, but the Athletics won by bunching theirs in the sixth and seventh for all their runs MacFayden held the Mackmen hitless for five runs, permitting only three to reach first base, and Simmons turned in one inning without hits after MacFayden gave way to a pinch batsman in the eighth.

Buddy Meyer, Boston third baseman, was banished from the game in the first for protesting Umpire Geisel's decision calling him out at home.

Heilmann's home run in the ninth inning failed to aid the Detroit Tigers in an effort to overcome a four-run lead, and the St. Louis Browns took the opening game of the series, 5 to 2.

Alvin Crowder turned in his sixteenth victory of the season by keeping the opponents' hits scattered.

LEADERS SPLIT WITH PIRATES

Cardinals Lose Opener and Take Second Game—Giants Lose

CUBS BEAT REDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The Cardinals divided an exciting doubleheader with the Pirates before 20,000 fans at Forbes Field yesterday afternoon, and so maintained their position six and one-half games ahead of the speding Buccaneers, who rose to fourth place when the Reds lost to Chicago. The Pirates won by 6 to 5 in the opener, but the Cards reversed the decision by 6 to 2 in the nightcap.

The Pirates went into a virtual tie with the Giants in games, but trailed the New York entry in percentage because of having played and lost more games than McGraw's team.

Grover Alexander and Ray Kremer started the first game, but neither finished. Paul Waner's home run, with his brother Lloyd on base as a result of a single, gave the Bucs their last two runs.

A home run, Chick Hafey's twentieth of the season, sent Kremer out in the eighth. The Cards scored four in this round.

Dazzy Vance was in superb form, and the Giants dropped their eighth straight, losing to Brooklyn by 4 to 2. It was Vance's eighteenth victory. He allowed the Giants but six hits, two of which were bunched in the seventh for all the New York runs. These were Jackson's single and Reese's home run.

Jake Flowers hit a homer for Brooklyn in the fourth. The Robins' markers were scored one at a time, in the second, third, fourth and fifth. Young Carl Hubbell and Jim Faulkner pitched for the Giants.

Chicago hurt Cincinnati's pennant chances by winning the second consecutive game from the Reds, 5 to 3 Nehf, veteran pitcher, lasted only six innings for Chicago, but received credit for winning the game. Cincinnati made plenty of hits——sixten—but could not group them for runs.

The Phillies won the first game of yesterday's doubleheader from the Braves, 4 to 3, but Boston triumphed in the second game behind some excelent pitching of Foster Edwards, former college star. The vital inning in the first game was the eighth when, with two out, singles by Klein, Leach and Williams drove in two runs. In the second, Edwards pulled himself out of some early troubles, and held the opposition to six hits, driving in one of Boston's runs himself.

Mount Pleasant

(Examiner Correspondence)

MOUNT PLEASANT, September 1.—Miss Helen McLean is in Toronto spending a two weeks' vacation the guest of her brothers, Messrs. Herman and Gordon McLean. She will attend the household science judging competition as one of the Durham county team.

Miss Grace Best is spending a holiday with her aunt, Mrs. Cain, in Omemee.

Miss Queenie Acehurst returned to her home in Manvers after spending a pleasant holiday with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Sloan and family motored to Toronto on Tuesday and attended the C.N.E.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

Royals and Elizabeths at Exhibition grounds on Monday afternoon (Labor Day). Game will be called at 3 o'clock sharp.

The three umpires that handled the first of the playoff games in the softball league at Confederation Square last night did the game to the satisfaction of all and both the spectators and the players seem satisfied.

* * * * * * *

The 15-5 defeat that the Separators suffered last night at the hands of the northern crew means that the spectators will take more inerest in the games from now on as when they see these two teams battle in the next game, when they meet again on Tuesday night, that they will not be disappointed when they leave as the De Laval, having a bad night will be out for sweet revenge and to win the next game at all costs.

* * * * * * *

Harrisons added another scalp to their belt and increased their winning streak last night, but they deserved to win, they were the beter team on the field and had the fight in them and the punch to score the winning tallies.

* * * * * * *

A record was set last night for softball when twelve men faced the pitcher and scored nine runs seven of which were chalked up for the winners after two were down This lead by Harrisons against the De Laval was never relinquished and the Harrison men never let down for a second but were out to score as many runs as they could enter in their score book and played almost errories ball while the separators had an off night of which the northerners made the best of.

* * * * * * *

Ideal baseball weather and still no games except the few that our three teams that are entered in the O.B.A.A. play-offs bring here. 'Tis true that Peterborough has done well in hardball this year, the Raybestos, intermediate champions are playing in the second round also the Royals while Riley and Hickey who captured the bantam honors have been given a bye to the finals. Even if it were necessary to run the play-offs more speedily it would seem more advisable to continue the league schedule until the end of August at least Much interest is aroused in the play-offs but it is pretty hard to keep it up except in the immediate vicinity of he games. During the past few years August and September have been ideal baseball weather and many of the local fans hope for longer schedules next year.

* * * * * * *

This is a mater that should be left to the executive of the league and they should attend to this when their annual meetings are held. A schedule should stretch well into August therfeore it is up the league officials to meet the O.B.A.A. and demand an extension of time to declare league winners. This could easily be arranged with the speeding up of the play-ofs.

* * * * * * *

The Royals and Elizabeths of Toronto clash on Monday (Labor Day) at the Exhibition Park in the second O.B.A.A. round for junior honors. This should be a tight contest as both teams are keyed up to fight to a finish and baseball fans should take advantage of this opportunity to see a good game of ball.

UNITED STATES TAKES HONORS

Retain Walker Cup by Defeating British Golfers

CHICAGO GOLF CLUB, Chicago, September 1 (Associated Press). — The United States team yesterday retained the Walker Cup again by defeating the British golfers, taking 11 points and losing one, when Chick Evans yielded one down to T. A. Torrance. Bobby Jones led the way by defeating the British champion, T. P. Perkins, 13 and 12.

Starting four points to the good by sweeping all the foursomes, the United States players took 7 of the 8 single matches yesterday. Torrance won from Evans on the last green after a desperate fight. Evans was five down on the third nine of the 36-hole match. Torrance got a half in par on the 36th hole to gain a lone point for his side.

In addition to Jones' one-sided victory resulting from a combination of his golf and a slump by Perkins, Francis Ouimet defeated Major C. O. Hezlet, 8 and 7; Watts Gunn defeated R. H. Hardman 11 and 10; Jess Sweetser defeated W. L. Hope 5 and 4; Jimmy Johnston defeated Eustace Storey 4 and 2; George Von Elm defeated Dr. William Tweddell, British captain, 3 and 2, and Roland MacKenzie defeated G. N. C. Martin, 2 and 1.

WIZARD OF THE FLYING FEET

The wise-crackers of the other nations saw their calculations bounced about in royal fashion about the 100 and 200 metre events at Amsterdam. For Canada produced a speed artist who made the world's best look popeyed. He was Percy Williams, the young Vancouver high-school boy. From obscurity Percy rose to the world's greatest heights as a sprinter in the space of a few months.

At the Canadian Olympic trials he became a sensation and followed it up at Amsterdam by beating the world's best in such remarkable style that it left the critics thunderstruck. Charlie Paddock paid Williams high tribute when he said: "That boy doesn't run, he flies."

As one well-known sport writer put it Williams is built on greyhound lines He is not only a smart breaker, but he gets his speed quickly and has a spurt on the end which aroused those who know sprinters to a high degree of enthusiasm.

A year ago at the Dominion meet at Toronto Williams won his heats but by the toss of a coin he was eliminated. However, the shoe was on the other foot this time. He ran well judged trial heats and showed himself at his true worth in the finals. At this year's Olympic trials he entirely outclassed his Canadian opponents.

At Amsterdam everyone believed the Vancouver flash had his hands full with the speed wonders of the States against him. But it turned out that these boys were only wonders at home.

By outclassing the field in the 100-metre event he made himself famous throughout the world but when he again turned in a win in the 200-metre event, the stadium resounded with praise from all nations. In his double win he accomplished a feat that had not been done in the past 16 years.

NEW beauty NEW luxury
NEW performance Plus all the basic features which established McLaughlin-Buick leadership

A RADICALLY new and individual conception of the modern automobile—a sweeping improvement over all existing standards of performance, appearance and comfort—yet a strict adherence to those fundamental features which make McLaughlin-Buick the most reliable car in the world.

Such, in brief, is the story of this epochal new McLaughlin-Buick.

New Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher—the most fashionable ever built—introduce an entirely new ideal of dashing, daring debonair beauty. New adjustable front seats and extra wide rear seats provide unequalled driving-and-riding comfort. Vital engine developments impart resources of power, speed, acceleration and flexibility unapproached by any other car in the world.

And yet the basic principle—the soul of McLaughlin-Buick—is unchanged. Its world-famous, triple-sealed, valve-in-head engine—sealed chassis—torque tube drive—and other proved advantages all remain as a lasting guarantee of dependability.

New beauty—new luxury—new performance—advancements equalled by no other car—plus all of the great basic features which won you to McLaughlin-Buick in the past!

That is the offering of the great new 1929 McLaughlin-Buick. That is the offering which makes it the supreme car of to-day!

The G.M.A.C. Deferred Payment Plan offers many advantages to buyers of McLaughlin-Buick cars.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Capitol Theatre Re-opens With Three Performances on Labor Day, After Being Closed for the Past Month For Re-decoration—Bebe Daniels in "The Fifty Fifty Girl" the Opening Attraction.

The Capitol, Peterborough's theatre beautiful, after being in the hands of the decorators for the past month, re-opens on Labor Day, Monday, September 3rd, with three performances at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.00 p.m. This popular theatre since the last performances on August 4th has undergone a complete transformation, being in the hands of artists for the past month, whose work is a credit to their company—no expense was spared to make the Capitol live up to its title of "Peterborough's Theatre Beautiful." The whole color scheme has been changed, which adds increased beauty to the house and at the same time does not distract from the picture upon the screen. The only regrettable feature to the opening, is that the carpets which are being made especially for the Capitol by the Toronto Carpet Co. and which were ordered through a local firm, will not be ready in time for Monday's opening. The management has been assured, however, that the order is being rushed forward with all possible speed, and that they will be in place not later than September 15th.

The opening attraction for Monday is Bebe Daniels in "The Fifty Fifty Girl." Miss Daniels has always been a great favorite with Capitol patrons and the choice of the management in having Bebe for the opening should prove a popular one.

There is some wonderful entertainment lined up for the Capitol for the coming season. Some of the outstanding attractions for the month of September are: "The Hawk's Nest," "Ramona," "Skirts," with Syd Chaplin and Betty Balfour, "Good Morning Judge," with Rege Denny, and Lon Chaney in "Laugh Clown Laugh." Other equally outstanding attractions will follow throughout the season.

The Capitol Concert Orchestra will be on hand at the three performances on the opening day, and will continue to be a fixture of the Capitol in future.

AT THE REGENT.

"THE PATSY" CALLED YEAR'S BEST COMEDY

Marion Davies' Newest Starring Film Said to be Irresistibly Entertaining Picture; King Vidor Responsible for Direction

That screen comedy can be no better than the newness and originality of its comedy situations, is one of the maxims of all motion picture directors.

If this is true, and the reaction of the great American audience has proved that it is, then Marion Davies' new starring vehicle, "The Patsy," which comes to the Regent Theatre, should establish a precedent as the 100% comedy of the 1928 season, for no picture can provide so many startingly comic situations.

The story is replete with natural comedy, directed by King Vidor with the same originality as he used in handling the gum-chewing and tobacco-spitting episodes of his great epic, "The Big Parade." "The Patsy" opens with a comic introduction of Patricia Harrington, "The Patsy" of the Harrington family.

Pat, despite her troubles, and they are many, persists in seeing humor in everything. No matter whether she is treading on the feet of the man she loves while dancing with him, knocking him over with an oar while helping him into a rowboat, or quoting half-baked epigrams stolen from a book on "personality", she laughs—and everyone who sees the picture laughs with her.

Having to look funny while a three-foot stalk of celery dropped into her dress, was one of the comic situations forced on Marie Dressler who plays Ma Harrington. Another one was to have to stand still for thirty minutes while her husband (for screen purposes only) powdered her back. Jane Winton had to look funny while Marion Davies shaved her legs for her (and accidentally cut her a couple of times.

The Los Angeles real estate salesman and his methods of doing business contributed a great deal of fun to one sequence of the story which deals with the adventures of the hero and heroine in opening up a new subdivision in a typical west coast manner. Most of the gags for this part of the picture were taken from the real life experience of Vidor and Miss Davies with the fast-talking, inventively-minded real estate operators of Los Angeles and vicinity.

Miss Davies' take-offs on famous movie stars also furnish a great deal of fun as, of course, they were drawn from life as all the persons she caricatured have been friends for years.

One of the funniest scenes of the whole picture is where Pop Harrington, the henpecked husband, turns on his domineering wife and in a tremendous scene vents the spleen of twenty years of silent married life and finally asserts his supremacy as head of the household.

STUDIES CONDITIONS.

M. A. Lyons, a barrister-at-law, and a prospective Conservative candidate in Britain for the Clay Cross division of Derbyshire largely a coal and iron constituency is visiting Canada and the United States to investigate conditions on this side of the Atlantic. He is a well known writer and speaker on the subject of protective tariffs in England. Without attempting to forecast what will be the prominent issue upon which the government will eventually go to the country, he says it is safe to say that public condsideration will have uppermost the discussion of unemployment, emigration, empire settlement, the extension of the policy of safeguarding British interests and exhaustive discussion on the question of applying the machinery of safeguarding to the iron and steel trade in particular. "Safeguarding" is the application of a protective tariff to imported goods where the industry in England satisfies an inquiry, set up under the safeguarding of industries act. The standard of the workers is being endangered by unfair foreign competition, declares Mr. Lyons.

A TIRED-OUT FEELING

Is a Sure Sign That the Blood is Thin and Watery

"I am glad to have an opportunity of testifying to the benefits I derived from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," writes Mrs. Lawrence Kennedy, St. Joheph, N.B. She further says:—"Some years ago I was working as a stenographer, and became badly run-down. I always had a tired-out feeling, had no appetite and suffered terribly from backache. Almost every month I had to remain from the office for a day or two. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I have reason to be glad that I followed this advice. Before I had been taking the pills very long I began to feel much better. Continuing their use my strength came back, I regained my appetite and the terrible backache from which I had suffered disappeared. I have been married some years now and have two fine healthy children, a girl and a boy, and am in the best of health. All this I owe to Dr. Williams' famous Pink Pills, and I trust that these few lines may help some other weak, run-down person."

All weak, run-down people who will give this blood-building tonic a fair trial will find through its use new health and strength. You can get the pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ART AT THE FAIR

(By Jeanette.)

A ballade writer in one of the Toronto papers mourned loudly this week over the "Nudes of yesteryear," that were so prominent last season at the Art galleries of the Canadian National Exhibition. This year saw several nudes, but they were as nothing compared to the huge picture, "A Modern Fantasy," which attracted such long queues of sight-seers last year. That was a super nude, and it will probably take some time to reproduce its like.

True, "In the Studio" was fairly erotic. (Price $4,000.) It had an atmosphere of sensuality that should have pleased the most exacting. An artist with a profile like that of the Crown Prince and trim grey spats sists regarding reflectively a nude model. "By the Pool" was another representation of a fairly unclothed lady, and "A Nude" was also quite up to its title.

A curious bit of contrast which may be quite intentional on the part of the hanging committee, is the fact that diverse types of pictures are placed in close proximity. "A Nude" in which the naked female has a white setting, by the way, has a little, innocent neighbor in a picture of a quiet-eyed small girl, who wears a blazing red dress. This picture is called 'Reflections."

In "the Judgment of Paris,"($3750), the three naked ladies lose a great deal of verisimilitude by reason of the slightly green skin with which their creator endowed them. They don't look a bit attractive, and Aphrodite, who was the lucky winner of the golden apple, which, by the way, is ticketed in a very modern fashion with a label inscribed "To the Fairest," hasn't any more in the way of pulchritude, than either of her dark-browed companions. But gentlemen evidently preferred blondes, in that day as in modern times, and Paris follows the injunction of the small cupid who stands in front of him, painting to Aphrodite. Also, the fully-clothed servitor, with the Medusa-like hair who stands in the offing, appears to favor Aphrodite a little, and Hera and Athena are overlooked in favor of the blonde victress.

Bad Dreams.

Mark Gertler asks $1,000 for a bad dream of a thing entitled "Merry-Go-Round." It must have been inspired after a Welsh rarebit-and-beer midnight supper, and is a fine example of the type of painting that florished before artists discovered the art of perspective. It brings to mind somehow or other the big moving picture of "Metropolis." People may look like this in future days when the more fortunate dwellers of this era no longer dwell on a mad earth. In blazing orange and red and yellow, on horses of a bright and unearthly blue, stiff, wooden-faced creatures ride the "merry-go-round." It is in a class all by itself, and when you look at it, you are glad of the fact.

Anyone who saw the pictures at the Toronto Exhibition last year and remembers "Static," with its weird shooting rays of green and pink, will recall a resemblance in this year's "Mountain Forms."

Two small pictures that catch the eye and enthral the fancy with their under-meanings, are "The Prayer" and "Rebellious Spirit." The last shows a pure white girl's torso, with Burne-Jones hands and rapt expression, clutching tightly to her breast her other self, an evil-eyed creature of flamelike orange and crimson.

"The Pool of Bethesda" shows the modernist tendency to weird and uncanny treatment. In the background is an inky sky with a terra-cotta road leading up to it. Here black-faced sheep pass by to the slaughter, regarding with sidelong glance the morbid, yellow-skinned sufferers who haunt the healing pool. Here blind Bartimeus raises a ghastly white face to the Master, who towers over him, a thin and impassioned Christ, with upraised hands.

"Helen and Jane" is one of the smuggest pictures that may be seen, and holds the attention with its very artificiality. Two small girls of long ago stand, toes pointing decorously outward, with their snarly looking hair tied at the temples with huge ribbon bows. They have the appearance of saying: 'Look at us. Aren't we sweet!" This was the most expensive picture on view, at $4,200.

Contrasts.

"Saturday" is one of those marvellous pictures that hold the eye and haunt the memory, long after it has passed from sight. Just a handful of children wading in a green pool with a quiet light coming down through overhead laced brancches. Again it is placed in close juxtaposition to the sensual-atmosphered "By the Pool."

One feminine artist has two pictures of widely differing values. A small portrait is that of "Mr. Johns of Mousehole," showing the head and shoulders of a rugged carter, his sombre eyes gleaming under a stiff, hard derby hat. Beside him, the head of his donkey thrusts itself enquiringly into the picture.

The other picture is that of "Sunflowers," a large vivid sparkling thing. Yellow sunflowers make the background and, standing at the edge looking out is a girl with vivid Titian hair. She looks like Tisha, the heroine of the play, "The Prodigal Son." She has her slumberous eyes, too, and wears a full skirt of bright blue, like the skirt that Tisha flashed at the sea merchant when she danced for him.

The mauve tones that Mr. McGillivray-Knowles raves about are paramount in the purple peace of "A Church Interior" and the trees in "The Park."

"Road Building in Haliburton" is a splendid thing of large size and gorgeous, fine coloring.

A very unlikeable lady was the mother who smirked at her infant in "Mother and Child," and another horrid old woman knitted peacefully beside her spouse in one of the pictures in the Spanish section. He was a Basque fisherman who had just brought in several finny specimens of a bright blue color.

Colors from Spain.

The Spanish artists make use of the richer tones of bright colors. The gorgeous greens and blues that Oscar Wilde raved over, are noticeable in their pictures. "Castilian Shepherd," with its black skyline and the strong Iberian features of the old man who stands up, clutching his shepherd's crook, is an example of the art of Ignacio Zuloaga, who is much talked of at the present time.

"A Woman of Alberes," exhibits a strong atmosphere of resignation, tempered by satisfaction in a display of jewellery on her neck and arms. The lady in "Sailors of Ondarroa" appears to be trying to look away from the very red nose of one of her companions.

There is a shaft of marvellous living sunlight in one of these Spanish pictures, entitled "A Romantic Sonata." One looks involuntarily upwards to find the source of this bar.

There is a suggestion of old, old peace in the picture called "Ninety," the portrait of a very aged man, and there is a lot of fat-girthed mirth in the spectacle of a placid Buddha laughing at the gestures of a dancing girl who poses before him.

"The Monks" is another Spanish interpretation, with white-robed figures gazing fretfully at a lean meal of fish and rolls spread on a table before them. "The Village Saints" is a hateful and blatant jeer at religious images. "Ascuncion" is the title of a remarkable portrait that appears to be executed on polished slate or some similar substance and is wonderfully beautiful in its details. Two pictures have been titled "Holy Week Procession," the larger having a unique effect in its bronze - green colorings.

"A Great Rock" is a superb example of rough modern art that applies most of its paint with a palette knife, rather than with a brush, but this picture wouldn't be at all comfortable to live with. A lovely thing in all-blue tones, in tempera, is called Meh-Kanuhk, "The Trail."

A thing of outstanding interest in the miniature section is the group of three heads in one frame, entitled, "The Dynamics," representing in profile the similar features of Caesar, Napoleon and Mussolini.

In the bronzes, two examples catch the eye. "Paddy" is a gentleman whom all the bronze in the world couldn't extinguish. He looks out at the world with a crooked smile, a tiplifted hat and a flowing tie. But "Jacob Epstein" suits the rigid metal to perfection. What a head! A massive and unbelievably high forehead stretches back to flowing, thick, leonine hair that rises above long, narrow ears. Long and narrow, too, is the jaw with its Vandyke beard, and beetling are the brows over the eyes, one of which is widely opened, and the other half shut. The nose is remarkable with its Roman contour, and its broken bridge. "Jacob Epstein" must have been a dynamic gentleman, with his wise eyes, his strong intellect and his artistic chin. He was priced at $700, and "Paddy" at $750.

CROSSING THE BAR IS SET TO MUSIC

Frederick G. Mann Writes New Setting for Tennyson's Poem

The anthem, "Crossing the Bar," has received the attention of all music lovers. The beautiful words, written by Tennyson, have been put to music by Frederick G. Mann, organist of St. John's Church.

The music is written so that it may be used in four different ways, with a full choir or a mixed quartette, a male chorus or a male quartette. The beauty of this is that it is within the reach of any choir, large or small, with no extreme harmony. It is very tuneful, which lends to the beauty and attractiveness of the anthem. It is, of course, copyrighted throughout the United Kingdom and the United States by Mr. Mann.

His last hymn-anthem, "O Great First Cause," composed for the brave fliers, has been received with great appreciation. A letter from Arthur Playford in London, England, has reached Mr. Mann, stressing the dignified and noble air of the anthem.

There will be two more compositions by this composer within the next month, and music lovers will be pleased to hear this.

HASTINGS TROTTER WINS AT BELLEVILLE

Donna Belle Trots One Heat of 2.30 Race in 2.14

HASTINGS, Sept. 1.—Hastings race horse fans were at Belleville Thursday in large numbers to see the races. Among the horses there was the well known colt owned by Beavis Bros., drovers, of Hastings, "Donna Belle," which has been in only four races during her racing career of ten months. This colt is in her fourth year and is the marvel on all tracks in this district. She was purchased from Stewart Atkinson of Dartford about the twentieth of May, 1927, as yet unbroken at three years of age. With careful training and proper care she was gradually broken in and jockeyed by Dr. Johnston of Port Hope with amazing results.

Her first race was in Roseneath last fall at the Fall Fair, where she surprised all the horsemen present by winning her race in three straight heats. She again repeated her performance in Port Hope on July 2 of this year by winning her race in three straight heats.

In Belleville on Thursday she won first money and proved to be an easy winner in straight heats in the 2.30 class, stepping the last heat in 2.14.

"Donna Belle" is a chestnut mare and a pacer, and is driven by William Elmhirst of Keene.

AMULET

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—The strength in Amulet yesterday may be attributed to the unexpected good fortune this company had in cutting massive chalcopyrite in drifting in their "C" ore body. The drift is reported to be in 12 feet, and still shows massive chalcopyrite in the face, which is a very distinct improvement, as this body was thought to be almost wholly zinc. It is expected that an estimate of indicated and block out ore will be made by the directors of this company some time during the early part of September.

SUDBURY BASIN

The Mail and Empire quotes the following this morning from their correspondent, Mr. J. A. McRea:

"Diamond drill results on the Sudbury Basin Mines have been constantly favorable. Officials have said very little about work but your correspondent is able to announce a particularly impressive volume of ore of commercial grade has been clearly defined.

"Details will shortly be forthcoming with regard to the manner in which the deposits will be developed. Location of central and subsidiary shafts, together with site for surface plants, have to be decided. A concentrator will probably deal with the ore right on the property, while local refining of the metal is also practically assured through the likelihood of a zinc refinery being built in conjunction with adjoining Treadwell-Yukon developments."

WRIGHT-HARGREAVES

A despatch from Kirkland Lake yesterday stated that production at this mine had been stepped up during the last few weeks. Mill heads have been averaging around $11 and would be brought up to between $12 and $13 next week. The report stated further that tonnage will also be maintained at around 750 tons a day now that the lower levels are comparing favorably with those on neighboring properties.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—Rubec Mines are continuing surface work on their claims in Rouyn Township adjoining Laval on the south and are preparing to resume diamond drilling immediately, it is reported. What appears to be a strong fault zone has been uncovered. This strikes east and west and has a width of eight feet with a heavy dissemination of chalcopyrite and pyrrhotite. "On the claims lying between the Standacona blocks 2 and 3 we have located the southerly extension of the Horne diabase dyke in association with which some of Noranda's ore bodies are found," Douglas Mutch, consulting engineer for the Rubec stated. This is being stripped and trenched at present. All summer they have been carrying on geological work on the company's claims in Cadillac, Boischatel, Bosquet, Dusfresnoy, Montbray and Duprat Townships. As a result of this work surface explorations have been started on the Bosquet and the Cadillac holdings. On the Bosquet holdings two quartz veins showing low gold values have been found in the sedimentary formation, which is cut by the porphyry dykes. The company plans to carry on fairly extensive work and is understood to have about $60,000 available for this in the treasury.

Latest reports from the Rupert's Land Mines state that the prospect shaft which is being sunk on a promising showing has been completed to to a depth of forty feet, and slashing is in progress in order to determine its full width. In addition surface work is being carried on at the vein lying to the west of the shaft. This vein is said to have been traced for over 300 feet already.

Mandy is reported to have already drifted in ore on the 425-foot level for a length of 50 feet. The vein is about 4½ feet wide, and is said to show around 10 per cent copper. This vein has also been cut on the 325-level above. It has just been reached on this level and is said to be about the same width as on the 425. The crosscut on the 525 has now reached a point almost directly under this ore on the 425, and results from here are looked forward to with a good deal of interest.

Roderick Gold Mines, Limited, operating in the central Manitoba field, expect to have the exploration plans recommended by D. J. Kennedy earlier in the season completed before the cold weather. The property will then be made ready for an examination by an engineer who will make recommendations for further development. Work has been concentrated on three main veins. The first has been proved for a distance of about 2,000 feet it is stated. Its width runs from 2 to 4 feet and good values save been secured from careful and thorough sampling.

San Antonio Extension Syndicate have placed a crew of nine men on their holdings to the east of Rice Lake, and exploration of a vein on the Golden Rod claim is now well in hand. The Syndicate is a central Manitoba operation. Camps have already been built. The Golden Rod vein is said to be traced for 1,000 feet with widths running around 7 feet. Good values have been secured.

Kootenay King Mining Company is reported to be obtaining good results in the diamond drilling program at its property, which is ten miles from the famous Sullivan Mine at Kimberly, B.C. Large bodies of low-grade lead-zinc ores are said to have been indicated by the diamond drills.

Exchanges Are Closed Until Next Tuesday

TORONTO, Sept. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—There were no sessions this morning of the Toronto Stock Exchange or the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange. Both markets will remain closed over the week end and will re-open on Tuesday.

Profit Taking Halts New York Up Trend

NEW YORK, N.Y., Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Heavy week-end profit taking interrupted the resumption of the strong upward price movement on the New York stock exchange to-day but not until after some more than a score of issues had been lifted to new high ground. Early gains ranged from one to six points, with trading in enormous volume.

The market started off at a brisk pace set by large scale pool operators, supplemented by extensive public particiaption. Toward the end of the first hour waves of selling swept through the market and traders reduced their committments and took profits over the holidays.

Motor stocks again were heavily bought. Hupp and Chrysler were pushed up to new high levels, Studebaker ran up a few points on a large turnover and the sale of a block of 24,800 shares of Nash was made at 96¾, an extreme gain of six points. General Motors, which recorded a spectacular advance yesterday, fell back on realising.

National Cash Register continued to respond to reports of expanding earnings by crossing 89 to a new high record.

Wheat Deliveries Light; Prices Move Higher

CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—Smaller deliveries of wheat than had been generally looked for on the first delivery day under September contracts had a bullish effect on the market to-day. Wheat opened ¼ to ⅝ cent higher with moderate buying later helping to hold prices up. Corn, too had a firmer appearance with some short covering in September.

There were no receipts of corn on the current month contract. The opening quotations were ⅝ to ⅝ cent higher for future months with September at ⅝ to 1 1/16 advance. September and December oats were a little easier at the outset, but hardened in the early dealings.

Opening prices were:

Wheat, September 110⅞, December 116⅜. Corn, September 95; December, 75¼. Oats, September 38¼, December 40⅛.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR

Heathendom and Churchianity, both alike tell us the dead are not really dead, that man is immortal (cannot die). This heathen doctrine when preached nullifies the wonderful and glorious doctrine of the resurrection, and is merely a repetition of Satan's lie: 'Thou shalt not surely die." No small wonder that in Churchianity the doctrine of the resurrection is seldom touched. In fact those who preach Satan's lie cannot at the same time preach the resurection, for how could a man be resurrected, awakened to life, who is already alive? Jesus died and went to hell, he was there for three days, and then God resurrected him. Acts 10.40.

The preachers who say hell means a place of endless torment, must say that Jesus went to a place of endless torments, and that he is still there for they say a man once in hell, he is there forever. The preaching Satan's lie and its concomitant untruths leads into absurdity. The Scriptures state plainly that if there is no resurrection then the dead are perished To perish means to cease to exist.

OBITUARY

MRS. W. S. MacTAVISH.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, Sept. 1—Maragret Mackay MacTavish, wife of Rev. Dr. W. S. MacTavish of Belleville died August 23, after an extended illness. The deceased was a daughter of the late Rev. W. A. Mackay of Woodstock. A daughter of the manse, an atractive personality and a devout Christian, she was well qualified to become a mistress of the manse. Nearly 43 years ago she was married to Rev. W. S. MacTavish, who was then pastor of the Presbyterian church at St. George, Ont. Here as well as in the other three charges, Deseronto, Kingston and Madoc, to which her husband ministered, she was a most efficient helper In St. George she was instrumental in organizing the first auxiliary of the W.M.S. Society and the first mission band in that congregation. She was also a charter member of the first W.C.T.U. of the town.

Since going to Belleville six years ago she had lived in comparative retirement but was still actively interested in the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church and the W.C.T.U. She was a woman of fine literary taste and often used her pen in furthering reforms which lay near her heart. Many of her poems have had a wide circulation. Her latest production was 'A Prayer for Missionaries." This has been issued in leaflet form and is being sung at missionary meetings.

Besides her husband she is survived by seven children, Campbell and Jessie, Chicago; Gordon, Saskatoon; Mrs. Carl A. McCoy, Madoc; Mrs. C. Ward, Toronto; Margaret, at home, and W. L., Editor of the Tribune, Winnipeg; Eight grandchildren also survive. The eldest son, Major the Reverend M. MacTavish, B.A., B.D., M.C., died in France soon after the close of the Great War and is buried in St. Omer. Her funeral which was private, was marked by simplicity according to her expressed desire.

The pal-bearers were: James Whytock, D McKinnon and George West, representing St. Peter's church, Madoc and W. J. Campbell, C. A. Cameron and I. L. Moore, elders of St. Andrew's church, Belleville.

KING CHOSEN VICE-PRESIDENT OF LEAGUE

Corner Stone of New Church Laid

Ceremony At Mark Street

George A. Gillespie Lays Stone in Presence of Large Crowd.

ADDRESSES GIVEN.

Officials of Church and City Present—Dev. Dr. Chown Chief Speaker.

With simple but appropriate and impressive ceremony, the corner stone of the new Mark Street United Church was laid on Sunday afternoon by George A. Gillespie in the presence of a large assembly of clergy and laity. The speaker of the day was the Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown of Toronto, who at the time of the consumption of church union was the Superintendent of the Methodist Church of Canada.

The Rev. J. E. Todd, pastor of George Street United Church and chairman of the Presbytery of Peterborough, was chairman. With him on the temporary platform erected on the foundation of the church were the Rev. A. E. Thornley, pastor of Mark Street Church, the Rev. David Wren of Trinity Church, the Rev. William McDonald of Knox Church, the Rev. W. S. Edgar of Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church, president of the Peterborough Ministerial Association, His Worship Mayor Denne and Ald. Walter Stocker, the Rev. J. H. Dudgeon of St. James' Church, the Rev. B. Greatrix, the Rev. Dr. Moore, and B. F. Ackerman.

In commencing the service Mr Todd stated that the passing of any milestone is a great occasion. In the laying of the corner stone of its new church Mark Street congregation had come to a milestone in its history, and the friends present from other congregations were there to show their sympathy and interest.

The singing of "The Church's One Foundation" was led by the Mark Street choir, under the leadership of V. H. L. Boorman, assisted by members of other choirs of the city, and was followed by the sentences from the ritual, read by Mr. Todd. The Rev. David Wren then led in prayer, after which the Rev. William McDonald read the Old Testament lesson, the 132nd Psalm.

A Forward Step

His Worship Mayor Denne congratulated the congregation of Mark Street Church on the forward step in commencing the erection of the new church. It was, he said, a step in the right direction, a needed step. He thought the committee in charge had shown vision in erecting a large church and predicted that Ashburnham will double itself and an addition to the church become necessary. Again congratulating minister and people, His Worship closed with an expression of his hope that the venture will be successful.

The lesson from the New Testament, verses 9 to 29 of the 3rd Chapter of the First Epistle to the Corinthians, was read by the Rev. A. E. Thornley, after which Mr. Todd introduced Dr. Chown as a man whose name had been a household name in Methodist homes before union and had become equally known in former Presbyterian and Congregationalist homes since union.

Dr. Chown recalled that his first association with Ashburnham had been when the Rev. Herbert Symonds was Rector of St. Luke's Church, when he had come to Peterborough to give an address in the interest of the Canadian Society for Christian Unity, of which he was President, in which office Dr. Symonds succeeded him.

An Ancient Ceremony

Corner stone laying, the speaker continued, is an ancient ceremony. The Creator asked Job "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? Who laid the corner stone thereof?" He expressed the belief that the Almighty had celebrated that event and had told the host of Heaven of the work of devising the laws that governed the world and of the reign of righteousness that would come. Then the "morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy."

A cornerstone builds and binds. It builds up the foundation and binds the courses of the edifice together. That is what Jesus Christ does. He builds up the company of the faithful and binds them together. That is what the United Church tries to do with the units of Christianity. The speaker went on to recount some of the work in this line. The first motion put in the General Council was to receive a Church.

"I trust that as this church progresses to completion and is opened it will be a place where disciples of Jesus will be developed in such a way that they will be mirrors of

Five Countries Have Women Delegates As Representatives At Geneva Assembly

GENEVA, September 4 (Canadian Press). — Five countries have women delegates to the assembly of the League of Nations, which convened here yesterday. These are Australia, Great Britain, Finland, Norway, and Rumania.

While special interest is attached to the presence of the Canadian Premier, Mackenzie King, and the German Chancellor Mueller, the number of foreign ministers present is 18, which is said to constitute a record. There are several former foreign ministers here and innumerable ministers of other desciptions.

In appearance, at least, the most noticeable indivual at the Assembly is the Nawab of Palanqur, whose full name occupies two lines on the official list of the Indian delegation.

He wears a large Oriental turban and a most picturesque dress. The mixture of races, too, is noticeable; side by side with some of the most powerful figures sit a group of Ethiopians with their ebony faces and the close, curly hair.

ONTARIO'S WAGE BOARD SCHEME WELL EXPLAINED

Harry G. Fester Gives Interesting Talk to the Rotarians.

CO-OPERATION.

75 Per Cent. of Employees Give Efficient and Ready Support.

That seventy-five per cent. of the employers of Ontario co-operate efficiently and cheerfully with the Ontario Minimum Wage Board to such an extent that in many cases the minimum wage scale is exceeded was one of the many interesting bits of information supplied by Harry G. Fester of the Municipal Wage Board in a splendid address to the Peterborough Rotary Club to-day.

Mr. Fester, who was introduced by Rotarian Morley Shaver, explained that the Ontario Minimum Wage Board had been formed in 1920 and consisted of two representatives of the employers of the province, two representatives of labor and an independent chairman. In no instance in the whole history of the Board, he said, had there been a division, the members having always been able to arrive at an agreement. Operating on the principle that a woman worker was entitled to a living wage the Board arrived at its decisions in regard to wage scales after an exhaustive inquiry on its own account, followed by conferences of employers among themselves and of employees and then a joint conference of the two classes.

Referring to the attitude of employers to the Wage Board, Mr. Fester made the statement quoted above in regard to the co-operation of 75 per cent. As to the other 25 per cent the speaker divided them into three classes. First there was the shyster type who tired to keep wages down as low as possible, then there was the indifferent, inefficient type, and lastly the cases in large industries where, although the general wage scale was high there were often small groups of employees here and there who did not receive the required wage.

Mr. Fester gave some concrete cases to illustrate the working out of the minimum wage and pointed out that the type of employee who was prosecuted by the Board was the one who attempted to deceive the Board by false wage returns. As a contract to this type he gave examples of ?——? and action by large firms in bringing the wages of employees up to the standard and in paying arrears.

The speaker said that although their methods might differ the Rotary Club and the minimum wage Board had much in common inasmuch as they existed for service.

The thanks of the club were extended to Mr. Fester on motion of Rotarian Dr. M. A. Morrison.

Before the address of the day President W. R. Morris referred to the attendance of Secretary Thompson and himself at the conference of executives at Kitchener and drew attention to the by-law that was necessary to introduce the aims and objects organization into the club's constitution, a change that the speaker endorsed as thoroughly desirable.

Among the visitors to-day was Rotarian Dr. Herb. Lowes, of Pontiac, Mich.

SEVEN DIE IN HURRICANE.

MOSCOW, September 4. — Seven persons lost their lives at Sebastopol when a hurrican swept over the Crimea. In many places vineyards and gardens were flooded, cattle were drowned, while railway communication between Simferopol and Sebastopol was interrupted.

Acts Of Kindness Still Performed

One of the deeds of kindness that seem to belong to another and less speedy age was seen on Charlotte Street, west of Park, on Monday night.

Two ladies were walking westward slowly, one carrying a suitcase. Behind them was a man. None of the trio was youthful.

Arriving midway between Boswell and Pearl Avenues, the lady set down her suitcase to rest, when the man stepped up and offered his services. He walked a little ahead of the ladies, carrying the suitcase.

CARS DAMAGED IN COLLISIONS

No Person Hurt in Two Auto Crashes On Saturday Afternoon.

CARS DRIVE AWAY.

A damaged fender, bumper, and headlight resulted to a passenger car owned by Alphonse Fontaine, and driven by Fred Thirnbeck, at about 5.25 on Saturday afternoon when it crashed with one of Gillespie's milk trucks driven by Delbert Armstrong, at the corner of McDonnel and Stewart Streets. Neither of the men was injured, while the truck sustained a damaged hub cap on the left rear wheel.

From witnesses it was learned that the truck had been proceeding in a southerly direction on Stewart Street and was about to turn east into McDonnel, and collided with the car proceeding west on McDonnel Street. Both drivers were licensed chauffeurs.

Two cars collided at the corner of George and King Streets on Saturday about four o'clock, with damage to both resulting. A car coming north on George Street swung west on King, right in the path of a car going south on George. Apparently misjudging the speed of the car crossing in front of him, the driver of the south-bound vehicle made no attempt to slow up or swing out until it was too late, and consequently the left front wheel of his car struck the fender of the other one just ahead of the right rear wheel. The fender was badly dented, while the tire on the wheel which struck it blew out as a result of the impact. Both cars drove away under their own power.

HAVELOCK MAN UNDER ARREST

T. N. Sarginson Held in Connection With Theft at Creamery.

$40 STOLEN.

Discovery of the theft of approximately $40.00 from the Havelock Creamery, early on Saturday morning led to the arrest on Sunday of Thomas Neil Sarginson, of Havelock, Provincial Constable Thompson doing some quick checking up work in the matter.

James Small, manager of the creamery, was first to note the theft which had occurred at about 2.30 a.m., the thief making his entrance through a window. Sarginson, who is 22 years of age, will appear in the Police Court, Peterborough, to-morrow morning.

CO-OPERATION BRINGS SUCCESS

Peterborough, Ontario, Sept. 4, 1928.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is less than a week away. President Denne and his enthusiastic Board of Directors have been working for months in order to make the Exhibition an outstanding and unqualified success, and knowing these men as I do, I am sure they have done everything within their power to make the Exhibition this year the best that has ever been held in the history of this institution.

I feel that it is duty of every citizen to do his and her part in helping to put the Peterborough Fair in the place to which I think it rightly belongs.

This is the people's exhibition and is a real community affair. The fame of this fair is wide spread, and we are getting a valuable publicity from this source for our city which, I am afraid, too few of us appreciate. As I look back over the years and see the splendid improvements which have been made in the buildings and equipment, which I believe have placed the Peterborough Exhibition in the very first rank in the Province of Ontario, I am reminded of the hard work which the directors have put into this thing in order to have reached this enviable position.

I know, too, something of the sacrifices which have been made in time and money by these men and in all this they have been actuated by none but the highest motive.

During recent years the exhibition has been appealing to a greater constituency, and is attracting exhibits of outstanding merit.

In the matter of entertainment the Directors have endeavoured to provide only clean shows and artists of proven merit in their respective fields.

I feel that we have every reason to be proud of our Fair and that we should show our appreciation of the efforts of President Denne and his Board by getting behind them one hundred per cent. in making the 1928 Exhibition an event of outstanding record.

May I appeal to all classes of our Community—Manufacturers, merchants, farmers, and the citizens generally—to support in a wholehearted way, the effort to make the attendance 50,000?

Given fine weather, the active and sympathetic co-operation of all concerned will bring about the desired result.

JAMES DUTTON, President Peterborough Chamber of Commerce.

CANADA'S TRADE WITH SPAIN HIGHER UNDER AGREEMENTS

Most Favored Nation Treatment Granted By New Treaty.

BALANCE TO SPAIN.

Canada Buys Goods Worth $2,500,000 and Sales Amount to $1,300,000.

(Special to The Examiner)

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 4.—A new trade agreement has gone into effect between Canada and Spain which also includes the Balearic Islands, the Canary Islands and the towns in North Africa which are all under Spanish sovereignty. The tariff concessions granted by Canada to Spain are the same as those granted to Spain's lowest conventional rates.

Briefly each nation grants to the other most favored nation treatment. The Spanish tariff consists of first, second and conventional tariff lists on certain goods. The first tariff is usually three times as high as the second while the conventional rates are the lowest in force. Under the new agreement the conventional rates will apply to Canadian goods and where there is no conventional rate then the second tariff will apply. Formerly Canada granted the intermediate tariff to Spanish products in exchange for the Spanish second tariff.

Canada"s exports to Spain in 1922 were $816,977, and her imports from Spain $1,779,408. Then came Canada"s treaty negotiations with Spain. The first trade agreement was signed at Madrid in October, 1922, then revised at a convention signed in London in 1927, and now the new agreement. There was also an agreement between the United Kingdom and Spain in 1924 regulating the treatment of companies. As a result of the trade agreements Canada has sold more commodities to Spain as well as bought more. The imports for the twelve months ending July, 1928, were $2,503,708 and the exports $1,385,945.

JUGO-SLAVIA CAN NEVER TOLERATE ZOGU'S TITLE.

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Sept. 4 (Associated Press). — Jugo-Slavia will never tolerate the assumption of the title "King of the Albanians" by Ahmed Bey Zogu, Dr. Oojislav Marinkovic, Foreign Minister, told foreign diplomats here recently.

The Foreign Minister said that Albanian-Jugo Slavian relations have been much less happy since the incident at Tirana when the Dragoman (reporter) of the Jugo Slavian Legation there was arrested, the action leading to a rupture of diplomatic relations between the two countries. He said that though diplomatic relations had now been restored between the two countries the incident had left a bitterness which Albania's "latest provocation" only intensified.

It is understood a special Cabinet Council has been called to deal with the situation.

FEWER POSITIONS OPEN THIS WEEK

List of Men Wanted Growing Smaller at Present.

Each week the list at the employment bureau gets smaller and smaller. This week bricklayers are wanted and are given two months work at the wage of $1.15 an hour.

The call for farm hands is still slack, but later on in the season there will probably be an increased demand for these as the later fall work comes. Laborers and construction workers complete the lists.

It is still early for any calls to be coming in from the lumber camps.

Ishak Helmy Achieves Ambition To Swim the English Channel

FOLKESTONE, England, September 4 (Canadian Press). — Ishak Helmy, well known to habitue of the English Channel for seevral years as the rotund and rollicking Egyptian aspirant for swimming honors, on Sunday achieved his great ambition by successfully stroking through the stretch of treacherous water between Cape Griz-Nez and the English cliffs in 23 hours 40 minutes.

Helmy was buffeted by currents longer than any other successful Channel swimmer. Waterlogged and almost exhausted, the Egyptian giant barely had the strength to wade ashore at Folkestone, and reached for a bottle of champagne that friends gave him while the crowd on the beach cheered.

Sea water penetrated his goggles and his eyes were bloodshot and inflamed. Helmy was so sleepy when he finished that he had difficulty keping awake long enough to get to his hotel.

Helmy offered no reason for performing the feat, other than that he had done it as a tribute to King Fuad of Egypt.

"I haven't done it for money or reputation, but for my King," he said. "My King talked to me several times about the Channel swim, and I promised to accomplish it for him."

Helmy has made many unsuccessful attempts to conquer the Channel in the past few years. He swam part of the way with other swimmers who kept on to reach the opposite shore.

Montreal Man Surrenders To Police, Wanted For Fatal Stabbing Of Clerk

MONTREAL, Que., September 4 (Canadian Press). — Louis Beaule, 36, walked into the office of Governor Napoleon Sequin, of the Montreal Jail, Bordeaux, late on Saturday night, and surrendered himself. He had been wanted for the fatal stabbing of Alfred Dombrowski, butcher's clerk, on Friday night.

"I am Louis Beaule, the man wanted in connection with the killing of Alfred Dombrowski. I have come to give myself up," was Beaule's announcement to the governor. Later, in a statement to detectives, he said that he had not known that Dombrowski was dead until he had secured a morning paper while walking to Bordeaux in search of a job. Dombrowski was killed, he stated, during a quarrel which followed a drinking bout. He (Beaule) held a knife in his hand, and Dombrowski struck him in the mouth and ran into the knife, Beaule declared. The inquest into Dombrowski's death will open on Tuesday morning.

Corner Cutting Hazard Growing

A new form of "cutting the corner" has arisen in Peterborough to menace pedestrians and motorists.

At 9.25 last night a car proceeding south on Aylmer Street and turning west on Charlotte Street cut across the service station at the north-west corner. It ran over the Aylmer Street sidewalk and over the Charlotte Street sidewalk.

By doing this the motorist avoided the "Stop" sign and cut off a few feet of running distance. He halted behind the C. N. R. Station.

FRENCH AIRMEN TO CROSS OCEAN

Whether They Will Go To New York or South America Is Not Known.

THREE MEN IN PLANE.

CASABLANCA, Morocco, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—The Yellow Canary Bird plane which hopped off with Jean Assolant, Rene Lefevre and Armont Lotti from Le Bourget Field, near Paris, th is morning, landed here at 4.40 p.m. to-day.

LE BOURGET, France, Sept. 4. — (Canadian Press.)—Their destination shrouded in mystery, three Frenchmen sped toward south-west to-day in a bright yellow monoplane, "Canary Bird," on a trans-Atlantic flight. Whether their destination was New York or America remained to be seen.

After a succession of postponements and false starts due to the more or less volatile temperaments of her pilots, Flying Sergeants Jean Assolant and Rene Lefevre, of the French army, hopped off this morning. Armand Lotti, their backer, slipped into the plane at the last minute and accompanied them.

Commandant Weiss, the airmen's superior officer, said they were going to the Azores and if the weather was favorable they would head for Halifax.

Chief Pilot Paillard, of the Dernard Company which built the plane, announced after the take-off that the flyers, because of adverse winds over the Atlantic, were going over the course of 5,600 miles to Rio Janiero. They would go, he said, by way of Dakar, Senegal and Pernambucao, Brazil, in an attempt to carry off the prize offered for the first non-stop flight from Paris to Rio Janiero.

New York Notified.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.— The publicity firm of the Gillespie and Kusterer received a cable from their Paris representative to-day announcing that the French plane Canary Bird was headed for Mitchell Field, Long Island, and expected to make a non-stop flight in about 40 hours. Despatches from Le Bourget had indicated that the plane might go either to New York or South America.

After an address of welcome by L. V. Redman, Chairman of the American division of the international organization, the chemists were to go for a sight-seeing tour.

SEES CANADA AS CENTRE OF EMPIRE SOON

British Visitor Expects Her To Have Much Larger Population.

DELEGATES ON TOUR.

Resources of Ontario Amaze Men From Overseas—Visiting North To-day.

TORONTO, September 4 (Special to The Examiner). — A brilliant future was predicted for Canada by Sir John Marriott, M.P. for Oxford, speaking on Saturday night at Hart House at the dinner for the British Empire Parliamentary party tendered by the Ontario Government. Sir John looked forward to the time when Canada would number hundred of millions of people, and declared this country might well become "the political as well as the geographical centre of the Empire."

The speaker referred to remarks by Premier Ferguson that "Canada did not expect to receive the cream of England's population," and said he did not care a jot where the cream of the British people settle so long as the receptacles are of British make."

"It is my absolute conviction there does not exist on the earth any political organization comparable to the British Empire as the instrument for the promotion of goodwill amongst men and for the preservation of the peace of the world," he continued.

Leaving Toronto yesterday after concluding their Toronto visit, the delegates to the third assembly of the British Parliamentary Association have begun the first leg of their journey from Toronto to the Pacific Coast. T o-day's program will include a visit to the Hollinger Mine and the Abitibi paper plant at Iroquois Falls, after which the special train will proceed to Winnipeg.

Praise for Ontario.

On all sides is heard praise of Eastern Ontario and the visit to Toronto. Questions are being asked as to the resources, extent and present and future lines of development. "We have come to study and to learn and to try to catch some of the spirit of Canada," said Sir John Marriott, "and the manner in which we have been entertained has shown us one very delightful side of life here. We have been amazed at the fertility of the soil and the quality of the agricultural wealth."

Acting for the province as host to the delegation is the Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, who is occupying the Premier's private car, "The Whitney."

Hon. Mr. Finlayson was asked by a reporter at North Bay as to the feeling of the delegates regarding the possibilities of Ontario as an outlet for British capital. "There seems to be no doubt in the minds of the delegates that the mineral resources of Northern Ontario indicate a favorable field for British investments. In fact, they suggest the extension of the development of mineral resources, which we believe to be at present in the initial stage only, will continue to attract increasing amounts of British capital," he said.

Bus Has Whistle Instead Of Horn

Motorists travelling up the Highway last night received a sudden surprise when they heard a train whistle, knowing that they were miles away from any crossing. There was no need to stop, look, and listen, as there were no tracks for miles, but at intervals the whistle was heard, growing louder. Finally the Peterborough-Port Hope bus passed with a roar, and the mystery was solved. Instead of a horn as a signal, it was equipped with a whistle that sounded like a train whistle.

Premier Is Given High Honor

First Canadian Premier To Attend Session Given 33 Votes in Balloting.

EXPRESSES VIEWS.

Has Taken Active Part in the Deliberations of Assembly.

GENEVA, Sept. 4 (By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Correspondent). —Canada was signally honored yesterday by the delegates to the ninth assembly of the League of Nations, when Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Premier of the Dominion, was elected a vice-president.

Premier King, the first Canadian Premier to attend a session of the League Assembly, received 33 votes. Twenty-two votes were necessary to elect him.

The Canadian Premier, who has taken an active part in the deliberations of the Assembly, expressed some views on the work of the Assembly to the Canadian Press correspondent during a walk from the Reformation Hall to his hotel during an hour and a half suspension of the meeting yesterday.

Exhausting Questions.

"It seems to me," he said, "that the League of Nations is rapidly exhausting the questions arising from the war. The time will soon come when most of these questions will be settled one way or another. Those remaining possibly can be left to the League Secretariat or to a special call of the Council or Assembly. I have particularly enjoyed the work of the Council, the members of which are all men of outstanding talent and ability. It has been a great opportunity to know them and get their viewpoint so that when world questions arise their attitude will be understood."

Premier King turned to a discussion of the re-arranged hall in which the sessions of the Assembly are held.

"There is much discomfort," he said, "in the present assembly hall owing to lack of fresh air."

Then with a sweep of his hand to indicate the vista before him, he exclaimed: "Geneva is a beautiful city. So much has been done to preserve the embankments, plant trees and prevent encroachments of factories, mills and industry upon beautiful sites."

Premier King proceeded to comment upon work being done to beautify Ottawa.

"Ottawa, owing to its natural situation, will be a great city some day," he said. "I feel we are undoing enough now to make our descendants bless us. We are doing all we can and would like to do more if it were possible."

Premier King dined with Lord Cushendun last night, and later attended a reception given by Dr. W. A. Riddell, Canada's permanent representative at Geneva. Other Canadian delegates were present at the reception.

RANGERS SPEND DAY AT RANGES

Musketry Occupies Militia Men For Many Hours On Holiday.

AT VARIOUS DISTANCES.

The rattle and roar of musketry resounded over the rifle ranges on Saturday from 9.30 a.m. to 4.00 p.m., as the Peterborough Rangers fired their musketry course. Officers and men shared in the firing, with good scores and bad scores being turned in at every range.

The program included grouping at 100 yards, application, snap shooting, and rapid fire at 200 yards, and application at 500 yards. At this latter range the Lewis guns were also used.

Lt.-Colonel W. Gordon Hall, V.D., was in command, with Lieut. G. R. Melton, acting as range officer, and Lieuts. Cecil Newman and James Parsons in charge of the butts.

R. Q. M. S., R. H. Muir, was in charge of the dinner, for which Hooper's catered and served up heaping platefuls of "sausage and mashed" at noon, with plenty left over for second helpings for hungry troops. Coffee and apple pie served to top off the repast, which disappeared quickly before the onslaught of the men.

Deloro Smelting Plant Damaged by Fire

Companys Loss Is Heavy

Oil Line Breaking At One of the Furnaces Believed Cause.

SPECTACULAR BLAZE.

Breaking of Sprinkler Main Allows Flames to Get Beyond Control.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Sept. 4.—Fire broke out at 10:30 on Sunday evening at the Cobalt plant of the the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, destroying the lower end of the company's plant and its locomotive. An oil line breaking at one of the furnaces is believed to have been the cause of the fire. The breaking of a springler main allowed the flames to get beyond control, it being midnight before they were mastered.

The blaze was most spectacular and could be seen for miles. Fortunately no workmen were injured. The amount of the loss is not yet known but it will be considerable and rebuilding of this section of the plant will likely take several weeks.

BIG SPEED BOAT COMES UP CANAL

Tortoise of Brockville Can Carry Eleven Persons at 60 Mile Speed.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 4.—Last night there was a small fortune in mahogany, nickle and steel moored to the Campbellford west side dock. During the season there have been many luxurious vessels moored here, but few, if any, represented such a large amount of money within so small a space. The boat is the "Tortoise" owned by George T. Fulford of Brockville, Ont., and is of the class generally known as a family speed boat. It is capable of doing practically sixty miles per hour and has accommodations for eleven passengers. The hull is thirty-eight feet long and has a beam of seven and one half feet. It is of mahogany throughout. Its draught is about forty inches. The fittings are of nickle.

The power plant is of the same make as the one which carried Lindbergh across the Atlantic in his famous solo flight. It is a Wright Typhoon, six hundred and fifty horsepower. It is capable of turning up twenty-two hundred and fifty revolutions per minute and swings a 22-38 propellor. The engine is under the deck amidships. The forward cabin seats nine persons while the rear cockpit is a small affair capable of holding only two. The controls are in the forward cabin.

It is safe to say that this boat is the fastest thing that has passed through Campbellford via the water route this season. On its trial trips it registered fifty eight miles an hour, but the present drivers claim that it is capable of going faster now. It did not enter the races at Alexandria Bay because of an accident while en route there. At the present time it is on its way to Orillia for minor adjustments and is piloted by two expert marine motor mechanics. Leaving Brockville on the St. Lawrence at five-thirty yesterday morning, the Tortoise arrived in Trenton at a quarter to ten. Delayed at the numerous locks and by the slow speed necessary in the canal, it did not arrive here till about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. The drivers had expected to get as far as Hastings before darkness set in.

The Tortoise is a product of Ditchburg Boats, Limited of Gravenhurst, Ont. It was originally designed to burn a mixture of forty per cent. gasoline and sixty per cent. benzine, but this mixture is not always readily available and it was decided to make the necessary adjustments to the motor in order that it might run on straight gasoline. This is given as the reason for the present trip up the Trent Canal to Orillia. It will leave Campbellford early in the morning in an attempt to make up for unexpected delays.

SHOWER GIVEN HAPPY COUPLE

Frances Terrill and Lloyd Dorland Receive Many Gifts.

AT WOOLER CHURCH.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WOOLER, Sept. 4. — The church parlors were decorated with white streamers and cut flowers on Wednesday evening in honor of Frances Terrill and Lloyd Darland, who were married on Saturday. A hundred guests gathered and were entertained by vocal duets by Douglas Steinburg and Edith Austin, recitations by Lulu McColl, which were especially appropriate and much enjoyed by all present, and a vocal solo, "Ramona," by Laura Vasburg.

Then the chairman, Rev. H. B. Neal, in his usual witty manner, invited the happy couple to the front where two special chairs were awaiting them. Mrs. Francis Stacey presented the many handsome and beautiful gifts to the bride-to-be, Miss Stella Nelson placing them on a table in order. Among the gifts was an Irish linen tablecloth, presented by the Sunday School class, of which Miss Terrill was a faithful member. A Coleman gasoline lamp was presented by a number of the young married couples.

The teacher of the Sunday School class, Mrs. J. J. McColl, was called upon to speak on behalf of the class of the faithfulness of their member who was about to leave them. Then Mrs. S. L. Terrill, teacher of the young married women's class, in a few chosen words extended an invitation to Miss Terrill to link up with them in their "Altruist" class. C. F. Wessels, superintendent of the school, said that after all the classes were all one in the work of the Sunday School, and he was proud to have two young people with such sterling qualities remain in the school.

F. A. Dorland, father of the groom, in a few words thanked the company for their kindness in being there on this occasion.

Lunch was served and a social time was enjoyed.

Buggy Driver Dies As Result Of Crash

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—William Houlahan, 65-year-old farmer of Jockvale, near here, died in a local hospital Saturday night of injuries received when hurled from his buggy when it was struck by a motor car a few hours earlier.

The automobile driver, Hartley Robbins, of Newark, N.J., is held on a charge of manslaughter. He told police Houlahan was not carrying a light on his buggy and that another car approaching in the opposite direction had temporarily blinded him.

It has not been established whether Houlahan was fatally injured in the fall or struck by another motor car which Robbins declares passed over the wreckage of the buggy and sped on.

LIQUOR QUESTION DISCUSSED BY DELEGATES AT GENEVA

Would Conduct Investigation Aimed at Checking Abuse of Alcohol.

LENGTHY DEBATE.

Send Proposal To Assembly Committee Dealing With Social Problems.

GENEVA, Sept. 4.—(A. P.)— The liquor question was thrust into the opening of the ninth assembly of the League of Nations yesterday and in the discussion which followed created a flurry of dissension between delegates from the wine producing countries of southern Europe and the Nordic lands of Finland and Sweden.

The issue was brought to the fore with a proposal by Finland, Sweden and Poland that the League undertake an investigation aimed at checking the abuse of alcohol The veteran Hungarian statesman, Count Albert Apponi, immediately moved that the proposal be sent to the assembly committee which deals with social problems.

His hope was that thereby he would have alcoholism attacked as a social evil whereas if left to the committee on technical questions it would be treated merely from the standpoint of producers and traders.

General Debate.

A general debate followed in which the lines between the dry countries and their wet neighbors were made fairly distinct. Most prominent among the anti-liquor advocates was H. J. Procope, Foreign Minister ow Finland and president of the League council who told the assembly that Finland was striving for an international convention on the subject as a means of fighting smuggling and cross-border bootlegging of intoxicants.

The plea of a delegation of Swedish women which recently visited Geneva and told League officials that its members wanted to obtain prohibition in Sweden on strong alcoholic drinks also entered the debate.

The assembly's action was in the nature of a compromise the resolution being referred to the technical questions committee with instructions that it would always consult the social body.

Crowds, in which women, many of them most fashionably dressed, predominated, attended the opening session of the assembly and heard the convening address of M. Procope, in whic hthe Kellogg-Briand treaty was landed as an instrument of world peace.

The League council President's speech was followed by organization routine in which Herluf Wahl, Danish minister at Berlin was elected president. Premeier W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada, was elected a vice-president.

Presidents of the six commissions of the assembly were appointed as follows: First, continuation and law, Vittori Scialoja of Italy; technical questions, G. Ntta, Switzerland; disarmament, Baron Carton de Wiart, Belgium; budget and administration, Vasconcellos, Portugal; social questions and opium, white slavery, Jose Matos, Guatemela; political, Marin Kovic, Jugo Slavia

HAY STACK BURNS.

Blaze On Sam Adams' Farm Attracts Many Persons.

(Examiner Correspondence)

TRENT RIVER, September 4.—The sky was brightly illuminated towards the south-west about ten p.m. on Sunday. Dozens of persons drove to the scene, thinking a barn was on fire in that neighborhood, but on arriving there found it to be a large stack of hay burning in a field on the farm owned by Sam Adams, directly across the road from the barns belonging to Ernest Hawley. The cause of the blaze is unknown.

TOWNSHIP FIRES THREE POLICEMEN

Advertises For Chief and Assistant—Election Promises Blamed.

WELLAND, Ont., Sept. 4.—(Special).—Bringing to a climax the antagonism shown by certain members of the Council towards the police department, Crowland Township Council Friday night dispensed with the services of Chief Harry Jones and Officers James Dowd and T. F. Purcifer, the three officers who constitute the force being given notice that their services will not be required after November 1.

A resolution firing the whole department and authorizing the clerk to advertise for a chief and one policeman at salaries each of $125 a month, the chief to have the free use of an apartment above the Crowland police station, was sponsored by First Deputy Reeve R. H. Gatfield and Councillor George Vasilovich. It was opposed by Second Deputy Reeve Fred. J. Kilgour, who angrily demanded, "For what reason?"

Although the excuse put forth for the dismissing of the entire police department is that three men are more than are needed, those said to be in the inside of things declare that the removal of the chief and his two officers is nothing more than the fulfillment of a pre-election promise.

PARASITE CURES SHOWN FARMERS

Many Attend Demonstration at Scott's Corners on Friday.

Likely to have a far-reaching effect in the improvement of stock raised in this district, the sheep parasite demonstration, held at the farm of Walter Bowles, near Scott's Corners, on Friday afternoon, attracted and held the interest of some twenty-five sheep owners. The demonstration, arranged by Peterborough Agricultural Representative J. B. Nelson and conducted by J. G. Lefebvre of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, occupied the greater part of the afternoon, and the fact that so many farmers turned out despite the fact that it was a good day for working on the harvest, which is not yet completed, was another indication of the interest being taken in such demonstrations and schools of instruction being carried on by Mr. Lefebvre, his assistant, Mr. McGreer, and Mr. Nelson in this district.

The demonstration began and, in fact, mostly consisted of a post mortem on a freshly killed sheep, during which internal parasites were located and brought to the farmers' attention by Mr. Lefebvre, who then went on to describe the life history and methods of control of several internal parasites, including tape worm, stomach worm, nodular worm and lung worm. He also discussed methods of coping with the internal parasite problem as applied to swine.

There followed a practical demonstration in the dosing of sheep with two different substances which help to control these internal parasites. Bulletins were issued by Mr. Nelson dealing with this class of work, and to those who were not present it may be of interest to know that these bulletins are available at the Department of Agriculture office, George street, Peterborough.

At the close of the demonstration, and in summing up his work of the afternoon, Mr. Lefebvre pointed out that there is a need for greater precautions as the loss due to internal parasites in sheep and swine is tremendous, especially in Eastern Ontario.

The whole purpose of advertising is to show you ways in which you can live better, more comfortably and more happily. Read the advertisements to find out how you may own many things you have always felt were beyond your means.

In the course of his morning sermon, the Rev. Mr. Cochrane declared he came back with selfish motives as "I wanted, once again, to catch the atmosphere of my boyhood days." Large congregations at both services greeted Bobby Cochrane, as he is known by many friends here.

OFFICIAL KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

French Minister of Commerce and Four Others Lose Lives in Tragedy.

BODIES CREMATED.

PARIS, September 3. — Canadian Press. — Maurice Bokanowski, the French Minister of Commerce and Aviation, crashed to death, and his body was cremated in an aeroplane accident near Toulon, yesterday morning. Four others, Pilot Gabril Hanin, mechanic Jean Visdal, wireless operator, Henry Williams, and General Secretary of the Aeroplane Company, Edouard Lefranc, also perished.

Bokanowski spent the previous night at the country home of Premier Poincare at Campigny where he attended an informal meeting of the Cabinet Sunday celebrating the Premier's 68th birthday, and also the second anniversary of the formation of the national ion cabinet. In the morning the minister motored to the aviation 25 miles away, and took his place in a plane especially ordered for him at Le Bourget.

The machine, a Spad biplane with an air-cooled motor of 380 horsepower, took off laboriously with its motor coughing but rapidly gained altitude. It was exactly 9.15 when Captain Houdert, who was escorting the Minister's ship in a military plane, noted the Spad suddenly veer to the right when about 1500 feet aloft and go into a nosedive.

The plane descended rapidly to the ground and burst into flames.

In Air Five Minutes.

The machine which had been in the air barely five minutes, carried 700 litres of gasoline and was headed for Clermont-Ferrard where Bokanowski was to attend an aviation festival organized by Gilbert Sardier, one of France's distinguished war aces. Two hours were required to extricate the bodies from the wreckage and Bokanowski was identified only by a platinum watch which he was known to carry.

Premier Poincare, upon hearing news of the disaster, immediately proceeded by motor to Toul. It is expected that he will decree that the Minister died "in the performance of Ministerial duty." Minister of the Interior Albert Sarraut motored to Campigny and conveyed the sad news to Mme. Bokanowski just as she was approaching the ninth green in a morning round of golf. The Minister said that she bore up bravely.

The death of Bokanowski robs France of an aviation minister who was not afraid to fly. Just previous to boarding the plane, while chatting with General du Perray and Captain Houdert, the minister said in a joking manner, "Newspapers insinuate that I never fly, that I take all possible precautions even when I approach a plane standing still. You see," he said, as he jumped into the cabin of the plane, "an airplane trip has no terrors for me." Five minutes later Bokanowski was dead.

Bokanowsgi was born in Le Havre on August 31, 1879. He celebrated his 49th birthday only last Friday. French aviation experts hope that yesterday's catastrophe will terminate what they call the "Black Series" in French aviation, beginning with Nungesser and Coli, through Guilbaud and Amundsen, and culminating in the death of the Air Minister and his companions yesterday.

TROOPS RETURN FROM TRAINING

Campbellford Militia Men Appear To Have Throved On Camp Life.

ENJOYED OUTING.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 4.—Open air and plenty of it worked wonders with the complexions of the local company of the Northumberland regiment. They had every appearance of seasoned veterans when they stepped off the train shortly before two o'clock Saturday afternoon. The parade formed on the station platform and the regimental band headed the line of march along Simpson street to Sebastapol and the Armories on Tice street.

The boys report an enjoyable outing and appear to have fared well on the military training and camp life. They report exceptionally good weather with very little rain. Sunday afternoon, a holiday in military camps, there was a boat trip down the St. Lawrence. This was perhaps the high light of the social side of the camp.

STRAW IS BURNED SOUTH OF BEWDLEY

Vivid Glare Attracts Many Motorists From Nearby Highway.

The burning of a straw stack on a side road just south of Bewdley last night gave the people in the vicinity a thrill and those using the highway a belief that some conflagration was in progress destroying some farmer's barn that contained the season's crop.

A vivid glare behind the hill which gave way to a sudden outburst of fire shooting tongues of flame high into the dark sky made it a very spectacular sight as the straw stack burned rapidly and safely in the middle of the field.

The blaze attracted many of the people who were passing a short distance west on the highway and who turned, some to be disappointed that it was not serious, and others truly thankful that there was no loss suffered

IN POLICE COURT

Joseph Long made his first appearance in police court this morning pleading guilty to a charge of driving a motor vehicle on George street while intoxicated. Long had crashed into the gates at the C.P.R. tracks on Sunday morning last.

Seven days in the common jail was the sentence imposed.

Backed by a police record of 25 appearances in court resulting in convictions that had represented a total imprisonment of over four years from 1916 to 1926, Robert Mouck appeared before the magistrate for loitering.

"One month in jail" declared the Magistrate.

Some time ago George Benjamin Clapper, of Havelock, appeared in police court at that place charged with negligence or reckless driving when his motor car had struck and injured John Gibbs resulting in the latter's confinement in a local hospital.

This morning Magistrate O. A. Langley reviewed the case before giving judgement. He had failed to find sufficient evidence to substantiate the case against Clapper, and he therefore dismissed it without costs.

A PRACTICAL DUPLEX HOUSE

Alcide Chausse, Architect

Here is a duplex house which, while complying with the financial and economic conditions which usually control the erection of this type of building, has through good proportion and detail, acquired a definite character of real merit. A refined simplicity has been the keynote throughout the design.

Two suites of generous size are provided, each having two main bedrooms. A pair of rooms designated for servants is located at the rear, those on the ground floor being lighted by a high window over the garage roof.

Let us finish studying this suite. Notice how the rear hall forms the nucleus of the service wing of the house, similar to the position occupied by the large entry hall to the main front block. The bathroom is located in its logical position, between the two sections, and also where plumbing connections can be most economically made—next to the kitchen.

A feature which immediately appeals to the average person when renting or buying a home is a fireplace. Recognizing this they have been provided in both the living room and the dining room. That in the former is electric, while the dining room has the true open type.

A practical feature of the plan is its lot requirements. Notice that absolutely no windows are located in the left side wall, thereby permitting its erection right on the lot line, or, if built semi-detached, as a party wall. With the garages as shown a forty foot lot is necessary, but this could be still further restricted where some other provision is made for automobiles. In such a case it would only be necessary to provide a lot of sufficiently greater width than the thirty feet of the main block to ensure light at the two side bedroom windows.

The refined note set in the design is repeated in the color scheme—the white painted woodwork combining softly and harmoniously with the buff brick walls.

About 55,720 cubic feet are contained in this house, which with hot water heating, cost approximately $18,000.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with Home Building Information Service, 345 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ontario, who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention design number 140.

CONVENIENCE OUTLETS FROM THE PLUMBER

Let the plumber now be heard. The electric wiring people have had their say about conveniences in the home. They have made it clear that the small home not properly wired for convenience outlets is not a finished job. But the plumber supplies convenience outlets too, so do others. Let us hear from them all.

Considered broadly, plumbing consists of three parts. One is the system of piping that brings water into the house. Another is the piping that takes it out. The third is made up of fixtures. A home may have the bare bones of all this, rigorously simple, economical, but it may be made to function much more conveniently if some additional fittings and equipment are provided.

The kitchen sink offers opportunities for the plumber to exercise his art, especially with respect to the faucet. If one must get along with the bare necessities the separate hot and cold water faucets supply these. But the combination faucet is a time saver, a "convenience outlet." With this device the temperature of the water may be adjusted. There is a swinging nozzle, an attachment for a bit of hose with a spray head. Lavatories also may be equipped with combination faucets.

Another convenience outlet of the lavatory is the "pop-up" waste. In place of the ordinary rubber stopper attached to a chain there is a knob on the top of the lavatory that can be raised or lowered to regulate waste of water. This costs a little extra, brings added convenience.

The hot water system may be extended through many stages from bare necessities to outright luxuries with degrees of cost and convenience all along the line. For example, the simplest water heater is a loop that extends into the house heater, from which the hot water supply is derived in the winter time. An auxiliary gas coil does the work when the furnace is not going, but this gas coil may be a frugal device that is lighted from time to time only when required, or it may be one that operates automatically. Some of these operate when the hot water faucet is opened. Others are controlled by a thermostat so that there is always an abundant supply of tempered water.—Copyright 1927. BETHANY, Sept. 4. — Rev. James McMullen, who has spent the month of August with his brothers and sisters in the village, and who supplied for Rev. A. Poulters in the various pulpits in the circuit, returned to his home in Belleville on Friday.

Miss Lily Weatherilt is visiting for a time with her sister in Bowmanville.

Miss Dorothy Buller, who has spent the summer with her grandmother, Mrs. Charles Reynolds, returned home on Thursday.

Miss Doris Driver is visiting with Toronto friends for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Sid. Armstrong motored to Toronto on Thursday to attend the Exhibition.

Little Miss Jeanne Locke of Toronto is visiting with Mrs. Roy Monk.

Misses Hannah and Emma Staples returned to Toronto on Saturday morning after spending the summer in the village with their mother, Mrs. John Staples.

Nothing unusual about this of course!

"Oh, hello, Jack! When did you come to town?"

Burns had answered the telephone and had recognised the cheery voice of an old friend.

But Jack had not come to town—he was speaking from his house in the village three hundred miles away. He had asked "Long Distance" for the telephone of his friend in the city, giving her the number, and she had connected him at once while he remained at the telephone.

Nothing extraordinary about this, of course. Speedy long distance service is now all but universal. In the great majority of cases, connection is made while you remain at the telephone.

To assure prompt service, it is always helpful to give the distant number to the operator in placing your call.

We shall gladly look up for you the telephone numbers of distant people you frequently call.

AIRPLANE ACCIDENTS.

The spectacular horror of airplane fatalities perhaps unduly magnifies the hazards of aviation, while little or nothing is said of the great number of daily routine flights accomplished in safety along airways that are being so rapidly extended and multiplied. But the tragedies do seem alarmingly numerous to groundlings.

Some of them appear almost inevitable, as if the victims had been predestined to swift and violent ends in an element they had long dominated. Of such was the loss of Amunsden and his French aviator Guilbaud, of the celebrated Drouhin who recently met death in France, to mention several of the air tragedies that seemed fated.

The latest was the crash on Sunday of Maurice Bokanowski, French Minister of Commerce and Aviation, and his four companions. Bokanowski prided himself upon being a Minister of Aviation who himself was a flier to the extent that he had confidence in the airplane and made practical use of it.

As he stepped into the cabin of the plane on Sunday he said: "You see, an airplane trip has no terrors for me." Five minutes later his charred body was identified only by his platinum watch in the wreckage of the plane that also cremated his four companions. It had plunged from a height of 1,500 feet.

An effect of such a disaster is to accentuate man's natural fear of falling. Dr. John B. Watson asserts that a child is born with only two instinctive fears, the one being the fear of a loud noise and the other the fear of falling. And it is this latter terror, which every person understands, that will long delay the development of our air-mindedness.

AN AFFAIR OF FARMERS.

Grain pool farmers should resolve that they will find out for themselves the secrets of the gigantic brokerage business for which they supply the raw materials. The whole structure of this business, from the elevator man who buys the grain in the first place to the foreign broker who buys it for ultimate distribution, is based on the farmer's labor, investment and production.

Therefore, the farmer indirectly pays for the experience of the broker and commission man. And since the farmer is in any event the one who pays, why shouldn't he pay directly through his pool or growers' association?

If a company manufactures a million pairs of shoes it also markets them. Some of them may be distributed through wholesale channels, but anybody observing the trends of business to-day readily perceives that the wholesale forces have been grievously decimated and that their position is a most uncomfortable one.

Grain prices have slumped heavily in the world market at a time when the Canadian Grain Pool has been extending its scope, and some interests infer for their own benefit, although they profess to be anxious about the farmer's welfare, that the operations of the pool were responsible for the price decline this summer. But the fat should go with the lean. The year's prices should be averaged, and the effectiveness of the pool should not be decided upon any month's range of sales and prices. Let the farmer stand back from the picture and take the long view.

At any rate one thing is certain: the grain growers are in business for themselves, and they have thus far demonstrated an aptitude for marketing that merits the allegiance of the whole farm industry. The grain commission men have been in business a long time for the commission men, in snug offices high up in Board of Trade and other towering buildings in the big cities. One of the incidentals they have learned is the power of propaganda, in which farmers have been mere dabblers, if indeed they really understand its potentialities. And in that direction the average farmer should believe this essential, that the press is interested in him and his industry. He can get his opinions published just as readily as any other person, and if he doesn't it is his own fault. There is no denying that partisan political newspapers have opposed rural political endeavors, but apart from politics most newspapers have a friendly ear for rural ideas and complaints.

To revert to the pool activities, it should be evident to every farmer that the pool is not a guarantee of a sustained level of high prices. Its promoters promise the farmer-member the best price the market offers. Of course, if some farmers believe that they should be nothing more than producers, that the buying and marketing should be left to the grain brokers, that a grain pool cannot engage experts just as the Canadian National Railway does, they have a perfect right to stand aloof from the association and let the brokers carry on as of old.

MUNICIPAL INCOME TAX.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of the Ontario Municipal Association's discussions of municipal income tax is the fact that assessors and assessment commissioners are quoted as opposing the move to abolish this form of levy or to make its imposition optional with each municipality. Assessment commissioners are supposed to be the servants or employes of the municipalities. Formation of policy in respect of tax collection and other matters is supposed to be the duty of the men elected by the people for this work—the mayor and councillors. In the Ontario Municipal Association, however, the employes rather than the employers appear to occupy the dominating position.

The Windsor delegation to the Toronto meeting has put up a stiff fight against the compulsory feature of this tax, and strong support for its contentions came from several quarters. For instance, Mr. C. L. Burton, president of the Toronto Board of Trade, vigorously labelled the income tax law as "vicious" and "distinctly class legislation." Certainly it is unfair and unjust that a man should be taxed twice on the same income—once by the Federal authority and again by his municipality. And the thing becomes even more unfair when one appreciates that only a fraction of those eligible to pay civic income tax, do so. It is a form of levy that can never be equitably collected. The salaried man is hard hit; others can evade it easily if they so desire. Also, some municipalities use the tax and others do not.

The only fair way out of the situation is for the law to be amended in such a way that collection of this tax will be optional with each municipality. At present there is no such option, but a great many municipalities simply overlook the regulations and do not collect the tax. If a municipality really desired to continue this doubtful source of revenue it could be permitted to do so. Each municipality not of this opinion, however, should at least be given the legal right to do as it sees fit and as the opinion of its electors dictates. It is an amazing situation when municipalities find themselves bound to collect a tax that they have no desire to collect and from which the authority making the collection rules receives no benefit.—Border Cities Star.

MOCK MODESTY.

"As a man thinketh, so is he." And the same thing is equally applicable to women. The other day, in common with all up-to-date newspapers, the Recorder and Times published a "cut" of Miss Ethel Catherwood, of Saskatchewan, in action in setting a world's record for the high jump in the Olympic Games at Amsterdam. She is a sample of Canadian vivacity and beauty, and all ought to be proud of her and her achievement.

However, the world is funny in spots and, as a proof of this, here is an unsigned letter received at this office about this pictorial description of this wonderful girl's wonderful victory:

"Brockville, Aug. 3, 1928.

"Dear Mr. Graham:

"Enclosed find picture in last evening's paper. I think it a disgrace to your paper and a sin to have the young people feast their eyes on such obsene pictures, and I hope you, as head of the paper, will use your influence to ban such pictures in future as decent people abhor such."

The clean-minded members of the Recorder and Times staff never dreamed of any person perceiving evil in this reproduction. Evil be to him who evil thinks, but to the pure all things are pure. Of course, Ethel has real bone, muscle and flesh legs, for if they were wooden she couldn't be Canada's champion jumper. True, she doesn't wear a street-cleaning skirt in action for two reasons: it is all out-of-date, and she could never clear a bar more than five feet from the ground hampered by a train.

Grouchers there be, who have a nose for scandal and eyes for indecency, who insist on being the moral and social shock-absorbers of all creation. The short skirt is severely criticized, bobbed hair is knocked, and the critics insist that the young people of to-day are on the straight road to perdition.

There is real modesty, and the mock variety. The latter calls them "limbs," while the former says "legs," which they are. The Recorder and Times firmly believes that mock modesty on behalf of mothers has allowed young women to go out into life's struggle uninformed and unequipped, with serious consequences. Fathers, in the belief that their sons were innocent kiddies, have thrust them into the world's activities unwarned and unprepared, all on account of a false modesty that prevented plain speaking and interchange of confidences.

Mothers whose daughters are their pals and fathers whose sons are their chums are not strong on this imitation modesty, but rather believers in the real thing, which abhors deception and refuse to see impurity where it does not exist.—Brockville Record and Times.

STARVATION—AND CHRISTIANITY.

It is more than a mere axiom that one-half of the world does not know how the other half lives. Indeed we might put it better by saying that one-half of the world does not know how the other half dies.

If you have any doubt of this, consider the cable dispatch from Shanghai, China, telling of the fact that 1,500,000 people in a district thirty miles wide and one hundred miles long on the border of South Chihli and Western Shantung in China are facing death from starvation. Already 150,000 persons are said to have died from malnutrition; 300,000 are "slowly starving" and the remainder are faced with certain death unless relief comes to them before their present scanty supply of food is exhausted. Drought and grasshoppers have ruined the crops in the famine district and the only compensation for this is that the grasshoppers that have done the damage now form part of the diet of thousands of striken people. One village, we are told by the secretary of the New York China Famine Fund Committee had nothing but fried grasshoppers for food in their houses, while in other villages cakes made from bark, cotton, chaff and grass were the only means of support of life.

It is difficult in this age to conceive that such shocking conditions can anywhere exist and we have an idea that in the years to come people who read of this tragedy will wonder how it came to pass that with great rich countries everywhere about them so relatively little help was extended to these starving people to save them from such shocking death. To be sure, we are doing something in sending missionaries to China to save the souls of these people, and perhaps we can solace ourselves with this fact. Just the same, however, some people will feel that a more practical form of salvation would be to save the bodies of the unfortunates and then, saving these, undertake to work later upon their souls. But, of course, people who think in this wise are wrong, especially so if by chance they should hold to the ridiculous view that religion is really a matter of deeds than of creeds and beliefs and forms of worship!

But isn't it an amazing condition of affairs that, with great riches and plenty in so many lands, more than a million people should in this enlightened age be threatened with death and starvation but a stone's throw away from us. There is something still decidedly wrong with humanity. The scales need to be better and more evenly balanced.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

PERMANENT CANCELLATION.

The International Congress Against Alcohol, meeting in Antwerp, has passed a resolution asking that intoxicated motorists should be deprived permanently of permission to drive.

This may sound drastic to some persons, but it is really only common sense and proper protection for the general public. The man who consumes liquor to excess and then attempts to operate a car is a menace to himself and to the public. If he does it once, of course, it is not unreasonable to assume that he will do it again. Indeed, the chances are about a hundred to one that he will repeat. Hence the Antwerp resolution—Border Cities Star.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Export trade in grain was slow in Montreal on Saturday. The undertone was steady and prices were unchanged.

A feature of the local flour and market since the previous Saturday was the reduction of 20 cents per barrel in prices for spring wheat grades. This tended to stimulate the demand to some extent from domestic and country buyers and a more active business was done. There has not been any change in prices for winter wheat grades. No improvement in the demand from United Kingdom and continental buyers for spring wheat grades of flour has been reported.

No change was reported in the millfeed market, prices generally being well maintained.

Owing to a steadily increasing scarcity of fresh eggs a stronger feeling has prevailed in the market during the past week and prices have advanced 2 to 4 cents per dozen. Saturday's receipt swere 1,090 cases.

Receipts of butter were 6,377 packages. The market closed strongly with a net gain in prices for the week of 5-8c to 3-4c per lb. The volume of business was not large.

The trade in cheese for the past week was quiet.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, September 4 (Canadian Press). — With a modicum of pressure and some evening up to be accomplished before the double holiday, the grain markets achieved a small advance in quiet trading on Saturday. Trade abroad was dull and the chief influences here were local, with no one willing to venture out of the narrow path of trading.

South bullish factors as were taken into account in the slight upturn included meagre deliveries on the September contracts, scattered buying by short and by commission houses, a few unfavorable crop comments and somewhat better export prospects.

Harvesting weather was favorable in Canada, but a private report from Winnipeg was less bearish than expected, and the amount of damage wrought by frosts in the North-West remained an unknown quantity.

From Australia came mixed reports indicating damage from dry weather regionally and announcement of a visible supply of 5,200,000 bushels, compared with 12,750,000 bushels last year. Export demand was limited, but Portugal was reported to have bought 400,000 bushels of Manitobas and Plate wheats for September to April shipment. Sixty-nine cars were received here. Total September deliveries were 881,000 bushels. September wheat was gaining sharply on later months and closed at top, wheat finishing ¼c to 1⅛ higher, September 1.11 ⅜ to ½, December 1.16 ¼ to ⅝, March 1.21 to ⅛, and May 1.23½.

Some corn and barley was reported for export by the seaboard along with 200,000 to 300,000 bushels of wheat, largely Manitoba. September corn was again the strongest and ended the relatively quiet session 20c above December, although cash still sold at a premium of several cents over the current month. No deliveries were made on the September contracts, and the trade looked for little late in the season. Despite continuance of adverse crop comment from scattered parts from the private observers next Tuesday, corn reacted slightly from the top, but closed firm, ¼c to 1c, September .95 to ⅛, December .75 to ⅛, March .77¼ to ⅝, and May .79½ to ⅝.

September oats were delivered in small quantities, and with trade and pressure light oats closed unchanged to ¼c higher. September lard dipped under heavy deliveries, but gained sharply at the close and finished 10c to 12c up, with bellies at a similar advance and ribs down 10c.

ANSWERS MR. KIRKWOOD.

Campbellford, Ont.

Dear Editor:

Your article in The Examiner of Aug. 29 under the heading of "Thousands With No Hope of Work" surely calls for some accurate comment. Truly, there are thousands of people in Scotland who would gladly take any employment to keep off the so called "dole," but there are many young men in all our cities who never have worked and will not work as long as they get fifteen or eighteen shillings ($3.60 or $4.32) weekly from the Government. It is to be understood that the purchasing power of money is far greater in Britain than here. Many young folks are even getting married on this, when they will get five shillings ($1.20) for their wives and 2/- (48 cents) for each child.

A certain faction of the Labor party sometimes called Socialist or Communist, or just plain outright anarchy, is to be blamed for most of our trouble of the Clydeside at the present time. The last great general strike was surely striking proof of this, as much in my own home town of Dumbaston as elsewhere. When we get some sort of happy medium into Scottish politics things will begin to straighten out.

In my humble opinion D. Kirkwood is far from this.

Yours, etc.,
EDWARD PETER McMAHON.

GOD'S MINUTE.

He is a buckler to all them that trust in Him.—II Sam. 22:31.

* * *

Almighty God, pour out Thy Spirit upon us in this morning hour, and give us the blessed consciousness of Thy presence as we stand upon the threshold of this new day. Guide us unerringly through each hour by Thy Spirit that we may enter wider fields of usefulness. Strew our common pathway with beautiful and fragrant flowers, and set upon our daily board the plate of plenty and the cup of good cheer. Multiply the qualities of our hearts and the excellencies of our lives, and thrust us out into new regions of experience and service. Help us, loving Father, to interpret life at its highest levels, and with a deep sense of the world's awful need. Enable us, by Thy abounding grace and infinite love, to reflect the Spirit, life and purpose of Jesus Christ to the men whom we meet this day. May we be, in the truest sense, reflectors of God, so that men shall say as did one in the long ago: "I have seen Thy face as though I had seen the face of God." Give us an increasing appreciation of the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ, a Gospel that uplifts, redeems and beautifies the lives of men. Speak to us, gracious Father, that we may go forth to the tasks of this day in faith, hope and love, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

A Thought

"SACRIFICE"

Velma Runnells, Campbellford, Ont.

Heroic deeds of sacrifice meet with many tributes of praise. Can you not remember the soldiers laying down their lives for their country? Thousands gave up all beloved earthly possessions in order to save their homeland.

By true sacrifice the honest worker and thinker finds that he is nearer God, the Giver of all Good. When we are helping one in sorrow or sickness, is it human pity or just human ability that is foremost in our thoughts? Or is it the spirit Jesus had when he raised Lazarus from the dead?

The greatest sacrifice the world ever witnessed was Jesus' sacrifice on Calvary. His enemies didn't realize that Jesus was laying down His life to prove the unreality of death and bring salvation to His people. His enemies thought that if Jesus was killed, the world would forget. Have they forgotten Him? Can we forget that noble sacrifice for man? Jesus could have saved Himself and let His people go. But no, He was not living for Himself. He was living to die for others.

How can we show our gratitude to Jesus for His great sacrifice and love? We must find God. All can find Him; from the least to the greatest. We must give unto Him and to His people. Do good unto others and forget the praise you will derive from the sacrifice. A true sacrifice is a gift of love given in simplicity.

Wise simplicity is meekness and meekness is the door opening to honesty. Honesty is power. The pretense of sacrifice is weakness. A coward talks and boasts of what he does. He is weak and his character becomes knotted.

It is far better for a widow to give her last copper, just a cent, than a millionaire to give a thousand dollars. The sacrifice was great for the widow and God shall reward her twice.

Jesus died to give us salvation. Are we giving the ones across the heathen seas the cup of cool living water? Think and act before it is too late.

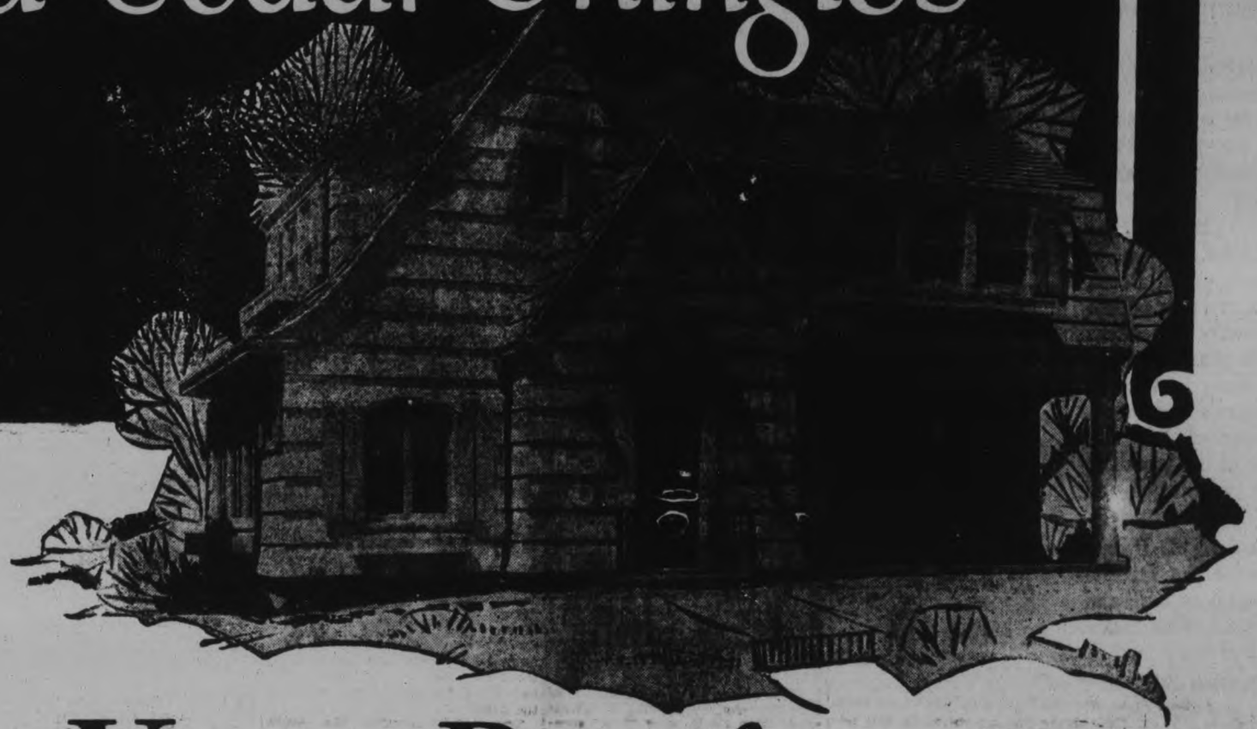
EDGWOOD

Red Cedar Shingles

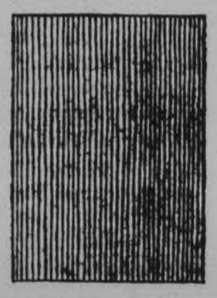


The Fifty-Year Roof

YOUR roof and your foundation are the two first essentials in the construction of your home. Nature created in British Columbia Red Cedar a roofing material that is immune to decay. From these centuries old trees the Consolidated Shingle Manufacturers have fashioned a superior shingle---the best man can make. To enable you to identify this shingle they have trade-marked it EDGWOOD Edgwood Shingles last longer, cost less.

Re-Roofing Made Easy

Laying EDGWOODS right over the old roof is absolutely practical. Thousands of homes have been re-roofed this way. This method offers many advantages—no expense tearing off the old roof—no dirt or litter—no injury to shrubs or flowers—protection in the event of sudden rain storms during construction—and of greater importance is the double insulation, making your home warmer in winter and cooler in summer. EDGWOODS are the one Red Cedar Shingle particularly adapted to re-roofing over old roofs as they are all Edge Grain ... will not warp ... force the old shingle tight to the sheathing and hold that position permanently. Your local lumber dealer will gladly give you an estimate on re-roofing with EDGWOODS. You will find the cost less than any substitute.



Note the Difference in the Grain of the Wood

EDGWOOD RED CEDAR SHINGLE

This is a 300% perfect shingle . . . all heart . . . all clear . . . all edge grain. Note the straight parallel grain of the wood. Sawn Edge Grain they positively will not warp, cup or curl. They lie tight and flat to the sheathing always . . . preserve their good appearance . . . delete the fire hazard . . . eliminate all possibility of leaks . . . and, when nailed with rust-proof nails, will last 50 years and more. They cost less and last longer than any other roofing material, not excepting tile or slate in those sections subject to hail storms.

FLAT GRAIN RED CEDAR SHINGLE

Note the irregular grain of the wood. This shingle is sawn flat grain, consequently it will warp, cup and curl; loosen the nails; sometimes leak, become unsightly, and require replacement after ten or fifteen years. Flat Grain shingles are often made from inferior timber which does not permit cutting an EDGWOOD shingle. Their use is on temporary structures. Flat Grain shingles were never intended to be used on roofs of dwellings.

Sometimes Mark became irritable over her concentration, but most of the time he submitted. But he had a grievance against Deena—he'd been cheated.

No good Deena's working her eyes out that way. She looked at least like Mark's older sister.

FORTY - FIVE families lived in the Somerset Arms Apartment House.

A cross section of the building would have revealed forty-five 12x16 living rooms, forty-five court-exposure dining rooms and court-exposure bedrooms, forty-five tiled bath-rooms, kitchens and dumbwaiters.

The Faleys occupied one of these filing cabinets on the fourth floor. Mark Faley, who was a city salesman for the Schumaker Hardware Company, his wife Deena and their young son, Judd. It was a scrupulous little place, kept immaculately in condition by Deena, who waxed her own floors, rubbed her own mahogany furniture in lemon oil, made by hand the pretty silk shades that the lamps boasted, and in her small immaculate kitchen displayed a knack at getting together tempting and toothsome meals on the slender budget allowed by Mark's salary.

The Faleys had lived in Somerset Arms the entire eleven years of their marriage. Four or five young couples had really taken root in that apartment building. In fact there was a two-table bridge club entirely composed of matrons who had lived there all of their married lives.

But Deena was not popular with them. They regarded her with a certain hostility. All of a sudden, over a period dating back years, Deena had dropped out of their activities, and now seldom met with them on their Wednesday afternoons when they convened by turn in one another's apartment for bridge and dainty afternoon "spreads" of salad, hot biscuit, sweets and coffee. In fact, these occasions approached the old-fashioned "klatch" and all eight of the members sought to outdo one another in preparation and table decorations.

Then, when Judd was about eight, Deena, whose apartment had been one of the favorite meeting places of the group because it was spic and span and dainty and her food bound to be toothsome, just frankly dropped out.

The women, aside from resenting this, were appalled at the gradual disintegration that seemed to take place in Deena. They began to regard her as a horrible example of a woman who loses interest in herself. Fact was, Deena WAS letting herself go a bit. Her pretty brown hair was frankly grey now and year before last's coat was this year's, and while the other women water-waved or bobbed their hair and used reduction or filling-out methods and brightened up with a bit of rouge and even dyes, where need be, Deena sank softly into grayness and let herself go "blowy" as the saying is.

It was not fair to Mark, the women said. After all, Mark, even as all their husbands, was a man! And the best of them, said the wise wives across their bridge tables, need to be kept interested in the home or there are other places that offer hopeless competition.

Up to date, except for the fact that Mark attended a weekly Saturday night pinocle party at the neighborhood home of a bachelor friend who had a card room in the top story of the old-fashioned house he occupied with his mother, there was little cause to suspect Mark of the straying eye.

It is true that occasionally, regarding Deena as she sat around evenings bent over needle work, he might have desired more brightness to her hair and eye and she seemed to have preference for a monotonous uniform of brown serge which deadened the lusterless look to her hair still more and threw little pools of shadow across her face.

Once or twice Mark remonstrated ill-humoredly at her reluctance to attend even a neighborhood motion picture, and on a memorable occasion had leaned across the table one evening and literally jerked her handiwork out of her hands and hurled it into a corner.

Deena had been good-natured about it and kissed Mark on his thick hair and consented to go to a picture theatre that evening. But in the main she had not changed.

Deena was a woman with a fixed idea. She thought of nothing else except that fixed idea. There was one morning in the week when she DID brush out her hair carefully, press her dress and even apply a fleck of rouge to her cheeks. That was on Saturday mornings when she accompanied Judd to his violin lesson.

Deena's life centered about those lessons. It was the explanation of her absence from the social gatherings of her friends. It was the explanation of the evenings bent over handiwork and the afternoons at the same occupation. Deena now sold the delicate embroideries and needlepoint she was so skilful at making, to the Woman's Exchange.

Her earnings paid for Judd's violin lessons. Twelve dollars for thirty minutes from one of the eminent teachers of the city.

Sometimes Mark became irritable over her concentration on those lessons, but most of the time he just submitted, going his routine way cheerfully enough because it must be said for Deena that she never shirked in her scrupulous concern for his creature comfort. Mark's breakfasts were precisely to his liking; his well gouged-into Morris chair was unfailingly as sure to be at just the precise angle to his reading lamp, and his bed, as he sank into it, was of Deena's own making, the blanket tucked in deeply at the feet the way he preferred it and Deena's lavendar-scented sheets cool and clean to his touch.

The women in the building who had kept their faces and their figures and who could be taken for their daughters' sisters, were not, however, without their effect upon Mark. He wanted Deena to look chic and neat and have a way with her.

Sometimes he secretly rebelled and rolled a wicked eye at a girl in the subway or in one of the quick lunch rooms where he stopped on his route for a noon day bite. He had a grievance against Deena for "going dowdy on him," as he put it to himself. Fellow that couldn't step out with his wife and feel proud of her looks and have other fellows crane a neck at her, was cheated!

Deena looked at least like Mark's older sister. All right to give a child the best education possible! True enough that on his salary violin lessons for Judd would have been out of the question. All well and good. Well and good in its place! But Deena was over-doing. Why, when Mark had been a boy, seventy-five cents was a good price for clarionet lessons. No good Judd's mother working her eyes out that way. Wasn't fair, b'gad!

Some even said Judd had no particular talent. Just enough to warrant a successful maestro in accepting him as a good average pupil.

Sometimes in her heart Deena suspected that, too. In fact, the maestro had as much as told her so. Judd had the making of a good, sincere musician, if he kept at it.

That was enough! If Judd never did anything more than develop a parlor facility for the violin, Deena's hopes would be more than justified.

Being a boy and a regular boy, Judd was irregular at practising, sometimes rebelling against the lessons and not above subterfuging in order to gain an hour's release from practise. Then again, when he warmed up to it, he could perform in a way that sent the blood rushing to Deena's head. When Judd played his Chopin Etude or "Warum" or picked out a pizzicato, it seemed to Deena that sometimes her very heart would stop beating, of thrill.

It was worth it, all right. The self-sacrifice. The denials. The maneouvering.

Why, just the Saturday mornings alone, accompanying Judd to the studio and sitting in the outer room while he took his lesson, the deep rich tones of the maestro often mingling with Judd's, were worth it in themselves.

When Judd was thirteen and was playing Bach for the first time, Deena was already white-haired and her shoulders, from the hours of incessant needlework, had taken on a stoop from which they were never to lift themselves.

The women in the house, whose silhouettes still compared with their daughters', shook sorrowful head over her, particularly when they beheld the upright Mark walking alongside of her.

Mark carried the years lightly. By now he might have been taken for Deena's son.

One winter he did openly rebel and join a bowling club, that was headed by the bachelor at whose home he played pinochle. It was rumored about the apartment house that almost every time the club met, he accompanied home a certain girl member of the group, sometimes entering her house for a bite and drink.

Fear smote Deena. And yet because she needed her evenings so and because it was unthinkable that Mark, whom she loved, should wander dangerously far from the fold of their home, she tried to force herself to take the situation lightly. But somehow, the whole of the fear would not be laid.

Then this happened:

One Wednesday as Mark was about to leave the house for the bowling club, Deena was seated beside the table at her eternal needlework and in a corner of the room, beside a floor lamp, Judd was softly playing Rubenstein's "Melody in F."

"You know what, Deena," said Mark, suddenly turning back from the door and sliding out of his top-coat, "hanged if I'm not going to cut out these bowling evenings with the crowd. Now that Judd's well enough along to play us a bit of music evenings—you'n me—I'd just kinda rather sit around home evenings—just kinda would."

XVII—SALLY IS SORRY

It was late when he came home—quite dark—and Mrs. Kiff and Sally had both been listening for hours with strained attention for the sound of his returning step.

Finally Mrs. Kiff ventured to ask Sally what was the matter.

"I heard him go off and bang the door," she said anxiously. "I knew he must be in a tearing rage. But what for, I'd like to know, and him with the temper of an angel?"

Sally, who had spent the evening in sullen silence, suddenly burst into tears and confessed.

"I hit Sometimes. I hurt him. It was horrid of me."

Mrs. Kiff stroked her hair with a gentle hand.

"There, there, now! Don't take on!" she begged.

"But supposing Philip never comes back?" Sally sobbed.

Mrs. Kiff smiled, a wise smile.

"Now, you know what Mr. Sanderson always says when he's had a drop too much to drink," she reminded Sally. "You know what he always says about them guards never retiring! Well, I reckon they ain't retired yet, not by a long chalk, you see."

And Mrs. Kiff was right, for at ten o'clock Philip walked in, tired out and wet through.

"'Ave you 'ad supper, sir?" Mrs. Kiff asked cheerily.

"Don't want any," Philip growled. "I'm going to bed."

"Well, you might just say goodnight to Miss Sally first, sir," Mrs. Kiff told him, determinedly cheerful. "She's been lying awake listening for you ever since it got dark."

Sanderson stared down at her from his great height; he was so tall that his head almost touched the ceiling of the sitting-room

"Are you lying, Mrs. Kiff?" he asked sternly.

Mrs. Kiff spread her fat hands.

"Go and see for yourself, sir," she counselled.

Philip went to Sally's room. There was a lamp burning, and its yellow rays shone on Sally's pale face and wonderful hair.

Sanderson strode up to the bedside, with Sometimes hanging back at his heels a little.

Sometimes crept slowly forward and licked her hand.

There was a little silence, then Philip Sanderson said:

"I'm sorry, too, Sally."

Sally smiled; she had a wonderful smile.

"Stoop down," she said.

After a moment he spoke her name gently, as if fearing to wake her should she really be asleep.

"Sally!"

Sally did not move and she felt the light touch of his hand on her hair.

There was a moment of silence, then he half sighed and turned away. Sally opened her eyes promptly.

"I'm not asleep," she said in a snappy little voice.

"Oh! I was afraid you might be." He went to the foot of the bed, leaning on it and looking gravely at her. "How are you? Better?"

"I never shall be better, you know that."

He made no reply. He was looking deathly tired, and even in the midst of her own small annoyance with him Sally was quick enough to see the lines beneath his eyes and his fagged appearance.

"Why didn't you come yesterday?" she demanded; and then, without waiting for him to reply, she went on: "I suppose you were larking about in London. Out with some other girl or other—eh?"

"No."

"Drinking at the club, then. I suppose I can die here, for all you care. You think far more of that mongrel of yours than you do of me. If he'd been run over and half killed you'd sit up with him all night and never leave him for a moment."

Sanderson's face twitched as if with pain.

"If it will give you any pleasure to know it, Sometimes has been run over," he said, a note of hoarseness in his voice. "And if you cared half as much for me as he does, I'd never leave you for a moment."

Sally gasped, and her blue eyes grew soft.

"Not—dead?" she gasped.

"No—not yet."

"And you left him?" She was really amazed now.

Sanderson's eyes were hard as they met hers.

"I left him because I knew if I stayed away another day you would give me hell when I did come," he said uncompromisingly.

"Oh!" That angered her. "Well, hope he dies," she said viciously.

Sanderson moved to the door.

"Thanks. I knew you'd say that," he answered, and walked out of the room.

Sally's lips moved to recall him, but she closed them again firmly.

Well, let him go if he preferred a half-bred dog to her—let him go!

She lay still for a long time, her eyes closed.

She tried to forget everything except her anger with Sanderson for having disappointed her yesterday; she argued that if he understood how long and wearisome all the days were to her he would have come at any cost. After all, who in their senses would put a dog before a human being?

She refused her lunch when Mrs. Kiff brought it, daintily served on a little tray.

Mrs. Kiff scowled, although her eyes were kind.

"What's the matter with the pair of you?" she scolded. "Here's Mr. Sanderson refused his, too, and after all the trouble I've taken and all! It's a thankless task looking after two such ungrateful bears with sore heads!"

She banged the tray down on a table.

"I shall leave it, and perhaps you'll come to your senses presently," she declared.

She got as far as the door, then came back.

"What's the matter with Mr. Sanderson?" she demanded, her curiosity and anxiety getting the better of her dignity.

Sally answered with closed eyes.

"Sometimes has been run over."

Mrs. Kiff exclaimed aloud.

"Run over! Well, no wonder the poor dear man don't want his lunch. I shan't 'ave no appetite for mine now, neither." There was real grief and compassion in her voice. "Did you ever! If that ain't cruel luck!" she wailed. "And Sometimes the only friend the poor dear's got!"

Sally laughed an unkind little laugh.

"A friend! That mongrel!" she scoffed.

Mrs. Kiff bent over the bed.

"I wish you was well, so that I could shake you," she said, really angry now. "What's the matter with you, I'd like to know? Ain't you got no 'eart? After all that's been done for you! Here's Mr. Sanderson treated you like a queen, and put up with your tempers and sulks like the angel he is, and now you call his dog a mongrel! Said so to his face, too—now, didn't you? I'll be bound you did!"

"I told him I hoped the dog would die," Sally admitted in bravado.

Mrs. Kiff flushed dully, and her lips quivered with anger.

"Then may you be forgiven, that's all I've got to say," she said, and marched out of the room.

Sally lay very still, her heart beating fast.

"Hateful, hateful old woman!" she told herself passionately. "If only I could get up and be free of them all! If only I could walk!"

Bitter tears crept from beneath her closed lids and trickled down her cheeks, but in her heart she knew they were not tears of self-pity this time, but tears of awakening remorse.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE HAVE MASTER MOTIVES

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Gene Tunney's master motive while he was the world's heavyweight champion was to keep himself in good physical condition in order to defend his title successfully. He no doubt had to give up many good times for the sake of his major interest. The same holds for any one who aspires to reach the top in any line of activity.

The lover, the patriot, the faddist, the crank, the reformer and all who have one great objective to which all others are subjected are moved by a master motive and are further illustrations of this remarkable urge.

A master motive is one that grips you so firmly that you subordinate all other wishes and desires to it.

Master motives may be of short duration or may last a life time. Those that are of short duration appear in the form of a crisis. No matter what great objective a man may have he is temporarily sidetracked by another master motive in an emergency such as a fire or an automobile accident or some other emergency that requires immediate attention and demands all his strength and resources. After the crisis is past a man may fall back to his long-term master motive, such as winning a girl or making a million dollars or getting elected to office.

A master motive is really the concentration of all our wishes and desires into one major drive that we value most, the thing we want above all others and hence are willing to sacrifice everything to secure.

We have master motives to fulfill a major ambition, to steady our purpose, to be more efficient, to make our sacrifices with a good conscience and willingly, and above all to get what is nearest our heart, the thing with which we have identified our true self and upon which we have staked our happiness.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1928

Astrologers read this as rather an unfortunate day in planetary government, although benefic aspects are strong as evening falls.

The stars seem to forecast intrigue and deception, a disposition in business as well as politics to indulge in false representations.

Plots and counter plots are supposed to develop while this configuration prevails and newspaper sensations are indicated.

Both men and women are warned against an inclination to emphasize their own valuation of themselves. There may be unusual manifestations of egotism and conceit.

The direction of the stars bodes ill for domestic harmony and is likely to encourage hasty decisions. Many divorce suits may be filed while this rule prevails.

Under this sway the inclination to pay bills should be strong, but it may lead to differences of opinion in regard to the family budget.

The seers foretell many crises in the lives of young married folk who have tried to be extremely modern. Domesticity may be revalued as worth while by even the most progressive women.

Newspapers and magazines should profit by this position of the stars which foreshadows increased demand for reading matter.

Banks and bankers are again subject to a most promising rule of the stars, and it is well to heed conservative financial advice.

Astrologers months ago predicted trouble in Mexico and they now declare that the country is under a sway making for revolutions owing to the positions of Mars and Uranus.

It will be remembered that the seers prophesied new inventions that would completely change the film industry. They now prognosticate much hard work for players.

The direction of the stars is more fortunate for actors of the stage than it is for actors of the screen.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have numerous unexpected messages in the coming year which should be most prosperous. These subjects of Virgo are usually prosperous and they show their opulence in their dress.

Children born on this day probably will be quick and energetic. They should have the power to reach the heights for these Virgo people are usually exceedingly talented and they rebound quickly from defeat or disappointment.

RESUSCITATION DEMONSTRATED

METHODS ILLUSTRATED

MOUNT PLEASANT, Sept. 14 Examiner Correspondence).—As a result of the sad drowning fatality which occurred last Sunday, Dr. H. A. Turner of Millbrook motored here on Thursday evening and gave an interesting lecture and demonstration in the Temperance Hall on the prone pressure method of artificial respiration for a drowning victim, explaining very carefully the method, which is taught to all the employees of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario in case of accident.

Through the kindness of Mr. Gaby of the Hydro Electric Power Commission pamphlets were furnished and passed in the audience giving a very clear explanation. Very often valuable time is lost at the scene of a drowning accident which could be put to good advantage by some one having a practical knowledge of what to do and how to do it.

The first thing to do is lay the patient face down with one arm extended directly overhead, the other arm bent at the elbow and with the face turned outward and resting on the hand so that the nose and mouth are free for breathing. Then kneel straddling the patient's thighs, place the palms of the hands on the small of the back with fingers resting on the ribs the little finger just touching the lowest rib, and with the thumb and fingers in a natural position and the tips of the fingers just out of sight. With arms held straight swing forward slowly so that the weight of the body is gradually brought to bear upon the patient. The shoulder should be directly over the heel of the hand at the end of the forward swing. Do not bend the elbows. This operation should take about two second. Now immediately swing backward so as to completely remove the pressure, after two seconds swing forward again. Thus repeat deliberately twelve to fifteen times a minute the double movement of compression and release, a complete respiration in four or five seconds. Continue artificial respiration without interruption (if necessary for at least four hours) until natural breathing is restored. Cases are on record of success after four hours of effort.

As soon as this artificial respiration has been started and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen any tight clothing about the patient's neck, chest, or waist. Keep the patient warm. Do not give any liquids whatever by month until the patient is fully conscious. To avoid strain on the heart when the patient revives he should be kept lying down and not allowed to stand or sit up. If the doctor has not arrived by the time the patient has revived he should be given some stimulant such as one teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a small glass of water or a hot drink of coffee or tea. The patient should be kept warm.

Resuscitation should be carried on at the nearest possible point to where the patient received his injuries. He shall not be moved from this point until he is breathing normally of his own volition and then moved only in a lying position.

Should it be necessary, due to extreme weather conditions, etc., to move the patient before he is breathing normally, resuscitation should be carried on during the time that he is being moved. A brief return of natural respiration is not a certain indication for stopping the resuscitation. Not infrequently the patient after a temporary recovery of respiration stop breathing again. The patient must be watched and if natural breathing stops, artificial respiration should be resumed at once.

In carrying out resuscitation it may be necessary to change the operator. This change must be made without losing the rhythm of respiration. By this procedure no confusion results at the time of the change of operator and a regular rhythm is kept up.

Mr. Barns, Boy Scout Master from Millbrook was also present and gave a most inspiring address to the boys along the theme of swimming. Mr. Barns said that boys who could swim reasonably well should always be practicing some new method of swimming and always be prepared for the worst. Boys should be taught to be able to swim on their backs or their sides when, in case of emergency, they might need too. He old of once, when he had to tread water to save a boy from drowning, who had him clutched so tight around the neck he had oly his feet to work with, his hands being used to loosen the boy's grip. He said the main thing in case of accident was to keep cool, don't get excited, think quickly what should be done and do it.

Mr. Barns said it was a splendid thing to learn to swim while clothed, as he had taught some of his boys to do, in case of having to leave a boat or any other emergency that might result in having to jump in with ones clothes on.

He also advised taking a little time to investigate the botton for any sharp stones, glass, or anything which might interfere with any one diving. He told of an instance where several boys were cut in the water and on investigating found some old tin cans had been thrown in the water and one had sunk with the cut side up.

Miss Francis Turner was also present and gave many valuable hints on how to loosen the grip of a person who is struggling in the water, showing how to do it if he should happen to grip both hands.

She said it was always wise to hit the struggler a blow which will knock him unconscious, then he will be much easier handled. Never try to lift him up in the water, but try to get under him, sfim on the back 'f possible to do so, and so bring him to shore. Another method to break the grip was to give the drowning person a knock in the stomach with the knee.

A party of boys from Millbrook were also present who are under the careful tuition of Mr. Barns, and are able to do artificial respiration with ease. Three kindly demonstrated so that the local boys might see it done. They also demonstrated taking the water out of a drowning patient by holding him over one knee, while some one raised his feet; also how to change from one man to another in the method of applying artificial respiration without losing the rhythm of respiration. By this procedure no confusion results at the time of change of operator and a regular rhythm is kept up.

The Prone Pressue Method of artificial respiration has been taught to the electrical workers in the province of Ontario for the past fifteen years. This method is equally applicable for all cases where breathing has been interrupted though an accident such as drowning, gas poisoning, electrical shock, injuries, etc. The above instructions should be followed even if the patient appears dead, and continued until natural breathing commences or until rigor mortis (stiffening of the body) has set in.

At the close Hubert Gardiner expressed the appreciation of the audience to Dr. Turner. Mr. Barns, Miss Turner and the party of boys for their kindness in coming to Mount Pleasant and tendered them a vote of thanks on behalf of the audience who showed their appreciation by their hearty applause.

TUNNEY WEDDING MAY BE DELAYED

Fiancee Hints They May Wait Until Successor Holds Crown.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—A copyrighted despatch from South Bristol, Maine, in the Daily News to-day quotes Miss Polly Lauder as indicating the possibility that her marriage to Gene Tunney will not take place until a successor has won the heavyweight title relinquished by the champion.

"It is our belief," the News quotes her," that as soon as Gene is really rid of the boxing title, he will be quickly forgotten. Then we can marry and live in peace. When the ceremony is performed, and we are not decided as to that yet, it shall be done as quietly as possible."

Miss Lauder denied she would join Tunney in Europe for a wedding in Paris.

Levine mentioned the possibility of starting the flight to-day but was extremely vague.

NOT ALL MOUNDS BURIAL PLACES

Even Discovery of Bones Does Not Prove Human Origin.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, September 4—Many motorists from this section of the province have on more than one occasion visited Serpent Mound Park, two miles west of the village of Keene, and have taken more than a passing interest in the mound, or rather mounds, which give the name to this popular picnic ground, beautifully situated, on the shores of Rice Lake.

Probably comparatively few have any definite knowledge of the history connected with these particular mounds, or with mounds in general in Canada.

A letter to the Department of the Interior, asking information on this subject, was replied to by W. H. Collins, Acting Curator of the Victoria Memorial Museum at Ottawa, and its contents give considerable enlightenment on what knowledge is available concerning these mysterious earthworks, and their equally mysterious builders:

"Mound builder is a term which was formerly applied to a mysterious people who built mounds, particularly in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys; but this term has now come into disuse because all the leading students of archaeology now believe that the mounds were made by various tribes of Indians.

"In the archaeological files of the Victoria Memorial Museum is a large accumulation of references to literature and memoranda regarding mounds in Canada; but a large part of this is so unreliable that it is impossible to give the location of mounds, or the number found in Canada, exactly.

Mr. Smith, the archaeologist, has seen only one structure in Canada that he would term a mound. This was near Port Hammond, in British Columbia, and is reported on in Washington," by Harlan I. Smith, and Gerald Fowke, and was published in 1901, as a memoir of the American Museum of Natural History, New York. However, the mound contained so little that not much can be said about it, and there is a long gap between the mounds of the Pacific coast and what are generally spoken of as mounds, that is those of the Mississippi Valley. Mr. W. J. Wintemberg has carefully examined every county in Ontario from the Quebec boundary, to Trenton, Haldimand county, and from there to the Detroit river, and Simcoe county, but he has not actually seen one mound that he can be sure is an artificial mound without carrying on explorations in it.

Mounds have been reported in Manitoba, Kenora District, Rainy River District, Algoma District, and in the Counties of York, Frontenac, Leeds, Dundas, Peterborough, Northumberland, Prince Edward, Oxford, Wentworth, Lincoln, Kent, Haldimand, Welland and Essex in Ontario; but probably many of these reports are misrepresentations There are still more doubtful reports of mounds in the following counties of Ontario: Glengarry, Bruce, Grey, Waterloo, Middlesex and Simcoe.

Because of the doubtful nature of this information, a brief statement follows on the subject of "Mounds," prepared by Harlan I. Smith, and if fuller information is required consultation of the volume, "The Twelfth Report of the Bureau of American Ethnology," is suggested, as this is to be found in most large libraries.

Speaking first of the antiquity of mounds in Canada, there is nothing very much to determine how long they were made before the Indians were visited by white people; but in the United States Indians were seen building mounds by the early explorers.

In regard to the mound near Keene none of the earth-works reported as serpent mounds in Canada have been authenticated as such. Articles were published as to who discovered it, when it was discovered, and what articles have been taken from it, in 1896, by a number of daily papers, and in magazines, but Mr. Collins adds a strong caution that most such articles were not considered to give absolutely authentic information; some of the publications listed are: the Lindsay Warder, October 23, 1896; the Peterborough Examiner, September 5, 1896; the Toronto Saturday Night, November 2, 1896; the Toronto Mail and Empire, August 15, 1896; the Toronto Globe, September 8, 1896; the Methodist Magazine and Review, November, 1896; the Ontario Archaeological Report, 1896-97, Toronto; American Antiquarian, May, 1897, Chicago; Transactions of the Canadian Institute, Vol. IX, Part I; Aug., 1910."

Mr. Smith's statement is as follows: "Mound burials consist of from to many, usually several, human remains buried in, or covered by, large and more or less circular, artificial mounds of earth. They should not be confused with graves which are sometimes made in natural mounds. The term has been much abused. Frequently people report burial mounds, when only bones (sometimes not even human), or natural hills, have been found.

All mounds in Canada are prehistoric, although in the United States the earliest European explorers saw mounds being made. In Ontario refuse heaps are often called mounds. In Canada a few burial mounds have been reported, chiefly in three regions: on the southern coast of British Columbia; in Manitoba, and in Ontario—the last two areas being connected through the United States. A few have been reported in the lower Fraser valley, and some reported in Alberta and Saskatchewan are certainly not burial mounds. A number of authentic burial mounds have been found in southern Manitoba, and there are several in the adjacent part of Ontario. Then there is a stretch of country north of Lake Superior where none have been discovered.

There are said to be a number of mounds, from fifty to one hundred and fifty, in the counties along the Great Lakes and rivers of southern Ontario. In Quebec one is reported on Nun Island, Saint Lawrence river, near the Ontario boundary, and another on an island in Chicoutimi River. In New Brunswick mounds, but probably not burial mounds, are reported on the Miramichi River in York County. In Nova Scotia there are mounds, though again probably not burial mounds, reported as possibly prehistoric house ruins, on Digby Neck, and elsewhere. Similar mounds to those thought to be house ruins in Nova Scotia, are said to have been found in Labrador, and Beothuck mounds, not probably used for burial purposes, are also said to be found in Newfoundland.

In the United States burial mounds are found from North Dakota to Maine, and from Texas to Florida. They are numerous in the Mississippi and Ohio valleys, and rarer in New England, and along the Atlantic coast."

Appropros of Serpent Mound, Dr. G. H. Needler of Toronto, has in his possession some bones, evidently belonging to Indian skeletons, which he dug out of this location with his paddle on one occasion, possibly more than 35 years ago, when making a canoe trip on Rice Lake, and forced to land at this point because of rough water. This, however, was before the site had been recognized as a mound, and officially listed as such, placed under government protection, and the digging for relics banned.

RAYBESTOS WINS EXHIBITION GAME

Beat Royals 4-3 in Practice Match On Saturday.

Royals and Raybestos turned in a tidy battle at Exhibition Park on Saturday afternoon, the Rays getting a close decision by 4 to 3. Some fine short-stopping by Hartley featured the Royals' play. The Rays outhit the youngsters 7 to 2, but were guilty of bad baseball in the fifth when, with the bases loaded, the Royals were allowed to score three runs on a fly ball that should have been an easy out.

BIGGER MIDWAY AT EXHIBITION

Greater Sheesly Shows Will Provide Amusement This Year.

PLENTY OF FIREWORKS.

On Exhibition is not complete without a midway, where people like to spend a great deal of their time enjoying novel sensations and doing novel things. The midway this year is bigger and better than the last years. The Greater Sheesly shows are coming to the fair. Their equipment consists of a special train of thirty one cars. These shows are not only bigger and better than any of the others that have visited our exhibition but are cleaner and snappier than the rest.

What is a fair without a grand display of fireworks? There will be five of these, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. Children's day will see a special treat for the kiddies in this line when a special display of daylight fireworks will be touched off on Tuesday afternoon in order that the youngsters may have their full day at the exhibition as many of them will not be able to stay and see the night pieces which will be set off when many of the younger ones are in bed. For this reason they are given a special treat in the afternoon.

Christian life" continued Dr. Chown. A Christian friend of his had stated that he had determined to take Jesus in earnest. The purpose of the new church is to teach people to take Jesus in earnest in order that their whole lives may be consecrated to that one end. "Think what a man ought to be, and he was that," is the inscription on a saintly man's tomb. If the members of Mark Street Church are led to make the Kingdom of God predominant in their lives that epitaph will will be suitable for them.

That the United Church is enjoying transcendant fellowship, with former denominational difference playing no part was a source of joy to the speaker. The mission work, formerly confined by each church to a few fields, is now widespread, with work on every continent. The breadth of the program undertaken is proving a mighty propeller to send the church forward on the work which God has called it to do.

"I am glad to have a part in this ceremony," said the speaker in conclusion. "I trust that your hope will be realized but that your thoughts will not be centred on the material building but on the spiritual work."

While the offering was being taken up Mr. Thornley explained the financial status of the project. The building will cost about $40,000. Of this sum, $28,000 has been subscribed by members of the congregation and friends of the church in Peterborough and other places. This, of course, he said, has not all been paid, but will be paid. He went on to enumerate the articles which were to be placed in the copper box which was to go in a recess in the stone.

Papers Enclosed.

First was the "Manual of the United Church of Canada," containing the rules and government of the church and a historical statement of the events leading up to the Union. "The New Outlook," the weekly publication of the Church, contains a list of the members of the General Council, which meets in Winnipeg on Wednesday. Included in this list are the names of the chairman, Mr. Todd, and of a former pastor of Mark Street Church, the Rev. R. T. Richards.

"The United Church Record and Mission Review, is edited by the Rev. W. T. Gunn, who Mr. Thornley predicted will be elected Moderator of the General Council. It tells of the work of the missionaries of the Church. "The Missionary Monthly" is the organ of the Women's Missionary Society. The pictures of sixteen beautiful girls going out under W.M.S. auspices to work in the mission fields would, he said, excite the admiration of whoever might open the box in years to come.

The official report of the United Church charge of Mark Street and Stewart Hall contains the names of the officers of the churches and the members and supporters of the church, and The Examiner of August 31 contains, among many things, an article on the front page telling of the ceremony to be held.

The box containing all these records Mr. Thornley handed over to the chairman, who handed it to Mr. Gillespie for the final event of the program, to which it all had led, the actual laying of the corner-stone.

For the Children.

Before proceeding with his honorable duty, Mr. Gillespie addressed a few words to those present. He expressed pleasure that at the last moment the sun had come through the clouds and made it possible to go through with the service as planned. Speaking to the children of the Sunday School, who were present in a body, Mr. Gillespie said the church is being built for the children, as in the next twenty-five or fifty years it will be more necessary than ever for young people to attend church. Life will be more strenuous and involved and the only hold-back will be the church.

Tribute to the work of the committee was paid by Mr. Gillespie. The vision the members had would, "with the help of the Ladies' Aid, who, after all, will finish it," he consummated. So far he considered they had not made a mistake. The right site had been chosen and the right committee appointed. The church will be a useful church for East City in the years to come.

Mr. Gillespie then placed the box of documents in position in the recess in the bottom of the stone and rolled it over into place, laying it "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." He was assisted in levelling it up by T. Ephgrave, the contractor, and two of his men. The outer face of the stone is carved simply with the date, "Anno Domini, 1928."

The hymn, "Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken," with the benediction by the Rev. W. S. Edgar, brought the service to a close.

The Morning Service.

The morning service at Mark Street Church was very impressive, and was featured by the sermon delivered by the Rev. S. D. Chown, D.D., of Toronto, former general superintendent of the Methodist Church. The text of his address, the musical service and the hymns chosen, all had reference to the outstanding characteristics of the day and the laying of the corner-stone of the new edifice.

Taking his text from the 18th verse of the first epistle of St. Paul to the Colossians, Rev. Dr. Chown spoke from the words: "And He that is Christ is the Head of the Body of the Church."

In the year 1917, United States statistics showed that there were many different creeds representing the body of the Church, including 14 Presbyterian sects, 9 Baptists, 16 Methodists and 20 Lutherans.

"We do not see anywhere in the Testament," went on the preacher "that there were to be different Bodies of Christ. The various churches may be different flocks, feeding in different pastures, but ultimately all will be gathered into one Fold and one Shepherd, and shall be recognized as one Body of Jesus Christ. This is a big idea, of course, but it is not too big for Him who said: "If I be lifted up, I shall draw all men unto Me." It certainly is not too big for the Papacy of Rome. During the Lausanne Conversations held last year, the Pope was approached and he said: "We will be very glad to take you in." Considering the whole history of the Church of Rome, he could have said nothing else. Considered simply from the standpoint of machinery, the organization of the Church of Rome is one of the marvels of the age.

"If all the members of the Church of Christ were only Christ-centred, there would be little difficulty in having one world religion. But so many religions resemble the small community which has divided itself into two strong camps over the comparative merits of two different sorts of pills manufactured there, instead of uniting on the question of the advantages to be derived from the good done to the community by these medicines. Instead of magnifying the great work being done by Christianity, the churches are dividing on questions of differences which are of no value to the Kingdom of God, and in this way they are hindering the efficacy of the Gospel of Christ.

"But, thank God, this obscuration of the Gospel is going to pass away and Jesus will be regarded as the central figure sent from Heaven; the Messiah of all time.

Agree On Essentials.

"Christians agree on the essentials of salvation and the truths of the Gospel of Jesus. They believe in the conviction of sin, in repentance and forgiveness and regeneration, in sanctification through the Resurrection and in the immortal life of the soul. These are the fundamentals of religion. All evangelical Christians know that there is an unacademic way to Jesus and they know that the way of faith is really the way of knowledge. "He that will to do the will of God shall know the Way of God." In the Old Testament, Micah said: "God doth require of thee to do justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with they God." In the New Testament, we are told: "He that feareth God and walketh righteously, is acceptable to Him," while Jesus said: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy mind and with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy strength and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Love is the fulfillment of the law. The worst heterodoxy in all the world is the absence of love and the expression of hate.

"Nowadays, men call themselves Fundamentalists or Modernists without knowing the meaning of the words. The Fundametnalist will tell you that Christ will come again as a destroyer of the wicket, that He will come in wrath and vengeance, trampling His people under His feet. It was John Wesley who said: "I am sick of opinions. Give me good, substantial religion and let me walk humbly with God and man."

"It has been said that a word fitly spoken is like "apples of gold in pictures of silver," but this should read "in filagree work," because through filagree work of the Bible we see the golden apples of truth, upon which we can feed our souls and be satisfied. There is a light in the Bible that will light your steps every foot of the way home. Let us turn aside, therefore, from disputations over non-essentials. Let us turn to that which is a light to our feet, to the Book which is the sustenance of our souls, a comfort in time of trouble and a refuge in doubt."

Musical Service.

Under the leadership of V. Boorman, the choir rendered a very beautiful number entitled "Blessed Be the Lord," and a male quartette, with members in V. Boorman, W. Binks, Leonard Agnew and Cyril Agnew, sang "Only a Contrite Sinner." The hymns chosen for the morning service were: "Light of the world, faint were our weary feet with wandering far," "The Church's one foundation is Jesus Christ our Lord," and "Breathe on me, Breath of God."

The prayers and announcements were taken by Rev. Mr. Thornley, pastor of the church.

In the evening, the music included a solo number, "Nearer My God, to Thee," sung by Mr. Hurst, of Paris, Ontario, who was unable to be present, as planned, at the morning service.

CHILD IS HURT BY MOTOR CAR

Evelyn Pammett, Nine, Knocked Down Playing Near Home.

RUNS ACROSS STREET.

When little Evelyn Pammett, nine-year old daughter of Mr and Mrs. James Pammett, of 242 Euclid avenue, was running across the street near her home at seven o'clock on Sunday evening, she was struck by a car driven by Phillip Tyrson, of 13 Maple avenue, knocked down and hurt considerably.

The child was playing with a group of boys and girls and they were apparently unaware of the approach of the car when they ran out into the road. The driver said he was going at a moderate rate of speed. The little girl was thrown violently into the ditch, sustaining some very painful injuries in bruises and lacerations of the knees and legs, right arm, forehead and side of head.

Dr. J. M. O'Brien was summoned and treated the little girl's injuries.

The satisfying and economical fuel
Ford Coke
Product of the Ford Motor Company

MANY people who have had a chance to compare Ford Coke with other fuels consider it the most satisfactory and economical fuel they can buy. And they have good reasons for that opinion.

Ford Coke is easy to burn. It needs attention but twice a day. It produces heat quickly. It burns without smoke or soot, and if you burn it correctly, with no clinkers.

The quality of Ford Coke is high and uniform. It must be, for the Ford Motor Company uses it. And to make certain it is dependable the Ford Motor Company makes Ford Coke in its own coke ovens, from coal mined in Ford-owned mines.

The price is another attractive feature of Ford Coke. Buy this better fuel now. Call us up and have us fill your bin.

The Great Adventure

THIS year, again, five hundred Peterborough youngsters will stride gallantly forth to meet and conquer the threatening ogre of living expenses.

Without experience, with few set preferences in merchandise—and with enthusiasm as their only ally—they will demand from the merchants of Peterborough the inevitable requisites of home-making.

Two hundred and fifty boys will set off for two hundred and fifty jobs with high purpose and renewed determination.

Two hundred and fifty girls, wondering a little, will plan two hundred and fifty homes . . . . and seven hundred and fifty meals a day.

Together, they will excitedly ponder the spending of thousands of dollars.

What kitchen utensils? What furniture? Which curtains? The selection of a rug becomes a problem of infinite dimensions. The buying of a vacuum cleaner is a great adventure! Silverware. Linen. China. Glassware. New food products to meet their divergent tastes . . . . which they stoutly maintain are exactly alike!

Young hopefuls. More alert than any generation the world has ever produced. A generation of readers, trained to recognize advertising as a source of information and a guide to values.

They want two hundred and fifty talking machines . . . . pianos . . . . radios . . . . cars. Some will be able to buy them now. The rest will choose them now.

During this year, the first of wedded life, advertising will give them established preferences in merchandise and in places where they buy it. Familiar store names will spring to their lips . . . . laying the foundation for the buying habits of a lifetime. Next year they will be added to those other thousands who patronize advertising stores as a matter of course.

And The Peterborough Examiner, supreme in its field, is the only medium by which Peterborough merchants can reach these young people just starting The Great Adventure.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

I know a woman who is a parasite. I don't think there are many like her in Peterborough, but this delineation may help them recognize themselves and correct the fault.

• • • • • • •

The woman I have in mind has always had everything supplied for her. She has never had the experience and advantage of working for her living, and she looks down on the girl who does.

• • • • • • •

She was a spoiled child; a tattle-tale; a pet of the family. She was a pest to everyone outside that tolerant circle.

• • • • • • •

She had half a dozen beaus whom she kept on the string until the most desirable could be picked.

• • • • • • •

She used to keep them waiting half an hour or more when they called—said it was good for them. If her appointment was for 8 o'clock she would disappear upstairs to dress at two minutes to eight, or just when she heard her caller on the verandah.

• • • • • • •

She wouldn't tell a beau she would accompany him to a dance until the evening of the dance. It was then too late for him to get another partner.

• • • • • • •

But she caught a husband—how funny men are!—and now . . .

• • • • • • •

She refuses to have children, but lavishes her caresses on a kitten or a fool pup. She spends half her life in the car and most of the other half in bed.

• • • • • • •

Her husband (still deluded, poor man) gets his own breakfast and she "prepares" the other sketchy meals. She buys cooked meat and baked pies and cake—and still has to have a woman in periodically to help with the "heavy work."

• • • • • • •

Highly moral—my heavens, yes; she would put most of us to blushing—I think her type is the most parasitic on earth. She takes everything and gives nothing. She bleeds her husband just as she bled her family.

• • • • • • •

Love? She doesn't know its meaning. Honor? She is honest only because kept so by law. She can make baby eyes at other men, but is very careful—oh, so careful!

• • • • • • •

Well, how about it? The picture isn't at all agreeable, is it? I paint it only in the hope that any who recognize their own lineaments in it may take warning.

A parasite is SO contemptible!

• • • • • • •

The ringing of school bells in Peterborough to-day signalled the end of vacation and the beginning of another period of work for young and old. The youngsters wore with pride coats of sunburn; their legs are longer and the girls' skirts, if anything, shorter than two months ago.

• • • • • • •

The school sales held in the city during the last week or two indicate that merchants recognize the need of parents to build the school trousseau with care and economy. Frocks, suits, caps, hats, shoes, stockings—all must be in apple-pie order to start the school year.

• • • • • • •

What Peterborough parents can do to help themselves is instruct their children in the care of this new clothing. The first thing to do is provide places where the clothes can be kept neatly and conveniently. Low racks, or hooks screwed into the wall low down behind some door are best. Coat hangers should be provided for coats and sweaters, to preserve the shape.

• • • • • • •

If the morning getting-ready and the afternoon unbundling are done in a place organized for the purpose, there will be less of the "O, Mom, seen my cap?" or "I can't see my rubbers anywhere!"

• • • • • • •

To avoid so much hunting of mislaid articles of clothing, one mother of four children last year fitted up what she laughingly calls a "school centre." Around the three sides of a hall alcove she built a shelf four feet high. At intervals under this she attached sliding extension rods with enough hangers to hold every coat, sweater or slicker that any school day might demand—one rod for every article—the child's very own. A space eighteen inches wide was divided crosswise into four shelves. On these could be laid books, tops or ropes; any article just as it was brought from school.

• • • • • • •

Several extra hooks held school umbrellas, straps, twine, etc.; a plain stout box concealed the rubbers; a couple of cardboard boxes held a supply of safety pins, thread, buttons, shoelaces, etc., with which to answer the frequent last minute SOS of "I haven't a garter" or "My shoelace just broke."

• • • • • • •

Each child chose an emblem and fastened it to his shelf. Thus, a gay robin cut from a nature magazine, or a flower from a catalog, was proudly pasted over the owner's shelf or hook.

• • • • • • •

Then the second requirement is to train the children to use the "centre" regularly, and this can be best done by telling them the advantages of neatness in dress as a way to keep up with the other children. Show them how good appearance breeds self-confidence. Tell them to note how much better they feel when they are well dressed.

• • • • • • •

If mother will take this initial trouble to organize, and a little time to make the children enthusiastic about the system, there will be many steps saved and life will be a lot more pleasant in many Peterborough homes.

• • • • • • •

Tell the children the story of the three bears. Even the littlest-size bear had his own little sized bed and bowl and chair! And every boy and girl can have the fun of the littlest bear, if given a miniature clothes rack, hangers and boxes.

This week's diagram pattern shows how to make the new one-piece undergarment known as the camibocker, or camiknicker. The front is made in one piece, with three pieces in the back. But it is not complicated, and I am sure you will find it satisfactory. If you would like a copy of the instructions, just fill in the coupon printed on another page, and send it to me.

IV.—FAT

The more of fat contained in food,
The warmer do we grow;
That's why the whale and seal are good
For the shivering Eskimos.

Fats are composed of glycerol and fatty acids; the combinations in the latter differ, but we find in them all two oxygen radicles and twice as many hydrogen as carbon radicles—thus: C4 H8 O2; C6 H12 D2, etc.

The great function of fats in the body is supplying heat and energy. Because of their lower oxygen content, they yield more than twice as much per gram as carbohydrates. Certain fats, such as those found in milk, egg yolk, and butter are very important for growth because of the vitamines contained. Fat is stored in the body as fatty tissues and can thus be held as a reserve supply in time of need. Also, they act as an insulating medium in regulating temperature. The amount of fat needed daily is not known, it has been estimated at twenty-five to seventy five grams.

The following are the chief sources from which our food fats are derived:

I.—Animal Fats:
milk, cream, butter, cheese, lard, cod-liver oil, meat fat—beef, lamb, pork.

II.—Vegetable Fats:
nuts, nut oils, germs of grains, olive oil, cocoanut oil, cotton seed oil.

Fats differ in digestibility according to their melting point. Those of low melting point are much more completely digested than others. If fat is melted only at a point much above body temperature, it will not become sufficiently fluid in the digestive tract to be readily emulsified and digested, and a high percentage of it will be lost to the body. Butter fat and lard have lower melting points than beef or mutton fat. As regards digestibility in the more popular sense of relating to the ease, comfort, and rapidity with which the digestive organs carry on their work, it may be said fats generally retard the secretion of the gastric juice and tend to make the food stay longer in the stomach. Especially if of high melting point, fats retard the passage of food from the stomach. When foods are cooked in fat (fried), the digestion of the carbohydrate and protein is delayed.

Overheating in cooking partly decomposes fat and produces irritating substance but fat is not so susceptible to decomposition from the action of bacteria in the digestive tract as carbohydrate or protein.

The following dessert is one which will help increase the fat in one's diet.

CREAM FLOAT.

½ pint cream,
1 cup chopped marshmallows,
1 teaspoon vanilla,
½ cup chopped nut meats.

1.—Whip cream.
2.—Add chopped marshmallows, chopped nut meats, and vanilla.
3.—Serve very cold in sherbet glasses with sponge drops.

MARION'S MAIL.

"Dear Marion:

A friend said the other day she had nothing but yellow transparent apples, and she disliked seeing them wasted, but did notk now what to do with them. I wondered if others were like her.

In this district there seems to be an abundance of duchess and yellow transparent apples and rather a dearth of later apples.

These Fall apples may be put away in so many different ways. Use sound fruit; if wind-falls, use such as have fallen within the day. It is wise for many reasons to have all fallen apples collected each evening. Remove all bruises, even if just fresh. Have jars sterilized and hot, and put the preserved fruit, boiling hot into sealers, and seal immediately.

Apples intended for pies may be peeled, cored and cut into eighths, cooked without sugar in a closely covered kettle, in little or no water, until barely tender, sealed away hot. They will keep indefinitely and the flavor is better than if the sugar is added.

Sometimes when making apple-sauce fill a few jars.

Peel, core and quarter the fruit, if you have a waterless cooker, use it, if not, add just water enough to keep from burning. Add a stick of cinnamon, a few cloves or a leaf of sweet geranium and sugar to taste. A lot done with each of these flavors gives variety.

Yellow transparents make most delicious preserves if washed, cored and quartered, leaving the skins on unless scabby, and dipped in hot heavy syrup and cooked as fruit in jars usually is. They go to pieces easily. Duchesse apples make a delicious jelly just the same as crab apples.

Apple butter may be made, and that will keep well in a crock. If put away for any length of time cover with paraffin and the usual covering. In making it instead of buying cider, take some of the apples, prepare, cook and strain as for jelly, use this juice instead of cider.

Another favorite change is to make some of that same juice as for jelly, and use it in which to cook the pared, cored and quartered apples with sugar to taste.

The Department of Agriculture will on application furnish pamphlets on the use of the apple.

A few drops of lemon juice will tend to keep the fruit white.

Yours very truly,
HELPER."

This is indeed a helpful letter of yours, and I am sure the hints will be appreciated by many readers. This is the kind of letter I like to receive, and I am sure every woman likes to read. Thanks a lot, "Helper," and come again.

"Dear Marion:

I have been reading your letters in The Examiner, and am very interested in them. I am sixteen. I have no boys friends and would like to know now I should get one as I am very shy and distant, and when I was younger I refused some boys who would have been my friends and now I am very interested in one young man, my senior, and he is always very friendly wherever I meet him, but I do not meet him often, and I am always short of anything to talk about when I do meet him. Can you give me any advice of how to win this young man?

FRECKLES."

P.S. If a young man were to bring you home, would you invite him back?

My dear Freckles, young men are strange creatures. If one thinks you are setting your cap for him he will probably withdraw into his shell and become inaccessible. I would suggest your joining the young people's society, whatever it may be, where you will meet the best class of young men. Read the newspaper regularly, so that you will be well up in current topics. You will find, every day, many interesting little out-of-the-way items in the "panels" that make good conversational fodder. Get back copies of The Examiner and read "The Art of Attraction."

As for your last query, you will find that if you have been gracious and entertaining to the young man on the way home he will be only too eager to see you again, and a hint or two should bring him. A visit to a movie show should be a natural ice-breaker.

Alice G. Because of the excessive dryness of your skin it would be well to eliminate the soap and water treatment for a while. Cleanse the face with a good cleansing cream.

Olga: Just the thing you require is offered in this week's helps—the camiknicker. This undergarment helps preserve the slim hipline. Send in the coupon, with a two-cent stamp to cover postage, and I will send the diagram pattern at once.

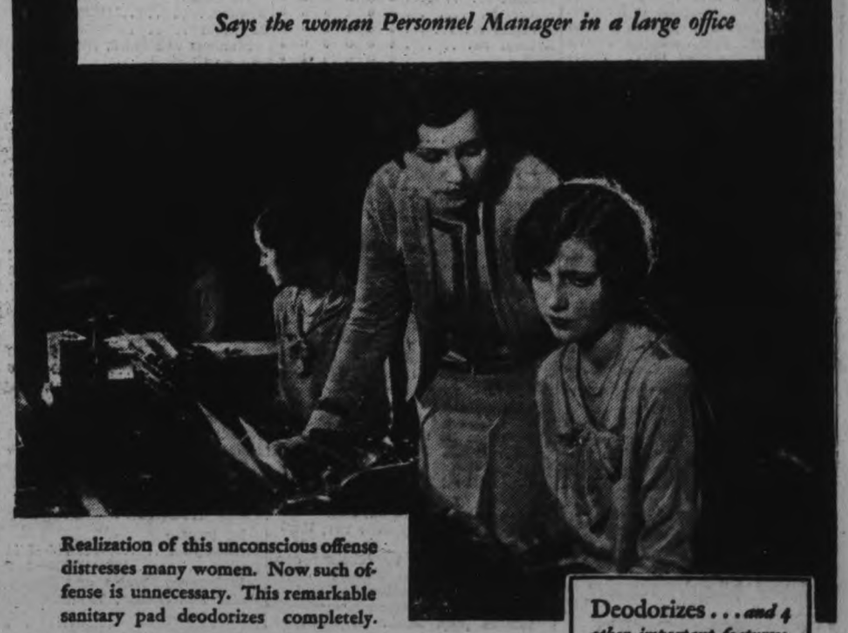
"I warn every woman I employ"

Says the woman Personnel Manager in a large office



Realization of this unconscious offense distresses many women. Now such offense is unnecessary. This remarkable sanitary pad deodorizes completely.

IN the world of business, in society, women often find themselves embarrassed at certain times. Sometimes they offend without knowing why. When they learn, miserable self-consciousness follows. Make-shift efforts to counteract the difficulty seldom succeed. Now a discovery made in Kotex Laboratories ends all these fears and worries. Science has discovered a way to counteract a serious offense.

Kotex now completely deodorizes

Kotex has brought a new idea of feminine hygiene to women all over the world. In the past ten years they have learned new comfort, new ease-of-mind through this sanitary protection. ROYALS SHUT OUT TORONTO LIZZIES 8-0

KITCHEN HOLDS TORONTO TEAM TO FOUR HITS

Local Pitcher Does Some Heavy Hurling to Blank Visitors.

GIVEN GOOD SUPPORT.

Miller of Toronto and Hollingsworth Do Heavy Hitting of Game.

Thanks to the sterling brand of baseball exhibited by their star twirler, Kitchen, the Peterborough Royals Saturday blanked the Toronto Elizabeths Junior team by the lopsided score of eight to nothing.

The game throughout was a clever demonstration of confidence and pitching ability on the part of the local pitcher who came through in real championship form, being at his best when there was runners on and twice pulling himself out of a nasty position by retiring the batters in order by way of the strike out route. With the exception of three slight errors he was given perfect support by his teammates, striking out twelve men allowing but one free pass and hitting one batter. Never at any time did he show any sign that the opposing players were giving him any trouble and if able to repeat his performance of to-day in Toronto, the local boys will have surmounted a big obstacle in the Ontario Junior Championship. He was touched for four hits while the Royals were able to secure nine, this coupled with six errors, four free trips to first base and two hit batters accounted for the big score.

Sone who started for the visitors had plenty of "stuff" on the ball but was disconcerted by the bunting tactics used by the Royals and when he was replaced by Applebaum in the last of the sixth the score stood at seven to nothing. In the sixth innings a slight rain began which held up the game for five minutes but was not of sufficient severity to render playing very difficult. Applebaum now took his place on the rubber and finished the game, allowing but one run. He was nicked for one hit and two walks.

Miller the Toronto short stop slammed out the longest hit of the game, a hefty clout over the left fielder's head which was good for three bases.

Harold (Red) Hollingsworth was the heavy hitter of the local nine, securing four safe hits with five trips to the plate.

A feature of the game was a double play in the third innings by the Toronto crew. Hatton batting with two runners on sent a slow roller to Miller who threw to second, catching Beavis, while Ersin completed the play by throwing out Hatton at first.

First Innings

Elizabeths—Caplan rolled an easy out to Kitchen, and Eisen following suit. Samuels sent a clear hit over short-stop for one base and stole second and third where he died as Miller struck out.

Royals—Hope was passed but was out when he attempted to steal second. Harold Hollingsworth was thrown out by Eisen. Beavis hit to Eisen but Gibbel dropped the throw for the first error. Hatton beat out a slow grounder to Kramer. Len. Hollingsworth placed a nice hit into left field, sending Beavis across with the first tally. Jones fouled to Eckler.

2nd Innings

Levinsky drove a hot one into centre for one base. Kramer was hit. With two men on and none out, Kitchen retired the next three batters in order by way of the strike-out route.

Royals — Hartley and Gordon struck out and Kitchen filed to Miller.

3rd Inning

Caplan was thrown out by Hartley. Eisin bunted and was out Kitchen to Gordon. Hope made a fine catch of Samuel's long fly to left field.

Royals—Hope was an easy out, Eisen to Gibbel. H. Hollingsworth's grounder was missed by the Toronto second sacker and Beavis bunted safely putting two one. Hatton's roller to Miller started a double play which retired the side Beavis being out at second and Hatton at first.

Fourth Innings

Miller took a hefty cut at the ball and sent it over Hope's head being good for three bases, the only triple hit of the game. Levinsky rolled to Jones whose quick throw caught Miller at the plate. Kramer hit through Hartley, putting Levinski on third. With two men on Kitchen again gave a perfect example of confidence and control by fanning the next two batters to retire the side.

Royals—L. Hollingsworth slapped a hot one to Miller who threw him out. Jones beat out a small mit and Hartley laid down a nice bunt putting two on. Gordon bunted to Sone who was undecided as to where to throw it and everyone was safe. Kitchen hit into centre to score Jones. Hope grounded to Eisen who caught Hartley at the plate. 'Red' Hollingsworth popped one over third base and Gordon scored. An easy counter was chalked up when Beavis was passed, scoring Kitchen. Hatton flied to Levinsky.

Fifth Innings

Hatton made a nice catch of Sone's foul hit but it didn't count according to ground rules. Sone was out on a roller to Kitchen. Caplan was an easy out only H. Hollingsworth fumbled the grounder. Eisen hit to Jones who fumbled also the batter reaching first. Samuel's long drive over third base put three men on. Miller hit to Kitchen who caught Caplan at the plate. Levinsky was thrown out by Kitchen.

Royals—L. Hollingsworth flied to Eisen who dropped it. The runner stole second. Jones was safe when Bibbel dropped the throw. Hartley was hit to load the bases. Gordon was hit also moving the runners up. L. Hollingsworth scoring. Kitchen popped to Miller. Hope struck out. H. Hollingsworth slammed a long hot drive to centre field scoring Jones and Hartley. Beavis rolled to Sone but was safe when Gibbel dropped the ball, recovering it in time to catch Gordon at the plate.

Sixth Innings

Kramer was out when Hope made a running catch of his long foul fly. Eckler struck out. Gibbel walked. Applebaum who now replaced Sone on the mound fanned.

Royals—Hatton whiffed. L. Hollingsworth was thrown out by Applebaum and Jones struck out.

Seventh Innings

Caplan and Eisen were fanned and Samuels' foul fly was gathered in by Jones.

Royals—Hartley grounded to Kramer who missed it. Gordon sacrificed. Kitchen was passed. Hope struck out. H. Hollingsworth came across with another hit scoring Hartley. Beavis flied to Caplan.

Eighth Innings

Miller's high fly was taken by H. Hollingsworth. Levinsky was thrown out by Jones. Kramer rolled to Gordon.

Hatton struck out. L. Hollingsworth was walked. Jones rolled an easy one to Applebaum who caught Hollingsworth at second. Hartley flied to Miller.

Ninth Innings

Eckler fanned. Gibbel was thrown out by H. Hollingsworth. Applebaum struck out to end the game.

Kitchen starred in the Royals' 8-0 shutout victory over the Elizabeths, junior champions of Toronto, last night. Showing a clever exhibition of his pitching ability, he came through in championship style, pulling himself out of two holes with runners on the sacks. He had a record of having 12 strike-outs, allowing four hits and one free pass.

Stone started off on the mound for the visitors, but he did not seem able to get on to the short punt hits laid down by the locals, while Applebaum, who replaced him in the sixth, did not seem to be able to do much better.

Miller, the Toronto shortstop, and "Red" Hollingsworth did the honors for both teams in the heavy hitting line, while the visiting crew pulled the only double play of the game when, with Hatton batting with two runners on, he laid a grounder to Miller, who threw to Esin to catch Beavis at second, while the batter was put out at second.

How about the old time boxing smokers that used to be held in this city during the fall and winter months a few years back? As something to put in the time between the dead sport season of hardball and hockey they would provide plenty of entertainment for many of the local sports. Our neighboring city, Oshawa, has done well in this line, judging from the following from the Daily Times:

"News has leaked around town that no less than five Oshawa boxers will forsake the amateur ranks in the course of a week or so and mingle in the monied ranks.

They are all well known locally, and are considered smart performers in their class. Whether they are smart enough for the boys who have been at the game for years is another question.

Scotty Adair will enter the flyweight ranks and swell the scramble for Genaro or Izzy Schwartz's crown. Bob Cumming, fighting at 118, Jimmie McKenzie 126, Jimmie Leonard 147, and possibly Bill Stocks, who can make the lightweight class, are the others.

Five young fellows turning pro. from the same vicinity is a feat more than anyone expected, but everyone will wish them the best of luck.

Personally we don't think there are five fighters in a city this size of sufficient class to make the jump and cut a swath. Not having seen them in action, however, we may be all wet."

Betty Robinson Sets New Record

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Running against time, Betty Robinson, 17 year old women's Olympic 100 metre champion, yesterday clipped two fifths of a second off the 100 yard dash mark for women established two years ago by Helen Filkey, for an unofficial record of 11 seconds. Betty's effort in the event was at the central A.A.U. track and field meet held in conjunction with the Labor Day programme at Soldier Field.

Betty's remarkable time was made on a track made heavy by rain in the past 24 hours and without competition. Her time, however, will not stand as an official worlds record as she ran without competition and with a strong wind at her back.

Sharing the honors with Betty was chesty Joie Ray. Joie started the five miler un with a score of other athletes but finished all alone, a half mile in front of W. Lynch who crossed the line second. Joie's time was 27:00 2-5.

ATTAINS SPEED OF 52 MILES HOUR

Third Mishap of Race Marks Fianl Heat For Trophy.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press).—A third mishaps marked the second and final heat of the Harmsworth Trophy race here yesterday, Miss Los Angeles owned by James Talbot, Jr., of Los Angeles, capsizing while trailing Gar Woods' two entrants, Miss America VIII, and Miss America V. Miss America VII, piloted by Gar Wood, loafed through the heat which clinched possession of the famous trophy, finishing with an average speed of 52.544 statute miles an hour.

Neither Stanley Reid, pilot of Miss Los Angeles, nor his mechanic Roy Offutt were injured when the coast boat turned over. Both were picked up immediately by a patrol.

The accident occurred as Wood took the lead from Miss Los Angeles in the first lap. Reid experimented with Miss Los Angeles, removing the bow fin. As the craft attempted to make a turn, it veered and became unmanageable and finally turned over.

The race was no more than a formality for the Wood brothers who sent the two Miss Americas over the course to comply with the requirement of winning two heats. George Wood, piloting Miss America V lagged until Miss America VII had acquired a half lap lead, before opening up.

Miss America VII was flagged at the 25 nautical mile mark, when the trophy was safely won.

GENE TUNNEY GIVEN OVATION

Former Heavyweight Champion Given Welcome By Parisians.

INTERVIEWED BY PRESS.

PARIS, Sept. 4.— (Associated Press).—Gene Tunney was the worlds champion heavyweight boxer for a half hour again last night so far as the Parisians were concerned.

A crowd, no small percentage of which were newspapermen and photographers met him at his arrival from London on the Golden Arrow express at North Station last evening and received him like a conquering hero.

Tunney was all smiles, he had forgotten most of the French he knew in days when he was a "Leatherneck" Marine in France and most of what was said was incomprehensible to him. But whatever it was, it was a kind of public adulation and Tunney was pleased.

Frenchmen and women crowded and pummelled him in their enthusiasm, while the photographers' flashlights boomed and reporters shot questions at him.

It was in the course of these questions—translated to him from French by the Associated Press correspondent—that he forgot his smiles and became a very belligerent young man. One of the newspapermen asked him about his marriage.

The former champion's smile left his face and he answered quickly:

"This is a matter in which the public or yourself is not interested. I am a private citizen and desire to be treated as such." Tunney never looked so much like a prize-fighter as when he delivered this ultimatum. The Frenchmen were impressed.

But he immediately became the American tourist again. He asked the Associated Press correspondent to tell the reporters he would give them a half hour at his hotel, but first he wanted to be driven there for a short rest.

"Tell the boys this is no high-hat stuff," he asked.

They concurred and he entered a waiting car with one of them to be driven to the George V. Hotel. Enroute he recognized and pointed out places of interest he had known during the war days here.

At the Tuilleres Gardens there was a touch of melancholy in his comment:

"There's where I trained for my first fight," he said.

And then he added, "I didn't have a full meal in my belly the whole day."

"Have you quit the ring for good?"

"For good or bad, I am absolutely through with boxing," Tunney replied.

One reported asked in French, "Is Mr. Tunney going to do moving picture work?" the retired champion without waiting for a translation said "No, there isn't enough millions of dollars in the world to cause me to do cinema work just now."

UNITED STATES WIN FIVE GAMES

Defeat Great Britain in Team Tennis Competition.

TWO-DAY PROGRAM.

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press)—The United States defeated Great Britain five matches to three in their team tennis competition which closed yesterday.

Going into the second day of competition with a lead of three victories to one over the invaders, the United States was able to get better than an even break, losing two singles matches and winning the doubles and one singles match.

In the doubles closing event of the two-day programme, John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison averted a possible tie for team honors when they defeated H. W. Austin, of Cambridge, and J. C. Gregory, No. 4 ranking Eiglish player, in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2.

Earlier in the day, Van Ryn had accounted for the only other American victory when he defeated Edward Higgs, ranking N. 1 English star, 6-1, 6-1. In the other singles matches, Allison was beaten by Austin, 6-2, 6-4, and Wilbur Coen, of Kansas City, lost to I. G. Collins of the English team, 6-4, 10-8.

DEAN STARS IN EVERTON MATCH

Champions of First Division Defeat Enterprising Portsmouth Eleven.

CARDIFF CITY WINS.

LONDON, September 4 (Canadian Press Cable). — Soccer matches in England on Saturday were played without the rough methods which have drawn on the game the criticism of the chief constable of Sheffield. The weather throughout the country was fine and large attendances were the order of the day.

General attention was directed towards the English League, First Division, match at Everton, where the local club was entertaining the enterprising Portsmouth eleven. The league champions did not have to extend themselves much to win. Dean, the Everton forward, was again the hero of the occasion, getting the hat-trick for the second saturday in succession. Everton's fourth tally came from the boot of Ritchie.

Cardiff City were the top scorers, with seven markers against Burnley. Scorers were: Ferguson, Ien Davies (twice), and Stan Davies in the first half. Ferguson ran wild and performed the hat-trick in the second half.

Apparently the Derby County that walloped Blackburn Rovers last week is not the real form of this team, because they made a poor showing against Sunderland. Halliday and McInally found the Derby County net before the interval and Halliday twice afterwards.

West Ham United earned the distinction of being the only club in the First Division to win away from home. They trimmed Bury by the three goals scored. It was even enough in the first half, neither side registering. After the turn round Ruffell scored once and Waston twice.

Maintaining their early promise, Leeds United managed to get a creditable draw with the Leicester City team away from home. It was a game of big scoring, each team netting four times. Leicester were down two goals just before time, but Chandler broke away twice to finally tie up the score. Blackburn Rovers, who started the season badly, played like champions to beat Sheffield Wednesday, Thornewell (twice) and Campbell scored before half time, and Rosecamp afterwards, all for the Rovers.

An enormous crowd turned out for the local Derby at Manchester. The United team had the edge before the interval through the goals of Wilson and Johnston against the one point secured by Roberts. Johnson evened up things well on in the second half and the game was drawn.

Bolton Wanderers ended the game with Arsenal still without having scored a goal this season. Brain and Fell netted for Arsenal.

The Sheffield United - Newcastle United game was notable for the fine play of Johnson, who found the net three times for Sheffield.

Aston Villa game a fine display to beat Liverpool. The Villa'ss corers were Beresford, York and Capewell. McDougall netted for Liverpool.

Chelsea continued to be London's best club, though on Saturday they only managed to scrape through on top against Blackpool through Andy Wilson's surprise goal. The demoted Spurs, in a none too brilliant display, got a draw with Southampton, though the match was crafti enough. The Spurs went ahead in the first half through Galloway's goal. Taylor equalized late in the second half for Southampton.

The two London clubs, Clapton Orient and Millwall, played a hard fought match to a draw. Spence put the Orient ahead, when he netted in a penalty. Millwall had to wait till ten minutes from time before the equalizer, which was kicked in by Readman.

Carlisle United's great score against Hartlepool United was the high spot among the minors. Their eight (three), Hutchinson (two), and Robertson (two), and Agar.

Paying for Hull City against Wolverhampton, McDonald did the hat-trick in the first half.

All the Fulham forwards scored against Plymouth Argyle.

The only injury of the day occurred in the Brighton and Hove Albion-Coventry match, when James, Brighton centre-forward, broke a rib, and was taken to the hospital.

OSHAWA EVENS LEAGUE SERIES

Defeats Belleville 8-6 in Second Game of Play-off.

GIBSON KNOCKED OUT.

OSHAWA, September 3. — After the closest struggle yet played in the Central Ontario League, Oshawa Seniors defeated Belleville Nationals, the league leaders, 8 to 6, here on Saturday and evened up the league play-off. Gerow's men had previously taken a 13 to 3 decision in the Quinte town with Gibson on the mound, but the Motors squad showed greater pep in their attack in Saturday's game, and behind the in-and-out twirling of Matthews, came back and knocked "Hoot" Gibson who had won 12 games and lost but three all season, off the hill in the fourth after they had registered a quintette of runs. The third and deciding game will be played in Oshawa next Saturday, the winner advancing to the first round of the O. B.A.A. eliminations. The score:

PETERBOROUGH C.C. WINS FROM C.G.E.

The final game of the season between the Peterborough C. C. and the C.G.E. C.C. was played at the Oval on Saturday, the former club winning easily by 52 runs. The Peterborough team batted first and started disastrously, losing four wicwets for nine runs. Smith and Hamilton however, batted in good style and finally brought the score to 35 before being separated. The ninth wicket fell at 56 and it looked as if the club were to be disposed of for a very moderate total. Dunkerley, who was late arriving on the ground, joined Hamilton, who was playing a very careful game. The score then started to mount at a rapid pace. Dunkerley was hitting out at every loose ball, while Hamilton was content to keep his wicket intact. The score finally reached 103 before Hamilton was bowled. Dunkerley carried his bat for a brilliant 40 not out. Wade took 4 wickets for 42 and Dyer 3 for 28.

The C.G.E. on going in to bat found runs hard to get and could muster only 51. Of this total Jack Wade scored a brilliant 19 in quick style. Dale played a useful innings of 10 not out. Frank Dyer bowled well, capturing 7 wickets for 31 runs. In all fairness to the C. G.E. team it must be said that their last three or four men batted in a failing light, but in true sporting spirit, made no complaint. These teams have now met on four occasions this season. Peterborough won two games, the C.G.E. one game and one game was tied.

MARION DAVIES IN A DELIGHTFUL PICTURE

"The Patsy" Proves Star Is Best Whimsical Comedienne in American Films; Picture a Hilariously Comic Entertainment.

"The best whimsical comedienne of the American screen."

That is what the reviewers called Marion Davies after watching her work in her last screen vehicle, "The Fair Co-Ed," and they will have no reason to repent their decision now that her newest picture, "The Patsy," has reached the Regent Theatre.

For the star loses nothing of her charm and has apparently gained much in humor by her late roles until as the whimsical, lovable, ingenuously embarrassed Patsy she tops everything she has previously done by a margin easily visible to the most casual reviewer.

It is a peculiar fact that the roles of her two latest pictures have been so different. The Davies of the "Co-Ed" was a flamboyant, boastful tomboy, arrogant in her demands on masculine attention and instantly resentful of anything which dimmed for even a second her place in the spotlight of popular attention.

On the other hand, the Davies of "The Patsy" is an often embarrassed, pathetically grateful little girl who eagerly grabs even crumbs of affection from the man she loves and whose eyes beg constantly for more. The tomboy is gone and in his place we find an adolescent flapper. It is hard to realise that the same girl could actually play both parts and play them both so humorously.

The fact that she does so, contributes mightily to the fact that "The Patsy" is the most rollicking, jovial true-to-life comedy of the American screen year. King Vidor has brought something new to comedy—a sense of reality that he first exercised with the doughboy episodes of "The Big Parade"—and it is his guiding hand which brings naturalness to "The Patsy."

The members of the cast, which includes Marie Dressler, Orville Caldwell, Jane Winton, Del Henderson and Lawrence Gray, play their roles admirably, while Agnes Christine Johnson has written a swiftly moving and entertaining script.

AT THE CAPITOL.

BEBE DANIELS IN "THE 50-50 GIRL"

For its re-opening bill, the Capitol Theatre has a bright feature picture, with the pretty Bebe Daniels as the dark heroine of "The 50-50 Girl." She is Kathleen O'Hara, niece of a wealthy mine-owner who divides the ownership of the El Dorado Mine between her and and the son of his former business associate, James Donahue. The son, while passing through a tunnel. She is furiously angry at him and when she meets him in the guise of a business companion, tells him she can do anything a man can do and asserts that women are superior to men, anyway.

The ensuing adventures of the picture show the conflict between the ideas held by the two. Kathleen takes the man's part in driving a car to their mine and ordering the men who work there, while Jim, on a bet, does the woman's work. He becomes involved in a hopeless struggle with the cooking. He put down enough rice to fill several wash boilers when the stuff boils over later. He brews two solid cups of ground coffee for their meal and has a coffee pot filled with grounds and no liquid. And he cuts the bacon in a manner to send shivers through the soul of any careful housewife.

But in the mine, later, the two have a series of spooky adventures, complicated by the plan of their rival mine-owner to get them to renounce claim to the El Dorado. Their Bostonese friend Paystill, with his very English manner of conversation, helps them out considerably and proves to be a real hero at the finish. The picture abounds in funny episodes and fast-moving action. It is entertaining in the extreme and so is the Billy Dooley comedy, "Row, Sailors, Row" that accompanies it and shows the efforts of a well-meaning gob to smuggle a pet dog into a fashionable hotel, where such animals are barred.

The Pathe News reels are as interesting as ever, and the Capitol orchestra provides excellent music, as usual. The holiday saw two evening performances following the matinee to accommodate the crowds.

Dedicated to the Open Mind

HERE is a building in which "mass production" is unknown, in which the roar of massive machinery is unheard, from which "assembly lines" with their rows of watchful craftsmen are noticeably absent—Yet this building has contributed . . . is still contributing . . . immeasurably, to the degree of motor-car luxury, performance and value which marks the products of General Motors.

Here, in the General Motors Research Laboratory, the greatest staff of automotive engineers in the world is engaged in the myriad activities which enter into the building of a General Motors car. On one hand we see a new system of carburetion being studied. On another, a type of cylinder-head takes form. Here, a new engineering principle is discovered. There, an existing practice receives revision.

And nowhere, in all this vast laboratory building, is there ever the expression of complete satisfaction. No discovery, however vital, is considered final. No achievement, however great, is relinquished as complete. Every fact and every theory is always subject to revision . . . to refinement . . . to improvement. It is a building dedicated to "The Open Mind."

Small wonder, then, that from this great research laboratory should come discoveries of inestimable value to the purchaser of every General Motors car . . . discoveries ruthlessly tested on the uncompromising acres of the General Motors International Proving Ground.

It is thus that General Motors accepts the responsibility which leadership imposes—to study always new ways and means of giving greater value in better cars to the public, which confers that leadership upon it.

It is fitting that the world's leading automobile organization should seek, through the world's greatest automotive research laboratories, to make the greatest possible contributions to the satisfaction of the automobile buyer.

STEAMER CAPTAIN GIVEN SUSPENSION

Found in Default For S. S. Huronic Foundering in Lake Superior.

MONTREAL, Quebec, September 4. — Canadian Press. — Captain T. Selby Patterson, master of the S. S Huronic, was found in default for his vessel's stranding on August 6th in Lake Superior, on or near Lucille Island, and his certificate was suspended for a period of three months, by Captain L. A. Demers, Dominion Wreck Commissioner.

The commissioner also found the first mate, H. A. McLellan, in default, for not taking bearings of Grand Marais, and for failing to call the master when either the fog horn or the light of the Rock of Ages was not heard or seen, and after the ship had come within a hearing or seeing distance. His certificate was also suspended for a period of three months. It was added in the judgment that the Huronic was well found and equipped, and that everything was in conformity with the exigencies of the law and regulations governing the management and and equipment of passenger vessels.

The Huronic, which is owned by the Northern Navigation Company, and operated by the Canada Steamship Lines, Limited, carried a crew of 88 with about 100 passengers. She was en route from Duluth to Port Arthur and Fort William, when the master retired to his room leaving verbal orders to be called if anything untoward should arise.

Fog came on, and must have been down for some time, as Rock of Ages light was not perceived, the the Wreck Commissioner explained in his synopsis of the case. When it enveloped the ship densely, the mate left the bridge to call the master, who had undressed, and was in bed. No orders were given to diminish the speed, but evidently the master leisurely dressed and went to the deck, in fact being on the stairs when the ship struck violently, her speed being 16 miles. Soundings were taken and the boats got ready, but the passengers were not called upon to take to the ship's boats, and embarked some hours later on the tug Champlain.

The court was of opinion that the master in undressing and going to bed assumed a position of confidence, owing to past successful trips, which was not warranted, not permissible, and did not bear the earmarks of carefulness an dalertness. The moment he was advised that the weather was thickening, that Rock of Ages Light had not been perceived, no mention being made of the fog horn, he should, pending his appearance on the bridge, have ordered a reduction of speed, in fact, a stop-order, said the commissioner.

"The penalty which I am compelled to inflict may be considered extremely lenient under the circumstances," Captain Demers said. "I am actuated by the fact that both master and first mate gave their testimony in a very straight-forward manner for which it is usual for courts of inquiry to show appreciation. I must remind that constant alertness is indispensable, that frequent observations are necessary and that 'taking for granted' attitudes must never be entertained."

GRADE CROSSING TOLL INCREASES

Two Million Dollars of Fund For Elimination Remains Unspent.

MONTREAL, Sept. 1. — Statistics published the other day, showing an appalling increase in grade crossing accidents in Canada, will likely influence materially the discussions of the Canadian Good Roads Association convention in Regina, Sept. 25, 26 and 27. It was arranged that the question of safety on the highways would be one of the outstanding problems before the convention, but the grade crossing problem has now been thrown into the forefront.

The figures this year with respect to level crossing accidents are:

	Accidents.	Killed.	Injured.
January	16	1	20
February	18	3	12
March	13	—	9
April	18	6	15
May	31	8	35
June	27	13	28
July	35	23	56

The grade crossing question is more acute at present because the Federal grants towards the elimination of such danger spots expire next spring. Something like $200,000 a year has been spent for a number of years, the amount having been administered by the Railway Commission. So carefully has the fund been looked after that about $2,000,000 remains unspent. It is said that under the law as it now stands this unspent amount also will not be available after April of next year. The Good Roads Association leaders naturally look to this fund to help fight the level crossing menace and a number of suggestions as to the course to be pursued have been sent the association's office here. These suggestions and the resulting debate at Regina will be referred to the association's fact-finding committee, and then something concrete will be presented to the next inter-provincial conference on highways.

Another point to be settled in this connection is the application of this grade crossing fund to the partial elimination of level crossings. An extreme example of the need for partial elimination is where a highway intersects a railway twice within a short distance. In cases like this a curving or diversion of the highway would eliminate at least one crossing. Other similar situations are encountered in a number of places. As the law now stands the Federal funds cannot be applied to help with the remedy except in isolated cases. In other words, the fund cannot be used to change the direction of highways even though level crossings are eliminated in such a process. A wider interpretation of the law is desired.

So far as Good Roads Association officials know there is no practical objection to renewing the life of the Federal grant, nor to using the unspent funds, or to applying it to partial elimination of grade crossings. Anything standing in the way of such a course is purely a matter of law and law's interpretation.

"We feel, however, that the law cannot be changed unless there is some agitation for its change," stated S. L. Squire, chairman of the executive of the Good Roads Association. "We think the proper place for the agitation to start is at our convention, which is non-political, but at the same time national in its scope. From there we want to get it to the inter-provincial conference, which meets a few months hence. From there, backed by all parties concerned, the recommendations can go to Parliament. The main thing is to make progress in the elimination of grade crossings, and the work cannot be done without money. We have found that signals, bells, lights and gates are not fool-proof, though each of these is undoubtedly an aid to safety. The only really safe highway crossing is overhead or underneath the railway tracks."

Higher Call Money Rates Interrupt Speculation

NEW YORK, September 4 (Canadian Press). — Violent speculation for the advance in to-day's stock market was interrupted again by the marking up of call money rates. Extreme gains of one to nine points in the active issues were cut down and in a few cases wiped out, but early afternoon prices were generally well above the final quotations last week. Nearly two score issues were lifted to record high levels.

Call money renewed unchanged at 7½ per cent., but advanced to eight as the banks called $25,000,000 in loans to strengthen their reserve at the Federal Reserve Bank.

Pools were again active in a wide assortment of issues, with Amusement, Copper, Independent Motor, and Public Utility shares giving the best demonstrations of group strength. American Linseed was run up nine points to a new top at 131, presumably at the expense of a sleeping short interest, Warner Bros. Pictures A soared seven and a half points to a new peak at 104 and the Common climbed to 103. Coty jumped six points to a new top at 206, and Curtiss Airplane, Purity Baking, Continental Can., Davison Chemical, and Magma Copper advanced four to nearly six points.

Wheat Prices Lower At Chicago Opening

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.— (Canadian Press).—Wheat opened easy on the Chicago market to-day. Good weather prevailed for harvesting the Canadian crop and healthy rains fell in Argentina and Australia, factors which were noted at Liverpool, where wheat prices were lower. Trade was slow at the outset, awaiting the morning private crop estimates, wheat opening unchanged to ⅞ cent lower while corn, a little firmer at first, started unchanged to ¾ cent higher and then lost the advance on scattered selling. Oats and provisions were steady.

Pend Oreille Leads In Moderate Trading

TORONTO, September 4. Canadian Press. — Pend Oreille was the strong leader on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, climbing $2.50 a share to $14 and holding that mark at noon on a moderate turn over. The rest of the list showed no definite trend with no changes of great importance in the morning session.

Noranda sold 75c lower at $55.60, and Jackson Manion was another easier spot of the day at 90, two points lower. Amulet weakened 20c at $3.60. Pend Oreille's strength was reflected to some slight extent through the list. Dome Mines firmed 20 at at $8.70. The Kirkland Lakes were steady with Wright-Hargreaves at $3.50, Kirkland Hunton at eight, Kirkland Lake at $1.51, and Bidgood at 68½. Barry Hollinger was a firm and active issue at 51 at noon, a gain of three.

Toronto Market Dull; Nickel Loses Leadership

TORONTO, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—With the exception of a few of the better known issues, trading was rather dull on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Prices were generally firm, while a few of the stocks experienced light increases. International Nickel failed to dominate the market, and with light trading, closed at noon to-day with a loss of ¼ at 118 as compared with Friday's close. Nickel rights were selling at 5.50, ten cents lower than the previous close. Canadian General Electric and shredded Wheat each advanced one point at 109 and 64 respectively, while Cockshutt Plow, with a heavy turnover, advanced 1¼ to 29¾. Massey Harris also showed a slight gain, advancing 5-8 to 44. The oils were in great demand on the curb section, with prices all registering gains.

PEND OREILLE.

Advice from the west is to the effect that this stock is about ready for a good upward move. Sponsors for the stock are very optimistic and if the suggested figures are reached by late fall the stock will have an active market from now on.

A WORD FOR THE EXAMINER.

To my few words give good heed—
People, Classified Ads., do read.
My Xmas one, brought me dollars, two hundred,
When I told folks, they thought I had blundered.
My next, a dollar one, I thought rather plenty,
But it brought me in more than twenty—
I have one in now, worded best I could—
I expect results will pan out just as good.

AN OPINION ON WALL STREET

In spite of profit taking on bulges and considerable realizing by holders who did not wish to carry stocks over the week-end and the holiday following, the market gave further evidence of strength. New highs for some issues were added to those previously attained, Allis-Chalmers and Victor Talking Machine being among stocks of this sort. The latter reported to be under accumulation by Chicago interests, chief among which is Arthur Cutten. This is rapidly becoming a name with which to conjure. Once the impression is out that Cutten is buying a particular stock there is immediately a rush of outsiders to get in on that stock. This represents a blind following inspired by Cutten's success since he shifted operations from grain to stocks.

In to-day's market there was little indication of fear regarding the money situation. For some reason or other the belief is gaining ground that there will be a reduction in the federal reserve bank rediscount rate some time this fall. Whether or not this will actually take place is a matter of pure conjecture, in which the guess of one man is as good as another. It may be said, however, that if business conditions continue as they are, there is a possibility of outside money being available in such quantities as to offset any move toward tightening credit on the part of the banks. It is not strange, therefore, that operators for the advance have been taking advantage of the situation as it seems to present itself; and that they have been registered in stocks of practically all classes, with the exception of oils, during the current week. The present bull market surpasses in strength and enthusiasm that which prevailed before the June break; and while it does not seem possible that prices can continue to advance there are not lacking many operators who believe that we shall see still further gains before there is a reaction. To us the market looks dangerously high, and to advise long commitments at this time is not, in our opinion, good judgement. Stocks must be watched very closely and disposed of upon any suggestion of a turn in the market. It is most essential that buying be a selective nature; that is, that stocks be bought on their particular merits and not upon the general apparent strength of the market.

IN MEMORIAM.

ETHERIDGE.—In loving memory of Madeline P. Etheridge, who died September 4, 1927.
"It is not the tears at the time that are shed
That tell the heart is torn,
But the passionate tears in the after years
And a remembrance in prayer silently borne.
Do not ask us if we miss her,
None but aching hearts can tell;
We have lost her, Heaven has found her,
Jesus hath done all things well."
—Inserted by Mr. and Mrs. A. Fisher, Lucy and Horace.
